Twelve members of the City Council went on record last Monday night as willing to accept, each of them, a donation of $41.25 from the Columbus Baseball Club in the shape of a book of passes to the games on the local lot. Councilman Lucks nearly had a fit of nervous prostration when he expressed his surprise that the council would even think of "boosting Socialistic propaganda" by voting for Councilman Warren's resolution that councilmen should not accept or use passes to the baseball games. President Logan rushed to the defense of his henchmen by declaring that every minister in the city had received a pass and that many of them used them. "Bishop" Barry did not want to insult the club by returning his pass, Councilman Bohnert, Socialist, said that he went often to the games, but paid his way. He thought that Columbus had a splendid team and that every councilman ought to stand by it by paying every time he attended. When the vote was taken Alcott voted with Socialists Bohnert, Warren, Wilson and Zimpfer for the resolution. The twelve others present voted against it.

Councilman Wegman, Democrat, of the Ninth Ward, introduced an ordinance to Russianize the city.

The ordinance provides that it shall be unlawful for any moving van or similar conveyance to remove property from any house without first reporting it to the director of safety. The ordinance was read the first time and referred. A penalty of from $5 to $30 is attached. This measure is only the entering wedge of the efforts of the Master Class to put the workers under constant espionage. There is no reason or excuse for such a law.

There was another awful flutter among the stool-pigeons of the council when Member Warren introduced an innocent resolution asking the law department for an opinion on a statute which seemed to provide ways and means by which the city could pay for needed street improvements. Solicitor Bolin was ready and willing to secure the information, according to his own statement, but the gang resented even a modest request from a Socialist member. The vote was 8 to 8 and the resolution was lost. The pigeons were Baldridge, Biederman, Connolley, Hayden, Lucks, Nailor, Stribling and Wegman. They do not want the streets improved because the Socialists do.

MOLDERS' STRIKE ON AT LATTIMER'S STOVE WORKS.

There has been a quiet strike on in Columbus for nearly four weeks. It is on at the Lattimer Stove Works on West Spring Street and the strikers are members of Iron Molders' Union No. 28. They asked for the standard scale of wages and recognition of the union. This was denied them and all union molders left the place. The next day some of them went on picket duty and entered a saloon close to the works to get some "buttermilk." The molders were surprised to find four policemen seated in a back room of the saloon, evidently waiting to quell a terrible riot. The cops got the laugh from the boys, for everybody knows that molders wouldn't harm anybody. The next day there were two policemen on duty, and since that one lone officer has protected the Lattimer Works and the scabs they employ. These worthies are getting more than union wages now, but the benevolent Lattimers won't keep that up long.

Union men stay away from Lattimer's.

Congressman Campbell says the "mob should not" rule because they do not umpire the base ball games. Let an umpire make as many rotten decisions as the federal judges to and see how quickly the people will get his goat.

DEMOCRATS IN CONGRESS GO BACK ON LABOR

Berger Wins Battle for Political Refugees from Russian Czar's Wrath.

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington—The conduct of the Democratic party in handling labor legislation pending in the House of Representatives demonstrates that it is just as bad if not worse than the Republican party. That party at least openly opposed labor bills. The Cannons and Littlefields never knifed labor in the dark. The Democrats, however, give labor representatives the "glad hand" but while away sessions without passing any measure in the interest of the workers.

Take for instance the bills against 'injunctions' in labor disputes and against the application of the Sherman anti-trust law on labor unions. These bills have been championed in tearful voices by Democrats when they were in the minority. Regarding these measures the platform of the Democratic party adopted in 1908 says:

We believe that the parties to all judicial proceedings shall be treated with rigid impartiality, and that injunctions should not be issued in any cases in which injunctions would not issue if no industrial dispute were involved.

"The expanding organizations of industry makes it essential that there should be no abridgement of the right of wage-earners and producers to organize for the protection of wages and the improvement of labor conditions, to the end that such labor organizations and their members should not be regarded as illegal combinations in restraint of trade."

The above constitutes the "great victory" of Samuel Gompers at the Denver convention after being turned down coldly by the Republican convention in Chicago. Now, the Democrats have controlled the house since March 4, 1911. They have been in session last summer and all winter. But those bills have not yet even been reported out by the Democratic Committee on Judiciary.

They have reported and passed scores of bills, but the labor measures still repose in the pigeonholes of the House Committees. And Gompers calls this "practical politics."

Yet, it is possible that these bills may soon be reported out. They may be even passed by the House. But it is already too late in the session to do any good. The Senate, even if having no other reason, can rightly refuse to consider these measures on the ground that it is too near adjournment to handle such bills properly.

Lawrence Child Slave Greets Berger

Socialist Congressman Berger has received a picture postal card from little Sammy Goldberg, the fourteen year old mill worker, who testified at the Congressional hearing on the Lawrence outrages recently.

Written in a child's scrawl, the postal card bearing a colored picture of one of the Lawrence mills, read:

"Kiss to you and your wife (here followed a dozen X's). The picture is of one of the mills I worked in. It don't look like an office in Washington. From the first boy who spoke before the Committee.—Samuel Goldberg. I now get $6 a week."

Berger Wins Fight for Refugees.

Socialist Congressman Berger was today notified by the Department of Commerce and Labor that it has reversed the deportation order issued by the immigration authorities of Tacoma, Washington, against Fitel Kagan and Vasily Lachatchoff, Russian political refugees who have made their escape from Siberia.

On Saturday Simon C. Pollock, counsel of the Poltical Refugees Defense League, and W. J. Ghent, Secretary to Berger, called at the office of the Department to make their protest against the unwarranted prejudice of the Tacoma officials against the two refugees. Yesterday Berger returned to Washington from Milwaukee and he again took up the matter with the Department. Today he was notified that the two refugees would be allowed to enter this country.

This makes the third victory scored by Berger and the Refugees Defense League in behalf of the right of political asylum in this country.

Kagan and Lachatchoff had been doomed to lifelong exile in Siberia by the despotic Russion government and the order of the Tacoma authorities been upheld in Washington the men would have been returned to the clutches of the Bloody Czar.

These refugees are highly educated and are disciples of Karl Marx and Darwin. But the ignorant and prejudiced Tacoma officials insisted in stemming them as anarchists and undesirable aliens.

LISTEN TO THESE WORDS OF WISDOM

Our Illiterate Correspondent Tells the People Where to Head in— Come Again John

Columbus, Ohio,
April 15, 1912.

Mister Editor:

I se by the paper thet som feller who's working for the good of the town thinks a viduck cross the tracks on third streat wood be a fin thing. Fact is thet feller don't beleave in pertuatin the glorie of columbus, all over this nashun this town is nowed as a one streat town. No diference wher you are if you writ to High streat ohio it wod com strat to columbus. Do you want to cut out th' very thing thets made this town famuse. Member mr. editor, if thet third streat viduckt is put up thet the fame of this hear town is gone.

Fame for a town hant th' only thing to lok at. you got to take care of the better class, whot we works for. This here viaduckt wood work a loss on the propertie oners on High st. They hav hard enuf time gittin long now without the very town they support goin and makin third streat to a biznes streat. They wod hav to cut the rent sure as you live if thit viduckt is put up.

The fellers who hav the propertie on high streat hant the only ones you would hirt. The streat car people wod sufer to. Them people are usin you alright. Don't you get 8 rides for to bits. Don't they hav seets and straps for 100 people on every car wot runs. Are you ever sturbed by a flat wheel. Course the cars do run over some man or woman or a kid once in a while, but you got to member that it takes time and money to put sand plugs on cars and grind out trucks. Sand costs money and you ought to know enuf to keep off the car traks any how. They pay for the traks and nobody likes a flat trak. Look whot they already lost when they let you ride 8 times for to bits. If you fellers keep up thes hear people will bust up and after you walk to work for a while youl be durn glad to giv em a chance to mak a decent livin.

This hear viduckt biznes will ruin the propertie oners biznes on high streat. It will hirt the biznes of the columbus transfer companie. It will make columbus bout as well nown as a tank twon like toledo, indinoplis or Dayton. One biznes streat is enuf for a town like columbus. Your apt to hav to walk to work. Who are you sposed to be workin for, the workin man or the man whot hires the workin man. If you make it to hard for thes good people they will bust up and then who in the devil will you work for.

Yours for high streat,
J. J. DUNKLEMANN.

P. S.—If you publis this you better cut out thet about the sand plugs, it might might make the streat car feller feel bad.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

Why We Will Serve the Workers Without Compromise.

It is often said that when the Socialists get into office, they will be just like the other parties. This is not true, as has been proven. But we will suppose it has not been proven. The Socialist party contemplates an entire change of program, one which has for its ultimate goal the emancipation of the WORKING CLASS.

The Republican party in its inception had a high ideal, but when once the ideal was accomplished it should have died, likewise the Democratic party; but it lived on and on with a government in which property rights were superior to human rights, its leaders soon began to sell out, not because they wanted to, but because the system of rent, interest and profit forced them to, if they wished to continue to hold their sinecures. We may rage and gnash our teeth till doomsday about graft, but as long as the system of graft remains we will have graft.

The petty graft of the office-holder is a mere bagatelle to the enormous graft collected by Messrs. Morgan, Rockefeller and others. This is the real graft and the one with which the Socialist is principally concerned.

Now, why will we be good? First, because we realize the cause of graft and have a cure and will apply the cure if given an opportunity. Second, the party absolutely controls the acts of an official when in office. Third, just as soon as we get the power to legislate we will install a Recall system, which will insure honest and efficient officials.

Besides these reasons we have many others. We know that Socialism is the next step in evolution and we know that reform will not secure any lasting benefit to the wage-slave.

The Socialist party is not a party of protest, as some would have you believe, we are a party of education and we will educate the worker to demand and secure his rights and not his alone, but every man's. We believe that the will of the people is the Supreme Law, and its voice the mandate of the Ruler of the Universe. We believe that Liberty is the eternal watchword and that none are free till all are free.

We believe in a trust in which every child, woman and man shall hold one and only one share of non-transferable stock, and in which there shall be no preferred stock. We believe that capital, the dead inert material thing is the creation of labor. We believe the product of labor should belong to the one who produced it.

We believe in the greatest good to all and that each should work for all and all for each.

We believe in the federation of the world, the fellowship of nations, the the motherhood of nature, the sisterhood and brotherhood of mankind, and in the dear love of Comrades.

The Socialist and Appeal to Reason, BOTH ONE year for $1.00. This is the best newspaper offer ever made.

THIRD STREET VIADUCT.

To the Socialist—There seems to be a wrong impression among some people as to the import of the action of Local Columbus in voting down the resolution of the Sixteenth Ward Branch, indorsing the Third Street viaduct. The Socialist party of Columbus simply said by its action that the construction of the Third Street viaduct is not a party matter, involving a purely Socialist principle, and therefore did not indorse it as a party. There seems to be many reasons why the viaduct should be built and none against it, and I am of the opinion that practically every Socialist is in favor of it and will endorse it with his vote.

Respectfully,
J. L. BACHMAN.

MEDITATIONS OF AN ASS

By G. H. Lockwood, Editor "The Prophet and the Ass," Kalamazoo, Michigan.

"SLAVES OBEY YOUR MASTERS."

The Ass congratulates himself—Even though he is an Ass he has a right to "bray" whenever he dam pleases, or oftener,—and that's worth something in these days of suppressed utterances.

I have in my possession the press proof of a two column article headed "SOCIALISM"—and written by the editor of a large Republican daily paper. The article in question was sent me by the editor with permission to use it as see fit, inasmuch as it had been "blue penciled" by the "Men higher up" on his own paper—or rather the paper he was hired to edit—and that, mind you, even after it had been put in cold type.

I find this article a very conservative effort to place certain ABSOLUTE HISTORIC FACTS before the readers of this Republican Sheet. The article is not an indorsement of Socialism, but a FAIR statement of existing conditions and the causes that have lead up to the wonderful growth of the Socialist movement today. The editor is clear sighted—he sees the inevitable results of the present policy of the master class, and he warns them—but his warning is of no use—they refuse to listen, eve nto tehir own men who have brains enough to understand the situation. AND THEY REFUSE TO LET THE PEOPLE LISTEN through this great daily paper they control.

No wonder the people are losing faith in the capitalistic papers. Certainly things have already gotten to a pretty pass when the EDITOR of a paper can't say what he pleases and his carefully and thoughtfully written article is turned down by the pinheaded men of money who own the paper and, for the time being, the brains of the man who edits it.

The master class has been given credit for possessing a considerable amount of brains,—from the way they are acting now, there is every reason to believe that the report has been unduly exaggerated—and that the gawd's truth about the matter is that they are really a lot of sap heads, utterly incapable of understanding anything outside the "GAME" they are playing—and some of them don't even understand that.

If these men think, through their present control of the press and the pulpit that they can SMOTHER the truth, and keep the people from understanding their rights, powers and privileges, they are bedly mistaken. No doubt but thousands of articles like the one in question, are blue penciled. This one just happened to be discovered by accident, but—that don't stop the movement for economic justice for a moment. To quote direct from this article—

"It is idle to attempt to blot out this movement called Socialism, or that portion of it that contains elements of truth. Socialist candidates may be defeated here and there, but that does not prove the great movement is annihilated. It is a part of a world movement for greater industrial freedom. It is a protest the existing order of things which all concede is far from perfect."

There are undoubtedly thousands of Socialists, or people friendly to Socialism, working on the capitalistic papers. It is their means of making a LIVING. They do what the masters tell them, they are powerless to do otherwise. These editors and reporters and the entire working force of a newspaper office are comparatively well informed people. They rub right up against the rottenness of the old regime and are wise to it—and many are sick and disgusted with it—but their "job" depends on a show of loyalty—and the poor devils smother their better natures and stay in the grind. That's why the Ass again feels like congratulating himself because no one has a mortgage on his brain. He Haw! He Haw!

SOCIALISM AND PUBLIC HEALTH.

By W. R. Shier.

I was asked by a physician the other day how the Socialist party would cope with the question of public health.

I replied though the Socialist party had not as yet addressed itself especially to this problem, it could be expected none the less to make public health one of its chief concerns when it attained a fair measure of governmental power.

But this general statement did not satisfy my friend. He smiled at me somewhat contemptuously and remarked that Socialists seemed to have only glittering generalities instead of definite measures to offer the electorate.

"How do you Socialists," he asked, "ever expect to inspire confidence in your party unless you bring detailed knowledge to bear upon public questions and show the people that you know how to solve various problems that confront them here and now?"

"It is all very well," he added, "to theorize about social evolution, to paint pretty pictures of the future, to denounce the evils of the future, to denounce the evils of the present, to attack the old political parties, to expose the class character of modern institutions, and to point out that private property as the means of wealth production must eventually be done away with. I sympathize with all that, but I want to know, and what thousands of other broad-minded people want to know, is what stand Socialist party candidates will take upon the various questions that must be solved within the next two or three years. But you Socialists seem to live rather in the pink clouds of romance or the black depths of despair. It's too bad that you have gotten into these ruts, for if you were as well versed in State an municipal problems as you seem to be in the statistics of poverty you might accomplish something worth while."

I ventured to remark that a thorough knowledge of social evils and their causes along with an understanding of historical tendencies was essential to those who sought to bring about human betterment.

"Yes! Yes! Yes!" the doctor replied impatiently, "but you fellows never seem to get beyond the stage of analysis and denunciation."

That put me on my mettle and I proceeded to mollify my critic by telling him that Socialist government would take care of the public health in the following way:

By shortening the hours of labor, thereby reducing the time spent in the dust-ladden, poisonous air of mines, factories, stores and offices.

By enforcing clean, healthy, sanitary conditions in all industrial establishinments, by safeguarding the employes against dangerous machinery and avoidable accidents, by securing for them as much fresh air and sunlight as practicable.

By building model tenements and homes for working people and renting same to them at a price sufficient only to cover the cost of construction and maintenance.

By abating the smoke nuisance in cities and separating the residental from the factory districts by stretches of woodland.

By spending any sum of money necessary to secure a pure water supply, and, until dairies are municipalized, compelling milk venders and milk producers to observe the greatest cleanliness in order to prevent their supplies becoming infected by the germs of tuberculosis and typhoid fever.

By fighting the unscrupulous adulteration of food by manufacturers and, as rapidly as possible, bringing all food producing industries under public control.

By educating the people in hygiene, sanitation and the care of the sick through illustrated lectures, special exhibitions and the free dissemination of literature.

By the multiplication of public baths, supervised playgrounds, school gymnasiums and public breathing spaces.

By the free medical treatment of all dangerous diseases, by the erection of immense public hospitals to take care of the sick, and by providing substantial, well-cooked, scientifically-prepared nourishing midday meals to school children instead of sending them home at noon hour.

By the establishment of a National Department of Health that would coordinate the work of State and municipal boards of health, gather information of value to the public, conduct special investigations and do for human beings what the Department of Agriculture is doing for pigs and corn.

"Excellent! Excellent!" cried the doctor, "but how will Socialist governments raise the immense sums of money with which to cary out this admirable program?"

"They will raise the money," I replied, "by wresting back from the rich most of the wealth they succeed in mulcting from the death duties and the appropriation of unearned increments. Another source of revenue will be the industries that are brought under direct government control. However, the hundreds of millions of dollars that are now being squandered by Republicans and Democrats upon engines of destruction will be used to save life instead of destroying life. The Socialists believe that arbitration treaties plus the international solidarity of the working class will bring the abolition of armies and navies within the sphere of practical politics."

My medical friend wished to continue the discussion, but that was enough for one day.—From "New York Call."

AN OPEN LETTER TO PRESIDENT TAFT.

Girard, Kan., March 30, 1912.

Mr. William Howard Taft, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Mr. President—A black brute in the service of the Pullman company as porter assaulted and attempted to ravish a white woman on a train in Arizona. The brute was caught, tried and given the maximum sentence of fourteen years in the penitentiary. Soon afterward the woman, bearing upon her white throat the marks of the black fiend's clutches, claimed damages from the railroad company and the Pullman company. Thereupon hte judge who had presided at the trial of the rapist, ordered his release from the penitentiary; another trial, a mock trial, WITHOUT A JURY, was surreptitiously held, the convicted rapist discharged by the judge, hurried into a waiting cahoose attached to a special engine, rushed to the state line, and there set at liberty.

Following this proceeding two pages of the court record were mutilated and made unreadable to destroy the evidence of this judicial crime which was committed at the instance of the Santa Fe Railroad company and the Pullman to cheat the outraged woman out of the twenty-five thousand dollars' damages claimed by her and for which these corporation were liable under the law.

The judge who committed this monstrous crime was Richard E. Sloan and this man, Mr. President, you have just named for district judge for the district of Arizona. Had you been ignorant of the facts above stated you might plead innocence, but you had certified copies of the evidence of Sloan's guilt before you and you named him because his appointment was demanded by the railroad corporations in whose interest he had debauched himself and outraged justice.

Now, sir, the Appeal to Reason has had this case sifted to the bottom by three special agents who have gone over all the ground and examined all the records. Their report is complete in every detail. It includes transcripts from the court records, photographic copies of the pages mutilated by Sloan to destroy the evidence of his crime, photograph of the rape fiend, depositions, statements and affidavits by living witnesses, including the statement of the outraged woman, and other documentary evidence covering every detail of he case and clinching the evidence of Sloan's crime beyond any shadow of doubt.

A more scandalous perversion of justice, a fouler outrage under the forms of law, a more astounding debauchery of the judicial tribunal has never been brought to light.

The record of Richard E. Sloan is as black as the crime of his protege, the rape-committing fiend—he spirited out of the penitentiary and out of the state of Arizona by special engine and caboose. And this is the man, Mr. President, you are foisting upon the people of Arizona as their judge for life to insure yourself the support of the corporations; and to clinch the bargain you compelled the people to eliminate the recall from their constitution, before you allowed them admission to the union.

Now, Mr. President, the Appeal to Reason proposes to tell the whole truth about the Sloan affair to the American people. In appointing him federal judge, knowing him as you did, you became accessory to his crime.

You and your administration have done all in your power to suppress this paper for printing the truth. But what has appeared in the past is as nothing compared to what remains to be told. Every word will be the truth, backed up with the proof, and when the judicial edition of this paper appears of April 27th, every decent American will blush with shame and horror.

The only motive we have is the service we owe the truth and the duty we owe the people.

Your department of justice, Mr. President, has returned indictments against three members of the Appeal editorial staff, but this threat of prison will not prevent the Appeal from publishing to the world all the facts we have unearthed showing the corrupt character of the men into whose hands you have placed the machinery for the prosecution and punishment of the violators of your capitalist laws. This advance notice is given to you that you may have fair warning of what we propose doing.

Respectfully,
FRED D. WARREN,
Managing Editor.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

State Secretary Sill, of Florida, reports thirteen new locals organized in that State during the month of March.

George E. Reeslund, Organizer of the Young People's Socialist League, 323 West First Street, Los Angeles, California, desires to get in touch with the Young People's Leagues in other cities. Those interested will kindly take notice.

Election of Woman's National Committee and International Secretary.

The following is a report of the total votes received by the candidates for members of the Woman's National Committee and for International Secretary, resulting from a national party referendum upon which the vote closed April 6, 1912. The names are listed in the order of their votes. The first seven were elected.

A complete tabulation of the vote by States will appear in the May issue of the Monthly Bulletin.

Meta Berger, 19,731; May Wood-Simons, 13,468; Grace D. Brewer, 13,-170; Lena Morrow Lewis, 10,677; Luella Twining, 8,361; Winnie E. Branstetter, 7, 568; Ella Carr, 7,480; May M. Strickland, 7,448; Elizabeth H. Thomas, 6,587; Theresa Serber, Malkiel, 6,031; Anita C. Block, 5,6665; M. Octavia Floaten, 5,577; Lotta Burke, 5,492; Ella Reeve Bloor, 5,-336; Ethel Whitehead, 5,156; Mary E. Garbutt, 4,834; Esther L. Edelson, 4,-354; Carrie C. Block, 4,344; Antoinette F. Konikow, 4,328; Jennie Arnott, 4,264; Emma D. Cory, 3,917; Dorothy Johns, 3,468; Prudence Stokes Brown, 3,065; Esther Sponable Wright, 3,013; Blanche Riehm, 2,583.

International Secretary.

Kate Richards O'Hare, 8,030; Morris Hillquit, 6,587; May-Wood-Simons, 4,902; Ernest Untermann, 3,-388.

By a recent referendum in Illinois, J. O. Bentall, 205 West Washington Street, Chicago, was re-elected State Secretary; Samuel W. Ball, 6442 Bishop Street, Chicago, Walter Huggins, 205 West Washington Street, Chicago, were elected members of the National Committee; Adolph Germer, 815 Centerville Avenue, Belleville, was re-elected to the same position.

Proposed National Party Referendum.

Local Butte, No. 1, Montana.

"Butte Local No. 1, Socialist party of Montana, 986 members in good standing, requests seconds for the following motion:

"That the following be made a part of the platform and declartion of principles of the Socialist party of the United States:

"Established Socialism, to be successful and enduring, or, in fact, to be at all worthy the name of Socialism, must be a condition of industrial democracy. It must be a direct, democratic management and control of industry, and of the distribution of the products of industry, by and for the workers engaged in industry. The Socialist party urges the working class to so shape its form of economic organization as to conform, as far as possible, to the lines of modern industrial development, thereby preparing the working class, through industrial organization, for the taking over collectively, by the workers of the machinery and forces of production and idstribution; thus fitting the workers for harmonious, democratic working-class control and management of the future industrial democracy—Socialism.

Comment.

"The most significant development of the International Socialist movement in recent years was the character of Gustave Herve's comment on the German elections.

"The militant French writer makes straightforward acknowledgement of the tremendous importance of united working class political action, and admits his conviction that such action can be made a powerful factor in the struggle of the working class toward economic independence.

"In no other part of the world, save possibly in his own country, should Herve's confession have greater or better effect from a working-class standpoint than in the United States.

"It indicates an early clearing of the atmosphere as to the relations of the economic international understanding of their interdependence.

"It indicates an early freeing of the American labor movement from the influence of those narrow, carping critics, in both A. F. of L. and I. W. W. circles, who, on all occasions, sneer at and belittle the importance of working-class political action.

"In view of the fine, tolerant spirit of Herve, and its probable effect upon the world of organized labor, is it too much to expect that Socialist Party of the United States to reject the disgusting and futile compromises of previous platforms respecting organized labor, and to substitute therefor a clear and decisive declaration showing broadly the Socialist attitude regarding the organized labor movement?

"The adoption of the above declaration would remove any existing justification for the charge that the Socialist Party favors any factionalism in the organized labor movement. It would simply outline a form of organization economically that is ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL to the triumph of the working class through Socialism. In other words, the Socialist Party—the political party of the working class—in seeking to abolish the wage system, points out to the working class in a purely constrcuive manner, a development in unionism that MUST PRECEDE actual Socialism.

"We leave the manner of securing this desired organization entirely in the hands of the workers themselves, taking no stand either for or against those who 'bore from within' or hammer from without.

"Moreover, such a declaration as the above would emphasize the working-class character of the American Socialist movement, tend to discourage the apparent tendency within our party in some localities to compromise with small capitalist interests for immediate political spoils, and form a solid groundwork for a permanent, substantial growth."

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Judge Peck's judicial reform proposal, which passed the Con-Con, if approved by the people, is expected to do away with many of the "law's delays." One trial before either judge or jury ,and one review by a higher court is the essence of the proposition. In brief, the proposal leaves the present Supreme Court of said judges unchanged in number, changes the present Circuit Court to the Court of Appeals and gives it final jurisdiction in all cases save felonies and those involving constitution, and the Legislature is given power to establish inferior courts.

It is provided that all save one of the judges of the Supreme Court shall be necessary to hold a statute unconstitutional, except in affirming a decision of the Court of Appeals declaring a law invalid. In this instance, only three of the judges would be necessary to knock out a law. Upon weight of the evidence, the judges of the Court of Appeals, may reverse the Common Pleas Court only by unanimous decision.

Delegate Thomas offered an amendment to abolish the right of the Supreme Court to declare laws unconstitutional. The amendment was defeated by a vote of 67 to 36. The labor delegates all voted for the amendment. Delegate Thomas' proposal to abolish the State Senate, and have but one House, was tabled by a vote of 68 to 33.

Delegate Johnson's proposal to reduce from two-thirds to three-fifths the number of votes to over-ride the governor's veto was adopted by a large majority after a fight made by the labor delegates to abolish the veto power altogether, precipitated an amendment offered by delegate Thomas. The amendment was tabled by a vote of 69 to 31.

After a spirited fight, Delegate Mauck's proposal amending the first section of the Bill of Rights, giving the Legislature the power over sales of stock, bonds, securities and other personal property, was adopted by a vote of 72 to 5. This proposal if ratified by a vote of the people, will practically put out of business the fake stock jobbing concerns, which now fleece the citizens of the State.

The I. & R. Committee has recommended for passage the Recall proposal. It provides that for the recall of a State official, 20 per cent of the voters must sign petitions for a recall election; and 25 per cent must sign for the recall of district, County, municipal or township officials. If any such official is recalled the, vacancy shall be filled according to law; no opposing candidate for the job can run against the official whose recall is sought.

The convention, by a vote of 48 to 43 defeated a proposal by Delegate Taggart of Wayne County, providing for compulsory attendance of voters at an election.

Delegate Earnhart's proposal providing for double liability of stockholders, of banking corporations authorized to receive money on depist, was adopted by a large majority.

Delegate Hoskins of Auglaize, offered an amendment providing for guaranteed bank deposits. The amendment was suported heartily by the labor delegates, but was defeated by a vote of 39 to 53. Delegate Wood's amendment requiring a state inspection of all private banks or companies receiving money on deposit, before the words "banks or bankers" can be used, was adopted as a part of the proposal.

Attorney General Hogan in an opinion rendered this last week, has given a severe jolt to the Liability Insurance Companies, which have been doing all within their power to defeat the operation of the new Workmen's Compensation act, but offering to insure employers against accidents, committed by their wilful act or by their violation of the safety laws made for the protection of labor.

The giet of the opinion is that when an employe is injured, as the result of a wilful act on the part of the employer or because of the employer's violation of the State law, or municipal ordiance, the employer cannot insure for the damages, he is forced to pay the injured employe. It is needless to add that the State Federation of Labor and the members of the State Liability Board of Awards, at whose instance the decision was made, are delighted with the opinion, as this places the State on an equal footing with the Liability Companies in offering compensation insurance to employers.

The labor proposals will be reached some time this week, and it is important that the labor unions should at once request their delegates to the Constitutional Convention to vote for these proposals. The numbers of these proposals are : 24, 54, 122, 302 and 220.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

(James Oneal, State Secretary 813½ Ohio Street, Terre Haute.)

The first local to be organized in April is in Marshall County at Culver, where the comrades start with seven members. This County has forged ahead at a rapid rate during the past winter.

Local Stonebbluff has been inactive for many months, but the local is now reorganized with six members, and the outlook in Fountain County is so encouraging that for the first time a County ticket will probably be placed in the field.

Local Egypt, whose trials in getting a hall to meet in were reported in this column in a previous issue, has been reorganized and the comrades expect to be in the big campaign with both feet. This local is located in a mining region that is alive with Socialist sentiment.

Petersburg, in Pike County, is another one of the mining towns that wants to have a local. A meeting has been called for Saturday, April 20th, and a speaker will be sent to hold a propaganda meeting and to organize the reds.

Word comes from Winamac, in Pulaski County, that that town is a good one to work on and asking that instructions regarding organization be sent. These are on the way and Winamac will probably be the first local organized in the County.

Socialists on a rural route out of Anderson at Emporia are anxious to organize. This local will add another to the big Madison County organization.

Socialists at Windfall in Tipton County are anxious to have a speaker and Comrade Condo will go there. This should be a hint to the Socialists at Tipton, the County seat, to get busy.

Local South Bend now has four ward branches and thre foreign speaking branches. The local has had the Lyceum lectures with an average attendance of 400 and the movement is progressing nicely.

Local Terre Haute is at work on the remaining two unorganized wards and as they are working class wards the comrade expect to have all organized for the campaign this summer.

An amendment to the State Constitution just adopted reduces the dues to the State Office to ten cents, which will take effect on and after May 1st.

Socialists at Logansport wil nominate a County ticket onSaturday, May 4th, and the State Secretary will speak at a mass meeting there on the following evening. On the following Sunday morning he will probably speak at Delphi on the way home. The Catholic priests in this town are doing valiant service for the capitalist politicians and "wiping out" Socialism at every opportunity.

GOLDSTEIN FRIGHTENED FROM KENOSHA BY RIES.

Kenosha, Wis.—W. F. Reis, of Toledo, Ohio, frightened David Goldstein, the Catholic Jew, so that he never came to this town after he had been engaged to speak by eight Catholic churches.

Ries delivered several lectures here and upon hearing that Goldstein was coming offered $100 to him if he would debate iRes and $100 more if the audience should decide that Goldstein had won. Ries advertised his challenge well throughout the town.

The news reached Goldstein when he arrived in Milwaukee and he decided not to come to Kenosha, which is only a few miles distant. The theater in which he was to speak was filled to the doors, but no David appeared. One of the Catholic priests spoke, telling his audience that any Catholic who voted the Socialist ticket was sure to go to hell.

Ries spoke to a big crowd of about 700 people in the streets until almost midnight—and still David did not come.

IS THE POPE DEAD?

Several days ago a report was flashed round the world that the Pope had died in the Vatican. The report was soon denied from Rome and every paper published the correction. It will be noted, however, that His Holiness has not personally denied the rumor of his death. The assurance that he is alive comes from other sources whose general credibilty we have no means of ascertaining. A personal denial from the Pontiff himself, however, we should regard as thoroughly conclusive.

While these remarks may appear to be extreme and unwarranted skepticism, we have been so often deceived by premature death rumors and obituary notices that we consider our caution justified, even in the face of the prompt denial given in this case.

For instance, some three weeks since, another death notice appeared in the press and was widely featured at the time, and though it, too, was premature and unfounded, no denial has appeared in the journals which featured it so prominently.

It was not a pope or a king, or in fact a person of any kind that the rumor referred to. In this case it was a Socialist newspaper popularly known as the Appeal to Reason, and published at Girard, Kan. The report of its death to this day remains uncontradicted in the newspapers which spread the rumor broadcast at the time.

As in the case of the Pontiff, we are equally skeptical, but perhaps somewhat more interested. The Appeal was appealed to and promptly replied that the statement was somewhat exaggerated, and added that as it had contracted the cheerful habit of living, it proposed to continue doing so. We may mention that its personal statement on this matter seems to be strongly corroborated by the fact that we still receive a copy regularly at this office every week sent directly from Girard, and as this is a habit to which dead newspapers are not usually addicted, we have reached the conclusion that on the whole the Appeal to Reason is not really dead, in view of the evidence it has presented to the contrary, and despite the fact that no contradiction of the rumor has appeared in the journals which first published it.

THE CLASS STRUGGLE.

"The rich man rides in the finest chaises
The poor man can't use his pushcart, bejases."

At a recent meeting of the City Council a resolution was introduced by some councilman, not a Socialist, to allow all circus shows to give performances in the city of Columbus without paying a license as is provided by ordinance for such payment.

There was filed in the court of A. E. Thomas, justice of the peace, last week an affidavit, a part of which read as follows: "Affiant is sixty-two years of age, of feeble health and out of employment; that since the month of February last he has ben unable to support his said wife owing to the cold weather and lack of clothing with which to keep warm while at work; that the present Democratic administration has demanded a license of $1.00 for the privilege of using his push-cart and that he has not had the money with which to pay said license."

The writer is not familiar with the amount of the license required to give circus performances in the city, but he is of the opinion that if the circus owners were allowed to pay their license fee that council should remit some 25 or possibly 50 push-cart licenses and by so doing perform a real good as well as avoid the suspicion or free passes to the circus.

RENTERS ON STRIKE.

Paris, France, is facing the latest novelty in strikes. The Landlord League, a house renting trust, took it upon themselves to advance rentals from 10 to 25 per cent.

This advance in rents affected almost every workingman in Paris. They appealed to their respective city council for relief against this newer method of exploitation. They in turn informed them that they were powerless to do anything in the matter.

So the Parisian workers adopted a direct action method of their own to force rentals back to their former position. They absolutely refused to pay any more rent to the landlords or move.

The French landlords are now finding themselves in a peculiar position. To evict the workers from their homes would mean that all the streets of Paris would be blockaded with furniture and the like. Then again, forcing these hundreds of thousands of workers homeless into the streets might bring about a condition that these shylock landlords would not like to assume the responsibility for.

So far the workers have the best of the argument, therefore the outcome of this strike is being watched with interest.

FREE SPEECH FIGHT.

San Diago, Cal., is the latest criterion of capitalism and the suppression of free speech.

The I. W. W. ites were holding nightly meetings on the street corners and rapidly organizing the workers into one big union, when, lo and behold, the respectable Citizens Alliance took it upon themselves to suppress these nightly meetings.

Speaker after speaker were yanked o ffof soap boxes by the police and quickly hustled to jail, where they were put into solitary and starved. At the same time every freight train entering San Diego was filed with men ready to take the rostrum in defense of the right of free speech.

Those having served their time were turned loose and at once took the soap box again, knowing the fate that awaited them at the jail if rearrested. Nothing daunted, these men took their medicine.

The respectable element at once becam aroused and organizd a vigilance committee. This committee, 300 strong, armed with rifles, marched to the jail, liberated the incarcerated I. W. W. ites, marched them to the edge of the town and warned them with pain of death never to return. Some of the comrades were found the next morning murdered on the highway.

At this the workers of San Diego became aroused. They armed themselves with 1000 rifles and took up the free speech fight in dead earnest. At the same time they commenced to gather evidence covering the murders on the highway. In this they implicated as accessories to the fact 139 of the most respectable (God save the mark) element of San Diego that composed the vigilance committee.

These respectable citizens knowing the workers had the goods on them quickly fled from the city and so far have not been apprehended.

Even the marines and sailors off of the American warships lying in the harbor stood amazed at the outrages committed by these respectable citizens, and took an active hand in the fight by assisting in protecting the I. W. W. speakers.

The sneaking cowards that fled have brought a great deal of pressure to bear upon the workers, wanting now to give them the right of free speech, providing the workers will not press the charge of murder against them and forget the past.

However, the workers with their 1000 rifles have again restored order, where previously capitalistic anarchy prevailed, and stand firm to prosecute these men if caught for the most damnable murders that have ever occured on American soil.

DAVE GOLDSTEIN.

We have information that Dave Goldstein will spend two weeks with us in the coming fall campaign, tirading against Socialism.

The mud batteries may just as well be unmasked at once, for when religion and politics become mixed a stench generally arises that reaches to the very heavens.

So far we have contended that we are an economic political movement, having nothing to do with religion, but if the religious organization forsakes its religious field and gets into politics with it, we certainly shall have something to say about it—and we will say it.

POLITICS AND PUGILISM.

"We slugged them over the ropes in Illinois," is the reported comment of Thugadore Rowdyvelt, when it was intimated to him that his "bunch" had cleaned out the Taft gang in the Sucker state primaries, and, he continued, "I want to see them take the count in Pennsylvania."

All of which is good old "roughhouse" politics, and appropriately expressed in refined and classic vocabulary of the prize ring.

Michigan, however, seemingly inspired by this heroic language, has slipped in ahead of Pennsylvania and has already started the slug fest in her Republican state convention at Bay City.

An entry from the Roosevelt stables, one Kid Gordon, of Midland, Mich., who attemtped to address the delegates, was hurled off the stage, or as Thugadore might more picturesquely express it, "slugged through the ropes," by Battling Cremer, a Taft delegate from Marquette.

The police then invaded the ring, and with the assistance of the militia, which was on hand awaiting such contingencies, separated the furious combatants, ordered them to their corners, and for some time afterward were busily engaged in quelling the general scrap that ensued, in which over a hundred political bruisers took part.

Another body of militia, stationed outside the doors, held back 1800 excited and howling delegates, all eager to enter and take part in the general scrimmage. At last reports the police and militia were still on the job, but were having a thrilling time regulating the bunch of respectable, prominent and influential toughs who had assembled in the building.

TIM HOGAN IS LATEST CZAR.

Attorney General Hogan has ruled that city councils have no power to dictate that city work, to be performed under contract with private individuals or corporations, shall be done exclusively by union labor.

The question arose when the city council of Conneaut, now controlled by the votes of Socialists, authorized a contract for public printing, and at the solicitation of the Typographical union, inserted a clause in the ordinance which required that the contractor should employ none other than union labor upon the work.

"Tim" Hogan is certainly going some. He beats the courts that issue injunctions a mile. He is a bigger man in his own estimation) than the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the state. He has gone so far as to threaten officials who disregard his "opinions" with legal punishment. "Tim" you are undoubtedly the worst accident that has happened to the state of Ohio for some years. Your rulings are only opinions and you are tempting fate when you try to give them the force of judicial decisions.

GREEDY VULTURES STILL FATTEN AT OHIO PEN.

Last Monday, April 15, was the day upon which all contract work at the Ohio penitentiary was to cease under the law. The contractors, however, are going right along with their shops, although two of them, the Columbus Bolt and the E. B. Lanman Company, should have been stopped a year ago. Three of the shop buildings have been condemned by the building inspector as unsafe, but are still in use. It seems impossible to get rid of the concerns that have made their millions out of convict labor at the Ohio pen.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

You Boosters for the past few weeks have been doing nice work and yet subs are not coming in as they should. The fact of the matter is, that the Comrades outside of this District seem to realize much more than some of our Comrades here, the great opportunity that knocks at our door in our Congressional fight this fall, and are aiding us in every possible way. Many words of encouragement and assurances of support are being received. With the combination offer that we have now made with the Appeal to Reason, it is a very easy matter to get subscriptions for these two papers. The Appeal's regular rates are 50 cents per year, but by the special arrangements we have made with them, we will furnish both the Appeal and the Columbus Socialist for one year for $1.00 for both publications.

After that hard-shelled Democratic or Republican friend of yours has received 52 doses of each of these two publications, we guarantee that he will either be in the Socialist party or a lunatic asylum.

Now, Comrades, let's all get behind this proposition and boost this circulation way up beyond anything we have ever done.

Try the Sunday morning plan. You'll always find the people home at that time, and with a little judicious work on your part, the majority of the voters of this District can be put upon the sub-list. On to the co-operative Commonwealth.

Comrades D. and E. Doan of Wilmington, Ohio, are determined to do their share in carrying the Twelfth Congressional District for the working class. They put on ten new ones in this district and also send in a new one from their home town. That's the kind of support that nerves us to do bigger things.

A Comrade from Newark, O., who desires his name withheld, writes as follows:—"Sometime ago I received a sample copy of your paper and immediately forwarded you my subscription. Of the many Socialist papers, yours is the best I have ever read. In fact, I would not be without it. You can expect a list of subscribers from me very shortly. Trusting that you may live long to continue the work you have so grandly begun, I am, yours fraternally."

Comrade McCleary has a system all his own. He puts one yearly, five six months, and one 3 months, a total of 7 on the list. Let every Booster do likewise.

Once more the smiling face of Comrade Gallentin shows up in this office. No wonder he smiles. He has just started six more on the road to Freedom.

Don't forget to use the Red Ticket.

Even the preachers are waking up. Comrade Rev. Alford of Magnetic Springs, O., has got another one up at the mourners bench. In order to complete his conversion he makes him subscribe.

Comrade Ebright, is on the job all the time. His donation this week is three. Nice work.

Comrade Reed of the Thirteenth Ward is "up and at 'em." We credit him with two scalps this week. Likewise, Comrades Broshaw, Fries and Bues.

List of Boosters with one or more to their credit:

Rockey, Murphy, Buchanan, Neds, Fluhart, Kirkling, Dean, Taylor, Meier, Diebert, Binns, Penold, Burger, McDonough, Bobblett, Lechter, Fries, Freeman.

If you are out of Red Tickets you can get them from the Ward Branch or at this office. Dont' fail to purchase from our advertisers.

Remember the Appeal and this paper both for one year for $1.00. Absolutely the best combination ever offered.

The Socialist and Appeal to Reason, BOTH ONE year for $1.00. This is the best newspaper offer ever made.

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin County. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

THE CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE

CITY HEADQUARTERS AT 335½ SOUTH HIGH STREET.

JEWISH MASS MEETING.

The Jewish Branch has arranged for a mass meeting at Federation hall, 121½ East Town street, Thursday evening, April 25. An address will be given by Comrade Levinson, editor of the Jewish Labor World, on "Capitalism and Socialism," all are invited.

ELEVENTH WARD BRANCH.

The Eleventh Ward Branch now holds its regular business meeting each Tuesday evening with a propaganda meeting on Thursday evenings. Hall at West Broad and Oakley.

MASS CONVENTION COLUMBUS SOCIALIST

The Socialist party organization met in mass convention last Sunday afternoon and transacted various business of importance to the party.

The following were elected as delegates to the Socialist State convention: D. R. Kinsell, Peter Kinnear, M. C. Green, O. G. Van Schoyck, D. J. Farrell, Annie Minlurn, C. F. Weichodlt, R. M. Woody, W. C. Bates, T. C. Southard, E. B. Lewis.

The convention decided that the Socialist party could not endorse or condemn the Third Street viaduct bond proposition. This leaves individual Socialists to decide, each for himself, as to how he shall vote upon this question. This is the whole thing in a nutshell. The convention voted down, practically unanimously a resolution opposing the Electric Light Extender.

The question of a State printing plant and a State Socialist daily probably will come up for action during the State convention, and the Columbus delegates were instructed to favor the projects. It is planned to establish the plant in Columbus and have all literature of the party printed here.

Comrade Emil Seidel, Mayor of Milwaukee, was endorsed as the chief speaker at the May Day celebration to be held at Olentangy Park, May 5.

VAUDEVILLE SHOW.

The Eighth Ward and the Socialist Dramatic Club will give an entertainment which will chase the gloom away. Lots of fun and music. Come and bring the children We will promise you a good time. Admission will be only 15 cents. The date is Friday, April 26th, at the Federation hall, 121½ E. Town Street.

LABORING MEN AND SOCIALISTS TAKE NOTICE.

Within the past forty-eight hours there has been presented to the legal department of this paper no less than five notices which were served on laboring men, mostly Socialists, to call at some office of some collecting agency or attorney and pay a bill within a time stated or suit would be instituted to collect the bill. In these five cases all those who called had paid the bills and held receipts in full. In some other cases clients, laboring men and Socialists, have said they paid the bills but took no receipt for same. Where no receipt was taken and you have no witness to prove that you paid the debt this department can do nothing for you. If you have receipts preserve them as you will no doubt need them for there seems to be a studied effort on the part of the Capitalist class to not only harrass Comrades with suits to collect bills you are unable to pay all at once, but to collect as many bills as possible twice. This department wants you to know and we want the public to know that if you justly owe a debt that you should pay it and the only thing that this department will do is to keep you from being harrassed and put to unnecessary expense while you pay the bill in installments and you and your family have the privilege of living while you pay. This office will not assist any comrade to deceive, defraud nor deprive any one of their just rights under present capitalistic laws even though he be a capitalist, no matter how much we deplore some of those laws or how much we despise the present "Skin-game System."

NEVER PAY A BILL UNLESS YOU GET A RECEIPT. ALWAYS KEEP THE RECEIPT.

PLAN FOR INVESTING POSTAL SAVINGS PROPOSED BY SOCIALIST

Resolution Transmitted to Constitutional Convention for Consideration.

A resolution has been transmitted to members of the Ohio Constitutional Convention to ask Congress to enact laws whereby States, Counties and municipalities may borrow the funds of the Postal Savings Bank at two and a half per cent interest and the United States shall issue money to States, Counties and municipalities, without interest, upon proper bonds of said States, Counties and municipalities, for public improvements. The resolution is as follows:

RESOLVED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF OHIO, That the Congress of the United States, be, and it is hereby requested, to make proper and suitable provisions by law for the loan, to States, Counties and municipalities within the United States, of the monies or funds deposited in the Postal Savings Banks of the United States, at two and one-half per cent interest, for public improvements, upon the said States, Counties and municipalities, depositing with the Treasurer of the United States, bonds of said States, Counties or municipalities in the amount so loaned.

RESOLVED Further, That the Congress of the United States be and it is hereby requested to make proper and suitable provisions, by law, for issuing and loaning money without interest, for public improvements, to States, Counties and municipalities within the United States, upon their bonds in the same so issued and loaned to said States, Counties or municipalities; said bond to be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States.

This was submitted by Comrade J. L. Bachman of Columbus.

A GOOD PROPAGANDA BOOK.

"Human Rights, versus Property Interests," is the title of a booklet just published by Comrade F. A. Dean, of Columbus. It consists of 64 pages and is a compendium of arguments, facts and statistics to prove the truth of Socialism. The author is a workingman with no particular fad to exploit. He has simply put in comprehensive form the process of reasoning by which he became a Socialist. The same line will lead any thinking man to the same conclusion. The little book is a splendid propaganda tool and should be widely circulated. It costs 10 cents for one copy, $1.00 for 12 copies; $10.00 for 200; $35.00 for 1000. All orders should be sent to F. A. Dean, 108½ South High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

ROCKERS! ROCKERS! ROCKERS!!!

No Larger or Finer Display Anywhere Than Right Here

We have them, little and big, upholstered and plain, all finishes—Golden Oak, Mahogany. Early English—high backs, low backs, high arms, low arms, without arms—in fact our Rocker stock is the most complete in the city.

As to Prices—Well, the people know that ours is the lowest-priced house in town, quality for quality. BUT WE DON'T SELL JUNK, bear that in mind. We illustrate with a price or two to indicate.

Here is a Rocker of real value. Price is low, but it is worth buying. Large and roomy; plenty of style to it; well finished; worth a great deal more, but we sell it for $1.85

Here's another Rocker, large and massive, solid, select quartered oak, genuine leather, every piece in it is hand-shaped, polished. We sell it for $14.50

The Famous Allwin Go-Carts

This line is made by the largest go-cart factory in the world. Its rapid growth and the vast quantities of Allwin Go-Carts in constant use, as well as the largest shipments being made daily, are proof positive of the high esteem in which the Allwin Go-Cart is held.

We have them, and they're fine. Those automobile tops are just the thing. Tops covered with guaranteed fabricoid leather. Equipped with easy springs, making them comfortable. In fact, Durability, Comfort and Design are the important points about this line.

PRICES ALSO—QUITE LOW.

BROTHERHOOD OF CARPENTERS ACTIVE.

Indianapolis, Ind.—General Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, states that after a short struggle for an increase in wages in Des Moines, Ia., a satisfactory settlement has been for the coming year. At Wildwood, N. J., also an increase in wages of 2 1-2 cents per hour has been secured.

Boston — Boston Typographical union, through its executive board, has just signed an agreement with the publishers running five years, with an arbitration clause and an advance in the wage scale of two cents an hour. The new scale goes into effect May 1.

GIRLS STRIKE FOR HIGHER WAGES.

New York—Declaring they were tired of working in the dark from 8 A. M. to 6 P. M. for $5.00 per week fifty girls employed by a moving picture manufacturing concern here have gone on strike for more money and shorter hours. It is said that the work is very trying on the eyes, as the employes labor in the dark room of the plant all day in the performance of their duties.

Every human hog who produces nothing, but makes his living and fortune by speculating in and accumulating the wealth which others create, is opposed to Socialism.

WISCONSIN NOTES.

The so-called "defeat" of the Milwaukee Socialists has had two remarkable results. The meetings of the Social-Democratic party branches are larger and more enthusiastic than ever before. Moreover, the applications for membership in our party are coming in floods.

The first result is not surprising. The older Socialists may be expected, of course, to understand that our much-trumpeted "defeat" was a genuine victory for Socialism. That the Social-Democratic vote should have grown, in spite of all the violent attacks and misrepresentations of the capitalist press and politicians, is enough to fill with hope and joy the thoughtful and experienced Socialists.

But that the new Socialists should choose this time to flock into our party shows that they are of the right stuff. That a campaign fought on a straight issue of "Anti-Socialism vs. Socialism" has had this effect, shows the enlightening value of a fusion of the capitalist parties. It has opened the eyes of the working people, the campaign in itself has been an education, and hence this influx of new members.

Most cheering of all is the enthusiasm among the women. Last week a large women's meeting was held in Brisbane Hall for the purpose of bringing the women into the organization. A committee of 88 women was appointed to make a canvass of their respective wards, to carry on the propaganda among women, and especially to induce women Socialists to join the party. Already a large number of applications from women have been received, and when these 88 women have completed their canvass, Milwaukee will have a membership of women of which any city might be proud.

It is difficult to give any one outside of Milwaukee any idea of the magnificent work done by the women Socialists during the last six months. The Milwaukee women have not gone out with a brass band, but the practical work which they have accomplished has been astonishing. They have not worked apart, but have directly mingled in the campaign, naturally and equally, as is right in a party which demands equality of sexes. Women on election day distributed cards near the polls. Women formed a part of the Bundle Brigade, distributing literature in the same districts where their husbands also carried it.

Above all, the phenomenal success of The Milwaukee Leader, its remarkable growth and its financial success, is very largely due to the Milwaukee women. They have systematically used their purchasing power in support of The Leader, and to them belongs a great share of the credit for the success of our "big gun" in the recent campaign.

On the whole, the Milwaukee comrades are beginning to be heartily glad that events shaped themselves as they did during the last campaign. The fusion of the capitalist parties has solidified and educated the working people, and has afforded them a practical demonstration of the real class struggle. We are glad it came just when it did. We are now marching on to become a majority party. It is a goal which is by no means far away—probably we shall reach it in two years. When we attain it, all the combined forces of capitalism will never defeat us again. There are smiling faces in Milwaukee.

E. H. THOMAS,
State Secretary.

ADMINISTRATION BACKS UP.

Washington—President Taft has issued an executive order which changes in some material aspects the "gage rule," which has previously been in effect in reference to the activity of civil service employes. While the order does not entirely relieve the situation, it is indicative that a change of attitude has taken place. This change no doubt has been occasioned by the attitude assumed by the post office committee in the House, recommending an abolition of the gag rule order, which prohibits the civil service employes from reaching congressmen by petition. The recent order is as follows: "It is hereby ordered that petitions or other communications regarding public business addressed to the Congress or either House or any committee or member thereof by officers or employes in the civil service of the United States shall be transmitted through the heads of their respective departments or officers, who shall forward them without delay with such comment as they may deem requisite in the public interest. Officers and employes are strictly prohibited, either directly or indirectly, from attempting to secure legislation or to influence pending legislation, except in the manner above prescribed. This order supersedes the executive ordrs of January 31, 1903, January 25, 1906, and November 26, 1909, regarding the same general matters."

SPOILING A "GREAT MORAL LESSON.

A British cynic once remarked that if a man had £50,000, he could tell the world to go to the devil.

And a woman equally provided can do likewise. Money knows no sex distinctions. It may not always bring happiness, but its possession brings perhaps the next best thing, security—that is, as long as you can hold on to it.

And that explains largely why Miss Floretta Whaley, of Hempstead, L. I., who eloped five years ago with the married clergyman of the parish, and just recently returned from California to visit her relatives in the East, is decidedly unavailable as a "horrible example" for the use of Sunday School and other pious literature.

Floretta is seemingly unrepentant. She is still living in illicit relations with "that man," and has borne him two children, but she isn't economically dependant upon him.

For, besides the two children, Floretta has a tidy little sum of $135,000 or so, and can also tell the world to go to the devil, even if she did rip all the sex conventions through both ends and down the middle.

The cold, cruel world isn't going to trample her underfoot or drive her to take a pierhead jump into the river on some dark night. Not so long as she holds on to those indispensible dollars.

She isn't dependent upon the Rev. Jere, though she eloped with him, and the fact that he has prospered in a modest way and now exploits fifteen men in his San Francisco paintshop, though all to the good, of course, isn't of vital importance to her.

Rev. Jere is perhaps himself better off after being "unfrocked" of his clerical garb, and donning painter's overalls, and probably gets more for his work than he was ever able to screw out of his stingy bourgeois congregation in Hempstead. These two erring mortals have, on the whole, not done too badly, considering the terrible nature of their offense. Neither retribution nor remorse seems to have dogged their footsteps to any appreciable extent. They are living illustrations of the truth of the saying that poverty after all is the real hell, and they have managed to escape that so far. Those dollars of Floretta's are the only things that have prevented her from becoming a real, "horrible example" of the wages of sin being death.

While they remain in her possession, she can be almost, if not quite as "respectable" as the various "wards" and proteges" of multimillionaires like Yerkes and Hawley and others.

These women were of the kind that Shaw describes as understanding that the best way to get along in life was "to be good to some man that could be good to them," the successful "Mrs. Warrens" of capitalist society. Their success forces society in turn to be "good" to them. While they possess the dollars, society doesn't describe their profession in coarse, vulgar language. It reserves that vocabulary for women who have failed—that is to say, who have not accumulated dollars. The successful ones are "wards" and "proteges." The others are—well, the reader can easily supply the vocabulary for himself.

Floretta, however, had her dollars all secured before she started on the broad road that leads to destruction—for those without cash.

And as this was not generally known when she departed from Hempstead with the Rev. Jere, our moral newspapers drew dreadful pictures of the misery, poverty and general wretchedness from which she was supposed to be suffering as a penance for her wrong-doing. Florettta, however, by her return, has ripped up this "great moral lesson" quite as effectively as in the first instance she ripped up the conventional code of morality. If those stories weren't true, they "ought" to have been, at any rate, but the application of the "moral" has been spoiled by those dollars.

Doutless there are many good people somewhat disappointed over the outcome of this scandal and whose righteous insticts would have been much better satisfied had this young woman returned a hopeless, penniless outcast, destined for the street, the hospital, and finally the morgue, but there is compensation in knowing that though there may be a "double standard of morality for men and woman," the possession of sufficient dollars by either goes a long way in preventing the extreme application of the standard, regardles of sex differences.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Ellison Ladd, whose residence is unknown, will take notice that on the 16th day of April, 1912, Maggie Ladd filed her petition in the Court of Common Pleas, Franklin County, Ohio, Cause No. 63,038, praying for divorce on the grounds of habitual drunkenness for three years last past and gross neglect of duty, and that said cause will be for hearing on and after June 1st, 1912.

KITCHEN PARLIAMENTS.

By May McDonald Strickland.
(Written for the Committee on Propaganda Among Women, Local Dayton, O.)

In taking up the work of special propaganda among women, two main points were considered: How to interest and educate the women in Socialism and how to get them into the local and not into a little group working among themselves.

Could the two objects be accomplished at the same time?

In the first place we called our workers in this field a "Committee on Propaganda Among Women," rather than a "Woman's Committee." The latter is, to be sure, shorter and more easily said but it seems at once to place the women in a pigeon-hole.

To still further break down the sex line in the work we elected one man and two women as the committee.

Does it work?

Splendidly!

How to reach the women? Ah, that was the question!

"If the mountain won't come to Mahomet, Mahomet must go to the mountain."

We decided to invade woman's sacred domain! We would go into their homes!

But how? Pink teas? Auxiliaries? Clubs? Reading Circles?

These had all been tried. Some of us had been through the mill! We had found that women would come to afternoon teas and club and reading circles. Oh, yes! But we had also found that a rivalry soon sprang up between the women and the men. Were the "men doing as much as the women?" We had seen a splendid movement go to pieces on this rock.

What then?

Happy thought! A series of "Kitchen Parliaments!"

They were a success at once. The people seemed to have been waiting for them. More houses have been opened to the work than we have been able to enter. A long list of invitations await us.

The plan is simplicity itself. The committee arranges a meeting at a comrade's home. The program consists of music and a talk on Socialism which is intended especially to interest women. Each one present is given a piece of literature. All public meetings of the local are announced and the people invitd to attend. They are asked to join the local. An informal social time follows th prgram. No refreshments are served. The meetings are held in the evening and the men asked to come with the women. The attendance has ranged from thirty to fifty people.

Many women have ventured into a neighbor's home and heard the message for the first time who had been timid about going to a public meeting.

The comrade at whose home the Kitchen Parliament is to be held, spends several afternoons calling on her neighbors and inviting them to the meeting.

The Kitchen Parliaments have the unstinted endorsement of our City Organizer.

But this is only one phase of our activity, although the work has grown from the Kitchen Parliament idea.

We intend to meet with the various Ward Organizations and arrange for a house to house distribution of literature for women.

We are arranging for an afternoon meeting of all the women members of the local to get their co-operation in a systematic visitation of the comrades' wives who are not yet members of the local.

Upon request of a man comrade we will have two women comrades make an afternoon call on his wife, take her a special piece of literature and try to get her out to the meetings.

We had the State Organizer in the city three days in succesion and held public meetings. One at the headquarters and two in wards. It took only enough for the Organizer's daily wage and left the rest of the collection in the treasury of the ward organization.

Result?

Organizer's expenses paid and the ward organization ready for another meeting any time.

We gave a public entertainment and social. Raised a neat sum with which to carry on our work. Had such a happy time that another social is called for "before hot weather."

We have been at work two months. Started without a cent of money. Have held six Kitchen Parliaments, three public meetings and a public entertainment. Have distributed over a thousand pieces of literature.

Like a snow ball rolling down hill, we seem to gather momentum and increase in size as we go!

Women in Ohio already have the school franchise and the Constitutional Convention, by a large majority, decided to submit the question of full enfranchisement of women to a vote of the citizens of the State. If it does not carry this time, it is only a matter of a few years until it does.

We feel that the "King's business requires haste." We must get women ready to use this new power as soon to be placed in her hands.

SOME POLITICAL DOPE.

Sloane Gordon, well-known newspaper and magazine witerr, who has traveled most all over the United State srecently, arrived in New York yesterday.

"The day of the partisan," said Mr. Gordon, "is as surely past, as completely behind us, as the country's division on the slavery question is behind us. 'Democrat' means nothing now. 'Republican' is insignificant. This is the breaking up time, and we are divided, regardless of old party lines, in Radicals and Conservatives. La Follette and Roosevelt, Beveridge and Clapp, and Stubbs and Hadley and Johnson and a lot of others who are classified in the Republican list are really Democrats; that is to say, Radicals. Harmon and Underwood and Bailey and scores of othe rnationally important personages who are tagged 'Democrats' are, in reality, Republicans—that is to say, Conservatives. What business has La Follette to claim place in the party that acknowledges Taft as its head? What business has Beveridge to be with that crowd? What argument can be brought forth to prove that Harmon or Underwood belongs to the party of Bryan and Kern and Hearst and Shafroth, and Marshall and Culbertson. Belonging to a party is in these parlous times similar to inheriting a disease.

"If Mr. Harmon were to be nominated on the Democratic ticket and Mr. Taft on the Republican ticket, I believe that Roosevelt, running independently, would beat them both in a fair election. If the Democrats should nominate a lively progressive—a man like Kern, of Indiana; or Clark, or some recognized up-to-dater—it isn't likely that any Republican could win—not even Roosevelt, who is the only live one the Republicans could possibly hope to get by with. If Roosevelt or even La Follette were to receive the Republican nomination and Harmon or Underwood the Democratic nomination, well—all the wise prophets on the lower end of Manhattan Island would be shown up. The Republican nominee would win in a walk.

"There aren't many real Harmon people on the Democratic side. Those who shout for him do it advisedly. They know that he would be hard to elect. The old Cleveland Democracy—the relics of a bygone political age, have come to life for Harmon in some sections. Who will the Democrats nominate? A dark horse, sure. Will Roosevelt run independently if he loses out at Chicago? Sure. And Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, a Democrat, will be on the ticket with him if Theodore can have his way, which he usually can."

CHILLICOTHE DEPARTMENT

The Socialist local meets the first and third Sunday of each month at 2:30 P. M., at Workman's hall, over Mutchlers pharmacy. The meeting on the first Sunday is devoted to business and that of the third to lectures or entertainment.

On April 21st at 2:30 P. M. Comrade Eby of Columbus will give a lecture on Socialism, previous to the lecture he and his family, wife and two daughters, will give a musical entertainment. No admission will be charged, every one welcome.

Don't forget the box social, April 30th at 8 P. M.

The past week witnessed the spectacle of the Board of Education turning the High School auditorium over to the exclusive Century Club, which courtesy is always denied the common herd, but who still are not adverse to their own use of property of said herd. Their is certainly no objection to their right and choice to remain exclusive, but serious objections should be raised to their exclusive use of the common property. Should the demand be made for the building to discuss the economic conditions (something that vitally affects all) or for their use as social centers, where all could come who would, we would witness the grandest howl the old Metropolis ever knew. The old, worn-out excuse would be made that "politics were involved" and politics you know must be discussed only along blind partisan lines, where evasion of facts can be sheltered by plenty of red fire and beating of Tom Tom's. Our old friend "Against Religion" would also show up alongside that poor old cripple "Breaking up the Family."

The Board of Trade is at present engaged in raising an industrial fund through which they hope to extend credit to "deserving" but tottering business enterprises. Said enterprises through the workings of capitalism having been rendered so uncertain and unsafe that the capitalistic banks refuse to extend credit. Actions of this sort can be interperted in only one way and that is that the middle class is at last in desperate conflict with capitalism, in other words capitalism having sucked almost to the last drop the blood of labor, has now turned its attention to the weaker of the middle class to act as their depositaries of what surplus labor is still creating, until the time is propitious when this section of this class will also be forced to join their brothers in proletairiatism. Should the Board of Trade succeed to the limit of their desire and save the middle class from the maw of capitalism, what would they have accomplished? Absolutely nothing. The same menace to their future would still be present. The same fight for the necessaries and pleasures of life which God has placed here would still ensue and the same horror of proletarianism would still haunt their souls. Among the proletariat we would still have the same misery, suffering, poverty, starvation, preventable diseases, evictions and the same urgent call for alms. Why not turn to something practicable? When any system exhausts the worker, it must necessarily exhaust all above them, the weakest in their turn.

STATE CONVENTION INFORMATION.

The Socialist State Convention will assemble next Friday morning at Federation hall, 121½ East Town Street.

The State Executive Committee has been notified to attend the State Convention as provided by the constitution.

The Columbus Socialist desires to announce that its offices, third floor 108½ South High Street, will be open during the day and evening for the use of delegates and visitors. Writing material and other conveniences will be supplied and Socialists are asked to make themselves at home.

The headquarters of the Convention will be at 121½ East Town Street, where delegates can obtain all needed information as to hotels, lodging, etc. This will be given by placards in the Convention hall.

The local committee of arrangements consists of Comrades E. F. Weichold, F. E. Johnston, J. M. Suddick and L. B. Taylor, who will be ready to extend all possible courtesies to delegates and visitors.

State Secretary J. C. Shawe and his assistant, Comrade Annie Minburn, are fairly swamped with the work of the State office incident to the coming convention.

The following are Ohio's delegates to the National Socialist Convention which opens at Indianapolis May 12:

SOFT COAL MINERS ACCEPT AGREEMENT

Workers Ratify Compromise Wage Scale by Big Majority in Referendum Vote.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Miner and operator in the bituminous industry, in the United States will be at peace for the coming two years. The compromise wage agreement negotiated by the joint conference at Cleveland has been approved in a referendum vote of the soft coal workers of the United Mine Workers of America. Tabulation of the vote, which commenced at the miners' headquarters here today, indicates that at least 300,000 of the approximate 350,000 miners voting have ratified the agreement.

As a result the following wage increases are agreed on:

Five cents a ton for mining screened coal; 3 cents a ton for mining unscreened coal; 5 and 26-100 per cent for al other mine work.

Following the formal announcement of the ratification of the agreement, which is expected to be maue by President John P. White, of the miners, imediately following his return from the anthracite wage conference in New York, the different districts organizations of the miners will call meetings with the opterators to sign contracts for the coming two years. As soon as the contracts are signed the suspension of work, which has been in effect since April 1, will be declared ended.

Secretary Perry said today that approximately 275,0000 nonunion miners will benefit equally with the 300,000 union men in the increase. He bases his conclusion on past wage agreements which have been reached between the United Mines and operators, asserting that the nonunion operators have always met the union scale. The total wage increase will thus approximate $16,500,000.

JUST WAKING UP.

An assesor met a Catholic priest on the street last week and handed him the regular blank to be filled out by those who own personal property. The priest who has been prominent in the Red Flag agitation, looked at the blank and then said: "I have never made any return of personal property, but I realize that this year I will be obliged to do so." The assessor happened to be a Socialist.

DURANCEAU PARK DEAL HIT BY COUNCIL

Real Estate Men Are Sat Down Upon. The Goods Are Not Delivered.

The proposition to issue $35,000 bonds to purchase the principal part of Duranceau Park at the storage dam was defeated in City Council last Monday evening by a vote of 11 to 8, thirteen votes being needed to put the job through. Every Socialist member voted against the deal.

The issue was one of those recommended by Mayor Karb and the tract had been condemned in the probate court. A price of $30,700 had been fixed by a jury. City Solicitor Bolin said that unless council later elects to take over the tract, the city is liable for the costs in the suit and the attorneys' fees of the present holders of the land.

The city has confessed judgment for a small parcel in the park. This cost only $2000. The project of raising the storage dam will not be pushed at present.

Socialist Councilman John P. Bohnert of the Eleventh Ward argued that if the Duranceau tract were purchased, a 52-foot dam probably would be built. This, he contended, would endanger portions of the West Side, and in order to prevent this the city would have to buy land as far north as Delaware.

The spectacle was presented of President Dave Logan allowing an attorney and a property owner to intervene in a roll call and endeavor to change votes on the measure. "Bishop" Barry flopped from nay to yea. The final vote was as follows: Yea—Alcott, Baldridge, Barry, Connelley, Ellis, Griffin, Hayden, McGuire, Nailor, Sherman, Stribling—11. Nays—Biederman, Bohnert, Lucks, Reinhard, Warren, Wegman, Wilson, Zimpfer—8.

Dave Logan left the chair as soon as the ordinance was defeated and did not return that night. Baldridge presided and everybody smoked. "Doc" Waddell went to sleep in his chair as Senior Warden in the northeast corner.

Some councilmen had another nervous spell trying to dodge the resolution to allow Billy Sunday's tabernacle to be built over two sidewalks near Goodale park. The measure went to the judiciary committee.

A strenuous effort was made to put through the ordinance for the sale and purchase of firearms by reducing the dealers' license to $5 from $25. Councilman Zimpfer moved to amend by striking out the section relating to purchaser' license, but his effort failed. The ordinance got its second reading.

The ordinance to require all persons who move to register with the director of public safety is now with the judiciary committee and should be swatted good and hard. It is the first step towards Russianising Columbus.

Councilman Wilson's ordinance to remit the license fee for push-carts to people who depended thereupon for a living, was kicked about by some of the "highbrows" and then went to committee.

TITANIC DISASTER SHOWS UP CAPITALIST SYSTEM

Mad Race for Speed Real Cause of Most Horrible Ocean Calamity The Root of the Evil

Sixteen hundred lives have been sacrified to the greed and avaricious of capitalism, and the giant ship Titanic went to the bottom of the ocean. The daily papers have depicted the horror of the calamity in glaring headlines.

Sixteen hundred lives, it's an awful toll to pay.

But ocean liners must make time. They must have grand salons, lawn tennis courts, pool rooms, swimming pools and only twenty life boats.

Speed first to satisfy the greedy. Fine equipment second to satisfy the refined parasites.

For this lives must be sacrificed.

Time is money, to the men of affairs and they must reach their destination in the fastest time possible—and sixteen hundred lives pay the awful price.

Is that all? No, hardly!

On the railroads of this country alone there are killed and injured 93,178 employes each year, an average of 255 per day. This was in 1907. It has increased since then.

The mines of this grand and glorious county collect an awful toll of death each twelve months.

The workshops and factories are daily killing more men, women and children than were lost on the Titanic. The papers, with few exceptions have very little to say. The legislature make a pretense at investigating, but it is soon forgotten.

Let a few Kings of finance lose their lives and all the wheels of our government are set in motion to find out the cause and avoid a repetition of it. Some papers, for reasons, make a big display of these affairs. They write of Lawrence, of Cherry Hill, of the Triangle Shirt Waist Company, and then, after they have the gullible workers believing they lead them like sheep to the shambles to be skinned by a Bryan, a La Follette, a Wilson or a Roosevelt. When the workers wake up to the fact that a capitalistic paper cannot live unless it does the bidding of the masters, perhaps then they will see farther than their nose and stop pursuing rainbows and study economic conditions, so that they will know the cause and then find the remedy and apply it.

Our hearts bleed for those who lost relatives in this terrible catastrophe. For every life that is lost to the world the world should consider it has lost an asset. For the widows and orphans we are sorry, but if we would do away with this murderous system and adopt a system of sanity and reason, life would not be so cheap.

Everything contains, at its birth, the germs of its own destruction and the capitalistic system is fast maturing the germs that destroy it.

The widows and orphans of the workers are crying out for a change and if that cry comes in the night, if it is the cry of an uncouth uneducated mob, it will mean death to many.

If we can educate the people, the remedy is the ownership of the steam ships, mines, mills and factories, by the people, to be operated for use and not for profit. Then we need have no fear of the mob.

Let us give credit to whom credit is due. Let us at least think kindly of those who died that motherhood and childhood might live. Let us enroll the Astors and Butts in our memories as heroes at least, at the time of their deaths. Let us hope that all men on board were heroes from the lowest to the highest.

But how much suffering, how much death and agony these men of affairs could eliminate if they would just try. They would not have to sacrifice one life, one man, one pleasure, and thousands of girls could be brought from the bawdy houses, millions of children let loose from the factories to enjoy the loving care, the happiness, and playtime that are their rightful heritage.

We see on every hand the human derelicts, the wrecks of our present order of society. Let us lift them up and give them a chance. The joy of doing this will repay any sacrifice be it death. What is the remedy? Establish a society in which the word I and ME will disappear and substitute the word WE. Establish a system in which every one will have an equal opportunity. Socialism is the remedy, the only cure.

Socialism is the proclamation of emancipation to all who labor and are heavy laden.

Socialism is equity, the even-handed justice that deals impartially by all.

Socialism is the antidote of human suffering.

Socialism is the Trinity of Love, Justice and Truth.

Let us not blame the Ismays, or any one else. The system is at fault. It is the root. Let us lay the ax of Socialism at the root and kill the entire tree.

Then let us plant a beautiful tree that will blossom with the best womanhood and manhood that the world has ever known. ON TO CO-OPERATIVE COMMONWEALTH.

HOW WALL STREET WON AGAINST MILWAUKEE.

By Carl D. Thompson.

In the campaign just closed Wall Street won in Milwaukee. Milwaukee —the people who live and labor there —lost.

This victory over Social Democracy was achieved by the fusion of the Republican and Democratic parties. The Republican party gave itself up entirely, not even its name appeared on the ballot. The Republican voters were turned over to the Democratic party. With this fusion of the old political parties combined against the Social Democrats, they were able to marshal enough votes to win.

The victory, however, has not brought any special comfort to the fusion forces, and the Free Press of April 4th admits in its editorial columns that "The real defeat of Socialism in Milwaukee has yet to be accomplished." Speaking of the votes cast in the election, the Free Press says: "While the Socialist vote has increased by big leaps at each election, it required the herculean effort of a non-partisan, anti-Socialist campaign to bring the combined vote of the Republicans and Democrats within hailing distance of what it was six years ago." These are the words of the Free Press in the hour of their victory.

Later on they added: "Socialism so far from being buried in Milwaukee by this election is very much alive and kicking."

And well may they be warned not to count too much on the victory they achieved in the Milwaukee election. For, as a matter of fact, the Socialists increased their votes splendidly in the election. In 1910 the Social Democratic party cast 27,608 votes in a three-cornered fight and carried the city.

In 1912 the Social Democrats cast 30,300 votes, thus increasing their actual vote by nearly 3,000, but of the 27,000 votes cast in 1910, in a three-cornered fight, about 5,000 votes were not Socialist votes, but protest votes, while of the 30,000 votes cast this year practically every one is a straight Socialist vote. In other words, the Social Democracy gained in two years about 8,000 solid votes.

And this was done in the face of the most terrific odds. Nine daily papers fought the Social Democracy during every day of the two years they were in control of the city. Misrepresentation, falsehoods and deceit were poured out steadily. Scarcely a single achievement of the administration was fairly represented to the people. Many of their doings were most grossly misrepresented. False cries were raised and false impressions were given out. The Socialists had no means of answering this flood of misrepresentation except a weekly paper until about four months ago, when they started their single Socialist daily, The Milwaukee Leader.

In addition to this flood of misrepresentation that had been poured out upon the people for eighteen months or more, the politicians of the capitalistic parties succeeded finally, by hook or crook, in effecting a fusion of the Republican and the Democratic parties. They called it non-partisan. As a matter of fact it was the Democratic party and went under that name. All Republicans were compelled to vote the Democratic ticket.

In spite of this fusion and the desperate tactics resorted to by the parties, the Social Democracy not only held its own, but played a splendid game.

Nor was the victory so decisive from the standpoint of the offices won. The Social Democratic Party holds a number of the offices, including a City Attorney, Health Commissioner, Tax Commissioner, Water Registrar and the City Engineer, which hold over for two years longer. They also have four hold-over Aldermen-at-Large. In addition to this, the Socialists elected seven Ward Aldermen, which gives them eleven representatives in the city council, together with the heads of several important departments. This makes up a fighting minority, which the Socialists know very well how to use.

The Social Democrats now have a well-established daily paper, with a circulation of nearly 50,000, which is growing by leaps and bounds; they have by far the strongest organization they ever had; they raised the largest vote this week that ever has been cast in the city, exceeding by nearly 5,000 the total vote of two years ago; the Trades Unions stand as a solid unit for the Social Democracy and the working class in general are pretty completely won to that party.

In view of these facts, the Social Democracy in Milwaukee seems destined to make itself the majority party in the city within the next two years.

Plans are already under way for the fusion of the Republican and Democratic parties in the hopes of defeating the Socialists in the fall campaign. The old party politicians realize fully the growing powe rof Social Democracy in Milwaukee and they are moving heaven and earth to stem the tide.

GLOVE WORKERS INCREASE.

Chicago—Secretary Agnes Nestor of the International Glove Workers' Union reports that the organization made an increase in membership during March of 25 per cent. The glove workers are putting up a plucky fight against the Saranac Glove company of Littleton, N. H. This company manufactures workingmen's gloves, its speciality being the railroad gauntlet.

A VALUABLE BOOK.

"The Workers in American History," by James Oneal, revised and greatly enlarged, has entered its third edition. It is one of the best books that ever came off a printing press. Oneal has gathered an immense amount of data from the best authorities, condensed the facts into 340 pages, and has written in language so clear that it can be understood by everybody. If you want a good education get the book from the National Rip Saw, 411 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo., $1 bound, 50 cents paper cover.

CAPITALISTIC ANARCHY

Perhaps never in the history of the world have the people lived in such a complete state of anarchy (as the word is generaly understood) as at the present time.

Brother is pitted against brother, father against children. The weak against the strong, all crazy in the mad lust for gold. So tense has this strain and struggle become, that our daily papers are constantly full of murders, suicides, thiefts, mine explosions, ship wrecks, and horrors of every description. These are the diseases of society. They exist, they are here, you see them on every hand, and yet what are you doing Mr. Capitalist to get down to facts and discover the cause of these evils, and eradicate them?

You are very prone to prate about "Patriotism,' and "love of the flag," knowing full well that these things are only the last refuge of a dirty scoundrel. But when it comes to honestly trying to eradicate the suffering of humanity which every Socialist is doing, you slink back into your dens and snarl, and then goad on your venemous press, to strike its fangs deep into the vitals of the working class.

You say Socialists are not patriotic. We leave it to the judgment of a candid world, if through a change in the system of government, material matters can be arranged so that every man, and woman can have a good home, if it can be arranged so that every man and woman can marry the one they honestly and truly love without the barrier of money. If it can be arranged that every child shall have an equal opportunity with every other child, if injustice can be abolished, if all these things and hundreds of others can be accomplished through Socialism as we claim, then who is patriotic?

And all these things can be accomplished, and will be, just as soon as we get the political power, and take over the machinery that the people need to produce the wealth of the world, and make it the common property of all the people.

Yes, Mr. Capitalist, all those vast holdings of yours are going to be taken from you, as an individual, and made the property of those who use them. Quite naturally you will not want to starve, so you also will put on a pair of overalls and come with us and for the first time in your life do an honest day's work. You also will then be part owner of the capital, not only of the industry in which you are employed, but, also every other industry, so that in the aggregate, you will not be so bad off after all. But your power of life and death oer the people will be gone. No longer can you dynamite, murder, and starve the working class. Because your incentive to do these dastardly deeds will be no more. Your class can also work for the emancipated. Your class will sink itself into the one great class—the working class—the only useful class, and thus will the class war cease for the first time in history.

THE WORST GRAFTER OF THEM ALL.

There is no doubt that the grafter is abroad in the land. There are numerous breeds of him. From the big fellow who demands his pound of flesh, blood and all, to the little fry that pick the pennies from the eyes of the dead.

The most despicable grafter of the bunch is the Socialist speaker who tries to coin the popularity that has come to him by the gift of his comrades into hard cash by an exhorbitant price for his services.

The Socialist movement is a working class movement. The working class of this country are exploited and have become "tools" of production. Their wages are a mere subsistence fund and their lot is such that the better element is in open revolt against the system that exploits them. This revolt has been long in formation, it has required great sacrifice on the part of many of the early workers who stood for the new principles, it still requires some sacrifices, though the matter grows easier as we grow in numbers.

At the best the average wage of the working class is easily under two dollars per day, and this must be spent for "living expenses." The Socialist Party is generous and pays its active workers $3 per day and expenses, not too much, but an amount consistent with the cause of the class it represents.

Certain "fellows," however, whom the party has aided to prominence by gift of office or in some other manner, because of the rising interest in this great movement and the willingness of the rank and file in bondage to do most anything to help the great cause, are now asking even as high as $50 per night for their services. I make this statement unreservedly, the man who will ask $50 a night, or a sum much less than that, for a Socialist lecture is a traitor to the cause of the disinherited working class, and utterly unworthy the name of "comrade."

I want to see the Socialist workers paid a reasonable amount for their services, but I want each and all of them to remember that as long as Capitalism last members of the working class will starve for bread, and that they should be contented with a living that is far better than the average—and a chance to use their power in helping the cause, and that is worth much in itself alone.

Many a humble member of the rank and file without that peculiar gift of "gab" that enables him to hold the floor and bring special attention to himself, or perhaps without the opportunity for education that the working class has made possible for the other fellow, has still performed his work willingly and without any pay, and, unknown to others, has done a very great and valuable service to the cause. And it is from this fellow, who both works and contributes cash, that the "grafter" takes his $50 a night rake-off.

I say if there are any men (?) in the Socialist movement who think their services are worth $50 a night, let them go to the master class and sell themselves for that price—if they can. The sooner the Socialist movement is rid of them the better—perhaps they can get a job with the Men and Religion Backward, I mean Forward, Movement, or some other such monkey show.

In the meantime let the rank and file stand up on its hind legs and turn down good and hard every speaker that tries to make more than a decent living out of the movement, that's all they are entitled to. And don't worry if you lose some of these people who think themselves so important. The working class cause will never lack for worthy exponents, the best of them come from the rank and file itself.—G. H. Lockwood in "The Prophet and the Ass," Kalamazoo, Mich.

SOCIALIST LION WILL WHIP ELEPHANT AND DONKEY.

The Socialists of Columbus and the United States, are under obligations to Cartoonist Westerman of the Ohio State Journal for originating the idea of making the lion the animal personification of the Socialist party. Just after the election last November Westerman produced a cartoon representing the entrance of the Socialists into the municipal arena by a picture of a lion headed man walking up the aisle of the council chamber. The lion's face was somewhat marred by plasters, indicating that he had been in a scrap. The Republican elephant and the Democratic donkey, already seated, had just glanced up as the lion ejaculated, "Ahem-m-m." Here is what the Chicago Daily Socialist says about the new addition to the political zoo:

"As the Socialist movement has come into prominence in the election returns for the past two years, cartoonists on the daily papers have felt the need of something to represent this growing party.

"The donkey has for a long time represented the Democratic party and the elephant the Republican party. The Ohio State Journal published a cartoon last November picturing the Socialist party as a lion. The idea has taken hold in many quarters and other cartoonists have followed the suggestion.

"The Socialists themselves have not officially adopted the lion yet he appeals to many of them as typifying the Socialist party's great strength and promise of victory."

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NOTICE TO ALL EXCHANGES!

(All Socialists papers please copy the following):

In order that satisfactory arrangements be made for the hotel accommodation of the visiting delegates and others attending the National Convention which will be held in this city, beginning May 12, it is important that State Secretaries and others having charge of the delegations get in communication at once with the Committee on arrangement, stating the number that they want accommodations for, the rates they desire and other information that will be of value to the Committee in making the arrangements that are necessary. Address all communications to the BUSINESS MANAGER REGISTER, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

The National Convention of the Socialist party will be held in Tomlinson Hall, Indianapolis, Indiana, commencing May 12. Delegates and visiting comrades will find the following hotels convenient to the hall: The New Denison, European plan $1 up, American plan $3.50 up; The English, European plan $1 up. There are a number of other hotels within a few blocks.

The National Secretary sent Arthur Brooks Baker to Indianapolis to make arrangements for the convention, in co-operation with the local committee. The later consists of Geo. J. Lehnert, Carl Ott and Frank McGee. Delegates and other comrades desiring further information regarding hotels, etc., should address Geo. J. Lehnert, 611 Law Building, Indianapolis, Indiana.

On account of the jockeying which took place in regard to the time and place of the convention, it is probably too late to secure a special rate on the railroads, but the National Office will make an effort to do so. If successful, announcement of that fact will be made at once. Those coming from a distance should investigate the matter of excursion rates.

Delegates are requested to make arrangements to pay their own way to Indianapolis, where they will receive their round trip mileage.

By a recent referendum Squire E. Richman, 55 T Street, N. E., Washington, D. C., was elected a member of the National Committee for the District of Columbia.

By a recent referendum Spuire E. Putney, 14 Park Square, Boston, was elected State Secretary of Massachusetts.

State Secretary Schawe, of Ohio, reports that Local Bethel has expelled John E. Emmons, Local Canton has expelled Harry E. Schilling, and that Local Findlay has suspended L. D. Benedict for five years.

W. E. McDermut will take the stenographic report of the National Convention. He has taken the report of all previous convention of the party.

J. L. Engdahl will cover the convention as a press representative for the National Office, furinshing press matter for the Socialist papers.

By a recent referendum in Indiana, Reece Fenimore, 211 Union Building, Anderson, was elected a member of the National Committee, and S. M. Reynolds, 309½ Ohio Street, Terre Haute, was re-elected to the same position.

A. C. Sill, Ruskin, Florida, has resigned as State Secretary, and A. N. Jackson, 331 East 2nd Street, Jacksonville, has been elected to the office.

By a recent referendum in North Dakota, Robert Grant, Lakota, was elected as the additional member on the National Committee for that State.

Special Correspondence.

Chicago, Ill., April 23.—There is another big debate in store on the world immigration question for the coming National Socialist Convention.

This was the problem that held the center of the stage at the 1910 Congress, the debate consuming several days. The discussion was precipitated by the rendering of a majority and minority report.

The same situation is developing this year with practically the same debaters preparing to defend the rival contentions over this problem that is more peculiar to the United States than to any other nation in the world.

The indications now are that there will be a majority report submitted by Ernest Untermann, Joshua Wanhope, J. Stitt Wilson and Robert Hunter; while the minority report, it is expected, will be fathered by Meyer London, John Spargo and Leo Lankki.

In the battle that raged at the 1910 Congress, Delegate Morris Hillquit stepped into the breach with a substitute for both reports which was adopted and is as follows:

"The Socialist Party of the United States favors all legislative measures tending to prevent the immigration of strike-breakers and contract laborers, and the mass importation of workers, from foreign countries, brought about by the employing classes for the purpose of weakening the organization of American labor, and of lowering the standard of life of the American workers.

"The party is opposed to the exclusion of any immigrants on account of their race or nationality, and demands that the United States be at all times maintained as a free asylum for all men and women persecuted by the governments of their countries on account of their politics, religion or race."

Although it is expected that the debate will largely revolve about the problem of Oriental immigration, there will be those who will see any restrictions placed on this phase of the question as being directly aimed at European immigration, also.

It is expected that Untermann and Wilson will appear as the champions of the majority report, which will be largely Anti-Oriental. They both come from the Pacific Coast states where the so-called "yellow peril" is considered a living reality, forcing the growing Socialist Party of California to take a decided stand on this matter.

Spargo will no doubt appear as the whip for those in favor of a minority report that is expected to contend that the United States has nothing to fear from immigration. He played a similar role two years ago. Laukki is editor of Tyomies, the Finnish Socialist daily at Hancock, Mich. London is well known for his services in behalf of the striking shirtwaist and garment workers in New York.

Wtih the exception of a few of the speeches that were made on the immigration question two years ago, the discussion showed a distressing lack of real information on this great problem. That was one reason why the matter was resubmitted to an increased committee, which was instructed to bring in another report to this year's convention.

The members of the committee are now exchanging, by correspondence, their views and preliminary reports already prepared. It is expected that the finished reports will be ready for submission to the delegates within a very short time.

The preliminary report of the Woman's National Committee, as drawn up by the General Correspondent, Caroline A. Lowe, is now being considered by the committee recently elected, and will no doubt be ready within a few days.

Every one of the National Translator-Secretaries of the Socialist Party is also preparing a report to the convention. This is expected to give an excellent survey of the work that is being done to propagate Socialism among the foreign-speaking peoples of this country.

One feature of the pre-convention activity in the Socialist Party is shown in the efforts that are being made to have the delegates to the convention instructed on various questions. There is a referendum now being taken in Montana demanding:

"That the Montana delegation to the National Convention of the Socialist Party be, and they hereby are, instructed to use every effort to have the party committed to the principle of industrial unionism as against craft unionism in the organization of the workers on the economic field."

Another question, submitted by Hiram Platt, of Como, Mont., and endorsed by the Montana State Committee, asking, "Do you favor the nomination by the Socialist aPrty of a woman comrade for President of the United States?" is also receiving the decision of a referendum which closes May 4th, only a short time before the opening of the convention.

This question was brought to the attention of the Woman's National Committee of the Socialist Party by Platt. It was opposed unanimously, every member of the committee giving their views in opposition to the matter.

The actual work in preparation for the National Convention has been started with the visit of Arthur Brooks Baker, of the National Office, to Indianapolis, Ind., which has been chosen as the convention city.

Tomlinson Hall, the scene of many historic conventions held by the United Mine Workers of America, has been secured as the convention hall of the 1912 convention of the Socialist Party.

This auditorium has a large seating capacity in addition to the main floor space which will no doubt all be used for the seating of the 300 delegates. This will make it possible to accommodate comfortably strangers and visitors who may desire to be present and listen to the proceedings.

INDIANA STATE NEWS.

James Oneal, State Secretary, 313½ Ohio Street, Terre Haute.

The second ballot for the election of National Committeemen, Executive Committeemen and delegates to the National Convention is completed with the following elected: National Committeeman, Reece Fenimore; Executive Committeemen, W. W. Farmer and W. W. Risher; Delegates to the National Convention: S. S. Condo, W. W. Farmer, Janet Fenimore, S. C. Garrison, William Henry, S. M. Reynolds, William Sheffler, Florence Wattles and James Oneal. Alternates: Mrs. Ross Lehnert, H. Bainbridge, Joe Zimmerman, Paul Wright, J. H. Hollingsworth, William Houston, Ira Tilton, W. D. Van Horn and Judson Oneal.

Word comes from Nappanee in Elkhart County that the old local there has been revived with twelve members.

State Chairman Henry spoke at Zionville in Boone County last week and concluded the evening by organizing a local of twelve members. This, together with the local at Lebanon, gives two in this County.

Local Howesville in Clay County did not get started right a few months ago and the extreme cold weather prevented the local from meeting. The local is now revived and paying dues.

The local in process of organization at Centerville is coming along splendidly. Enough blank applications for a charter were not sent and as about forty members are expected there another supply has been sent.

The comrades of Local Kokomo organized a branch of the County organization at Jerome, which starts with 16 charter members.

Comrade York of Daleville in Delaware County, writes that a local is wanted there as well as a speaker and the latter will be sent and good prospects of the former are assured.

Organizer Burroughs of Ripley County is out on the warpath for more locals since the success at Versailles, and will now try to organize at Cross Plains and Friendship and then see what can be done at North Vernon.

Socialists of the Thirteenth Congressional District have nominated Irvan H. Cady of Laporte for Congress. Comrade Cady will make a vigorous campaign judging from the work done at Laporte.

State Secretary Oneal will speak at a mass meeting in Logansport Saturday, May 4th, and will stop off at Delphi on the way home the following morning, to answer the attacks of a Catholic priest. He will also speak at a big May day demonstration in Kokomo on May 1st, where the labor organizations will join with the local for this purpose.

Locals that are contemplating the nomination of a County ticket should postpone action until they receive a circular from the State Office regarding the Corrupt Practices Act. It is more than probable that before nominations can be made legal the locals will have to elect the County Treasurer to receive and disburse funds before the nomination conventions meet and that the statement regarding his election, signed by the chairman and secretary of the County organization, must be filed with the clerk of the circuit court. Where conventions have nominated without electing the treasurer and filing the statement at the time mentioned, it is probable that they will have to hold another convention to comply with the law. A circular will be sent to locals as soon as the Executive Committee meets on April 21st.

CAPITALISM'S PUNIC FAITH.

Smarting from the humiliation of their defeat in the recent hunger strike, the mill owners of Lawrence, despite their promises, are pushing the law controlling powers which they possess to the limit against the leaders of the strike. Which is exceedingly natural—for them.

The workers have still to learn that they cannot put faith in what is known as "the gentlemen's agreement." It never held among the "gentlemen" themselves, when any advantage or supposed advantage could be gained by breaking it, and there is no reason why it should hold any firmer when made between "gentlemen" and ordinary workers. Much less reason, in fact, for such expectation.

No doubt the mill owners will hypocritically disavow any share in the proceedings and assume the position of good, law-abiding citizens who stand by impartially and "let the law take its course."

The Lawrence workers who have seen the entire power of the city and state turned over to the employers during the strike should be able to make a fair estimate of the value of the disavowal of power to manipulate the law.

Their real answer should come to the employers in the form of an ultimatum that within a specified period of time—and as short a period as possible should be set—the indictments are not quashed, they will again walk out and tie the mills up tighter than ever. Such an ultimatum, letting the owners see that the will, determination and power of the workers was behind it, would quickly bring these "gentlemen", to time.

For this violation of agreement is merely a demonstration of the fact of the irrepressible conflict between labor and capital, which cannot end even temporarily with the conclusion of a strike. The conflict must be fought to a finish, and the finish can only come with the complete victory of the workers, and a complete change in the mode of production.

MORE "LIFE BOATS."

The horrible sea catastrophe, the sinking of the Titanic, with its terrible loss of life, again calls our attention to the fact that all lives could have been saved "if" there had been enough life boats.

Every great calamity in recent years has time and again brought forcibly to our view the fact that they could have been prevented, if the proper safe guards had been employed.

The Iroquois theater fire could have been prevented if the doors had swung outward. The Cherry mine disaster, with the proper safety mine regulations, was absolutely uncalled for. Every soul that perished in the Tri-Angle shirt waist fire would be living today if fire-escapes had been erected. The Collinwood school likewise could have been prevented.

But in every case came the defense of those responsible, "We have complied with all requirements of the law."

So in the case of the Titanic, enough life boats were carried to comply with the law—not one more. Furthermore there was not enough room for more boats, but plenty of room was found on deck for tennis courts and promenades. Enough boats to carry about one-quarter of the passengers enough to comply with the law, consequently those criminally responsible will escape.

No doubt the physical law was complied with, but what about the great unwritten moral law. In defense of their negligence of this great moral obligation one of the ship owners, Mr. Ismay, stated, "The sinking of the Titanic was an act of Providence."

How Providence can be held responsible for this calamity and the violations of this moral obligation and others is beyond our understanding, when human brain and muscle is begging for the privilege to build plenty of life boats for all, plenty of fire-escapes for all, plenty of safe schools and theaters for all, plenty of mine safety appliances for all.

No, these things are not the act of God, but of greed, mamon. Life boats, like fire-escapes, cost money. Money expended in unproductiveness interferes with earning profits and dividends. Therefore savings must be made in all directions, regardless of the price that it may cost in human lives.

A Congressional investigation is now on. Everything will be investigated, to appease public clamor, a few more laws will be placed on the statute books, but none, rest assured, that may interfere with profits.

Orders, however, will still go out from steamship headquarters, "Full steam ahead and break the record." Time is money invested in ships. The more trips made in a year the greater her earnings. The captain failing to take this fact into consideration will soon be seeking another berth.

The modern trust developed on land is organized for profit. On the sea the Titanic held the same relation to modern industry. Laws thirty years ago applying to 400-foot vessels are wholly inadequate to 800-foot vessels, just as legislation enacted 100 years ago is wholly inadequate to our modern land industries.

Today the government officials are criticizing the captain of the Titanic for carrying full steam ahead. The government officials, however, are a party to this modern drive. Ocean mail contracts go to the fastest ships. The Titanic carried four thousand sacks of mail, consequently to hold the contract she had to make time. Railroad officials clear the track for the fast mail. Why? The fear of losing the contract to their competitors.

A new change must come, one that will adjust itself automatically to the changing conditions. The imperative need of more "life boats," more common sense, applied to all our armies of industry, is asserting itself daily. Mammon clothed in greed and profit will never produce more life boats. Life boats are not productive. With the horrible lesson at our doors, hundreds of ships sailing out of New York and other ports are NOT equipped with enough life boats. The same calamity can happen tomorrow. Why dont the government in the name of decency and common sense step in and stop it? Why? Profits.

If the workers ruled not one vessel would have left an American port without the proper equipment of life boats. The responsibilty being ours, we would assume it in the name of humanity. Let's hurry the change. Create "More Life Boats."

THE POLITICAL LINEUP.

All the old political dodges are being used, all the aged and tested methods of getting the people excited so that the interests can get away with the goods. But this year the fight is somewhat more extended than in former years ,and a few of the sure-things have gone into the discard.

Shall the people rule? They haven't yet.

But they are going to.

Shall predatory wealth be superior to morality, honesty and decency? It has been so far.

But is it going to cease.

While Roosevelt and Taft are apparently slicing each other to rashers; while Bryan is neatly disembowling Harmon and while other politicians of varying degrees of radicalism are punching holes in the atmosphere, the capitalistic class seems excited about nothing except to urge these gentlemen on to further efforts. They seem excited about nothing else, exeetp one thing, and that is the growing Socialist movement.

Before Roosevelt was out against Taft and before Bryan declared what he believes to be the paramount issue for this particular Presidential engagement, the powers that are against the working class were busy fighting the Socialists. That is why the Common Cause was launched. That is why there has been so much effort expended in teaching the people the evils of Socialism. That is why every news distributing agency spread itself in detailing anything that could be looked upon as a reverse for the Socialists. That is why such large blocks of space have been used in showing that Socialism was not succeeding in Europe. That is why there has been put on the road men whose one assignment was to fight Socialism.

It faces the field this year. Both Democrats and Republicans merely squabble over the question of which shall use a particular "issue." When it comes down to real hard pan, as in Milwaukee, they unite on a "nonpartisan"—that is, on a man who can bring home the goods and keep in the control of the capitalists the power of government.

In the face of this it is manifestly up to the Socialists to put up the biggest, earliest, hardest, most-unflagging campaign on which they have ever entered. We have them on the run, but we do not understand our own strength. We can make this a campaign in which the Socialist party really begins the great work of conquering the powers of government in order to use them for the benefit of the working class.

In the two dominant parties, in every State Legislature as well as in the Federal Government, there are plenty of men who come from the working class. But they do not represent the working class, not one of them except such as were elected by the Socialist party.

That "one lone Socialist Congressman," Victor Berger, over whom the capitalist press started to have such fun, has done more for the working class in his one term of office than all the existing and previous so-called labor representatives have done since the beginning of Congress. It was he, fighting as a workingman with true Socialist knowledge, who gave a lift to the Lawrence strike that made it a national instead of a local affair and thereby aroused the whole working class population of the country to come to the aid of the strikers.

We need to supplement his work. We need this year many Socialist members of the House. We need men in every state body.

We can get them if we work. They are not going to be given to us as "charity" by the capitalist class.

It will be only two weeks before the national convention is held. Between then and now we can start the work of spreading knowledge of Socialism. As soon as it is held we can begin working for the candidates. It is a great and necessary educational campaign. But everything that occurs shows how necessary it is.

This year we have a bigger membership, more speakers, more distributers of literature, more men and women able to do personal canvassing, more writers, more papers and more good leaflets and pamphlets. To accomplish anything all of them must get to work, not later, but now.

The other parties are already at work, expending thousands of dollars a week, and their great object is to defeat us. They can do it only if we are idle.

ECHO ANSWERS WHY?

The foxes have homes in the caverns and the wild birds live in their nests, and only the child of the human kind has no place of his own to rest; the rabbits are hale and hearty, the chipmunks are all well-fed, and the image of God is the only chump that is missing his daily bread; the grasshopper hops where he pleases, with never a worry or sob, and only the civilized workingman must beg a boss for a job; the hills are a garden of Eden, the prairies a harvest song, and only the hordes that are ruled by lords suffer the whole day long. It's a sight to make angels shudder to see how the earth is run; it's enough to wring tears from a wooden man the way that the thing is done; this land wasn't meant for a poor farm, with poverty-stricken galoots to be ridden to death by a batch of snobs with golden spurs on their boots. Why don't you get wise to the bunco game and let off a rebel yell and tell the pirates to hit the grit—bid 'em a long farewell—tell 'em you're going to boss the job of feeding yourself awhile instead of sweating your noble brow to swell the boodlers' pile? Why do you vote for a useless bunch to pluck you whenever they please? Why don't you vote for the working class to own the whole darn cheese? Why don't you grab the BEAST by the throat and make his whiskers fly? Why don't you do it NOW, old man? And echo answers, WHY?

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

As is well known, this paper is owned and democratically controlled by Local Columbus. Its fate is in your hands. For several months past we have been endeavoring to place it upon a firm financial basis in order that we might enter the coming campaign vigorously and strenuously.

During the months of January and February you comrades certainly made things hum in the way of new subscribers, but since that time, the work has been far from the standard set at that time.

We have some back debts that are pressing and must be met. We don't want a cent donation. All we want is subscribers, and if you, comrades, each do your little share along this line, we can soon have these obligations off our hands and not have to use up our energy figuring out how to meet expenses.

Were I a capitalist and I wanted to strike the Socialist movement a death blow, I would certainly aim my blow at the party organ.

And I want to tell you, comrades, that that is exactly what is being done in this city now. Last week I had half a dozen men tell me that they had heard that The Columbus Socialist had suspended. Where the rumor originated we were unable to discover. It is, undoubtedly, another dirty trick of the capitalist politicians, who fear the growing influence of this paper amongst the people.

You, comrades, on the firing line, must realize that you must help to bear this responsibility. If you will take care of the subscription list and keep it constantly rising, we, at this end, will certainly do our share.

It is our policy to take you into our confidence at all times, as you well know, and I want to say that if you loyal Boosters do not get behind us now, at once, that the capitalist class of this city will soon have good cause for rejoicing.

What will you do to help out next week? Will you stand idly by or will you gird up your loins, go out amongst your fellow-men and women and secure their subscription. By doing this you will be educating them and at the same time furnishing us with ammunition to fire broadside after broadside into the capitalist camp.

Get into the fight, comrades. Don't let the ship sink when a little work on the part of each will keep the vessel afloat.

Comrade J. J. Anderson of Lima, Ohio, puts on ten new ones in this district. He is determined that the 12th Ohio District shall be in the hands of the working class after Nov. 6th.

Comrade Fries kicked the plutes all over town. He puts on eleven new ones.

Comrade Geo. Luhren, Chillicothe, adds 10 names to our list. That's the kind of work that counts.

"I got these in about two hours last Sunday morning," stated Comrade Marquette of the 10th Ward as he handed in two yearlies, one six month and one three month. This shows that subscriptions can be gotten very easily if they are gone after. Let's all try the same system next Sunday.

Comrade Kramm, East Columbus, has joined the Boosters and pays for his initiation with three.

Comrade Wilson of the 10th woke up the Old Man and made him put two new ones on the list.

The Appeal and The Columbus Socialist both for $1.00. A combination hard to beat.

Purchase from our advertisers and DON'T FAIL to use the Red Ticket.

Boosters with one or more to their credit: Miller, Breece, Hawkins, Cochran, Holt, Swingle, Palmer, Wise, Fries, Mrs. Butler, Threse, Gardner, Clark, Ebright, Diebert, Collins, Smith, Southard, Henderson.

Strain every nerve next week, comrades, if it is only one 25c subscription. Remember that with each one doing at least that much, it will mean that your paper is saved.

PLAIN TALK FROM A NEWSPAPER DUB

Editor The Socialist—Your Mr. Johnston will tell you that I am one of the fellows who are situated about like the newspaper men of whom the "Ass" speaks so truthfully in your issue of last week, I have to hold my job. That's why you will not sign my real name to this screed, if you print it.

In my business I come in contact with a great many people in all walks of life, and of all political beliefs, and I am struck by the great similarity between so many of the old party men and the deluded passengers on the ill-fated Titanic. Survivors tell us that many, many of the passengers had to be forced to leave the vessel; they would not, could not believe she was doomed. She was so great—so magnificent—she had brought them so far in comfort and safety; they had been told she was unsinkable; they were told the danger was more apparent than real—for a while. And even when the danger became apparent to the officers and crew, many even then refused to believe their lives were in jeopardy, and stuck by the vessel until too late.

Can't you see—but of course YOU can—can't these deluded voters who still cling to the old parties see that they are clinging to a doomed vessel? Can't they realize that the old parties are gone beyond hope? True, these old parties have done some good things; (I have to stop awhile and think hard to remember what they are); they have brought us along in some fashion to where we are now; but now they are hung up on the berg of capitalism, and they are doomed. Those who stubbornly refuse to look facts in the face—who rely on the previous grand history of the G. O. P. or Democracy—can't they see the plain signs of the breaking up of the old hulk?

O, you stiff-necked! Consider the plight of those who refused to believe the Titanic could go down, and then calmly, judiciously, review the present situation in politics and ask yourselves——Isn't it time to abandon the old parties to their fate and get aboard the life-boat, Socialism, while there is time? And, once aboard, grab an oar and let's get somewhere out of misery and distress and disgrace into which we have been led.

Local Party News

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin County. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

THE CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE

CITY HEADQUARTERS AT 8 35½ SOUTH HIGH STREET.

A GREAT SENSATION COMING.

This paper now has some very sensational matter in its possession which will be published at the proper time. Everything we publish concerning these matters will be backed up by affidavits and other positive proofs so that no guilty party will escape the clutches of the law and an indignant people. There will be more coming from time to time and all who wish to be thoroughly posted in the rottenness of the present system and those administering the same should subscribe for this paper at once. The "Socialist" and "Appeal to Reason" both one year for $1.00.

A CALL TO DUTY.
GET OUT ON FIRING LINE.

The time is now ripe when we Socialists in this district must realize that the time for the distribution of literature must begin and carried on systematically every week, up to the very eve of election.

We are going to have a fight and a hard one, but with the proper literature placed in the hands of the voters we will simply walk away with the election, and this district will be in the hands of the working class.

Education is the watchword, and literature is the proper means of education. Let us direct all our energies along these channels. Let us organise thoroughly and efficiently in every precinct. Remember that the Rep-Demo. and Demo-Rep. parties are relying on the ignorance of the slum elements, the Catholic priests and a prostituted capitalist press to carry them through to victory this fall. Every man who loves freedom, homes and family will vote our ticket if we can place in his hands the principles of this great movement. Socialism is the New Patriotism. Let us unite and spread the gospel of glad tiding to every man, woman and child in this our own district. Let's begin now.

STATE SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

To the Locals:

Dear Comrades—The twelfth annual State Convention of the Socialist party will be held in the city of Columbus at 121½ East Town Street, April 25th, 27th, and 28th, 1913.

A committee of arrangements duly elected by Local Columbus will care for the delegates upon arrival.

A large streamer will be placed across the street in front of convention hall to assist delegates in locating place.

Delegates, upon arrival will be furnished with a copy of the Columbus Socialist, front page of which will be devoted to the different hotel accommodations in the city.

A committee will be at hand to present badges to delegates and visitors upon arrival.

Delegates upon entering convention hall will consult registrar for the purpose of registering their names, mileage, etc. This is to facilitate the work of the State Office in apportioning mileage funds as all locals did not respond to the call for mileage to be sent in.

The State Committee authorizes the nomination of Socialist presidential electors by convention in the various Congressional Districts, one to be elected from each district.

Fraternally,
JOS. C. SCHAWE,
State Secretary.

SOCIALIST GLEE CLUB.
FORWARDS MAKE GOOD

German Socialists and Their Friends Celebrate at Red Lion Hall.

The Socialist Glee Club Forwards gave their annual entertainment and dance at Red Lion Hall last Saturday inevery way.

Director David Rohe, the Glee Club; Abbie and Thomas Gates, the juvenile specialists; Gus Tegenkamp, in his prison-cell act; Martin Nowacki and Eugene Mueller all won applause in their respective numbers. There was a large crowd present and the club certainly made good.

GREAT MOCK TRIAL.

To all the members of the Socialist Dramatic Club—One of our prominent members has filed charges against our organizer. The case will come up for trial next Sunday night at the meeting of the club. Come up and see the fireworks.

We would request that every member who may know of any evidence for or against it, be sure to come up. Each side claims a victory. So both sides are trying to get all the witnesses they can. Please come up and help us out, so that the trial may not be postponed. For quick information ask any officer of the club. We are looking for new quarters, but we will be at 40½ E. Chestnut St. at 7:30 Sunday, April 28.

Just Listen to This

Mister Edtor:

I was goin down the streat tother aftenon i seen a old blind man what was selin Socinlist papers so I jest bot 1. First thing what i red was about them socialist councilmen and that Alcott and doggone i jest sed amen rite out loud. thems what i call men. After i red all that i then red what that feller J J Dunklemann rote about that viduckt an I got so gol darn mad i jest mad up my mind I was a goin to jine that party what elected the only 4 men what wont stand fur eny munkey bisnes in the council. I'm a goin to jine jes as soon as I can git a ticket, I dont keer how much it costs. when this town gits real famus, it will be on account of men jes like them councilmen and not a old streat plum full of holes and streat cars like high streat Ohio. about the sand plugs the streat can co will put them on when you make them do it, and it wont brake them up either, they sed the same thing when they had to put glas on the porches to keep the rane and snoe from blowin in. and he says who you aposa to be a workin fur the workin man or the man what hires the workin man. Thats jest the trouble a bout this big bisnes when we havent got any more grate big bisness men to wurk us we will have to go to work fur our selvs and then you will say Mr. Dunklemann the good people have busted up cause them Devils has gone to work fur thimselvs.

yours fer small bisness and lots of streats and Bridges.

I B LOOKINSOME.

P. S.—I'm goin to jine. pleas print this SURE, whether you can use my letter or not I'm goin to jine.

DEAN'S BOOK SELLING WELL.

Comrade F. A. Dean's booklet, "Human Rights vs. Property Interests," is selling well and is hailed by the workers as a splendid propaganda pamphlet. Comrade Dean is personally pushing the sale of the book and we are glad that he is meeting with some measure of success.

COLUMBUS FEDERATION OF LABOR.

The Columbus Federation of Labor last Monday evening took up in earnest the complaint of members of the Retail Clerks Association who have been barred from taking positions that paid an advance of salary when a former employer objected. There seems to be a systematic plan to keep clerks from changing their masters.

It was reported that a clerk who had left the employ of a South High Street merchant to work for one in a North High Street store was discharged by the proprietor of the latter on complaint of his former employer. The clerk, in order to obtain employment, was compelled to go to Indianapolis.

In its verbal report, the committee said it had other evidence at hand. Action will be taken by the Columbus Federation as soon as instructions are received from national headquarers.

The Retail Clerks do not yet affiliate with the local federation, but their cause is considered to be the common cause of labor.

Franklin County delegates to the Ohio Con-Con were instructed to vote for the recall.

Indorsement was given to plans of the federation of Los Angeles for a public demonstration against the manner in which Industrial Workers of the World were driven out of adjacent territory at the point of the bayonet and made to kiss the Stars and Stripes. It is planned to have at least 40,000 laborers march from Los Angeles to San Fransico.

All delegates present expressed themselves in favor of celebrating Labor Day.

Considerable criticism arose over a communication from Sam Gompers, saying he had organizers out combatting the idea that a certain stove company was unfair. It would seem that he has better use for the organizers than to have them boost the stove company that prosecuted him for contempt of court. This may be his method of protecting himself in the present contempt proceedings. The question of the unfairness of a few picture shows were taken up and action deferred in order to give these unfair houses a chance to change their attitude before final action be taken. The committee to confer with the Retail Clerks reported no progress and were discharged.

JEWISH BRANCH.

May Day will be celebrated at 121½ East Town Street, Sunday evening, April 28. The program will consist of speeches, declamations and singing. Admission 10 cents.

BOARD OF EDUCATION MEMBERS ARE ALIVE TO DUTY

All Are Working for Common Good of Children and Taxpayers.

The last meeting of the Board of Education demonstrated that the Socialist members wer alive to all important matters. The Socialist members opposed an increase in the salary of Martin Hensel, school librarian, from $1650 to $1800 a year. The increase was passed over their heads, however, and Mr. Hensel was re-elected librarian to fill out the remainder of the present calendar year and until the first Monday in January. Member Draper moved to refer the resolution back to the finance committee. This was lost by the following vote: Yeas——Anderson, Michel, Draper, Guild, Means, King, Thompson, 6. Nays—Turney, W. O. Thompson, Williard, Deichle, Gemunder, Dr. Herbst, 6.

The salary of the librarian was raised by the following vote: Yeas—Turney, Anderson, W. O. Thompson, Williard, Deichle, Gemunder, King Thompson—8. Nays—Michel, Draper, Guild, Means—4.

Dr. W. O. Thompson, chairman of the finance committee, reported the committee would be unable to make any recommendations relative to the proposition to pay teachers and janitors of the board semi-monthly instead of monthly. He suggested that the matter be submitted to the teachers, individually, with a statement of the conditions involved, and that their preference be recorded. The board authorized Superintendent Shawan to secure from the teachers an uninfluenced expression on the subject and on these preferences the board will base its action in the matter.

Comrade June Purcell Giuld introduced the following resolutions:

BE IT RESOLVED, By the Board of Education of the city of Columbus, Ohio:

That beginning with the September term of the school year of 1913-1913, free kindergarten instruction shall be provided for all children between the ages of three and six years, and that this resolution, no janitor regularly part of the public school system of said city.

BE IT RESOLVED, By the Board of Education of the city of Columbus, Ohio:

That from and after the passage of this resolution, no janitor ergularly employed by the said Board, who gives his entire time to the performance of his duties as janitor, shall receive less than $65 per month for such service.

Both of these resolutions are in the hands of the finance committee.

FACTS AND FIGURES OF INTEREST TO WORKERS

Compiled by Legal Department of "The Columbus Socialist" Concerning Political Prospects

The total registration in the city, November 7th, 1911, was 48, 152. The total votes cast in the city, November election were 42,718. For certain reasons those who did not vote were 3,338.

It cannot be proven of course, but it is eminently fair to presume that not more than 338 were sick, out of city or unavoidably kept away from polls. This would leave 3,000 Democrats and Republicans who were so thoroughly disgusted with their parties that they would not vote as their fathers and grandfathers had voted. It is also reasonable to assume that these 3,000 voters are rapidly making for Socialism but had not quite got to it, but by November 6th, next they will be ready to go the limit and vote the full Socialist party ticket.

It is therefore reasonable to say that of the coming election these 3,000 voters will almost to a man vote the Socialist ticket.

Now the last election returns show the Socialist vote in the city for Mayor, which was class conscious and dependable, was 10,658; with the said votes added, 3,000, we find we have in the city about 13,658 dependable Socialist votes.

We cannot hope to get over 5 per cent of the Republican vote cast for Mayor, 12,761, for the reason that the vote for Marshall almost absolutely represented the dyed-in-the-wool Republicans, who always had and always will vote that ticket because they are either "It" on a small scale or expect some time to be "It," and have a chance to make the other fellow come to him for a job, a chance to live and earn profits for him "It".

However, 5 per cent of that vote would be 638 votes which added to the above 13,658 gives us the substantial vote of 14,296. From the Democratic vote, however, we can expect fully 25 per cent of their total vote which was 18,841 in the city. We can safely expect this large percentage from the Democratic side for several reasons. Not over 12,000 of the Democratic vote was true-blue Democrats. The rest were soreheads (about 500) who wanted favors from the Mayor (Marshall) they did not get; Bankers, Brewers and Brokers in the lust for gain who recognize no party or principle save that which satisfies their greed (about 500) who curse Democracy until Democracy agrees to their terms and then risk all the virtues of Republicanism in their hands to save some public utility from ensuring to the benefit of the people. There is not a Banker, Brewer, Broker or Catholic Priest in Columbus who voted at the last November election, who did not vote for the Democratic candidate for Mayor. Of course they are very desirable and necessary citizens voting for a VERY desirable Mayor.

There still remains some 5,841 voters out of the 18,841 Democratic voters for Mayor and these are the poor fellows of good intentions, but whose distress forced them to act unwisely, (as they are now aware) but to act quick, so, as they thought, to get all the Smoke-stacks busy and all the sewer street work, etc., going at once. Poor souls, they thought it would bring employment for them and comforts for their children and some hope for wife, but alas more than 5,841 honest but grossly deceived voters have virtually starved all those long, cold, winter days. Men with teams idle and hay $28.00 per ton, all winter. These men have had nothing to do but watch the splendid efforts of our four Socialist Councilmen doing all in their power to help the laboring class of all parties. It is, therefore, more than reasonable to suppose that all of these men, no matter whether Protestant or Catholic, will vote for and with his class and these 5,841 votes can be added to the 14,296 which would place the Socialist vote at 20,137, within the city limits.

The total vote outside the city is hard to estimate, since so much territory has come into the city since the last county election, but at a rough guess of 3,000 votes, outside of Columbus, it is safe to say the Socialists will get 35 per cent, or 5,000, which added to our last figure of 20,137, gives the Socialist a grand total of 25,137, out of a possible vote of [illegible].

With a normal Republican and Democratic vote in the County there is not much margin between them. With the total possible vote in the County of 54,000 and the more than probable Socialist vote of 25,000, there remains to be divided in two parts 33,000 votes. It does not seem possible that out of the remaining vote of 33,000 either old party can possible that out of the remaining other party only 10,000.

To us Socialists it looks good. Looks like the campaign was already won, unless the old parties co-habit together as they did in Muscatine, Iowa; Flint, Michigan; Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Los Angeles, California; and many other places. But we Socialists in Franklin County dare the old parties to unite as they did in those cities and towns.

The above facts are only some of the things assuring Socialist victory in November. The old party crookedness in the State and city and the fight in their own party primaries and conventions all inures to the benefit of Socialism.

We want all voters to preserve these figures for use on general County matters and each week special figures of interst will be given for some one Ward. Next week will likely be the Sixth Ward and that Ward should get busy on Subscriptions for this paper and the Appeal on the great combination offer. Both papers one years for $1.00.

UNION DIRECTORY.

Columbus Federation of Labor.—Meets at 121½ East Town St. on the second and fourth Mondays of each month. Telephone Citizens 6168.

Communications for this department must be received by Tuesday of each week.

[This paper receives the Weekly News Letter from the American Federation of Labor.]

STRIKE AGAINST LUMBER COMPANIES.

Seattle, Wash.—Members of the International Shingle Weavers' union are on strike at the Hoquiam Lumber and Shingle company against a 10 per cent reduction in wages. The strike has spread to Grays Harbor and Raymond. The sawmill workers of Tacoma, aided by the Longshoremen, are also on strike, their demands being for higher rate of wages. The mill companies have appealed for the State militia, but have been refused. The Greek Consul has filed a complaint at Washington, D. C., alleging the violation of the treaty with Greece, on account of the deportation of Greek strikers. It is stated that the mill companies are now willing to pay the wages demanded, but refuse to take back the strikers. There are insufficient men to operate the mills, and the prospect for a complete victory is excellent.

NUMEROUS INCREASES FOR CARPENTERS.

Indianapolis, Ind.—General Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, reports that the contractors of Galt, Ont., Canada, have signed an agreement with the local union which carries an increase in wages of from 5 to 10 cents per hour and the Saturday half-holiday. At Beardstown, Ill., an increase in wages was secured of 6 cents per hour. Somerville, N. J., gave an increase of 4 cents per hour, and increase of 2 1-2 cents per hour has been granted the carpenters at Wildwood, N. J. At Jefferson, Mo., also the carpenters have been successful in securing an increase of 10 cents per hour, making the minimum wage 50 cents.

STRUCTURAL IRON WORKERS' INCREASE.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Since the first of the year the Indianapolis local union of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers has secured an increase of 5 cents per hour. The local union at Buffalo, N. Y., has also gained an increase of 5 cents per hour. At Chicago, Ill., the local organization has secured a three years' agreement with an increase in wages each succeeding year.

HAIR SPINNERS GET RAISE.

Baltimore, Md.—The local organization of Hair Spinners has obtained an increase in wages of from 35 to 45 cents per day without strike. The number of apprentices has been regulated by agreement and a stipulated wage agreed upon, together with favorable action upon the reduction of hours, which latter proposition will undoubtedly take place in the early part of June.

Carpenters at Alamoosa, Colo., obtained advance in wages from 35 cents to 50 cents per hour without strike.

STRET CARMEN GET RAISE.

Baltimore, Md.—Efforts have been recently made to organize the motormen and condctors on the United Railways in this city, and as a result the wages have been advanced 3 cents per hour, undoubtedly with the object in view of forestalling the organization of the system.

TOBACCO TRUST INHUMAN.

Washington.—The story is going the rounds in reference to the treatment of the women and girl cigarette packers employed by he American Tobacco company. It is stated that a system of fines is in operation which is practical thievery. The system is modeled somewhat on the plan of the Taylor system, in reference to discipline, in that girls are fined for speaking to their companions, and numerous other innocent acts. Cigarettes are packed according to a piece system, and it usually occurs that employes are required to pack more cigarettes than they get paid for. The story concludes with the assertion that the girls are practically helpless to redress their grievances.

CONTEMPLATE ERECTION OF HEADQUARTERS BUILDING

Cincinnati, O.—Jere L. Sullivan, Secretary of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League, is authority for the statement that the International union is considering the advisability of erecting a building for its general headquarters. Jere has offered four plans for raising sufficient funds within a period of two years, and these plans are being seriously considered by the general membership.

OVERCROWDED.

Washington. — Information comes from the Pacific coast that owing to fanciful stories and advertisements there are a large number of tradesmen in that sectoin without employment, and particularly the culinary workers. Alluring invitations, designed particularly toentice workmen to a particular part of the country, should be closely scrutinized ere a move is made, because many of these stories are delusive.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

The proposal offered by the miner delegate, Brother Tetlow, of Columbiana County, providing for the conservation of our natural resources was adapted by the convention by a vote of 97 to 13. The chief argument on the passage o fthe proposal was made by the author. It gives the General Assembly full authority to regulate the mining, weighing, measuring and marketing of coal and all other minerals. It also seeks to encourage re-forestration of exempting new forest lands from taxation. It provides further, too, for the conservation of water resources of the State.

In his speech Delegate Tetlow said that fully 40 per cent of all the coal attempted to be mined in this State was lost by the present system of mining. His amendment seeks to remedy this fault.

Direct primaries for all State, County and municipal officers, including United States Senators and delegates to the National party conventions, as provided for under the Tannehill proposal, which was passed by the convention by a vote of 99 to 2. The original draft of the proposal did not provide for United States Senators, this feature being taken care of by the wide-awake Secretary of the Ohio State Federation of Labor, Delegate Harry Thomas, one of the two Socialist members of the body, who was successful in having an amendment tacked on to it to this effect.

Delegate Fitzsimons, of Cuyahoga County, speaking on the Thomas amendment, said he had seen candidates for the United States Senate in Ohio buy up legislators like cattle in a stockyard. One Senator, he declared, was forced to become a fugitive from justice for a year after his election by reason of the corrupt methods which he had employed to get into the upper house of Congress. Another strong assertion he made was that he had seen a sack containing $75,000 kicked at random in the Neil House, a part of the fund he alleged which was used for the corrupting of legislators. He declared that it was high time that the people of the State should decide for themselves who should be their representatives in the Senate.

The proposal of Delegate Pierce, of Butler County, providing for the abolition of capital punishment, which was defeated last Tuesday by a few votes, was reconsidered Thursday and passed by a vote of 69 to 35. Every labor delegate in the convention supported the proposal. The clergymen split on the question, two voting against and three for it. The two clerical gentlemen who voted to continue electrocuting persons for first degree murder, were the Rev. Mr. Walker, of Holmes County, and the Rev. Mr. McClelland, of Knox County. The trio who opposed it were Messrs. Bigelow, Byer and Dunn. Walker made the principal speech against the proposal, and Delegate Pierce the principal speech for it.

The Recall Proposal, in which all of the labor members of the convention are so deeply interested, was brought up for a second vote and final disposition Tuesday afternoon. On a test vote last week, the measure was laid on the table by the narrow margin of 50 to 48. The vote by which the consideration of the reports of the proposal was lost, was reconsidered Thursday, and made a special order for Tuesday of this week.

The proposal offered bby Delegate Cunningham, of Harrison County, striking out the word "white" in the constitution, was also passed by the convention. The later was intended to remove some confusion attending the suffrage proposal approved some weeks ago, and was passed as a result of protest from colored people.

The proposal of Delegate Miller, of Fairfield, allowing women to hold office in State institutions where women and children are cared for, and to act as notaries public, was also passed.

The convention this week will give its first attention to three labor proposals. The first of these is by Brother Farrell, of Hamilton County, pertaining to the employment of women and children at hazardous occupations; the second by Delegate Tetlow, providing for the protection of persons employed on public works; the third by Brother Comes, of Hamilton County, relating to the compensation of employes.

Judge Roehm's proposal providing for the legalizing of the voting machine was passed by the convention just prior to adjournment last Thursday.

The Committee on Home Rule filed their reports to the convention Monday evening. The minority committee recommends an income and inheritance tax.

Delegate Halenkamp's proposal prohibiting the use of the injunction in industrial disputes, will be favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee this week with a few slight amendments, which it is understood will be acceptable to the labor group.

The convention has passed seventeen proposals to date, a brief summary of which will be given in next week's letter. Labor members desiring copies of the proposals passed can procure them by addressing their representatives.

LOS ANGELES TIMES HARD HIT.

Washington—Figures secured by the Los Angeles Record from the New York headquarters of the Association of American Advertisers show, in a startling way, the loss of public approval suffered by the Los Angeles Times because of its persistent abuse of organized labor, and every other movement for social betterment. It is stated that the Times' circulation began to dwindle three years ago, and has fallen so rapidly that today it is the smallest of any morning paper in Los Angeles. It stands fifth at the present time in circulation, the Record, Express, Tribune and Examiner leading it.

The Socialist and Appeal to Reason, BOTH ONE year for $1.00. This is the best newspaper offer ever made.

VOLUNTARY INCREASE.

Cumberland, Md.—The Consolidated Coal Company, the largest operator in this field, has posted notices announcing a voluntary raise of 2½ cents per ton for mining coal. The news of the raise came as a surprise. The rate in the region has been 62 cents per ton. The Georges' Creek Coal Company has also given a raise of 3 cents a ton, and is now paying 66 cents. In the Somerset field wages have also been advanced. The Kuhns' United Coal Company, with mines at Boswell, Jerome and Salisbury, have announced a 5 cent wage advance to all employes. The Meyersdale Coal Company has also granted increases of approximately 7½ cents per ton.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SOCIALIST SOCIETY.

During the past few months the Intercollegiate Socialist Society has been continuing its remarkable progress among the colleges of the country in interesting college students in the aims and purposes of the Socialist movement. The Society now claims 42 Chapters, an increase of about 400 per cent over a year and a half ago. Since the first of the year Chapters have been formed at C. C. N. Y. (Evening Division), Swarthmore, Williams, New York Medical Colleges, and are in the course of formation at Union, Minnesota, the Massachusetts Agricultural College, and others. An Alumni Chapter has also been organized in Philadelphia.

The activities of the Chapters are also becoming ever greater. The Harvard Socialist Club, of which Samuel A. Eliot, Jr., is President, has issued a most suggestive pamphlet on "Socialism and Private Property," a reply to the arguments advanced by ex-President Eliot. The New York Dentist Chapter has just issued the fourth edition of its monthly periodical, "The Progressive Dentist," and the Michigan Chapter is considering various publications.

Mr. Laidler would be glad to receive the names of any who are interested in the work of the Society, and to send any literature or information desired. The Society has recently been compelled, on account of its growth, to exchange its small headquarters on the ninth floor of the Tilden Building to a more spacious office room on the twelfth floor. Its present address is Room 1210, 105 West Fortieth Street, New York City.

THE UNION PAINLESS DENTISTS
184 1-2 South High Street

WHY THE UNION MAN SHOULD BE A SOCIALIST

By Frank J. Hayes, Vice President of the Unted Mine Workers of America.

As a member of the largest trade union in America I want to voice my belief in the doctrine that every trade unionist ought to be a Socialist.

And the fact that a number of trade unionists are not Socialists is, I believe, because they do not properly understand the relation between the two movements. It shall be my purpose in this brief article to explain in as plain a way as possible why a trade unionist should be a Socialist.

In the first place, there is no identity of interest between the capitalist and the worker, or, to put it plainer, between the fleecers and the fleeced. If there was an identity of interest, or if our intrests were mutual, there would be no necessity for the trades union movement or a working class political party.

If our interests were common, there would be no strike, no lockouts, no blacklists, no bull pens and no injunctions.

If our interests were the same, to follow this capitalist sophistry to its logical conclusion, we would be spending our summers at Newport or Atlantic City and our winters amid the balmy climate of California or Florida, or we would be spinning over the boulevards in our auto or playing golf or bridge, with pink tea on the side, in some fashionable home.

If our interests were the same, our children would go to high school or college instead to the workshop or factory, and, moreover, our girls would have an opportunity to go to some conservatory instead of to somebody's kitchen or sweatshops, and possibly later, owing to starvation wages and overwork, to the bad lands and premature death.

Therefore, it is because the interests of the capitalist and the worker are diametrically opposed to each other that the trades union movement is in evidence—a mutual product of the class struggle. In other words, we have organized on the industrial field to defend our class, as best we can, against the attacks of organized greed.

Now, then, if it is necessary for us to organize on the industrial field, why is it not necessary, or more so, for us to organize as workers on the political field? If we organize against the capitalist on the industrial field, can we consistently and intelligently join with him and vote with him on the political field?

I say no, a thousand times no! As we strike, so must we vote!

This being true, it naturally follows that we must have a working class political party, expressing, and carrying into effect the hopes and aspirations of labor.

This party must be a party of the workers, having for its ultimate aim the emancipation of the workers from the thralldom of industrial slavery. In the meantime it must initiate and advocate legislation tending to the betterment of the conditions of labor. This party must be so organized that the wish of the rank and file, as expressed by referendum vote, will be supreme.

The Socialist party is the one political party that complies with these requirements, and, as a loyal trade unionist, it is the only party you can consistently and loyally support. If you support either of the twin capitalist parties—Democrat or Republican—you aid your master to keep you in bondage and want, to destroy your union by injunction or policeman, to kill all remedial legislation and drive you back farther and farther into the mud and mire of industrial slavery.

Which shall it be, fellow unionists, Unionism and Socialism, or Unionism and Capitalism?

Are you going to be a loyal Union man 364 days in the year and then fall by the wayside on the 365th day—election day—and vote a capitalist ticket?

Think it over. Don't wait as other trade unionists have done, till you engage in a strike and get it hammered into your head by a policeman's club, or militiaman's rifle.

Your wise capitalist uses this very political power, that you so magnanimously vote into his hands, to club you into submission and destroy your every effort to improve your condition.

Be as intelligent as the capitalist. Vote the ticket of your class—the straight Socialist ticket.

Don't compromise your unionism. Put the Union label on your ballot in the shape of a cross in the circle at the top of the Socialist column.

A union man politically—a Union man industrially—that should be the policy of every trade unionist.

THE NEGLECTED FACTOR—WOMAN.

By Carrie W. Allen.

Said a man to a woman textile worker with whom he was discussing the question of suffrage for women, "You shouldn't mix up with politics. Your place is at home."

The weaver measured the man with steady eyes, and replied, "Then why doesn't the Harmony Mills pay my husband enough to keep me there?"

There was no answer. The man walked away.

A host of women are today asking the question the little wearve asked. From mills, stores, foundries and factories the question comes, "If woman's place is in the home, why is the name of conscience haven't we been kept there?"

Woman doesn't elect to leave the home. She didn't just lay down her tools and walk out. Every woman loves a home. Glad indeed would millions of women be if they could stay there.

Industrial evolution has driven women out. It has compelled her to stifle her instinctive love for home and motherhood. Modern conditions of industry have compelled woman to take her place by the side of man as part of the great industrial machine.

"Woman's place is in the home."

With every industry open to women, and six millions of them fighting life's battle as wage earners, it is curious that men cling so tenaciously to this antiquated old tradition and trot it out to do service on every possible occasion.

Whenever we hear this time-honored objection to suffrage for women, we are carried in fancy back to the long ago, back to the days of our grand-mothers, to the days of the tallow dip and spinning wheel, the days when it might have been said with some degree of reason that woman's place is in the home, because she found her work there.

Within the confines of the home, woman functioned as a producer, and there was an economic value to her work. Everything necessary for the family was manufactured there.

With the coming of modern machines, woman's work has been taken out of the home, out into the great world of industry. The cloth making, garment and bread making have been transferred to the factory, sweatshop and mill.

Her means of livelihood taken from her, woman has naturally gone out from the home, and an army of machine-driven women and girls take up their daily march to factory, sweatshop and mill.

Daily these women are confronted by laws which they had no part in making, and are compelled to submit to conditions which they have no power to control. They literally have no weapon with which to fight.

Under these conditions, the ballot is not a question of right. It is not a question of justice. It is a crying need—something women must have here and now in order to protect themselves against the iniquitous industrial laws made for them by man.

"They wouldn't have enough intelligence to do this," says some man. Perhaps not. Men haven't displayed an alarming amount of intelligence in the use of the ballot. When we look about us, it strikes us that women couldn't do worse. The chances are all in favor of their doing better.

In any case, the suffrage question is an economic question, and as such, should enlist the serious attention of every working man and woman.

The great army of women who have been forced to leave the home and go into industry are lowering wages, crowding men out of positions and creating fiercer and ever fiercer competition for jobs.

Women are more tractable than men. They are much less apt to organize and strike for better conditions. The crowning virtue of women in industry, however, is that they are cheaper than men, and more profit may be made from their labor.

Manufacturers have been quick to realize all this, and wherever possible women have been put at the machine in preference to men.

Quite recently Prof. Scott Nearing has given us some astounding figures in regard to wages in the United States, the most significant of which are perhaps those relating to the wages of women.

According to Prof. Nearing's carefully prepared tables, three-fifths of the working women in the United States earn less than $325.00 a year, and nine-tenths earn less than $600.00 a year.

Men must compete for jobs with this army of underpaid women, and this competition grows more tense with each passing year.

This competition is unquestionably one of the contributing causes to the fact brought before us by Prof. Nearing that one-half of the adult males in the United States are earning less than $600.00 a year.

With these facts staring them in the face, how can working men go stupidly on saying, "Women shouldn't mix up in politics. Their place is at home."

The long neglected factor, woman, is making her presence felt. She is making demands. Working men will do well to heed those demands.

The ballot for women will be a means of education. Through it, working women will learn that which working men are slow in learning, their class interests.

Propertied women instinctively know their class interests. Given an opportunity, working women will know theirs.

The lesson of class interests once learned, the women of the working class will take their place in the vanguard of the Socialist movement, the only movement which means freedom to the working class, the only movement which will liberate both men and women from the misery of economic slavery.

INDIANA SOCIALISTS SEEM TO LIKE THIS PAPER.

Evansville, Ind., April 19, 1912.

The Socialist Publishing Co., Columbus, O.

Dear Comrades:—Your card just received and I herewith send a dollar.

The Appeal to Reason I am getting, so just apply the dollar for The Socialist, for it is well worth it. You are doing a noble work and it is my earnest hope for our success.

Your comrade,

A. J. HAWKINS.

MINIMUM WAGE LAW.

London—The minimum wage bill passed by Parliament, contains the following provisions: "Every worker underground in a coal mine shall be entitled by law to a minimum rate of pay. This wage to be a part of every contract; employer compelled to pay not less than minimum rate settled under the Act for particular district. Miner can sue owner in civil court for wages of not less than minimum rate. Any contract modifying statutory rate will be void. Minimum wage payable from time when miners return to work. Aged and infirm miners excepted. Safeguards for owners shall be established by rules for regularity and efficiency of work. Non-compliance the rules shall deprive the miner of the right to a minimum wage. Rates of pay and safeguarding rules shall be settled by joint District Boards for the various districts. Joint District Boards shall be formed by employers' and miners' representatives in equal numbers, with a chairman appointed by agreement, or, failing that, by Board of Trade. The chairman of a Joint District Board shall have a casting vote in the event of disagreement. Country divided into twenty-one districts. Power of revision on three months' notice by either side or both, after wage rate has been in force a year. Bill to be in force only three years unless prolonged by Parliament. No penal provisions for either side. No compulsion to open mines; no compulsion on miners to work.

WANTED—Men and women who would like good permanent business. Earnings according to effort. Something new. Room 4, 108½ South High St.

HAYWOOD AND OTHERS INDICTED AT LAWRENCE

The Bosses Seem Determined to Punish Those Who Helped Workers to Victory.

LAWRENCE, MAss., April 22.—That the mill owners are determined to punish all the leaders on the recent strike of the 22,000 mill workers of this city is shown by the fact that practically all who took a prominent part in leading the workers to victory were secretly indicted by the subservient Grand Jury at Newburyport last week.

In addition to indicting Joseph J. Ettor, William Yates, William E. Trautman and Arturo Giovannitti, it was learned today that the Grand Jury indicted William D. Haywood, a member of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist party and organizes of the Industrial Workers of the World; James P. Thompson, a national organizer of the I. W. W., and Edmund Rosini, of the same organization.

Neither Haywood, Thompson nor Rosini have yet been arrested, as it is not known where they are.

Haywood is indicted on twenty-two counts, charging conspiracy to intimidate. The same charges are contained in the indictments against Thompson and Rosini.

Joseph Sciute was indicted, charged with the murder of Anna La Pizza, the striking textile operator shot during a clash between police and strikers on the afternoon of January 29.

As the workers realize more and more how they have been tricked by the mill owners, their resentment grows, and talk of a general strike is heard on every side.

LOWELL, MASS., April 22.—For the first time in four weeks the great mill gongs, announcing the opening of the mills, which have been shut down since 15,000 textile mill operatives struck, were sounded today. With the exception of 1,200 or 1,500 operatives, who left Lowell to work in other mill towns, every employe who has been idle for twenty-eight days went back, as they had voted to do Saturday afternoon at the South Common mass meeting.

LATTIMER STRIKE STILL ON.

The strike of the Molders at the Lattimer Stove Works, West Spring Street, is still on. The union pickets on duty are not handing out hard fist blows, cuss words or epithets to the strike-breakers, but simply give them copies of The Columbus Socialist. Men employed in nearby plants are also given copies of this paper. It's better than dynamite or strong-arm methods. The police are still used by the company, and every man who comes near the shop is closely questioned. Two union molders, looking for work, went into the Lattimer place, but were promptly fired by the officers on guard and threatened with arrest.

Remember the Appeal and this paper both for one year for $1.00. Absolutely the best combination ever offered.

UNION SHOP DEBATE.

Omaha.—The South Omaha high school debating team won from the Fremont high school recently, before an audience that was engrossed with the question of the union shop vs. open shop, as discussed by the contestants. The question, "Resolved, That the movement of organized labor for the union shop should receive the support of public opinion," was handled by the affirmative in a manner which bespoke thorough preparation and knowledge of the trade union movement. Much ability was shown by both the affirmative and negative sides, but the affirmative won, not only by a preponderance of argument, but because it presented the subject in its true economic light.

CHILLICOTHE DEPARTMENT

Chillicothe Socialist local meets the first and third Sunday of each month in Workmans hall, above Mutchlars Pharmacy, at 2:30. Everybody welcome.

Comrade A. C. Eby and family of Columbus were here last Sunday afternoon for an entertainment and lecture. Comrade Eby and daughters entertained us with cornet duets with piano accompaniments and piano duets. They were handicapped by a piano out of tune, but you all know, that we as Socialists overcome all obstacles. So they overcome those and gave a good entertainment, which all appreciated, who were present. Following this Comrade Mrs. Eby entertained us with readings, the first was her own, original reading entitled, "My Dream," the other, "The Prayer or Potatoes," both were rendered in excellent style and the audience appreciated her efforts in this line. Only another link in the chain of education, just another way to tell them the faults of capitalism, which is even noticed by the Indians, who have never been off his reservation, or ever studied economics. One of these Indians was taken through New York City on a sight-seeing expedition. He visited all points of interest such as theaters, government buildings, offices in sky scrapers and factories of all descriptions, as are in New York. The question was asked him, "what was most noticable occurrence, or thing he seen in his travels," and he said, "Little children working." And we all know he was rights. If we, as a civilized nation allow and expect a child to labor and help to keep our homes in the necessities of life, then we in the Indian's eye are an inhuman nation. Comrade Eby spoke of all existing ills in his decture that are the fruits of this insane system, which we have allowed and continue to allow by our votes, "When I speak of our votes I mean you, who have through ignorance or prejudice allowed a man to influence you in voting for a 'good' man." No man or men can or will ever benefit the people of this nation or any other, unless he advocates the abolition of the capitalistic system. When all who labor, mentally or physically get all they produce.

The Twelfth Annual State Convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio was called to order last Friday forenoon by State Secretary Joseph C. Schawe, at Federation Hall, East Town Street. The first State Convention of this party met July 4, 1900, and was attended by twenty members of the party. It was a mass convention. The convention which closed Sunday was composed of delegates representing 15,000 duespaying members in Ohio. In 1900 some of those attending the convention came in on freight trains. Comrade T. C. Devine, of Toledo, was elected temporary Chairman and later Chairman for the day. Comrade E. C. Smith, of Warren, was elected permanent Secretary and Comrade E. E. Rimbach, of Elyria, Assistant Secretary. Comrade Fred. G. Strickland, of Dayton, was Chairman on Saturday and Comrade C. B. Ruthenberg, of Cleveland, on Sunday. The assembly was clearly a typical Socialist Convention. It was democratic. Every delegate had the irght to the floor and most of them had it. Even the local capitalistic press stated that it was "a convention without a slate." None of them said that everything done was not properly threshed out. That's the way we do things. The old timers were there, likewise the younger, zealous, active recruits. Some of the older comrades who met in former gatherings were missing. They have left this world the better for having lived. The reports that follow exhibit the main work of the convention. Details of the party constitution, propaganda work, etc., will appear in the Official Bulletin to be passed upon by the membership.

The proposition to establish a State printing plant and a State paper in Columbus was endorsed and goes to the referendum. The details of management will be in the hands of the State Executive Committee. This is a matter of economy for the many Socialist papers in Ohio and the plan will work when the needed money is raised.

The discussion of various issues was strenuous at times but that is characteristic of Socialist conventions and is one of the reasons why our movement never stagnates. Our faces are turned to the rising sun.

A collection of over $80 was taken to help our comrades in prison and, under indictment at Lawrence, Mass. Comrade Frank Bohn, of the International Socialist Review, made a brief address on Saturday.

PLATFORM

Adopted at the 12th Annual Convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, April 28th, 1912.

We, the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, reaffirm our allegiance to the national platform of the Socialist Party of America and the principles of International Socialism by demanding the collective and public ownership and the democratic management of all natural resources and the means of wealth production and distribution. We demand for the workers access to the machinery of wealth production and the land at all times and the full value of their toil.

We declare that all government, whether city, state or national, is controlled by and administered in the interest of the economically dominant class—the capitalist class. We emphasize the growing power of the capitalist class, making it more and more difficult for the workers to gain a livelihood, and the continuous struggle on the part of the workers, forcing from capitalism more and more of its labor product, and realizing that with the economic growth of industries into the mammoth trust stage, thereby being brought more and more into the control of a few men; the workers to further protect and prepare themselves for their historic mission, the emancipation from wage-slavery, we, the Socialist Party, indorse and recommend to the workers the industrial form of organization as a means to protect their economic and political rights, and with their ballots elect representatives of their own class into public office. We maintain that political support of capitalist parties on the part of the workers, simply results in greater power for the capitalist class.

The Socialist Party is the party of the working class, able and competent to represent the interests of the producers on the political field. The resignation of each and every Socialist candidate on the Socialist ticket is in the hands of the Socialist organization, so that when elected to office, if he or she does not fulfill the pledges made previous to election, his or her resignation is demanded.

As measures that will strengthen the position of the workers in the struggle against capitalism, we demand:

First—Equal suffrage for men and women.

Second—The Initiative and Referendum, Proportional Representation and the Right of Recall.

Third—Compulsory Insurance against accident and death, the cost to be borne by the employers.

Fourth—That the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts be so corrected, modified and restricted that delinquent girls brought before such courts be humanely treated from a corrective and modern viewpoint, and that such delinquents be not condemned to practical and demoralizing imprisonment in sectarian institutions, wherein sweatshops, laundries and other industries are conducted for profit, and that the state immediately furnish modern and humane and industrial homes for the mental and moral education and the upliftment of such unfortunates.

Fifth—The abolishing of all exemptions from taxation of taxable property, including church property, convents, charity hospitals, etc., heretofore exempted from their just burden of taxation.

Sixth—We recognize that the question of race superiority injected into the minds of the white wage-worker against the negro and other races is only a tactical method used by the capitalist class to keep the workers divided on the economic field. We, therefore, call upon the negro workers and those of other races, to unite with the Socialist Party on the political field as the only avenue of abolishing wage slavery, and the only solution of the race question.

Seventh—Realizing that white slavery and prostitution is a direct result of economic exploitation of female labor, we insist that the women workers be protected by the state against low wages and long hours of labor.

Resolutions.

Resolved, That this convention instruct Victor L. Berger to introduce a bill into Congress to prevent the unnecessary loss of life on sea-going ships as was the case in the Titanic disaster.

Whereas, The splendid and victorious struggle of our 35,000 fellow-workers at Lawrence, Mass., has resulted not only in raising their own wages, but also those of 300,000 shamefully underpaid slaves in the textile industries; and,

Whereas, The brutal capitalist class of the State of Massachusetts determined at any cost and at all hazards to crush the rising revolt of the workers and has therefore, caused the indictment and arrest of our comrade, Wm. D. Haywood and other, notwithstanding the fact that directed by these leaders, the workers of Lawrence conducted themselves with great restraint and caution; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That we pledge ourselves to support the workers of Lawrence in their continued struggle and that we declare our confidence in Comrade William D. Haywood and heartily indorse his activity in behalf of the workers of Lawrence.

Whereas, The capitalist class of Lawrence, Mass., has broken its implied pledge to release Ettor and Giovanitti from jail and now propose to persecute these workers.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the delegates of Ohio, in convention assembled, do express our earnest protest against the unlawful and bru-

COUNCILMEN DO FLOP ACT ON THE DURANCEAU PARK DEAL

Somebody Evidently was "Seen"—Gray Wolves Seem to Have Whip Hand at City Hall

The Duranceau Park bond issue of $25,000 was approved by the City Council last Monday evening. Members Wegman, Lucks and Biederman voted to reconsider the proposition, but not one of them had the manhood to explain to their colleagues why they did so. There are some suspicions that the administration used the whip to some extent. The deal is a rotten one and every Socialist member voted against it. Councilman Sherman, who, a week ago, voted for the bond issue, voted with the Socialists in the negative last Monday night. Reinhard also came clean. The whole scheme is a hold-up game backed by real estate speculators and includes a fifty-two-foot dam at the storage dam, regardless of the lives and property of West Side residents, who comprise one-third of the inhabitants of the city.

Read the Line-Up.

Vote to Reconsider—Yeas: Alcott, Baldridge, Barry, Biederman, Connolley, Ellis, Griffin, Hayden, Lucks, McGuire, Nailor, Sherman, Stribling, Wegman—14. Nays: Bohnert, Reinhard, Warren, Wilson, Zimpfer—5.

Vote to Pass the Bond Issue—Alcott, Baldridge, Barry, Biederman, Connolley, Ellis, Griffin, Hayden, Lucks, McGuire, Nailor, Stribling, Wegman—14. Nays: Bohnert, Reinhard, Sherman, Warren, Wilson, Zimpfer—6.

The vote on this one issue shows that the "Gray Wolves" still control the City Council of Columbus. God may reign in heaven, but Dave Logan and "Doc" Waddell run the Columbus Council.

The Duranceau scheme is not settled yet, for it is not operative for sixty days. A referendum vote may be taken and the fifty-two-foot dam will never be built.

Council adopted a resolution granting Rev. Billy Sunday, the evangelist, the right to extend his tabernacle over the sidewalks of Park Street and Poplar Avenue.

The fire-limit question was raised regarding the class of material to be used in it. This phase was dropped by Council, but the department of building inspection may yet cause the Park Street site to be abandoned.

Socialist Councilman Zimpfer introduced an ordinance regulating sidewalks cellar-doors. The measure provides that only corrugated iron doors be used and that no doors should be left open in any street or alley sidewalk. A penalty of $25 to $50 fine for first offense and $100 to $200 fine and 30 days' imprisonment for subsequent offenses is provided.

ANOTHER MOVE TO RUSSIANIZE COLUMBUS

Retail Clerks and Workingmen are Under Espionage of Certain Retail Merchants—How Plan Works

Every day the working class of this city are finding themselves face to face with new difficulties in their chances to secure work, which means life for themselves and family.

The very latest outrage is a combination of merchants, whose object is to so manipulate things that they can bleed the people out of the very last cent. For example, the time for seasonable merchandise is here. Under the rules of the association no member can make a reduction on these goods until after the season is over, and practically every one is supplied. The same applies to practically every line of merchandise.

The association maintains an attorney in every city where organized. His duty is to turn down all propositions in the way of money that do not innure to the practical and immediate benefit of the association.

The Blacklist is another one of the weapons used very effectively. For instance: John Smith is working for one of these merchants. He desires to quit and go into the employ of some other merchant. Upon his applying for a position he is asked who were his last employers. Upon finding that he was employed by another member of the association, he cannot secure employment until he has been out of work three months. Few of the working class can afford to lay off three months, so that this is a very effective means of intimidating clerks and keeping down wages. Another method that is being used on the general public is this: John Jones has been in hard luck. He has been unable to meet his grocery bill or other obligations. He is trying his best to pay up, when suddenly another calamity, such as a death in the family, occurs. He goes to the merchant and wants a suit of clothes, a hat, pair of shoes or something else, to make him appear respectable. He naturally must ask for credit. The merchant looks up his record. It appears that he owes some other member of the association, consequently he is told politely that he cannot be extended credit. This, of course, is the result of the system, the private ownership of the means of life. The remedy, the public ownership of the means of life. What are we going to do about it? The only thing we can do to alleviate our conditions and those of the clerks is to ascertain the merchants belonging to this association and use our purchasing power accordingly. After investigation we find that there are some merchants with manhod enough, who believe enough in the brotherhood of man to refuse to become parties to this ungodly transaction, and we believe that sooner or later the working class will find them out and use their power accordingly.

CALLS SOCIALISM A SERIOUS MENACE TO CATHOLICISM.

Semi-Official Paper of Vatican Sees Danger In the Rapid Spread of Socialism.

That Socialism is fast becoming a serious rival of the Catholic church is the admission that has practically been made by the Vatican itself.

The rapid spread of Socialism during the past few years has forced the church to consider methods for preventing Socialism from encroaching on its own field of influence.

The situation has really become so serious that it has found its way into the Catholic papers of Italy, and "Roma," a semi-official paper of the Vatican, recently went into the subject thoroughly. Because of its high standing with the Vatican, the sentiments expressed by "Roma" may be regarded as the actual sentiment at the present time of the Pope and the church in general on the subject of Socialism. The review of the situation by "Roma" is in part as follows:

"Socialism is increasing steadily all over the world; in Germany and France it has almost gained control of the state; in Italy under the new franchise it will become the strongest homogeneous party in the country: in Austria and Hungary it is spreading rapidly; in the United States and England the masses of the working classes are approaching more and more closely to it; in Belgium it is rapidly absorbing Liberalism. There is no country, not even excepting Turkey, which has not been affected by it. Nor can we gauge its strength from its forces in the various legislatures—many Socialists are indifferent about parliaments, many hundreds of thousands of them scattered here and there in all countries have been unable to obtain legislative representation.

"According to several of its most authoritative spokesmen, Socialism is fundamentally opposed to Christianity, but since the birth of Christianity itself no movement has grown so steadily, has spread so widely, has taken so deep a hold on the people, has shown such marked characteristics of permanence.

"In different countries its followers may differ in details—they may be more or less revolutionary, they may adopt different methods of propaganda, they may be more or less disposed to form a temporary alliance with other parties in the state, they may be more or less disturbed by factional strife; but the great outstanding fact is that Socialism, although it possesses no central authority and no universally recognized international leaders, is a united movement, thoroughly international, independent of conditions of race, climate, language or social development.

"Nor is it confined to the proletariat as many suppose—it is making conquests in all grades of society. We have to come to this. In the modern world today there are two and only two forces that are homogeneous and international and these are the Catholic church and Socialism.

"Such is the situation. That we are becoming more and more awake to it is evident from the extraordinary attention which is devoted to the topic of Socialism by exponents of Catholic thought.

"The 'theology' of Socialism is hopelessly wrong. It is easy enough to prove that. But it may be found that 90 per cent. of Socialists are Socialists not because but in spite of the theology. Its philosophy is absurd. All right, but the people do not vote for it on account of its philosophy. It destroys the natural and supernatural conceptions of family life. Very good, but the crude fact is that Socialists, in flesh and blood, taking them in the mass, have about as much (and as little) respect for the marriage bond and for the ties of family as most people outside the Catholic church who are not Socialists.

"There can be no question that great numbers of Socialists are anti-Christian, but it is also well to remember that some Socialist leaders proclaim that the question of religion does not enter essentially into Socialism, and it is highly doubtful if any large proportion of Socialists in Germany or in English-speaking countries have been drawn into the movement by its anti-religious principles.

"What is drawing them? Putting it broadly, it seems to us that the multitudes are being influenced chiefly by two sentiments; one of discontent with the present economic structure of society, the other of a desire for a practical recognition of the brotherhood of man and for the abolition of barriers which prevent this recognition."

In the closing part of the review, which is devoted to a statement of the manner in which the church can best triumph over Socialism, it is suggested that it would be far better instead of opposing Socialism, for the church to work more strongly for the same ends that are common both to the church and the Socialists. By this course, it was believed the church would become the stronger of the two.

TIM WOULD SURELY HOWL.

The Columbus Socialist has made a vigorous attack on Attorney General Timothy Hogan, declaring that he has ruled that City Councils have no power to dictate that city work, to be performed under contract with private individuals or corporations, shall be done exclusively by union labor. The question arose when the City Council of Conneaut, now controlled by the votes of Socialists, authorized a contract for public printing, and at the solicitation of the Typographical Union inserted a clause in the ordinance which required that the contractor should employ none other than union labor upon the work. The Columbus Socialist says Hogan has gone so far as to threaten officials who disregard his "opinions" with legal punishment, and that he is the worst accident that has happened to the State of Ohio for several years. As a member of the closed shop Bar Association, Hogan would undoubtedly howl pretty loud if the people of Ohio decided to hand out their legal work to persons who are not members of that combine.—Cleveland Citizen.

A RELIC OF BARBARISM.

Much has been said and written about the ever-rising cost of living; newspapers and magazines have pointed out many contradictory reasons; the trusts; high railroad rates, high wages and high tariffs have been named by some while Wall street, with its grasping, life-destroying financial anarchy, with its train of suicides and bank crashes; business failures and consequent loss, is commonly blamed, and our financial system, with its wealth rapidly concentrating in fewer hands undoubtedly does result in poverty and misery to the workers, but in countries where trusts are unknown, where wages are low and where no protective tariff protects the employer at the expense of the worker, we see the same movement against the high cost of the necessities of life. In fact, it is in Europe and even in Asia that conditions are more acute than in America. There are bread riots in Vienna, food riots in France, Portugal has overthrown its government, and Holy Russia is seething with half-starved discontents. From Germany comes news of strife. Sweden is in revolt and Great Britain is throbbing with a life movement and is imminently near another great industrial upheaval, and in every country where gold is the medium of exchange the workers are crying out that their wages will no longer buy the necessities of life.

An investigation by the bureau of labor shows the greatest increase is on farm products, so it is not altogether the trusts. The milk supply of Chicago, controlled by the milk trust, is much cheaper than in New York, where competition with its waste makes the cost greater than where one distributing system more economically and efficiently does the work. The fact is that the greater economy of operation by the trusts accounts for the profit and fortunes they make; oil is much cheaper than before Rockefeller piled up his huge fortune by forming a trust, and it is the great increase of economy due to invention and operation that has been generally monopolized by the trusts.

This cheapness of production due to machinery, to invention and to economy of operation has not benefitted the workers; big business has hogged it all. Now this cheapness of production also applies to the production of gold. We now mine gold with less expenditure of labor than ever before, and gold, like every other product is worth its cost in labor power and will buy back just its equivalent in labor power. So clearly is the lower labor cost of gold caused by cheaper production that it is primarily and steadily forcing up the cost of things. If the rate of wages goes up with cheaper production all is well; but wages have not gone up in proportion and with capital organizing quicker than labor, the fights on the industrial field are no longer in favor of the workers; their members competing with machines and with each other for a job against them.

The present way is a relic of barbarism, of the time when skins were the medium of exchange, and it should be relegated to limbo together with the wage system, and make way for the social organization where the means of production are owned and operated by the people and for the benefit of humanity.

The Day of Freedom

By D. J. FARRELL

The day of freedom is drawing near,
When from toil and poverty we'll be free;
Society thieves are trembling with fear,
As we gather the fruit from Education's tree.

The day of oppression is almost o'er,
And soon to the weary rest will come.
The glad songs of love and devotion outpour
To those who have struggled and whose work is well done.

So hail the bright morn when liberty's star
Shines brighest and grandest with nothing to mar,
Socialism is coming, it is fast on the way.
Then hail the most grand and m glorious day.

O. S. U. SOCIALIST CLUB.

The Ohio State University Socialist Club meets the first and third Friday of every month at Ohio Union at 4 p. m. Discussions are open to all and visitors are cordially invited. The student Socialists are trying to arrange for a speaker of some college reputation to defend Socialism before the faculty and students of the university.

Out at Ohio State University a class of about twenty are taking a course under Professor McKenzie in Socialism. This course devotes all of its attention to a study of "Marx's Capital" and the works of other exponents of Socialism. An assignment made to the class last week was that it should spend two hours in an attendance at the Socialist State Convention and give a report on what they observed there.

WIRELESS FOR PROFIT, NOT FOR LIFE-SAVING.

Warnings Sent Titanic Not Received Because Operator Busy.

Washington.—"Shut up! Shut up!" was the reply the wireless operator of the Titanic made to the warning of the proximity of a dense field of ice, less than two hours before the liner struck the berg—this was learned by the Senate Investigating Committee.

Captain Stanley Lord and Wireless Operator Cyril Evans, both of the steamship Californian, testified to the curt reply to their attempt to warn the big liner of the danger that lay ahead. He was busy sending private messages for money to Cape Race.

It was further established in the testimony of Captain Lord that his ship lay surrounded by ice not more than nineteen and a half miles from the Titanic from the time she struck the iceberk and sent out her C. Q. D. call until she sank beneath the surface.

The testimony of both men demonstrated that but for the accident of a weary, overworked wireless operator at $20 a month going to bed, the Californian would have heard the call for help from the Titanic and proceeded to the assistance of the liner at once.

FACTS FROM LORAIN.

Socialist Local There Promptly Expelled Traitor From the Party.

Editor "The Socialist," Columbus, Ohio:

Dear Comrade—Local Lorain has learned a valuable lesson, which the whole Socialist Party should profit by. About December, 1910, Thos. W. Pape, who had previously been an active Republican politician and had for two years been President of the City Council of Lorain, and who was disgruntled because he had not been renominated for the same office at the previous primary election, came to one of our meetings and presented his application for membership, which was accepted and the applicant obligated. He attended meeting regularly and worked as hard as any of us for the cause of Socialism. The comrades honored and trusted him, indeed so much so, that at the primary election in June, 1911, he was nominated as our candidate for the office of Mayor. All went well and we put up a strenuous campaign and elected the Mayor, two aldermen and two assessors of personal property. However, he showed his contempt for the Socialist Party a few days after he assumed the office, to which he had been elected by the party, by overruling our Advisory Board. Comrade George A. Storck, who had been appointed to the office of Service Director by Pape, was a thorn in the flesh of the old party grafters because of his honesty and endeavor to serve the working class. Consequently he had to be eliminated from office and Pape discharged him without giving any reason for so doing. Of course, discharging Comrade Storck was the Mayor's privilege, and we did not kick. But when the Socialist Mayor appointed a Republican to take the place of the discharged Socialist, and when it leaked out that this was a pre-election arrangement, and that the Mayor had made promises to preachers and old-party grafters in order to be elected and ignored the party entirely, then we kicked and kicked hard.

We immediately preferred charges against T. W. Pape and gave him a chance to defend his action, which, of course, he turned down by saying that he had not been elected by a purely Socialist vote, and was, therefore, not responsible to the Socialist Party. We then presented his resignation, which he had signed before the election, to the City Council. The two Socialist members, Comrades Jos. Hanzard and Frank Krzeninewsky, voted to accept the resignation, but the seven capitalist members of that body voted to table the resignation after Pape had practically repudiated the signature.

Local Lorain then issued referendum ballots to its membership, and Thos. W. Pape was expelled from the party April 25 by a vote of 164 to 4.

Local Lorain has authorized this statement because of the fact that the capitalist papers have garbled this matter in order to injure the cause of Socialism.

Yours for the Revolution,

CHILLICOTHE DEPARTMENT

MORAL RIGHTS.

Chillicothe, O., April 29, 1912.

"That alone is right which is just; that alone is enduring which is right."

Is there any one so fossilized in mind, so set in his opinions or prejudiced on account of this or that that he will not hold to the above arbitrament? It seems there are thousands of just such people in this world of ours today, even as history teaches us there always has been. But why?

Numerous and various reasons may be assigned as causes contributing to this condition, but is not the first cause the fundamental cause, the fact that we do not form our judgments with a view to determining the moral right.

In forming our conclusions in questions regarding society as a whole, and even in questions relating to man as an individual, would it not be better for all concerned to consider all questions from a standpoint of moral right? "That alone is right which is just." Few there are who will even attempt to refute this great truth in oral discussion. Yet in our daily walks of life there are very, very few, if any, who, by their conduct, comport themselves in strict accordance wit hthis understanding. This wonderful truth seems to have been lost sight of absolutely, or else it has not as yet been firmly imbedded in the minds of the people generally, and, as a consequence, society is very shamefully unsettled; vice of all kinds and descriptions has full sway with little, if any, opposition.

Misery, squalor, poverty, degradation, prostitution and everything in the category of immorality are the resultants as a consequence of the non-application of this moral truth in our daily conduct.

In poltics particularly do we find the greatest perversion of justice because of not deciding questions from a moral standpoint alone. If poltics were morally clean; if society concerned itself only with that which is right and would not stoop to contaminate itself with that which it must know is wrong, all, or most all forms of vice, would eventually become eradcated from human nature.

Some say that it is human nature to be continually doing that wihch is not right because man is born in sin, and that there is no hope of the moral betterment of mankind as a whole.

Human nature is pretty much what is inculcated and developed into us on account of our environment, our teachings and habits in our habit-forming period.

Heredity, you will say, plays an important part in our natures, but heredity and the above proposition amount to one and the same. The evil passions of human nature are all traceable to this same source, and, if this be true, then it becomes possible to eliminate those evils from our natures by proper treatment, and the sooner we do so the better for all. It is a poor sort of political economy which teaches us that Providence has decreed that the present order of human society cannot be materially improved upon, and that one's life journey is and should be a continual struggle for existence against one's fellow-man, and that countless numbers should suffer untold agonies until the end of time in order that a favored few may surround themselves with every known luxury without never a single drop of the bitter with the sweet. Can any one fail to see the physical pain and moral wrong which the majority suffer on account of the awful extremes of poverty and wealth? Is it right that we continue to support a system which fosters and encourages such injustice? Are there any who claim that in doing so, the moral right has been a factor in the exercise of his judgment? There may be, but his conclusion is necessarily wrong unless conformable to good morals.

There are some of us nowadays bothering ourselves about discovering the underlying causes of the inequality of man and all the evils resulting therefrom. These same few are those who feel deeply for humanity and who are at least making an effort to remove this festering sore of injustice, inequality of conditions and special privileges for the few, but it seems the opposition to human right is of such tremendous proportions that time and education and patience on the part of the workers for reform are the main factors to be considered in bringing about the final readjustment. It seems that even our churches stand aloof and refuse to lend a hand in the great movements for reform.

Why? Most of our church-going people, our ministers included, seem to become thoroughly frightened when the word Socialism is mentioned. What is Socialism, anyway? What are the causes of the coming into existence of this third political party and of its gradual development and ever-increasing membership? The ever-increasing poverty of the masses and the concentration of the wealth into the hands of the few explains the solution by the favored few of the lower industrial oligarchy, where the dominating tendency is toward an increasingly undoubted and more among the masses. We are daily and poverty is spreading more and more among the masses. We are The wealthy are becoming more so jority will be dispossessed entirely the time is not far off when the majority not be worth while to consider that per cent. If this be true, would it rol of the trust and corporations—75 mated at $130,000,000,000, and that 60,000,000,000 of this is now in control of the trust and corporations—75 cently gave out figures showing that our national wealth today is estimated Moody, authority on finance, recause. This is the cause, Mr. classes will be absolute and final. Any student of conditions can not deny this fact, and yet what almost superhuman efforts are being put forth at present to enlighten the people of their conditions and the tendencies of the times.

Will they awake in time to avoid civil conflict? We sincerely hope so; otherwise we can only accept the inevitable and shed our last drop of blood in the noblest cause of humanity. Our government is supposed to be a government of the people, by the people and for the people. A mere supposition as regarding the whole people. Rather, is it not a government of the people by a representative part of the people, who misrepresent, for the benefit of the moneyed few? Else, whence comes the great extremes of wealth and poverty? Do you tell me we need no social reforms in the fact of conditions as they are today? Let us search earnestly for the true causes of all our social and political evils and then proceed to administer the cure by removing the causes. Remove the cause; the evils of necessity disappear. It is not necessary that (as some think) we must become individually righteous before this system of moral conduct can be put in practice. Having discerned that certain deep, underlying misconceptions of moral principle upon which our social fabric rests today, are the real causes making for our downfall. Would it not be far more rational and just to all to modify our system of government to make it accord with the moral teachings of Christ in hopes that his change in our social system would bring about the desired result in the individual? Give us opportunity and opportunity will give us men. Do away with the causes of evil and evil will do away with itself. From selfishness springs all immorality, and from our present system of economic arrangement springs selfishness.

Under present conditions selfishness is developed in our natures, so we say its nature to be selfish. The Almighty did not intend us to be so; therefore, that we may all come into that life everlasting, let us so reconstruct society that a perfect unison be established between the material condition of the individual and the spiritual.

Only by the perfect material condition of the individual can the perfect spiritual condition be attained. The causes of social evil can be removed only in one way, and that is in the field of politics, and since the Socialist party is the only political party which stands upon the principle of right, justice to all, and which applied Christian morality to human conduct, let us open anew the fight against corporate greed with relentless fury and keep on pounding away until the victory is won. Let us educate, for on the enlightenment of the masses depend the final result.

Oh, Lord, how long?

Mrs. Anita C. Brooks of New York has a cat for which she has made a diamond crown and an ermine robe. A maid is hired to wait on the cat, which is fed from the finest soups, the choicest meats and sterilized milk. How much better it is to be born a cat of this kind than to be born a child of the workers in Lawrence, Massachusetts.

Rent, profit and interest are badges of slavery; and every man who pays either is a slave to the extent of the labor required to produce that which he pays.

Socialism has passed the stage where ridicule can any longer pierce its armor or stay its progress. It can now use that weapon on its opponents much more effectively than they ever used it against the Socialists. The men who vote to give half of their earnings to rich corporations and trusts are the silliest kind of ninnehammers.

A "progressive" paper, commenting on what it states to be a fact, that "ninety per cent of men at sixty years of age are dead broke, living from day to day or supported by relatives, friends or alms," says, "It is because they did not save a part of what they were paid each week or month while they were young." The "progressive" paper is wrong. It is because the employers of these men did save too much of what the other fellow earned.

The man or woman who works from morning until night to get a little food and clothing is not a slave! Oh, no! It is the man who makes a profit out of their sweat who is the slave!

STILL SOME MORE EFFICIENCY.

Senator William Alden Smith, who is conducting the inquiry into the Titanic disaster, loudly announces that hereafter wireless operators on board all ships carrying apparatus must be ready to respond durng the whole twenty-four hours of the day. It is a more than excellent idea. It has been tried on railroads. Towermen have worked thirty-six hours on a stretch, engineers and firemen an equal number of hours, and those unconsidered persons, the switchmen, have sometimes been on duty for a longer period. Even if an accident did happen it was all in the days work.

If Smith succeeds in getting through a bll for continuous wireless work he will start something. Two men working twelve hours a day will be necessary, or three men working eight hours a day will be necessary

And this multiplication of the labor force is contrary to all rules of efficiency and to all demands for strict economy. It might save lives, but it would interfere with dividends.

COMRADES, READ HOW THEY DO THINGS IN MILWAUKEE.

In Milwaukee they have had the same problem to solve that we have here, and they are solving it by the only method it can be solved, that is, they are getting behind one proposition at a time, and doing that, and doing it well before taking up anything else. They first placed their weekly paper on its feet, then they were in line for a daily. They now have a daily, and they are boosting it in every possible way. Read the following, taken from the "Milwaukee Leader," and then apply it to our situation here:

"Friends and readers, remember that the success of the Milwaukee Social-Democratic movement has proceeded from the fact that the comrades have always done one thing at a time, and have done ie well." And further: "We must learn to control and concentrate our purchasing power so as to command additional advertising for the Leader. Every booster, every reader, can and should do his share to this end. The aggregate of all your individual efforts, if well organized and directed, will have sufficient force easily to secure this result."

Before buying any article loog through the columns of The Socialist, and concentrate your efforts behind our advertisers and boost the crculation at every opportunity.

ALL WORKERS UNITE—AND STICK!

Many years ago Wendell Phillips said:

"Give me fifty thousand men that will stand together, without surrender, insisting upon an ideal, and they will rule the nation with their ideas."

Today we find many hundreds of thousands of men and women standing together on Labor's Field, without surrender, insisting upon an ideal, and they will rule the nation with their ideas. Never before in the history of the human race has mankind and womankind cried aloud for love with as much earnestness as now. We hear the cry everywhere; from the remote countryside to the cities teeming with humanity.

The countryman hears the wail of the citizen, and the citizen hears the cry of the countryman Immediately a bond, strengthened by silver threads of fellowship, connects their commonhood. If we take men and women away from their incomes, their poverties, their fames, or their obscurities, we find them to be the loveliest and the most loving human being that ever graced the globe.

Gradually we are harkening unto the cries of all men, inexorable in their cravings for love. But we must not lose ground a single day. Every person who is not a capitalist is oppressed in one way or the other by the capitalist system of present day society.

Socialism will connect the commonhood of their lives. Millions of men and women have dedicated their lives to the proposition of bringing about Socialism. The Socialist Party in this State is the great link in the great chain of Socialism.

Workers come with us—and stick for Socialism.

THE MAY DAY CELEBRATION.

The big turnout on next Sunday will mean that the campaign of the Socialist Party has been well started.

May Day is the day of the Socialists, and that it should be fittingly observed this year is of the highest importance.

Within about two weeks of that time the candidates on our national ticket will probably have been selected and the fight of the workers will be in full swing. But to make that fight as effective as it can be, a great deal of preliminary work must be done

The May Day celebration is one of the great means of helping along this work. It draws the attention of people to what Socialists are doing, it arouses enthusiasm and it stimulates the fighting qualities that are so necessary to success.

Local Columbus committee has been working hard to make this the most successful demonstration we have ever had. It cannot be unless their work is solidly backed up by the membership, and the only way of backing up that work is by getting out and helping swell the crowd.

Come to Olentangy Park.

SOCIALIST STATE CONVENTION.

The Ohio Socialist State Convention, held in this city last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, developed into one of the most remarkable conventions ever held in America by adopting the most progressive and revolutionary platform ever submitted to the party. The principle of industrial unionism was endorsed by a vote of 76 to 36. This radical action was brought about by the oppressive measures used by the master class against the workers in discharging those openly espousing Socialism in municipalities where Socialists were successful last Fall. Heretofore the worker had felt secure in his constitutional right of political liberty but this right, as all rights, developed into a farce, when the employers used ther economic power (the control of jobs) by a wholesale firing of toilers throughout the State for holding political views antagonistic to the bosses.

Other measures of equal importance went through almost unanimously, especially the plank pertaining to Juvenile Courts, which now sends juveniles to sectarian institutions. This is under a tentative working agreement between Church and State and if not immediately checked will become a matter of absolute law. The constitution of the United States was wisely drawn against such a contingency. Experience has taught that an evil, established insiduously, becomes an accepted fact later and then law. A vigorous protest must be raised throughout the State against this practice.

The party positively took a position against race discrimination, recognizing the question as an economic one, only to be solved at the ballot box.

The party took a firm stand against the hair-brained idealists who seek to abolish prostitution and white slavery by fine spun theories instead of striking at the cause—the profit system—and demands the protection of the unfortunates by the establishment of modern State institutions without cost to the girls.

On the question of taxation the party refused to train for the sake of votes, by insisting that all who receive the protection of the State, should bear an equal burden. Property is property whether it is held in the name of workers and taxed, or held in the name of sectarian institutions and charity hospitals with pay wards, etc., not taxed.

On the other demands the party's position is so well known that there is no need to elucidate.

The enthusiasm and spirit displayed bodes well for an enormously increase in the vote this Fall, as we have a platform that we can feel proud of, because it means what it says.

ABOUT TAXES

Taxes are of two kinds—private and public.

They also are indirect or direct.

Private taxes are paid for the support of private individuals who collect them through profit, interest or rent.

Public taxes are paid for the support of the government and those who graft upon it.

Indirect taxes are those that we pay without knowing that we pay them, the method of collecting being concealed so that we will pay them more cheerfully.

All private taxes, and all public taxes for the support of the federal government and the army and navy may be classed as indirect taxes.

The taxes paid for the support of the city and county and state and the public schools are, in the main, direct taxes.

Direct taxes are paid mainly by property owners, the smaller property owners paying a higher rate.

Indirect taxes are paid mainly by the workers and by those who have no property.

Just now there is intense indignation and violent protest because the direct taxes in this state are so high.

But the indirect taxes paid by the people of the state amount to at least ten times as much as the direct taxes, and to the average wage worker and farmer they amount to one hundred and often one thousand times as much!

A direct property tax rate of ten per cent is considered robbery and confiscation.

But the worker pays through indirect taxation a rate of 80 per cent!

The wage worker and the farmer with no property whatever, pay an average of $8,000 in taxes each year.

Let us cease straining at a gnat while we swallow a camel.

* * *

Taxes are a hardship upon those who pay them, but not upon those who receive them.

The manufacturers have never complained of the high tariff taxes.

The officers of the army and navy, the builders of warships, the manufacturers of fire arms, and the packing houses which have "doped" meat to sell never complain about the internal revenue tax.

The chamber of commerce crowd neves complain about the interest we have to pay on bonds.

The owner of real estate never complains about high rents.

The meat trust never complains about the high cost of living.

These people do not complain about these taxes because they get them.

The class for whom taxes are used is always in favor of high taxes.

And so the Socialists are in favor of high taxes—whenever they are used solely for the benefit of the workers.

The farmer would not object to a tax with which to build a railroad to transport his products at cost.

The wage worker would not object to a tax to provide him a pension in his old age.

And so the question which should interest the taxpayer is not how high the taxes are, but how they are distributed.

Through taxation, the worker can provide for himself many comforts at much less expense than by individual purchase.

The schooling of his children costs much less in this way.

It enables him to send a letter thousands of miles for two cents.

It is co-operation, and co-operation is cheaper than individualism.

If the worker by spending a thousand dollars in taxes will get more out of it for himself than by spending it individually, he will gladly pay the tax.

What he objects to is paying the thousand dollars for the benefit of some one else who doesn't work.

Out of the two thousand dollars he now pays annually for private and public taxes he gets almost nothing in return.

It is the mission of the Socialist party to see that he gets it all in return.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

BOOSTERS' COLUMN.

I had the pleasure last week of conversing with a number of our circulation boosters, and it was both amusing and inspiring to note the different plans they used in landing subs. One comrade, who is a railroader, starts a conversation with a man and gradually leads up his talk until he gets it to the subject of Socialism. He then asks him to subscribe, showing him a sample of the paper. With few exceptions, he either gets the money or a good prospect. If it is a prospect, he puts the name on a piece of paper and opposite the name the exact time that he is to call and get the money. At the appointed time he is Johnny on the Spot. He almot invariably lands his victim. If he don't get him the first time, he makes life so confounded miserable for the poor wretch by constantly calling on him at the appointed time, tha the finally subscribes just to get rid of him. By working this system, this comrade always has a list with 25 or 30 prospects, and never fails to land a few of them each week.

Another comrade makes out a list of his fellow-workmen in the shops who he thinks will subscribe and makes it his business to call on them at their home the evening of pay day. This is a system that never fails of getting results.

Nearly every Booster has his own particular syste mof getting subscribers and they are all resultant of much good.

That one magic word in the last paragraph describes these comrades' reasons for success. That one word is system.

Let us organize, comrades, in the ward branches. Let us learn to do our work systematically, and then carry the work of system right down to each individual comrade. To you thousands of comrades, whether you are red-card members or not, it is your duty to attend the meeting of your ward branch, and we want to impress this upon you, that if you want to know what it means to be extended the right-hand of fellowship, that you must attend a Socialist meeting, as you will never get it anywhere else in these degenerate days of the rule of gold.

You have nothing we want except your good-will and comradeship. Determine that you will come out next week. Fill up your ward branch meetings and lets start things going right next week.

Dont fail at every opportunity, Boosters, to land every possible subscriber you can next week.

Revolutionary "Bill" Patterson of Toledo pauses long enough to remark that The Columbus Socialist is the best Socialist newspaper in Ohio. We admit it, Bill; come again.

Comrade Bubb of Dundas, O., is raising some smoke down among the farmers. He puts three new ones on the list, and, from all indications, there will be more anon.

Comrade Kols subscribes and brings another sinner up to the mourners' bench with him. Good work.

Comrade Marquette of the Tenth is doing nice work with our combination offer of The Socialist and The Appeal. Comrade Marquette is a good, class-conscious, hard-working Socialist, and is directing his efforts along the lines of education of his fellow-workers.

Comrade Ebright of the Sixteenth never lets a week pass by without sending one or more. His donation this week is two.

Since "everybody's doin' it," the following comrades got into the limelight with one or more to their credit: Comrades Kimball, Evans, Chvatal, Biery, Bonsall, Sharkey, Zorn, Delay, Marx, Varner, Ingram, Fries, Southard, Smith, Johnson, Thress, Konrad, Way, Dean, Bentz, Courtright, Richter, Wallace, Wheatley, Kinsell, Priller, Fries, Fisher, Bates, Clark, Rout, McQueen, Klopfenstein, Wells, Rickey.

Don't fail to purchase from our advertisers and use the Red Ticket. This is a powerful weapon, which we must not neglect.

Everybody pull together next week and make a record of which we can all be proud. On to Victory!

C. & E SHOE FACTORY HORRIBLE DEATH TRAP

Night Fire Averted Awful Sacrifice of Human Lives Another Sample of Capitalistic Methods.

The C. & E. Shoe factory located on East Fulton street burned to the ground last week.

It has been reported that the building was condemned, yet it was being used every day and from 300 to 400 men, women and girls worked there daily. An evening paper said, had the fire taken place in the day time there would surely have been a terrible loss of life.

Can you beat that for gall? Human beings allowed to work in a building so unsafe that the night watchman was unable to get out after he had discovered the fire. Can you account for this?

If this building had been a barn and was so situated that the fire insurance companies considered it a danger to surrounding property and the people had complained of its being a menace to private property, our State fire marshal would have ordered it torn down instanter. Why?

Because it would save money and money is the thing to be desired. Life, human life, we mean is cheap. In conversation with a captain of one of the fire companies he said "we reached the fire in 31 minutes. The floors were falling. Had the fire burned slower in the start some poor fire laddies would now be cold in death."

Another fireman told the writer he had many times visited that building and he always trembled when he left it for fear it would catch fire in the day time. Another fireman interviewed said that there are from 50 to 75 buildings in the down town district as bad if not worse.

Who is responsible for this condition of affairs? We have building codes, State fire laws, insurance underwriters, yet some people are able to get by with almost any kind of a shack. Is life so cheap that we cannot get protection? Homes of the poor are ordered repaired or torn down, barns are condemned, yet rich and influential citizens who have the "interest" of Columbus at heart are permitted to use a building that is a menace to life.

We members of the Working Class protest against this condition of affairs. We demand that the proper officials get busy and see that the buildings now in use are properly equipped or torn down.

The Working Class have long endured this thing. You have built shacks for us to live in where sanitation is almost impossible. We demand now that you spend some of your unearned increment to fix up or rebuild these factories in accordance with the laws of the city and State.

We are not going to beg you to do it; we are going to demand it and back of that demand lies a power which you, Mr. Official, Mr. Capitalistic Debaucher of Officials, must some day reckon. Don't think that the Working Class will simply submit to all your atrocities. We demand justice and we are going to have it.

WOMAN'S DIRECTORY

The Woman's Local Committee meets every Wednesday evening at 15½ East Gay Street. Every woman invited to come.

MAY DAY CELEBRATION.

The May Day celebration, under the auspices of the Campaign Committee of the Socialist Party, at Olentangy Park, Sunday (tomorrow), is in honor of a custom adopted in England and on the continent by the Working Class of taking a holiday with parades and meetings on the first day of May. We in Columbus, are either looking for work or so busy at work that we cannot stop on a week day, hence our Sunday celebration.

The Socialist Dramatic Club will reproduce "Under the Lash" at the theater in Olentangy Park in the afternoon. This club needs no commendation for its work is first class in every way. The original cast will participate Sunday.

In the evening Comrade Emil Seidel, Mayor of Milwaukee, will speak at the same place. Comrade Seidel will tell all about Milwaukee and the victorious defeat sustained by the Socialists there.

Let everybody come and enjoy a day of rest and pleasure.

THIRTEENTH WARD.

Beginning Tuesday evening, May 7, the Thirteenth Ward Branch will meet each Tuesday evening instead of Thursday, as heretofore.

R. H. REED, Rec. Sec.

SOCIETY NOTE.

The Democratic Glee Club will give an entertainment at the Colonial Theater next Monday evening. It is expected that the house will be crowded, as, we are informed, all city employes are being compelled to buy tickets.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank all the friends and neighbors for their kind assistance and floral offerings during our bereavement in the death of our beloved daughter, Clara E.

MR. AND MRS R. L. KAZIE,

LOCAL COLUMBUS.

Local Columbus, in joint session Monday night, passed a resolution from Tenth Ward instructing delegates to National Convention to work for a provision in the National Constitution allowing speakers not over $5.00 per day and not over $8.50 per day expenses.

Passed a resolution that it was the sense of Local Columbus that the delegates to the National Convention be instructed to work for an industrial form of organization.

A motion to indorse the I. W. W was voted down unanimously.

A collection to defray the expenses of the delegates to the National Convention from this district was taken up.

A motion was adopted that all ward branches desiring to give an entertainment at which an admission fee is charged, must first get the consent of Local Columbus or the C. C. C.

The meeting was addressed for five minutes by Comrade Jack Beery, state organizer, who is doing good work on the road.

Comrades can buy the "Leader" and "Dove Brands" hats at The Liberty, 198-200 East Main Street. These are the hats sold by Comrade Nate Rickey, formerly of Columbus, now residing in Portsmouth.

SMASH THE CIVIC CENTER.

The Retail Merchants' Association is flooding the city with cards and leaflets boosting the Civic Center proposition. Not a single piece of literature on the subject submitted by this association bears the label of the Allied Printing Trades Crafts. It looks as though the promoters of the Civic Center belong to the same class as the scab Chamber of Commerce, which backed the Park Commission plan one year ago. The members of the working class, whether organized or not, are suspicious of any bunch that does not recognize the toilers.

The Civic Center, involving the expenditures of millions of dollars, does not appeal to the workers of Columbus with any degree of force.

SMASH THE CIVIC CENTER.

THE PROPOSED CIVIC CENTER

The bond issue for $325,000 for the purchase of a site bounded by Third, State, Fourth and Broad Streets, excepting for sentiment's sake, Trinity Church and in its hazy indefiniteness, the Y. M. C. A. building, and maybe other parcels that we know not of, is too indefinite to even command serious thought from intelligent voters at the primary to be held May 23rd.

What favored few of the real estate speculators are to "whack up" the $325,000?

The property is appraised for taxation at $1,103,332.00. Then what "dab" of the same will $325,00000 purchase? And who skims the cream?

We need no Tarko Seloe palace for the "Little Father" of Columbus.

The whole marble palace arrangement is as unnecessary as the bond issue for a City Prison of two years ago. There will not be as many human beings caged like rats in a trap in the future and marble palaces and prisons will alike be as unnecessary. The time to stop Russianizing Columbus is right now! T. G.

STATE CONVENTION

tal imprisonment of those workers on the ridiculous charge of accessory before the fact of the murder of a comrade in the struggle for better conditions.

We demand for them a fair and immediate trial and pledge both moral and financial support in the efforts to gain their release.

Whereas, It is of great importance to the Socialist movement that the children of Socialist families be kept within the sphere of Socialist thought and influence, while being given opportunity for wholesome recreation and enjoyment; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the twelfth annual convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, That the organization of young people's Socialist leagues be approved and encouraged, and that the attention of the various locals of the State be drawn to this matter through the State Bulletin.

Whereas, The craft union movement has been largely rendered impotent because of its lack of solidity and its antiquated methods.

Whereas, Industrial progress has almost universally substituted large scale production for small scale production; and,

Whereas, The principles of industrial unionism are now made absolutely necessary for the protection and advancement of the working class;

Tehrefore, be it Resolved, by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That the membership of the party in this State be urged to recommend to the working class the principles of industrial unionism without the indorsement of any particular national organization.

CONVENTION COMMITTEES.

The following committees were elected by the convention:

CREDENTIALS—G. A. Storck, Lorain; C. B. Tegnor, Cambridge; Wm. Kensinger, Barberton; J. A. Kays, East Liverpool; W. C. Bates, Columbus; John Herman, Canton; Jerry Allen, Cincinnati; Wm. Patterson, Toledo.

PLATFORM—Peter Kinnear, Columbus; Isador Ladoff, Cleveland; A. B. Hollenbaugh, Fostoria; Frank Prevey, Akron; L. A. Zitt, Cincinnati; Tom Clifford, Cleveland.

RESOLUTIONS—G. A. Storck, Lorain; Josephine Bates, Toledo; E. E. Rimbach, Elyria; Geo. Bundy, Warren; E. B. Lewis, Columbus.

ORGANIZATION AND PROPAGANDA—Wm. Bessemer, Cleveland; J. B. Sharkey, ————; M. J. Beery, Crestline; Wm. Patterson, Toledo; J. L. Smith, Springfield; J. J. White, Toronto.

NOMINATIONS FOR PARTY OFFICERS.

STATE SECRETARY—G. A. Storck, Lorain; Joseph C. Schawe, Columbus; C. O. Beum, Mt. Vernon; E. A. McPherron, Lima; C. M. Brownfield, Steel; J. F. Dennison, New Philadelphia; E. A. Sidley, Ashtabula; Dan McCartan, Coshocton.

STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—Peter Kinnear, Columbus; H. Yost, Springfield; Josephine Bates, Toledo; G. D. Eynon, Cambridge; J. F. Dennison, New Philadelphia; L. A. Zitt, Cincinnati; C. M. Priestap, Lima; F. G. Strickland, Dayton; F. L. Martin, Marietta; Joseph Myers, Hamilton; C. E. Ruthenberg, Cleveland; Wm. Patterson, Zanesville; Margaret Prevey, Akron; R. S. Moore, Cincinnati; E. E. Rimbach, Elyria; J. H. Henderson, Columbus; Tom Clifford, Cleveland; Robt. Johnson, Piqua; A. M. Graham, Middletown; Thos. Williams, Youngstown; E. E. Dawson, Springfield; A. B. Hollenbaugh, F. N. Robertson, Fostoria; M. J. Beery, Crestline; Scott Wilkins, St. Marys; H. Mesnard, Cincinnati; Fred Bolts, St. Marys; W. G. Evans, Zanesville; W. E. Boynton, Ashtabula; Dan McCartan, Coshocton; E. P. Kuhn, Findlay; Chas. McAfee, Toronto; J. A. Kays, East Liverpool; Robley Clark, Kenton.

STATE CONSTITUTION.

The State Constitution of the party was amended and copies of it will be sent to locals for ratification.

Socialist officials will be forced to consult with the party branches, municipal or political subdivisions, before making appointments, and these appointments will have to be confirmed if the provisions on an amended section are carried out.

Persons seeking nominations will find it more difficult in the future to conform with the provisions of another amended section. It is that none shall be nominated as a candidate to an elective office who, within the three years previous, has been selected by any other organization as a candidate or received an appointment from any other organization.

Constitutional Delegate Speaks.

Harry D. Thomas addressed the delegates Friday morning while they were waiting for the reports from the credentials committee. He told them of the measures the constitutional convention had adopted and urged the convention to take a stand for the adoption at the polls of certain proposals which the Socialists favor.

And now it appears we are going to eat Standard Oil. It has been discovered that the fat in the oil, when mixed with other ingredients, is a good substitute for butter. You may not know you are eating Standard Oil, but the probabilities are that in the near future when you buy butter it will have the brand of John D. Rockefeller invisibly stamped upon it.

The free speech fight of the Socialists at Manchester, N. H., has been won. The bosses running the town finally got the idea through their thick skulls that suppression of free speech was making Socialists too fast. Then they backed down.

The other day a Pennsylvania judge sentenced a man to five years in the penitentiary for stealing fifty cents. Charley Morse, who stole fifteen million dollars, was pardoned by Taft after serving a year in luxurious quarters in the Federal Prison in Atlanta. That is what we are told is justice.

The Socialist Party appeals to the workingmen to join them and assist to bringing about the heritage of the oppressed and the downtrodden. But the workers would rather delude themselves by the false cry of patriotism and American institutions, the stitutions, the strings of which are held by the masters of wealth.

Religious fanatics make the claim that some Socialists are atheists. Very true. But Socialism is not the private idea of a few men. We know of some clergymen being in jail for various offenses, but don't hold the church responsibble or accuse it of fostering criminality.

CONTRACT BUZZARDS HANG ON AT THE OHIO PEN.

The buzzards that have fattened and amassed millions from convict labor at the Ohio Penitentiary seem to have a new lease of life. Three times it has been given out [redacted] Governor Harmon's state board of administration had ended the contract system at the Pen. They still hang on. President Thurman, of the board, the ignoble son of a worthy sire, stands with the state house gang who are trying to nominate Deacon Harmon for President of the United States.

Thurman on Tuesday would not set a definite time for termination of contract labor. He said that it couldn't end in less than 60 days.

Thurman admitted that his board is violating the Wertz law, which abolished convict labor at the Pen.

"It's better that the 615 convicts now employed on contracts be at work there than in the idle house," said Thurman.

For months the state board has been considering plans for starting state industries to give employment to convicts, but little headway has been made.

The concerns now employing convict labor in the Pen are the Columbus Bolt Works and the E. B. Lanman Company. The contract of the bolt works expired Feb. 11, 1911. The Lanman contract ran out Oct. 1, 1910. The state gets $438.75 every day for the use of the 615 by the contractors.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NATIONAL CONVENTION SOCIALIST PARTY

All is Ready for Great Gathering of Delegates Elected by the Working Class

By J. L. Engdahl.

Special Correspondence.

Chicago, Ill., April 27.—One week more and American Socialism will be tuning up in earnest for the opening of the 1912 National Convention of the Socialist Party at Indianapolis, Indiana.

From every corner of the land 293 delegates are beginning to bend their attention toward the Hoosier metropolis, where the gavel falls on Sunday morning, May 12th, at 10 o'clock.

In the meantime the great rank and file of the organization, which is now fast approaching the 150,000 mark, is passing resolutions and deciding upon instructions for those whom they have chosen to represent them.

From present indications more delegates will come to the National Convention under instructions from those at home than has been the case on any previous occasion. This is evidence of a healthy discussion of the big problems that confront the national organization.

Many of these national problems have been taken up and threshed out at State Socialist conventions that have been held in various parts of the nation, so that the sentiment of the membership on various questions can be ascertained to a certain extent.

Such matters as the relation of the Socialist Party towards the economic movement of the working class, the establishment of a national publishing plant by the Socialist Party, the continuance of the National Socialist Lyceum Bureau, the attitude of the party toward municipal affirs, especially the commission and non-partisan forms of city government, immigration, co-operation, farmers' program, education and the woman's problems seem to be foremost in occupying the attention of Socialists everywhere, and will no doubt be the subject of many resolutions that will be introduced into the convention.

The past few days has seen the sending out of printed copies of nearly all the reports that will be submitted to the convention, to the delegates, who will thus be given an opportunity to read and study them before the convention opens. These reports will no doubt be an aid to the discussion on convention matters that will take place in various party locals before the delegates leave for the scene of action.

The National Secretary will leave Chicago for Indianapolis on Thursday, May 9th, the National Executive Committee being called to meet the day following. The Woman's National Committee is scheduled to hold its pre-convention meeting opening on Thursday.

This is expected to bring a good number of the delegates to Indianapolis two and three days before the convention opens. It is expected that the fraternal delegates of the foreign language sections of the Socialist Party will also hold several meetings at Indianapolis before the opening of the convention.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

Carl Legien, Socialist member of the German Reichstag, arrived in the United States on April 16th and started on his lecture tour under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor. It is expected that he will visit the national convention of the Socialist Party on May 14th.

National Committee Motion No. 3, providing for an appropriation of $1000 for the victims of the McCurtain (Okla.) mine disaster, upon which vote closed April 24th, was adopted by the following vote: Yes 26, no 22. An amendment providing that the sum appropriated be $350 was defeated by the following vote: Yes 11, no 38. Twenty-five members of the committee did not vote on either the motion or amendment.

Pearson's Magazine offers to send to any local or branch of the party, free except postage, a bunch of the April number of the magazine containing the first of Allan L. Benson's series of articles explaining Socialism. A large envelope will be furnished for each copy, with appropriate printed matter on it, so that they can be enclosed and distributed. As there is only a limited number left, they do not want to send more than about two hundred to any one local or branch. The postage is a little less than one cent per copy. Remit to The Pearson Publishing Company, New York City, and they will send you the number of copies on which the amount will pay the postage. Old magazines are usually sold to the junk man, but, upon the suggestion of Comrade Benson, this method is taken to place them where they will work for the cause.

The list of delegates to the national convention is being mailed out from the National Office to the delegates and to the party press. Also the reports of the Committee on Immigration, the Committee on Education, the Sub-Committee on Rules, the Polish Section, the South Slavic Section, the Italian Section, the Scandinavian Section, the Lyceum Department, and the National Secretary. The other reports will be sent out as soon as they are received and printed.

The press is now running on the second edition of "The Growing Grovery Bill," which will comple the million copies.

State Secretary Stewart, of Idaho, reports fourteen locals organized in that State during the month of March.

Many Socialist editors have already received with enthusiasm the plan to distribute free copies of Socialist publications to the delegates atending the Indianapolis convention. The plan is to have each publication, daily or weekly, send enough copies, about 300, so that tehy can be placed on the table of every delegate. All those wishing to join in this plan send bundles to J. L. Engdahl, National Socialist Press Correspondent, care of the Socialist Convention, Tomlinson Hall, Indianapolis, Ind., and they will be properly cared for.

The National Office has printed another addition of twenty-five thousand copies of the price list of books, pamphlets, leaflets and supplies. A bunch of these will be sent to any local, branch or comrade who will carefully place them in the hands of persons likely to send in orders.

State Secretary Kriger of Montana reports eighteen locals organized in that state during the month of March.

Comrades desiring addresses of local or branch secretaries can save time and correspondence by writing direct to the state secretaries, instead of the national secretary.

The Socialist Book Store, Seattle, Washington, has ordered ten thousand copies of "The Growing Grocery Bill."

THE INDIANA MOVEMENT.

Speakers' Dates.

William Houston: Farmersburg, May 1; Shelburn 2, Hymera 3, Sullivan 4, Glendora 5, Dugger 6, Linton 7, Coalmont 8, Jasonville 9, Vicksburg 10, Paxton 11.

A good list of new locals arrived this week. At New Middletown, in Harrison County, the comrades have organized with 12 members, and a majority of them are farmers.

State Chairman Henry spoke at Zionsville, Boone County, with the result that an application from that town comes in with 1. signatures.

Next is a local of 13 members organized at Emporia in Madison County by Comrade Farmer. This county has a fine list of branches and will poll a very large increase in the county vote.

From Petersburg in Pike County comes an application for a charter with 18 signatures. Here the county has an organization started and will be in fine shape for the big campaign.

The Socialists in Crawfordsville have had a hard struggle for years to maintain a local, but it has been revived again and a meeting is being arranged for the state secretary to address.

Local La Porte seems to have all the good things come that way. The latest in this line is that the Knights of Columbus have secured that notorious adventurer, David Goldstein, a convert (?) to the Catholic faith and a former member of the Socialist party, to lecture in that city to offset the effect of the Socialist lyceum course given during the winter. Through a notice in the local press, the comrades heartily welcome Goldstein and welcome the K. of C. for aiding them in their propaganda. They also express their willingness to debate with Mr. Goldstein if he is willing to accept. A short sketch of Goldstein and Martha Moore Avery would furnish interesting reading for the clerical politicians who are allowing Dave to rake in the shekels by his lectures.

The Socialists of the Twelfth Congressional District held their convention at Garrett on April 21st and nominated W. F. Dibble of Fort Wayne for Congress. Comrade Dibble is a railroader and will put up a vigorous campaign.

The small local organized at Butler now has 37 members, and the comrades are getting down to active work and have a bright future.

The State Executive Committee met at headquarters on Sunday, April 21st, and considered a number of plans for a big campaign. It is planned to make the campaign the biggest and most effective ever conducted in the central states; but its magnitude will depend on the amount that will be contributed to the state campaign fund. Lists are being sent to all parts of the state this week and are all returnable by June 5th. It is planned to raise the fund with the least possible delay; and as soon as the fund is in, definite announcement will be made of the tour of our candidate for governor, Stephen M. Reynolds. In the meantime the comrades are urged to collect every cent possible on these lists. Let no Socialist or sympathizer escape. Give as much as you can. An average of one dollar from each party member alone would enable us to threaten control of the state by either capitalist party. Those who are not party members and see this notice should send for a list if they do not get one.

The Socialist of Texarkana, Tex., says: "The filing of suit for divorce by Mrs. Edmund K. Stallo, wife of a prominent New York lawyer, against her husband brings to mind a little history of the Hanna family. Mrs. Stallo was once the wife of Dan R. Hanna, the only son of Mark Hanna, manager of the Republican campaign in 1896. Dan Hanna is now living with his third wife, having divorced his first two. Two of his wives had been divorced before he married them and two have married since he divorced them, and now one of them has brought suit for divorce again. We'll bet our old straw hat they all oppose Socialism on the ground that it would break up the home.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

This was organized labor's week in the convention. Five proposals introduced by members of the labor group have been passed by large majorities; the injunction proposal was voted down, then reconsidered and placed on the calendar for passage next week. The proposal abolishing contract prison labor was referred back to the labor committee to make some change in its phraseology. The prison labor proposal will pass, but it is difficult at this time to determine just what will be done with the injunction proposal. It seems now as if it will have hard sledding.

Brother Farrell's proposal passed by a vote of 80 to 13. It gives the Legislature the right to fix and regulate the hours of labor, establish a minimum wage and provide for the comfort, health, safety and general welfare of all employees.

The Tetlow proposal, providing for an eight-hour work day on all public work performed by the state or any of its political sub-divisions, passed by a vote of 96 to 10.

Brother Cordes' proposal on Work-Men's Compensation, incorporating the present Workmen's Compensation Law into the organic laws of the state and adding to it compensation for occupational diseases, besides providing that the burden of the expense shall be borne by the industry, received the unanimous vote of the convention, a hundred and three voting for it, none against.

Brother Halencamp's proposal amending the constitution so that the state may establish its own printing plant and manufacture its own supplies, was also passed, the vote being 85 to 2.

Brother Stillwell's proposal providing that laws may be passed to secure mechanics, artisans, laborers, subcontractors and material men their just dues by direct lien upon the property on which they have bestowed labor or furnished material, passed by a vote of 103 to 6.

After an hour and a half of spirited debate, the Thomas proposal to prohibit the sale of prison labor of prison-made goods unless conspicuously marked "prison made," and that the prisoners be employed in manufacturing and raising products for the use of the State institution, was recommitted to the committee on labor, to be reported back after some changes have been made in its phraseology. The real fight on the proposal centered on the question of the prohibition of the sale of prison-made goods unless marked prison made. Brother Thomas declared that 90 per cent of the people who now buy prison-made goods would not buy them if they knew they were prison-made. Mr. Harris of Ashtabula, who favors the contract system, admitted that when a simlar law was in effect some years ago, it nearly put tthe contract system in the penitentiary out of business.

Brother Halencamp's proposal to abolish injunctions was given a test vote without any discussion, and was defeated by a vote of 89 to 39. The vote was then reconsidered and the proposal again placed on the calendar, and will come up for passage some time this week.

Other proposals passed by the convention during the week were No. 7, by Mr. Nye, providing that the extra sessions of the General Assembly can only transact such business as that contained in the Governor's message calling them together; No. 309, by Mr. Taggert, simplyfying the method of amending the constitution through the General Assembly, and providing that the majority of those voting on the amendment shall be sufficient for its adoption instead of as now, a majority of all those voting at the election; No. 169, by Mr. Worthington, providing for Civil Service in the State and all its political subdivisions; No. 72, by Mr. Stokes, for the regulation of corporations. This is in addition to the proposal 174 adopted last week regulating the sale of stocks, bonds and personal property and will go a long way toward putting the fraudulent stock jobbers out of business; No. 304, by Mr. Halfhill, providing for a Court of Common Pleas in each county, and making it possible that one judge can serve both as Common Pleas and Probate judge in those counties with small population, on a vote of the people.

The Recall was killed when Delegate King, of Erie County, voted the indefinite postponement of the proposal and it carried by a vote of 87 to 45. In its place No. 341, by Mr. Dwyer, was adopted, provides that the Legislature may enact laws providing for the prompt removal of public officers and judges. This means, of course, that the Legislature can pass a recall later if so desired.

No. 322, by Mr. Bowdle, provides that the court in the future shall employ experts necessary to give expert testimony in court instead of permitting the party interested in the suits to furnish them. Mr. Bowdle's proposal to abolish divorce was defeated by a vote of 46 to 40, as were also two proposals by Mr. Anderson, one relating to a liberal construction of statutory laws by the courts, and the other providing that no limit should be placed on the amount of damages recoverable for death.

The convention has finally decided to adjourn on May 17th. A recess will be taken on the 3rd of May until the 13th, for the purpose of giving the Committee on Arrangements and the Committee on Phraseology and also the Committee on Submission of the Amendments to the People, a chance to complete their work. The last week will be devoted entirely to a third and final reading of all the measures which have already been passed.

The important proposals still left for the wind up this week are those realting to taxation, home rule for cities, short ballot, contract prison labor, injunctions and one by Mr. Harris dividing the large counties into assembly districts.

LEGISLATIVE SECRETARY.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO WORKERS AND ALL CLASSES OF MECHANICS.

Detroit, Mich., April 20, 1912.

As alluring advertisements have been inserted in the newspapers in various parts of the country, offering special inducements for workingmen to come to the City of Detroit where work and good wages are supposed to be plentiful, we desire to warn any person who might be contemplating a visit to Detroit, expecting these conditions to exist. The truth is, that the exact opposite are the conditions in the City of Detroit at the present writing. There are thousands of workmen unemployed here, and those coming here would only swell that number, besides demoralizing the conditions those who are employed are now working under. Don't be misled by what you see in the daily press. Think the matter over seriously in your own heart and do not be one to flood the city of Detroit with labor where there is no market for it.

Fraternally yours,
THE DETROIT FEDERATION OF LABOR,
Detroit, Mich.

WOMEN FOR CHAUFFEURS.

Washington.—A story comes from Chicago that a number of women are now preparing to pass city examination as chauffeurs, and are to be employed by one of the largest taxicab companies in teh city. There seems to be a desire by employers in every line of business to supplant men with women. Whether this latest innovation will prove successful, of course, remains to be seen. It is apprehended, however, that the women's clubs and other kindred organizations will start an active campaign against the employment of women in this class of labor.

CARMEN UP AGAINST FIGHT.

Washington.—The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen has organized local unions at almost every point of the Great Northern railroad. The company, upon learning that these unions had been organized, issued a circular letter, stating to the members of the Carmen's union that they must either leave their organization or be discharged. An effort was made to secure a conference with the officials, but the representative of the Carmen was refused admittance to the conference, although the State Commissioner of Labor and the President of the State Federation of Minnesota were given an audience. These latter officials, however, were informed that the company would only deal with the carmen and trackmen as individuals. Owing to the stand of the company, complaints have been filed and warrants issued for the arrest of some of the officials of the Great Northern. These officials have been arrested under the anti-blacklisting laws and a trial of the case will shortly be had. In the meantime a number of the men have been discharged.

State Secretary Callery, of Arkansas, reports thirty locals organized in that State during the month of March.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Otto Tallman, whose place of residence is unknown, will take notice that on the 19th day of April, 1912, Anna Tallman filed her petition for divorce in the Court of Common Pleas of Franklin County, Ohio, No. 63068, praying for a divorce from him on the grounds of wilful absence for more than three years, and gross neglect of duty, and the same will be for hearing on and after June 7th, 1912.

Attorney.

GREATER COLUMBUS.

The popular desire to see the North and South Side connected by another great thoroughfare is in keeping with a Greater Columbus that can boast to the outside world that we are more than a "one business street" town.

Get Benefit of Electric Terminals.

The two great terminal stations, steam and electric, both on Third Street, should be connected if the North Side is desirous of obtaining any part of the great influx of buyers brought by the electric terminals into the city each day.

The interurban roads now centering at Third and Rich Streets—and it is most likely that the Columbus, Delaware & Marion will also enter the terminal at this locality as well—carry into the city every day over three thousand people.

The total number of steam passengers per year	1,187,388
The total number of electric passengers per year	1,164,000
The total number of steam passengers per day	3,353
The total number of electric passengers per day	3,188

The electric roads carry about the same number of passengers as the steam roads.

It is the opinion of people experienced here and elsewhere where there has been more attention paid to statistics that the interurbans within the course of five years will show a steady gain over the steam roads in carrying passengers into a city like ours with the strong surburban trend.

Quicker Transportation to North Columbus Vital.

Even the merchants of North Columbus, situated in High Street, would be benefitted if there was another parallel line to High Street giving speedier communication to the North Side than the present slow schedule on High Street endangering many lives daily.

The congestion on High Street is intense today and there is no chance of speedier transportation on that street unless we take some of the cars off that street. This can never be accomplished until we have a parallel thoroughfare.

If our present growth continues, our population in 1920 should be at least 80,000 more than in 1910, which means the present congestion intensified by 40 per cent.

Expand Business Area.

It is believed that the routing of traffic and street cars from High Street to Third tSreet to prevent further congestion on High Street without injuring High Street, will increase the taxable values on Third tSreet, new buildings, lands, etc., two and one-half million dollars within five years. This added duplicate valuation at $1.35, the present tax rate, will yield in new taxes about $34,000. Since $425,000 bonds issued by the city at 4 per cent. require of the city an annual outlay of $17,000, the city itself will be the gainer in revenue of $17,000 without figuring a cent on prospective improvements, in valuations on cross streets connecting High and Third Streets and Third and Fourth.

Let the Toilers Save Time for Home Life.

It is believed by people well versed with transportation problems that the average North Eend citizens should be able to reach his home ten minutes earlier than he does today. This fact in itself, saving ten minutes a day for 300 days in the year, is a privilege that is greater than money can buy, a time for rest and home life.

A FASCINATING GAME.

Comrade Dana P. Varner, 57 Madison Avenue, Newark, Ohio, has invented and printed a very unique and fascinating game entitled, "The Game of Panic and Struggle for Existence." It is easily understood and teaches valuable lessons in regard to to the class struggle now going on. It will be mailed to anyone for 25 cents by addressing the author, or the game can be obtained at the Socialist Reading Room, third floor, 108½ South High Street, Columbus.

RETIRES FROM BUSINESS.

Mr. Robert Jacobs, of the firm of Herskowitz & Jacobs, who, for the past five years, have been conducting the large Department Store, known as "The Liberty," at 198 and 200 East Main Street, will retire from the firm on May 31st.

Both Mr. Jacobs and Mr. Herskowitz were born and raised in Columbus, and have built up a large and successful business.

Mr. Jacobs leaves to join his brother, who is located in the Northwest, where he is now operating stores at Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. Mr. Jacobs will assist his brother in the management of these stores. They also are planning to open another large store at Fargo, North Dakota, this fall.

Mr. Sam J. Herskowitz will continue the business under the same name, "The Liberty," whose Big Dissolution Sale begins on Thursday, May 2nd, announcement of which is made in the columns of this paper.

SEIDEL TELLS ABOUT MILWAUKEE SOCIALISTS

Every Year Shows Gain in Votes Against Combined Old Parties—Methods of Work Followed by the Toilers.

"After we took public office, and did not do anything to hurt anybody we were all right," stated ex-Socialist Mayor Seidel, of Milwaukee, at the May Day celebration at Olentangy Park Sunday evening. "However, after we started after the public service corporations, by compelling the street car company to sprinkle its tracks, placing all public service corporations at their full value on the tax duplicate, insisting on cheaper telephone rates, enforcing factory inspection laws, by insisting that suction fans be placed in buildings and wash and toilet rooms be installed that were modern, condemning and tearing down slum property that was unfit to live in, denying houses of prostitution liquor licenses, then we drew the fire of all the allied forces of property and capitalism, and the word went forth that we must be defeated at all hazard as we were dangerous."

Continuing the speaker graphically told of the garment workers' strike, and how the girl pickets were bullied and mauled by the police force. "Upon notification of these outrages upon the working class I at once sent a letter to the chief of police to at once discontinue these outrages, and give the strikers all the protection as citizens in accordance with their constitutional rights, as against the imported strike-breaking sluggers.

"At once the Wisconsin Legislature, at the behest of the large Milwaukee capitalists, took this matter in hand, and passed a law taking the control of the police department of Milwaukee out of my hands, and placing it in those of a commission, so that in future the police department could again be used to intimidate, browbeat and slug the strikers.

"Therefore you can see that we were doubly dangerous. These factors aroused the capitalists more and more, and for months they were planning how to take the city election, to come out of national politics and make it purely a local issue. This brought about the unholy alliance between the Democrats and Republicans under a non-political local Good Government League. It was a great victory to force these two shams of capitalism into one party, but greater still was our gain of 3000 votes against the opposition lined up against us."

The speaker graphically showed the utter inefficiency of former administrations in keeping accounts and the general affairs of the city upon the Socialists taking office. "We had the house cleaned from the cellar to the garret. We eliminated the grafting contractor, and insisted that the city get a dollar's worth for every dollar expended. We even went further by furnishing the city of Milwaukee the first time in the history a complete inventory of what the city possessed. We then instituted a Bureau of Economy and Efficiency and furnished monthly reports of receipts and expenditures to the citizens of Milwaukee.

"Our opponents never accused us of being dishonest, but they stated that we were idealists and dreamers, in the face of what we had accomplished, but we are coming back, as a great many things that we had undertaken will not bear fruit immediately.

"Individual reformers," continued Seidel, "of the Roosevelt-La Follette type lead us to believe that they can solve all these problems. However, experience has taught that no one term or a hundred individual men can solve these problems. It takes organization of the highest type and that organization is already in the field—the Socialist Party—that alone along political lines can do so."

Sooner or later, the speaker predicted, the working class must break the political power of the capitalist class, "As," he stated, "the working class cannot depend on anyone else but themselves to accomplish anything to their best interests and welfare, therefore," he added in closing, "let us get into and stay in the Socialist Party to fight capitalism and not ourselves."

Comrade Chas. R. Beicher presided and made a brief speech in which he arraigned Detective Burns for polluting the atmosphere of Columbus and slandering Socialists. He said we could answer the church without slandering religion and declared that the Socialists were the only ones who had real reverence for the flag. He denounced as false the report that Socialists dishonered the flag.

Comrade Farrell's Speech.

Comrade D. J. Farrell of Columbus made a short speech in behalf of The Columbus Socialist and urged that the use of the paper would carry the county this fall.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Whereas, at a Socialist meeting held in New York on last Wednesday, May 1st, the American flag was insulted, notwithstanding efforts of known Socialists to prevent the same, and by persons having no connection with, but enemies of Socialism.

And, whereas, the capitalist press, ever eager to distort and misrepresent Socialist principles, as well as the acts of individual Socialists, published said occurrence under headlines calculated to mislead the public into the belief that such insult was the act of Socialists.

And, whereas, the Socialist Party is not the enemy, but the friend of the American flag, and its political purpose and mission are to rescue our flag from the polluting clutches of capitalist greed and to cause it to represent, as was intended by its designers and earliest defenders, truth, not falsehood; man, not mammon; liberty, for the many and not only the few, and a common brotherhood of all creeds, all nations and all men; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Socialists of Columbus present at this meeting, denounce such insult to our national emblem as the act of our enemies; and we also denounce the manner of its publication as a deliberate attempt of the capitalist pres sto misrepresent the truth and to mislead and prejudice the public against the principles of the Socialist Party.

THE MILWAUKEE WAY.

Comrade Seidel said that he did not do the party work in Milwaukee. It was done by the comrades who got up at 4 a. m. and distributed literature. The young men were attracted to the movement as well as the comrades who had been in the fight thirty and forty years. "The Democrats and Republicans are patriots. They love the eagle—the one on the dollars." Christ came for all the people, so does the Socialist Party.

"UNDER THE LASH."

In the afternoon the Socialist Dramatic Club reproduced the stirring labor drama, "Under the Lash." The audience was small, owing to the rain that had fallen for hours, but the comrades of the club bravely faced the adverse conditions.

OUR RESPECT TO BURNS THE 'GREAT DETECTIVE'

William Gives Socialism Another Boost in Alleged Lecture at Memorial Hall

.SnoklirSai a hrdlua hrdlua paaap

Last Friday night Detective William Burns "lectured" at Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, a Catholic organization.

Among the things he said were that Socialists are irreligious, they deny the marriage vows and live like beasts. To take up Mr. Burns' remarks and attempt to refute them would be folly from those who heard him. We learn that they were disguested. Does Mr. Burns think that he can get away with such contemptible lies? Does he reckon on the ignorance of the people in this enlightened age to believe such rot?

We are willing to let such statements from men like Burns go by the board. Another statement he makes is that private detectives are crooks and should not go unhung.

We say all detectives—and, Mr. Burns is a detective—the detective's work is the most obnoxious of any. He will drag his slimy presence into the sacred precincts of the home to maliciously collect "evidence" to convict any one. This he will do for money. We have heard a detective say, "I can convict any one. If I cannot get real evidence, I can manufacture it."

Big Bill Haywood once said in giving his estimation of a detective that "you should take a stick and whittle it down to nothing and then take a fine hair and punch the pith out of it and you can put forty thousand detectives in the cavity and they will rattle, and you can pour them out on your finger nail and the skin of a gnat will make an umbrella for the whole bunch."

Mr. Burns is a detective with a reputation. He, in his position, has no right to say things which he knows to be lies unless he is following out the tricks of the trade. We are living in a beastly system, which demands that we act like beasts in order to live. Immorality, crime, filth, graft, lying, murder are rampant.

The church has been on the job for 2000 years and is compelled to confess that things are getting worse. What are you going to do about it? Are you going to stand up in defense of this system? Do you, Mr. Burns, believe that men are "criminals" because they want o be? If you do you have no place on the lecture platform, for it has been proven by the best criminologist that crime is not inherent in man and that good is predominant in the proper environment.

Let me say in conclusion, that all the lies and willification of detectives, preachers, lawyers, doctor, grafters, office-seekers, individualist, monkey shooters, progressive reactionaries, Goldsteins and their like will avail nothing. Socialism is right reasoning from the rightp remise. It is law and order, cause as deffect. It is creation by disintegration. It tears down only that it may build better. It is the conservation of energy by the coordination of effort and need as opposed to production in competition for profit. Socialism is commonsense and common decency.

It will prevail. Batter all you want, you prostitutes of capitalism, but all your battering will avail you nothing. Love, liberty and truth will prevail, and on this earth we, the Socialists of the world, will establish the Industrial Democracy.

ADOPTS PARCELS POST PROVISION.

Washington.—A provision in the post-office appropriation bill provides for a limited parcels post to be operated only on rural routes. It restricts the delivery of packages to rural routes, but allows delivery from one route to another where the two routes center in the same post-office. The rate agreed to is 6 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each additional pound up to 11 pounds, this being the maximum weight that can be carried, and a general parcels post service of 12 cents a pound for 11 pound is also provided. The rural route parcels post has been adopted as an experiment and a provision is incorporated in the bill to appoint a committee of three Representatives and three Senators to study all the bills that have been presented on the subject and present a report to the next session of Congress.

WAVE OF REVOLT REACHES OHIO PEN

Convicts Strike Against Obeying the Orders to Break State Law by Contract Work

A strike at the Penitentiary. Why? It does seem that the wave o frevolt which is sweeping over the country has at last reached the Ohio penal institution on Spring Street.

Can it be possible that a strike should take place in the place.

We were always under the impression that penal institutions were places of reform but it does seem that they have been turned into places of repression.

Can it be possible that machinery used in the production of things in the factories ther are dangerous? Does not the safety appliance law reach the institution? It seems not.

The machine of which the convicts complain is known as the finger snatcher. Several convicts a month are injured on the machinery in what is known as the bolt factory.

Are the laws being obeyed? It seems not.

Who is to blame? Oh, nobody! What's the law? The Wertz law provided that all contracts must cease something like a year ago, why have they not ceased? They wanted to work up some stock and it would be better to violate the law than let 600 convicts be idle. Why should they be idle? Why have they not installed plants to take care of the idle convicts, plants to manufacture the things needed by our several State Institutions? Why, did you say? All explained in one word, Profit.

Profits? Who gets the profits? Not the convicts; not the State. Then who? The contractors who pay 60 cents per day for the labor power of convicts.

Why should we, the great Commonwealth of Ohio, allow our unfortunate, for unfortunates they are, to be maimed, and beaten by a boss whose only object is profit and not reformation? We send these men and women there, not to punish them primarily, but to reform them. If we are going to add to teh punishment the taking off of a finger then it is time some one took a hand.

These men were sent here supposedly for disobeying the laws of the land. How about the prison oriciels? Are they not now disobeying the Wertz law? Can they with impunity laugh at the law to permit a few bloated plutes to make profits? It does seem that you, Mr. Official, are inconsistent in your teachings. You punish a man for breaking a law and then compel him to help you break a law.

To our way of thinking there is a big moral question involved here and that question must be solved.

Ninety per cent. of the prisoners entering the Pen are from the ranks of the working class and they are compelled to do the rough work.

We are glad that three convicts have struck and we hope that more will follow and get rid of those contractors.

Reform those prisoners and at least send them forth into the world with all their limbs and faculties when you have finished your work of "Reform." Adopt the book instead of the lash. Give these unfortunates a chance at least. The cause of crime is out that men are criminal but because the system is criminal as we have shown by the deliberate violation of the Wertz law.

The remedy is to change the system. Adopt a system that will give all an equal chance. Then crime, disease and all the horrors that are inherent in the profit system will disappear never to appear again. Socialism is the remedy—the next step.

THE FLAG QUESTION FROM AN AMERICAN CITIZEN

Protests Against Hysterical Ranting of Pretended Patriots

Columbus, May 4th, 1912.

To Editor "The Socialist":

Sir—I am a Socialist. Most of my people were Republicans and no family in the country can prove a better record for loyalty to the Union and the flag. I trace my lineage back to my great-great-grandfather, who was a Revolutionary soldier. While I do not belong to the Sons of the American Revolution I have a sister who is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which proves that I am eligible to membership in the Sons of the American Revolution.

Knowing the true aims and purposes of the Socialist Party I deplore any effort on the part of any one to make it appear that the Socialist Party is in the least degree disrespectful to or of the American flag. I helped decorate the Federation of Labor Hall for the recent Socialist State Convention and the first flag placed in that hall was the Stars and Stripes, and a sad day it would have been for any thug hired by Capitalism or Romanism to have torn down that flag. I also helped to place the emblem of the Socialist Party in that convention hall. Both flags are owned by the Socialist Party of Columbus and both were carefully taken to headquarters after the convention and laid away for future use.

Mention is made, editorially, in today's Dispatch of the trouble in San Diego, California, where men were made to kiss the flag. There is some dispute as to who was wrong in that controversy, but to compel men to kneel down and kiss the flag will not encourage respect or love for that emblem. If a crime had been committed the guilty party should be tried, and if convicted, punished in the legal way. There is no constitutional provision or state law to punish any crime, even treason, by compelling the accused to kiss the flag, even after conviction. Those who took the law in their own hands and compelled these men to do the unheard-of thing, for which there was no law or authority, are the Anarchists, ten times over more so, rather than the men who kissed the flag.

The men who commit such outrages and those who uphold them in it, even though he be an editor of a daily paper, are enemies to our country.

Those men had the same right to free speech as the editor has to the free press, and a mighty howl would go up if some power would try to muzzle the freedom of the Dispatch, to criticise the Socialists.

The flag is but the emblem of free speech, and any man or set of men who hide behind the folds of the flag to oppress his fellow-men or prevent the very thing for which the emblem stands, is more the enemy of his country than the other, even though that other may be technically guilty. No man should permit the prostitution of the flag by hirelings and thugs even to provoke a fight between the Socialist Party and labor unions.

It is now positively known that the trouble in New York, Seattle and San Diego was provoked by hired thugs for the express purpose of creating discord within the ranks of the Socialist Party and the labor organizations. It is a forlorn hope. The Socialist movement has gathered such momentum that no power, however strong, can stay its progress. Every knock is a boost. Every Socialist jailed means a hundred more voters for its cause. Every Socialist discharged fro mwork has the more time to work for Socialism and the better reason.

W. C. BATES, Attorney.

Rip Van Winkle Karb don't know that it has been twenty years since he went to sleep, and that the "World do move."

Brother Clark is saying some real rude things about Taylor. Go to it, boys, we will meet one of you later.

Charity is like feeding a starving dog with the meat from his own tail.

Socialism is love—free love like that of the mother for her child. Capitalism is hired love, graded from a glass of beer to millions of dollars, according to station and degeneracy.

See Beck & Dollison's piano ad. in another part of this paper.

SOMETHING ABOhT CIVIC CENTER.

Is the civic center a necessity? The Journal and Dispatch, backed by the interests, say that it is and then loudly knock the Third Street viaduct. Why?

It is a well known fact that the Journal and Dispatch have at all times stood in favor of any project that the big interest in the city demanded, and are as consistently opposed to any of the demands of the working class. This is such a well known fact that comment on the editorials appearing in those papers is simply a waste of effort. The people of Columbus are so well acquainted with their tactics that they are sure to vote no on anything that they propose and yes on what they oppose.

At the present time they are exerting every effort to induce the voters of Columbus to vote in favor of a civic center, which is by no means a necessity, and of no possible benefit to the working class, but of immense value to the real estate speculators, land sharks and curbstone politicians. And I want to say right here that if the Journal and Dispatch cannot propose and work into office anything better than the present occupants of the civic institutions, their present quarters are good enough.

Third Street Viaduct.

We do not need a civic center at this time, but we do need a viaduct across Third Street. The Journal says not at his time; on the grounds that the city cannot afford the price. But, ye gods! what will a civic center cost and of what value will it be to the common people. The construction of the Third Street viaduct will cost the city less than one-third of the cost of a civic center. And when completed will be of use to every man, woman and child in the city. It will give us another street running from end to end of the city, making transportation speedier and safer, lessen the danger to women and children of meeting with accident through over-crowding of street cars on High Street in the shopping district, give the city a chance to expand, spreading the business district, thereby getting away from the string town on the pike reputation that Columbus bears all over the country.

Yes, fellow workers, you will do well to read the J. and D. and vote accordingly. What they want vote no on, and feel sure that you are voting to kill something that would be of no good to you. What they oppose vote yes on and you will know that you voted for something for the common people.

Vote yes on Third Street viaduct.

AFRAID OF THE TRUTH ARE UHRICHSVILLE PAPERS.

Comrade White's Article That He Could Not Get Published at Home.

[The following article from Comrade White was refused publication in the local papers of Uhrichsville, for the reason that he had them cornered in his argument.]

Uhrichsville, March 26, 1912.

I would like a little more of your valuable space to try to convince you and the readers of the Chronicle that I was not mistaken in what I claimed in my other article on the "Boy Scouts," that it is a military organization, and that I quoted from the right Scout manual. I have in my possession two, both published by Doubeday Page & Company, New York; one in 1910, the other in 1911, both the same, so far as the subjects mentioned in my last article, and both by the same author, the late one a little more elaborate in the thing pretended to be taught to boys, with a full page cartoon and advertisement of Scout rifles, two sizes, which proves conclusively that there comes a time when fire arms are to be used to break up a strike, as the boy Scouts were used in DesMoines City not long ago to break the bootblack strike by the business men and preachers of that city. During the past year the "Open Letter" and other Socialist papers have done such good work in showing up the Boy Scout soldier movement that many of their societies were destroyed or disbanded and hundreds of thousands of boys and their parents were warned in time to escape the trap. To try to overcome this serious damage and with a desire to make more little "tin soldiers," the crafty, dollar marked subsidizers of the movement imported General Baden Powell, of England, he of the trained man killers who directed the brutal war of the English capitalists against the peaceful and honest Boers in South Africa, to come to the United States to boom this scab factory and school of developing military murder machines. Their National Executive Secretary, Mr. West, and military man killer, Powell, have made a tour of the whole country in behalf of the Scout movement. They have one joke which both of them tell at every meeting. It is this: Mr. West says, "No militarism exists in the Boy Scouts," and General Powell says, "It is not a military movement."

Again, take their other official publications. In Bulletin No. 5, pages 27 and 28, the military spirit and purpose of the organization is taught, and in Bulletin No. 3, page 6, it says: "Do not bar military tactics. The military virtue of obedience is a Scout virtue." In fact their very name, Scout, is military in meaning. Moreover, the uniform of the Boy Scouts in the United States is that of the American soldier; in England that of the English soldier; in Germany that of the German soldier, etc. A few months ago the Associated Press dispatches said: "The Emperor of Russia and his cabinet are pleased with the "Boy Scouts" and it is understood that the military training provided will awaken interest in the army at an early age, and thus tend to facilitate the transformation of raw recruits into perfect fighting machines. Hopes are also entertained that the early awakening of enthusiasm for the army will operate against the spread of Socialism among the youth of Russia." And last July dispatches from Berlin quoted Emperor William and military men of Germany as saying that "Germany's fighting efficiency can thus (through the Boy Scouts) be augmented greatly, an dthe war spirit strengthened. In the Morning News, published at Moosejaw Sas-Katchewan, Canada, under date of November 15, 1911, I find an official lecture on The Second Scout Law, by Douglass E. Gibson, W. S. M. This Second Scout Law as given by this Scout master is: "A Scout is loyal to the king and his officers, and to his parents, his country and his employers." I will make a few choice quotations from Mr. Gibson's address. Here they are: "A loyal Scout appreciates the privilege of being what he is, a faithful subject of a righteous king." "Now of what else does loyalty consist? Simply a quiet obedience and attitude toward some person or persons set in authority over you, coupled with a love and reverence, that will cause you to lay down your last drop of blood in protecting him, or life for him, or them, or lose your privilege to witness." "Loyalty to the king may bring on you the curses of your friends." "Loyalty to your employer may cost you your fortune, but nevertheless you must be loyal. Be loyal to your priest or your preacher." "Never let anybody say anything that would hurt the feelings or character of anybody who is your superior, but stick up for them in all things: the same applies to a cause and if a person says anything against the king, your officers, your parents, your country or your employer, use your own discretion as to whether you treat him with contempt or give him a black eye and a bloody nose, but do one or the other."

And this is signed by Douglass H. Gibson, W. S. M. And this the movement the preachers and Y. M. C. A.'s are backing, and that is what is being taught in Canada, one of the countries ruled by the king of the country General Powell comes from.

What do you workers think of it? Would you let your boy join such an organization and call such knaves master? In the Boy Scout movement there is nothing that tends to develop the human brotherhood idea. All its code is individualistic. It is a moral fraud, and the hirelings back of it are deceiving and know they are deceiving when they say it is not military in spirit, purpose and practice. Instead of teaching our boy all this snobocracy, why not teach them the existing economic system which causes the environments expressed by the anonymous poet:

"Oh, men angel imaged in nature's fair mould,
And is it for this you were fashioned divine?
Ah, where is the God-stamp immortality's print:
We are tyrants and slaves, knit in on tortured twine,
That a few like to gods may stride o'er the earth,
Millions born to be murdered are given in pawn,
When will the world quicken to liberty's birth,
Which she waiteth with eager wings beating the dawn."

Yours truly,
THOS. WHITE.

THE SOCIALIST CALLED THE TURN.

The Socialist of oClumbus, Ohio, points out that the capitalist press was eager to correct the report that the pope was dead, but to a large degree did not care to inform the public that the Appeal was not dead. Possibly they thought a live one like the Appeal would soon make itself felt without their help—and it will.—Appeal to Reason.

WHAT BIG BUSINESS DOES TO THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS.

Charles Edward Russell gives in his new book, "Stories of the Great Railroads," published by Charles H. Kerr & Co., Chicago, some remarkable information as to the cunning but relentless methods employed by the railroad corporations in suppressing the publication of facts adverse to their interests. He points out that Big Business will stop at nothing in its efforts to suppress the freedom of the press.

One of the chapters in this book was originally printed in Hampton's Magazine. It dealt with the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Soon after the appearance of this article things began to happen to Hampton and his magazine. Russell tells the story as follows:

"About two weeks before the publication of Chapter XIII, and while it, too, had advanced no farther than the proof stage, there came to the office of the magazine a gentleman that introduced himself as coming from Mr. Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, which is made the subject of that chapter. He said that Mr. Mellen understood that an article attacking the railroad company was about to be published in Hampton's; that it was, as he expressed it, 'full of lies,' and he came to warn the editor not to publish any such matter. In describing the article, he showed such familiarity with it as man could hardly have unless he had read it, although Mr. Hampton had believed that no one outside the office (except myself) knew of the existence of the article.

"Proofs of the matter were now produced and the caller was requested to indicate which of the statements were 'lies.' Each sentence was read to him separately, and he was asked whether it were true or false. In every instance, except three, he was obliged to admit that it was true. The three instances to the contrary were either trivial or they were matters that Mr. Hampton himself knew to be accurately stated.

"He told his caller at the beginning of the interview that he would change or omit every statement in the article that could be shown to be false. After spending the better part of the day in careful consideration of the matter, sentence by sentence, there appeared to be nothing material to change.

"Nevertheless the visitor demanded that the article be not printed. He said that, if it should be, the financial powers back of the New Haven railroad would ruin the magazine and Mr. Hampton.

"The article was printed in the issue of November, 1910. From that time Mr. Hampton found it increasingly difficult to get any money at the banks. Even when he offered paper of the best kind, indorsed by four men of wealth that had no trouble about borrowing money on their own account, the banks refused him all accommodation. Twenty-one banks and trust companies were approached with the same result. More than one declared a willingness to accept the paper for any other purpose than Hampton's Magazine. Several times the paper was accepted and subsequently, at some mysterious signal, rejected. The result was that Mr. Hampton was ruined according to prediction and his magazine swept out of his hands.

"It had a circulation of more than 400,000 and a very large advertising business, and not a bank in New York would advance to it one dollar.

"Meantime, spies had made their way into the business office of the magazine, copied the list of stockholders, and these were besieged with circulars intimating that the concern was about to fail and they had better protect themselves, with the inevitable result of destroying the magazine's credit and bringing upon it a swarm of frightened stockholders.

"These are the facts."

Socialism is a truth that cannot be crushed with ridicule nor smothered by flattery. A good reason why hypocrites hate it.

"MEDITATIONS OF AN ASS."
By G. H. Lockwood, Socialist Councilman and Editor of "The Prophet and the Ass." Kalamazoo, Michigan.

"THE DREAM OF AN INTELLECTUAL ASS."

In the first place the Ass who writes this article wants it to be distinctly understood that he is not an "Intellectual Ass"—he is just one of the common working class variety that has helped to bear the burdens of the world, in fact he is the real article, and has the courage to admit it.

The "Intellectual Ass" never admits it, he has to be told—and even then he won't believe it. But that don't make much difference as long as other people know it to be true.

The particular "Intellectual Ass" that this article is about is the fellow who wrote the article in the Chicago Evening American dated March 25th, and headed, "When will Newspaper Editors of the Country Unite for Effective Work?"

In this article this short eared Ass takes some time to prove that "Public welfare depends first of all upon the people's THOUGHT. And to an extent that is not appreciated the people THINK what the editors of the country make them think."

This is true—but he should have added, "And the editors of this country MAKE THEM THINK WHAT THE MASTER CLASS WANT THEM TO THINK"—and then he would have let the cat out of the bag and shown what an awful power for evil would be this very newspaper unity he is advocating.

If the editors of this country were perfectly FREE to express themselves this idea of a unity to determine on what the "people should think" might be excusable. BUT—the writer of this article konws as well as any man living that editors are NOT FREE TO EXPRESS THEIR OWN CONVICTIONS—that they are but "paid hirlings" of the master class, and must jump when their masters pull the string—Nice bunch of mental prostitutes to tell the people what to THINK, to mould the "public mind"—This fellow says "The editor decides what the public shall read. What the public reads makes the public mind"—And again—"It is one thing, and a comparatively simple thing, for a convention of manufacturers to decide what the people shall use or eat or wear, for a convention of politicians to decide whom the people shall nominate and hire. It would be an infinitely greater thing for the working newspaper men (the editors) of the country, united, to decide what the people shall THINK, what shall be the intellectual influence brought to bear on the thinking machinery of 90,000,000 of human beings."

Now if that isn't the "Dream of an Intellectual Ass" I don't know what to call it—

The "dear pepul" would certainly be a nice lot of mollycoddles after the "Editors' Trust" had taught them how to think and WHAT to think for a few years.

As a matter of fact about the only really THINKING people are the ones who are already FREE from these "influences and suggestions" of the Intellectual Prostitutes of the Capitalistic press. A good many of us read the capitalistic papers today not to believe what they say, but just to see what the darn chumps are up to.

The sooner the people realy understand the source of their general information is ABSOLUTELY UNRELIABLE—the sooner will they commence to make real inntellectual progress—not by thinking what they are "told to think"—but by doing a little actual thinking on their own account—and when they do the "Intellectual Asses" of the capitalistic press will be given a better job. Instead of "moulding" public thought, they will have a chance to mould clay or bread dough, or do something more useful and equally as dignified.

THE ORIGIN OF RURAL FREE DELIVERY OF MAIL.

During the time Elijah P. Wright carried mail from Ashville, Ohio to South Bloomfield, Ohio, from the year 1889 until the Post Office was discontinued at Bloomfield he was interrogated by several citizens along the route to bring their mail from the Post Office at Ashville or South Bloomfield, as the case might be, which he did by permission of the Postmaster. Upon one occasion, he was requested to bring another; he made known the request; Mr. Ashbrook, proprietor of the store at Ashville, where the Post Office was kept, was in, and heard the remark, and said, "That would be a great accommodation to the community, for mail to be delivered in the country to the people. Mr. Ashbrook's suggestion would be refreshed to his mind quite often when mail service would come up. After the Civil War; the subject of rural mail was frequently brought up. (He was soliciting then.) He suggested the matter to Hon. A. T. Wailing, member of Congress from this (13t h) district of Ohio; admitted the convenience, but said: "The Government would never take hold of it." Mr. Wright continued to agitate it till he come to Columbus, Ohio, but got little or no encouragement except they, (the people) would like to have it. He finally fell upon a new plan, making routes for newspapers, with boys to deliver, then proposed for the boys to bring their patrons their mail; by getting an order for it.

Some boys equipped themselves with horse and wagon. That began to show up favorable. Newspapermen would frequently say to him: "You're talking through your hat." He called on Hon. Geo. L. Converse, while a member of Congress, and said: "It would be a great accommodation, but we will never see it, and further it would be very expensive, and would be the death of any party the would bring it up, wouldn't entertain a moment."

Well, he did not get to see it, but we have. It drifted along until Governor McKinley's second campaign, Mr. Wright met him in Circleville, Ohio, McKinley was billed to speak at a big rally. Mr. Wright called on him, at the American house, and made known his call. He remarked: "I have heard of you, just let the matter rest awhile, I might be in shape to help you." That was some encouragement. The campaign continued, and for effect, the people were apprised of what the Governor had said. It enthused them, causing considerable anxiety. When the campaign was over, the result was re-election of the Governor. The Ohio State Journal ran up the name of Wm. McKinley for president. He was nominated and elected president. When his cabinet was installed, Mr. Perry S. Heath was appointed Post Master General. Mr. Wright soon opened correspondence with him, for rural mail. Mr. Heath wanted to know how mail would be delivered. Mr. Wright drew a diagram composed of Franklin County in the center, then the surrounding counties touching Franklin, with the number of Post Offices in each county; those having railroad facilities to start routes from, while those not having railroad facilities could be abandoned. The party getting mail, to put up a box or receptacle convenient to the roadside, for the deposit of mail.

For a more comprehensive understanding, the Post Master General sent Mr. C. Blackman of Washington, D. C., to see Mr. Wright and get his ideas. (Mr. Blackman may still be in Washington) was given full details, besides being taken to the different newspaper offices. (Journal, Dispatch, Press-Post, and the German Publishers.) Soon after Post Master General Heath wrote Mr. Wright saying, he was going to ask for an appropriation to experiment on. Then the Spanish War come on, causing a delay of two (3) years or more. After the idea got fairly under way, the papers were submitted to Hon. J. J. Lentz, then a member of Congress, he endorsed them saying, he would do anything to assist the people. Families going to different, neighborhoods, friends and acquaintances going to California, and other states from Ohio were urged to push the matter. During the interval of the Spanish War, a petition was drawn up by Mr. Wright, proposing to get 150 families, to each pay a cent a day to have their mail delivered, the route started from Columbus, Ohio, deposit what had been collected, then from Lockbourne back to Columbus, making the round trip. Before going into effect, Superintendent Gaitree was located at Columbus to establish routes. Mr. Wright drafted another petition to the Government, with map, making a route 25 miles or more. Mr. T. M. Clark and him presented the petition, upon examination, Mr. Gaitree said the two terminals would have to be cut out to a continuous one, and you have no carrier named. The route was changed to a continuous one, then the Supervisor suggested that Mr. Wright carry the route on his recommedation, which was accepted. Mr. T. M. Clark, Mr. John Warner and him gave bond.

On Friday, February 1st, 1901, Mr. Wright began carrying mail for the United States Government, and continued in the service about six and one-half years. Ha had then passed his 71st birthday.

He was frequently called on to assist in making routes, by getting a permit, a leave of absence from the Post Master, but not allowed any compensation, as long as he was in the service.

Now Mr. Editor, the within is a brief summary of how I originated Rural Free Delivery of Mail.

Any suggestions you may wish to make, towards assisting in getting a compensation, for bringing about the business, will be fully appreciated by me, and will surely not be forget my many friends for so doing.

Yours truly,
ELIJAH P. WRIGHT,
99 Belvidere Ave. Columbus, Ohio.

Since writing the above, by way of compensation, it has been suggested that the thousands of rural carriers and postmasters, that have, and are getting good salaries and permanent employment, could and would give a hundred (100) dollars a month, if they could be got at.

One of the party said to me: "It wouldn't be a cent a month to each one."

BERGER SHOWS EVIL OF PROPOSED ROOT BILL

An Effort to Destroy Right of Political Asylum in America—Some History

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington.—"The Root amendment breathes the spirit of plutocracy," declared Victor L. Berger, the Socialist oCngressman, in a vigorous speech denouncing the measure to deport political refugees from this country, before the House Immigration Committee.

"No matter how deep may be our political differences—how much we may disagree in economic and social matters—I hope we all are a unit against this infamous amendment," said Berger.

Representative Garner, of Texas, who preceded Berger with a few remarks in support of the Root amendment, bit his lip when the Socialist Congressman characterized the measure as "infamous."

In attacking the Root amendment Berger pointed out that if passed it would abolish the right of asylum for political refugees in the United States. He said:

"If it is to be construed literally then any man or woman who has come to this country on account of political persecution, and in quest of freedom is liable to be expelled if he or she contributes one dollar to the cause that is dear to them in their old home. I do not know what the purpose of the bill is, but there can be no doubt that the Root amendment can be so construed. And there is no doubt in my mind that if passed it will be so construed.

"And this would mean an entirely new policy for the United States. A policy just opposite of what we practiced since this country was formed. And even before that, when a colony.

"It is a policy entirely at variance from that of enlightened European countries. Particularly England, the Scandinavian countries, Switzerland and even Germany. Even in a semi-constitutional monarchy like Germany, the passage of such a law would be impossible nowadays.

"For our own country the Root amendment is a break with all traditions. In the past America has always been the asylum of the persecuted. While the desire for gain and trade had a great deal to do with the founding of most of the colonies they were virtually built up by religious and political refugees.

"The pilgrim fathers of Massachusetts were refugees who escaped political and religious persecution at home. A little later Baltimore was founded by Catholic refugees from England, who had left the mother country for the same reason as the Massachusetts refugees. The Hugenots, French refugees in South Carolina, and the Moravians in North Carolina, did a good deal to build up these commonwealths. History praises William Penn and the Quakers and their 'Holy Experiment' in government in Pennsylvania, yet in the main these people were religious and political refugees. The immigration of German Quakers, under Daniel Bistorious, who founded Germantown, now a part of Philadelphia, and the German Dunkards of western Pennsylvania, all of them 'refugees,' is less known but they played an important part in building up that part of the country.

"Refugees were also the covenanters and regicides who left England when the Stuarts were restored under Charles II. These defeated rebels settled along the Atlantic coast and particularly in Virginia. The Fairfax, Washington and Goff families were among them.

"The German immigrants of 1683 were settled in the Middle West and in Texas as the outcome of the agitation for more political liberty and the reaction of liberal tendencies in Germany. To all odds and purposes, these immigrants were refugees, although most of them were highly educated men—the eminent jurist, Lieber, was one of them—and even now in Jainesville, near Milwaukee, old settlers speak of the 'Latin farmers' of those days because they knew more about Julius Caesar and Horace than about farming.

"A very large German immigration after 1849 was undoubtedly an immigration of political refugees. Among them came Schurz, Sigel and Haecker, and the many hundred thousands that helped to settle the civil war. Political causes were at the bottom of the German immigration at the end of the seventies and the eighties. It was caused by the anti-Socialist exception laws. The Irish immigration of the eighties of the last century was the result of persecution of the land leaguers by the English government.

As the Root amendment is still before the Immigration Committee it is urged that all friends of freedom write letters and adopt resolutions against this infamous measure and forward them to Hon. John L. Burnett, Chairman of the House Committee on Immigration, Washington, D. C. Immediate action is absolutely necessary. A copy of your letter to Chairman Burnet should also be sent to the Congressman of your district.

CIVIC CENTER AND 3D STREET VIADUCT

Some Arguments for Bond Issues from Different Writers

The four Socialist Councilmen and their Advisory Board, wishing the facts of the purchase of land for Civic Center purposes to be understood by the people, desire to make the following comparison:

That portion which the city is considering comprises about three (3) acres, including Capitol Alley, which would be vacated, and is on the present tax duplicate at a valuation of about $466,000. We have been informed that real values of land in the business section are, on an average, 50 per cent higher than tax valuations, and we find this especially true when the city is the purchaser. Therefore this property would cost about $680,000, and would not be adequate for Civic Center purposes for a city such as Columbus undoubtedly will be within the next few years should we attain the right of self-government.

Should the state not enter into this scheme, the city's part would not be large enough or be so situated as to beautify our business section.

We believe that before voting you should compare this location with the territory lying between Front Street and the Scioto River from Town Street to Gay Street, an area of about fourteen (14) acres, including Scioto and Canal Streets and the alleys to be vacated (State and Broad Streets to remain open), having a tax valuation of about $981,000, or about double the tax value, and more than four times as large, and really many times more valuable for practical use as a Civic Center, for, not only would this beautify our unsightly river front and remove an undesirable lot of old buildings, but there would be ample grounds for a real CIVIC CENTER.

The City Prison is located at the southern end, and across the river the city has other property. In the northern portion could be located an Emergency Hospital and Art Building, with plenty of space for City Hall, School Library, etc. Enough even should we adopt the Socialist idea of owning our public utilities and need administration buildings for all of them.

Notwithstanding the endeaver to create a situation in Columbus finances that will help eliminate the Smith 1 per cent tax law, our credit is good, so there seems to be no reason why the other bond issues before the people should not receive their endorsement, for all these undertakings will be of great value to the city.

THIRD STREET VIADUCT.

Recently there was published in the newspapers information to the effect that the city could not now vote bonds for the "Third Street Viaduct" and "New Civic Center," because of the one-cent tax law.

Said report emanated from a clique that want the Civic Center, but do not want the Third Street Viaduct. The one per cent tax law has nothing to do with the proposition of voting bonds for public improvements. The Sinking Fund is not included in the one per cent tax law.

Of the $1.25 tax rate in Columbus for the year 1913, the .85 are for the sinking fund purposes to pay interest on the bonds.

The slobbered report emanating from the aforesaid clique is only for the purpose of killing the Third Street Viaduct; and this same clique has sent out stacks of literature favoring the Civic Center.

The voters of Columbus should not be deceived by the misstatements and rumblings of the aforesaid clique.

INFORMATION FOR VOTERS CONCERNING BOND ISSUES

Civic Center and Third Street Viaduct as Seen by Contributors to "The Socialist." Facts and Figures

THE THIRD STREET VIADUCT.

The Ohio State Journal and The Columbus Dispatch oppose the Third Street Viaduct, not from the standpoint of expense or necessity, but on account of the fact that these papers "early in the game" "promised" to support the civic center proposition. The management of these papers gave promise of newspaper support to this project without giving the City's "necessities" little, if any, consideration.

A commendable fact in favor of the Third Street Viaduct voiced by the management of these papers is the admission that the Third Street Viaduct is not devoid of merit, but says "at best it can wait." WAIT! "Ye Gods!" "How long, oh how long?" It is now forty-seven years since the citizens of the North Side and of other sections of the City recognized the necessity for not only more streets entering the North Side of the City, but wider streets, and yet these papers which are so widely distributed throughout the North Side of the City tell the people of said Section that they do not know their needs or their necessities, but advise them patient, forebearing citizens to "wait."

The residents of the North Side do not propose to take notice of the dictation implied in the "Editorials" of these papers, but do propose to agitate the building of this Viaduct and the opening of this much needed thoroughfare until it is an accomplished fact, and the North Side is ready to say to the management of these papers that this project does not require the assistance of the Editors who have and do see fit to disparage this much needed improvement. The voters of the North Side and of the City in general who are not interested in a "pet" project consider these newspaper "knocks" by these papers as a "boost," and so far as intelligent people understand the situation, there is no desire that these "knocks" shall be discontinued.

Yes, forty-seven years ago one Gamalius Scott, then a hardware merchant in this City, saw the necessity for more road surface throughout the northern section of the City, and he and his friends made an unsuccessful effort to have North High Street widened to a width of eighty feet, but High Street landlords, then as now, opposed the proposition. He then directed his attention to the East Side, and his ideas were favorably received, and East Broad Street with its two rows of trees is the result of his effort.

When the High Street Viaduct was built the plans of this structure included the widening of North High Street, but High Street property owners opposed this project.

A few years ago a strenuous effort was made to widen North High Street to Goodale Street, but the same opposition prevented widening of the Street for a distance of one block, which would have given some measure of relief and safety. On account of these repeated failures, the citizens of the North Side and of the City have taken it upon themselves to seek relief from the inconvenience due to congestion, relief from the dangers incident to traveling on this narrow, congested street by constructing another thoroughfare, and this thoroughfare is proposed by extending Third Street from Naghten to Summit, connecting the two by a Viaduct at the Union Station, thereby creating a thoroughfare from Schiller Park to Clintonville, and ultimately to Worthington, and also another entrance for the Union Station.

A few merchants between the Viaduct and Russell Street saw the necessity of widening High Street, and several of these merchants offered to contribute generously to the widening of said street, but without results. A singular circumstance, however, is apparent in this, namely—that by the efforts of these merchants to widen High Street, they admitted that the road surface was wholly inadequate for the travel to which this street is subjected. This admission is peculiarly interesting from the standpoint that the same merchants now say, by way of opposing the Third Street Viaduct, that High Street is not congested. When the increased road surface was proposed in front of their places of business, they were for it. When the citizens of the City try to secure more road surface by way of Third Street, they oppose. The reason for the opposition by this small coterie of merchants is so apparent that every one can easily understand the whys and wherefores of this opposition. "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

The one great drawback to the City of Columbus is the fact that too many citizens, like the merchants above referred to fail to think of the welfare, comfort and convenience of the masses of the people, who toil, of the people who must use the streets, of the people who must go the farthest way around to get home. Too many expect the masses to be inconvenienced, and yet demand the patronage of those they oppress.

WHAT ARE THE CONDITIONS ON THE NORTH SIDE?

Eighty thousand people are made to push and repass on two narrow thoroughfares, North High Street and North Fourth Street, the latter being so situated that it is only available for 15 per cent of the residents of the North Side. Park Street is but 30 feet wide and ends at First Avenue, and on account of it's being a short, narrow and unsatisfactory street, it is little used. North High Sweet carries 80 per cent of the population of 80,000 people and this does not include those who use this street from other sections of the City. The two streets above mentioned represent a total road width of 84 feet. To add further to the congestion these two narrow thoroughfares carry street car lines, and one section of North High Stret is traversed by five car lines.

The West Side had six broad streets entering the central section of the City. Five of these streets are bridged, and within a year the railroad tracks at Mound Street were bridged by a viaduct for the purpose of facilitating travel and eliminating danger. The width of road way represented by these six streets amounts to 291 feet. West Broad Street alone is within 22 feet of equalling the entire through street road way of the North Side.

Does it seem fair that the North Side should follow the dictates of the "management" of The Ohio State Journal and The Columbus Dispatch and "wait" longer for this much needed improvement, or does the management of these papers propose to immediately agitate the closing of five streets on the West Side and eleven streets on the East Side? Leaving East and West Broad Street open and closing the others would then, considering the population, give these sections of the city more road way than the North Side now has. Suppose that the entire population of the East and West Sections of the City should immediately be forced to confine their travels to one or two thoroughfares? If this were the case, these sections would immediately and justly demand thoroughfares and would most assuredly demand these in preference to a civic center project. Therefore, from the right line of reasoning, if the West and East Sides are entitled to six and twelve streets respectively (and they are) then the North Side has the right to ask and does ask that she be given this much needed thoroughfare at the hands of the voters. Granted this additional street, the North Side will still be much in the minority so far as road way is concerned compared to other sections of the City, but as she has submitted patiently all of these years to the inconvenience of but two streets, she will accept one more street as a God send and a blessing, and asks that this bond issue be approved at the hands of the voters on Tuesday next.

The North Side has assisted every other section of the City in every undertaking, and at no time have the voters of the North Side opposed any City wide project. The Third Street Viaduct is a City wide project. It will never down. It will be an accomplished fact, regardless of the unsought advice and dictation of the management of the papers with a "pet scheme."

The backers of the civic center proposition in circularizing the City show a plan of an art gallery, City Hall, Board of Education Building and six State Buildings. The promoters of this scheme through the press and otherwise endeavor to fool the toilers and builders of this City by indicating that the creation of these buildings will provide an immense amount of work for labor. At most, this proposed scheme is a "vision." This scheme created for the purpose of a "show" on paper does not exist in reality, has not gone so far as to have had the consideration of an architect, except tentatively.

So far as the State is concerned, Ohio has never proposed acquiring the Third Street frontages indicated in this civic center plat, and it is not within the power of the promoters of this scheme or within the power of the City of Columbus to force the State of Ohio into the purchasing of this or any other real estate for State purposes.

When the plans for the State House were originally drawn, these plans contemplated one or more additional stories, and the present structure was built sufficiently strong and secure to carry out this plan of enlargement when it should become necessary. When the State desires to secure more room for State purposes, it will carry out the plans originally proposed by putting another story, or possibly two stories, on top of the present building.

The State of Ohio at this time owes the City of Columbus in round numbers $400,000.00 in principal and interest, which the City has not been able to collect. If the State will not pay this debt long ago contracted, what assurance has any one that the State will join with the City in the matter of "grouping" buildings for the creation of a civic center. The State of Ohio has no such thoughts. Do not allow yourselves to be deceived. The scheme is unfair, unwise and deceptive.

ZENO.

The Trusts are greatly concerned about the working class at this time and are advocating the election of either Roosevelt, Taft, Clark, or Wilson. Sure, they want to stay in business.

HISTORY REPEATS: SOME VARIATIONS

Statements Made Before the War of the Rebellion—Statements That Have Familiar Sound

The great similarity of the popular objections to Socialism and the "abolitionist" movement are very manifest, if one will only take the trouble to look up history dealing with this subject from about the year 1835 to the time of the Civil War, and then compare them with the objections that are brought against the Socialist movement today. The great trouble with the working class is that they will not read and think for themselves. They gulp down and swallow as truth every lie that is hurled at the Socialist movement by capitalistic varlets, not taking the time and trouble to investigate for themselves.

Don't think that Socialists were the first to be accused of being free lovers and destroyers of religion. Every revolutionary movement that ever had for its mission the uplift of a part or whole of humanity has run the same gauntlet of lies and has always come out the stronger and purer by so doing.

The abolitionist movement had for its mission the freeing from chattel slavery of a few million black slaves, all private property if you please, while the Socialist movement has for its mission the freeing of the entire working class, including farmers and all who do productive and useful work from wage slavery.

That the wageworker is considered the mere property of the capitalist who employs him, the same as the chattel slave (the only difference being the manner in which he happens to own him) was frankly admitted by the Charlestown Baptist Association in 1835. They summed the matter up as follows: "It amounts in effect to this, whether the operatives of a country should be bought and sold and themselves become property, as in this state, or whether they shall become hirelings and their labor only become property, as in some other states. In other words, whether the employer may buy the whole time of laborers at once of those who have a right to dispose of it, with a permanent relation of care and protection over them, or whether he shall be restricted to buy it in certain portions only, subject to their control, and with no such permanent relations of care and protection."

Chancellor Harper, a prominent divine of South Carolina, said: "It is as much in the order of nature that men should enslave each other as that other animals shoul prey upon each other."

Bishop Mead, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in 1843, said: "Almighty God has been pleased to make you slaves here, and to give you nothing but labor and poverty in this world, which you are obliged to submit to, as it is his will that it be so."

The above is in line with the teaching of the church at the present time, and when we Socialists point out to you that it is unnecessary for a single human being to be without plenty of food, clothing and shelter, due to the fact that the earth is rich and machinery has developed to the point where it can produce plenty for all, by the co-operation of all, you working jackasses start braying, "You want to abolish religion." Well, if it is necessary that religion must go in order to abolish poverty, then let it go. The trouble with you, Mr. Worker, is that you can't see the difference between religion and church institutions. Your religion is your own private property, with which the Socialist party is not concerned. The [illegible] maintained by the capitalist class to keep you in subjection.

The Rev. Mr. Lord president of Dartmouth College, said: "Abolitionism is at fault. It is false and wrong. It destroys the ancient landmarks. It obliterates the old path. It puts its heels on constitutional realism. It sunders what God has intended, and unites what God has sundered."

The Rev. J. H. Thornwell said: "Slavery as it exists in the South is no evil and is consistent with the principles of revealed religion, and that all opposition to it arises from a misguided fanaticism, which we are bound to resist at the very threshold. That all interference with this subject by fanatics is a violation of our civil and social rights; is un-christian and inhuman, leading necessarily to anarchy and bloodshed, and the instigators are murderers and assassins."

Wow! Sounds like a Democrat, Republican, or a Catholic priest taking a fall out of the Socialist movement, don't it? And yet, in spite of the mad ravings of these tools of the Ruling Class, the chattel slave system was abolished, and in spite of the ravings of the trinity named above the wage slave system will go down and out.

Day and night the work of education goes steadily on, the doom of Capitalism draws nigh, soon the workers will arise as one man and usher in that happier and better day —SOCIALISM.

NATIONAL SOCIALISTS MEET IN CONVENTION

Greatest Unbossed Political Gathering Ever Held in United States now in Session at Indianapolis

(By National Socialist Press)

Indianapolis, Ind.—"The Socialist party has grown into a political party of the first magnitude."

This was the sentiment voiced by Morris Hillquit of New York, in opening the National Socialist Convention here, as chairman of the first day's proceedings. Nearly 300 delegates and several thousand spectators joined in the applause that greeted his remarks.

"The question of selecting the nominees of the different parties for the office of President of the United States, whether it be Roosevelt or Taft, whether it be Wilson or Clark, are very subordinate questions, which will not in the least affect the welfare, the actual life, of the American people; but whether the Socialist party will again double its vote, whether the Socialist party will show up a million and a half or two million strong, will be a historical fact which will lay the foundation for a new society for a new life in this country.

"In looking at this representative gathering and splendid gathering," said Hillquit in the beginning of his opening speech, "my thoughts involuntary revert to the first convention of the Socialist party, likewise held in Indianapolis.

"It is just eleven years ago, a very short, insignificant span of time, but within that time the Socialist movement in this country has grown so marvelous in extent, in significance, and in substance, that the convention meeting here today represents an entirely different movement from what was represented eleven years ago.

"We have within the last few years finally succeeded in demonstrating to a very large portion of the working class of this country that the Socialist party is the only party that truly, fully and at all times represents their interests and fight their battles, and labor is coming into our ranks in larger numbers every year—aye, every month and every day.

"It is not merely upon our physical growth, however, or upon our large strength that we congratulate ourselves in assembling at this convention. It is the fact that the Socialist party has at all times remained true to its truth and carried the red banner of International Socialism unsullied, unstained and aloft in this country."

National Secretary John M. Work called the convention to order promptly on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, the time set by the National Committee. Gustave A. Strebel of New York called the roll, and Hillquit was elected chairman over W. P. Collins of Colorado. James M. Reilly was elected secretary.

Delegate Carey of Massachusetts crushed the hopes of Socialist orators when he moved an addition to the convention rules prohibiting nominating speeches for candidates on Friday.

"I don't want to spoil Spargo's chances of making a speech," reclared Congressman Berger, as his excuse for voting against Carey's motion.

After the proposition carried, Hillquit solemnly announced: "It is the ruling of the chair that hereafter all Socialist eulogies be limited to funeral speeches."

Carl Ott, in behalf of the Indianapolis Socialist local, and Jacob Goodman, in behalf of the local branch of the Workmen's Circle, made short speeches of welcome to the convention.

John Russell of New York City, son of Charles Edward Russell, and Bessie Goldstein of New Castle, Pa., were chosen assistant secretaries. Tellers are Rodriguez of Illinois, Floaten of Colorado, Scott of Montana, Bruce of Pennsylvania, and Judges Burke of New Hampshire and Sadler of Washington.

Capitalist newspaper men who expected serious clashes between the so-called factions over party tactics have been greatly disappointed with their experience the first day of the convention. Never was a Socialist convention so peaceful and harmonious. All delegates proved that they were Socialist to the core and refused to give the enemy comfort by indulging in acrimonious debates and heated discussions.

These newspaper men, however, managed to get a "story" out of an order of the local authorities against the carrying of the red flag in a proposed parade of Indianapolis Socialists and delegates. A sub-committee of the National Executive Committee, consisting of Berger, Alexander Irvine and Kate Richards O'Hare, called on the mayor and the superintendent of police and after some discussion succeeded in getting them to reverse their despotic and illegal order. But owing to the rainy weather no parade was held.

A number of Pinkertons are hanging around the hotels where the delegates are quartered. Editor Randolph of the anti-Socialist "Common Cause," and Peter W. Collins, so-called labor leader and Socialist baiter, have also come to Indianapolis to "watch" the convention.

Indianapolis, Ind.—That the past policies and tactics of the Socialist party will be continued by the present national convention is indicated in the selection of members to the convention committees. The election resulted as follows, the names of those chosen being given according to the number of votes received:

PLATFORM—Russell, New York; Berger, Wisconsin; Cary, Massachusetts; Wilson, California; Ghent, District of Columbia; Duncan, Montana; Dobbs, Kentucky; Hogan, Arkansas; Ricker, Kansas.

CONSTITUTION — Hillquit, New York; Branstetter, Oklahoma; Brewer, Kansas; Goebel, New Jersey; Richardson, California Berlyn, Illinois; Oneal, Indiana; Floaten, Colorado.

RESOLUTIONS—Cohen, Pennsylvania; Spargo, Vermont; Roewer, Massachusetts; Wilson, Kansas; Thomas, Wesconsin; Slobodin, New York; Collins, Colorado; Meitzen, Texas; Wells, Oklahoma.

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS AND THEIR RELATION TO THE SOCIALIST PRTY—Ameringer, Oklahoma; Maurer, Pennsylvania; White, Massachusetts; Lee, New York; Rodrieguez, Illinois; Harriman, California; CLIFFORD, OHIO; Lewis, Oregon; Hickey, Texas.

PARTY PRESS—O'Reilly, Illinois; Maynard, California; Jacobs, Wisconsin; RACHMAN, OHIO; London, New York; Wesley, Utah; Pwen, Oklahoma; Beardsley, Connecticut; Krafft, New Jersey.

WAYS AND MEANS—Le Seur, North Dakota; Boehm, Ohio; Bacon, Pennsylvania; Watkins, Minnesota; Reguin, California; Brown, Iowa; Irwin, Oklahoma; Stewart, Idaho; Jones, New Jersey.

The chairmen of other committees are: State and Municipal Programs, Thompson, Wesconsin; Reports of National Officers, England; Maine; Foreign Speaking Organization, Aaltonen, Michigan; Co-Operative Movement, Gaylord, Wisconsin; International Relations, Barnes, Pennsylvania; Auditing, Fritz, Mississippi; Publicity, Clarke, Connecticut.

It was decided that the candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall act as chairmen. The committee then immediately proceeded to business.

THIRD DAY.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Socialist party must plan and provide for the best city government under the present system of society until the working class shall finally come into its own.

It must secure something better than has been thought of by other forces interested in the city rule and put it into effect.

This was the keynote of the discussion on the commission form of government in the national convention of the Socialist party here. The final conclusion reached was that the general tendencies of the commission form of government were not apparent enough to allow the Socialist party to frame any definite declaration on the subject.

It was instead decided to leave this matter to the State organizations to frame policies in the different States suitable to conditions and the prevailing laws and forms of commission government in those States.

Delegates Patterson, of Ohio and Kaplan of Minnesota denounced the

THE MISSION OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY

Thhe mission of the Socialist party is not merely to expose and attack the old political parties, nor merely to criticise or try to remove incidental evils. The evils which Socialists deal with are fundamental ones. Not a few superficial reforms, but a thorough change, a change in the very basis of the social system, is what the times demand, and what the Socialist party aims at.

When a man is sick, he knows it by certain outward symptoms of pain or discomfort. The quack will offer him some palliative medicines to relieve those symptoms for a time, but will allow the disease to go on, showing itself ever and again in new symptoms and calling for more palliatives. The scientific physician, on the other hand, will not begin by trying to remove these symptoms. He will begin by trying to discover their cause, trying to find out what is fundamentally wrong in the patient's system. When he has discovered this, he will prescribe a treatment to remove the cause of the disease, knowing that the troublesome symptoms will disappear when the cause is removed. His method seems slower and less direct than that of the quack, but it is the only safe and sure method.

Socialists leave to the reform parties to use the quack's method. They prefer the slower but sure way. We do not offer to deal out doses of petty reform for each of the symptoms of disorder in the body "politic," such as the poverty of the workers, the luxury and power of the idlers, the unemployment of myriads who are willing to work. We know that these things are only symptoms, only results. We devote ourselves to making clear the cause that produces them, so that a real cure can be effected.

On every side we see discontent. People feel that things are wrong, and a hundred different schemes are devised in the hope of bettering things a little, but with no result.

To this mass of vaguely groping discontent comes the Socialist and says: No man can be really free while another man controls his job. We cannot be free so long as a part of the people are dependent on the will of others for permission to work. No matter what pleasant phrases about freedom we may hear, this hard fact remains, that back of all political questions is the economic question, the bread and butter question, the question of getting a living; and if some men have the power to prevent others getting a living, or dictate the conditions under which they shall work, they wield a power of oppression as great as that of feudal lords or holders of chattel slaves.

Now such a condition does actually exist today in this and all other civilized countries. It is accepted and sanctioned as just and eternal by all except the Socialists. We say it can and must be abolished.

Labor produces all wealth, every loaf of bread, every yard of cloth, every ton of coal, every useful thing that we count as wealth, cost human labor. Every penny of value in these things means the expenditure of so much labor-power.

But in order to carry on any industry, in order to produce food or clothing or any other articles something else is needed. Labor must have access to the means of production— the materials, tools, machinery and so forth.

In the days of our great-great-grandfathers these means of production were very simple. The weaver worked with a hand-loom, the iron worker needed only his little forge and a few simple tools. Any artisan with industry and care could establish himself as an independent producer. Owning his means of production as well as his labor power, he owned the product. He was a free individual just because he controlled his own job by owning the means of production.

But the days of hand industry, of small production, have gone. Machinery has driven it to the wall. The great steel mill has displaced the cross-roads smithy. The great textile factory has rendered the hand-loom and the independent weaver as extinct as the dodo. All industries have been revolutionized by machine production.

It is by increasing the productive power of labor that machine industry has displaced hand industry.

Whether he would or no, as this machinery came into use, the workman had to give up his hand tools and work with the machine. But in so doing he ceased to be an independent producer, he became dependent upon the owner of the machine, he became a wage-worker.

The tools of the old days were individual in their nature. The modern means of production, the machine, is social or collective in its nature.

But these great social tools, and the factories in which they are placed are privately owned just as were the simple tools of earlier days. Only—and here is the important point—whereas the individual tools of the hand industry age were privately owned by the workers, these social tools are privately owned by non-workers.

Therefore, the Socialist opposes the private ownership of the modern machinery of production because—this private ownership of social means of production means that the workers must be propertyless wage-workers; it divides society into two classes—the class that owns without working and the class that works without owning; it makes the workers dependent upon the owners for a chance to work, and so enables the owners to exploit the workers.

The workingman today is legally supposed to be a free man. He owns his own body, his own labor power, but he does not own the machinery and other things necessary to the use of his labor power. He is able and willing to do productive work, the world needs the product he can make. But between his willing labor power and the world's needs stands the capitalist, the man who owns the factory and the machines.

The workingman must get work or starve. They cannot wait. The capitalists can wait because they have a reserve, the stored up products of their men's past labor, to live on, even though the factory should stand idle awhile.

So the workingmen must go to the capitalist and ask permission to work—ask it as a favor and be thankful if they get it.

And it is the capitalists who dictate terms. They practically say to the workingmen: "Yes, you may work for us, but your product shall belong to us. Out of the value of your product we shall pay for your labor power—pay the market price. The surplus that you create shall stay in our pockets. You are 'free' men; you may work or not, just as you please. But the factories belong to us, we are going to run our own business in our own way, and if you work at all, you must accept these terms."

So this is the "free contract" between employer and employed, between capitalists who can wait and workingmen who cannot, a tacit contract which provivdes that the value of the workers' product shall be divided into two parts; one part wages, the market price of labor power; the other part, profits, to go to th non-producer because he owns.

And the market price of labor power, how is it determined? It is determined in a competitive market. And the labor market is always a competitive market, for there is always an "Army of the Unemployed" forced by their need to compete with their fellows and keep wages down. The wages of labor, generally speaking, are enough, and only enough, to keep the workinmen and their families alive.

But while competition among the workingmen increases, competition among the capitalists grows ever less and less. The big capitalists captures the trade of the small ones and drives them out of business. So the middle class grows smaller and weaker. The great capitalist class grows smaller, richer and more powerful. The working class becomes larger and poorer. Class divisions grow ever clearer, and class antagonisms ever keener.

Since the cause of the people's poverty is the private ownership and control of profit of the social means of production, which the joint labor of the working class creates and operates, it follows that the cure for the evil is to be found in the common ownership of these means of production, and their control by the whole people for the benefit of the whole people.

To educate and organize the workers to the point where they will seize upon the political and industrial forces of social control and use them to secure communal well-being is the Mission of the Socialist Party.—The New World.

OUR FRIEND DUNKLEMAN GIVES TO US ANOTHER EFFUSION

"Dunk" is a Wise Guy and Knows What He Talks About. Read It.

Columbus, O.

Mister Editur—I bin seein' in your paper about how the workin' man is so badly treted and I bin trip to see where he gits the worst of it. Now you no it's a fact thet on a avrage he draws down between $450.00 and $600.00 a year. That's a big bunch of money for a feller to spend in one year an' if he don't try to play a sport he can git by all right.

Fer the sake of argement jest take a feller drawin' down $500.00 a year. He don't hev to live on a stet like any of them streats north of Linkon Streat or any of them streats out East of Grant avenew or any of them streats out by Shiller park. What does he care about the place he lives in seein' he han't never there only at night. There is a lot of nice places he can git on streats like Chaple or Engler streat. Thers Feizer street what has a nice row of 6 room flats thet can be rented for $18.00 a month. Corse Feizer street hant very wide and the flats set right up to the sidewalk so ther hant no front yard but they hev a real nice back yard thets all layed with bricks for the kids to play in. Now if they could all git nice pleasin homes like thet they wod still hev $384.00 to spend. Now Mr. Editor you no that a man thet labors don't wher good clothes all the time. He has clothes a purpose to work in. Corse hes got to hev a fine outfit fer to go to church in on Sunday caus you no thers lot ov specious fellers hanging round on the streats an if he hant lookin up som he might git pinched fer a vag. So you jest alow him $15.00 a year fer clothes. The clothes he can git fer thet money will keep him lookin fine. A man ought to carry som insurence so as his famely wodent suffer if he should kick the bucket so jest let him take up a paper at to bits a week. He cirtenly ought to feed his family on $4.50 a week pervidin he dont take in to many picter shows an thet if you figger it up leaves him $23.00 to giv to his wife to by her or the kids something to wear.

Dont think thet I am advertisin them flats on Feizer at I only mentined them caus they are extra nic fer the money. You hev to pay a whole lot more fer the same as them if you git on a front streat.

I want to tell you a man thets workin fer a good wage like $600.00 a year is perty durn well off. He dont hev to sleep outside an hes got good sunday clothes and hean his famely got all they need to eat. An if hes the right kind of a feller his wife and kids can well be proud fer hant he providin fer em even after her dead. If you do think hes sleepin try to member its a peiceful sleep. Don't try to rouze him up he might git so thet he wod want the sam as other people has. Try to member thhet its human nauture for poor people to be satisfied an they'l be all right if you jest dont bother em. You cant change human nature if you think you can go down to the state house yard an look at them squirrels. They are positevilie wild you cant get any nearer to them now than you could when they was out in the woods. Cous you got to hev a peanut now wher you used to hev a shotgun.

INTERVIEW WITH COMRADE SEIDEL.

"If to come out of a contest stronger than you entered is to be defeated, then the Socialist party was beaten in Milwaukee," declared ex-Mayor Emil Seidel, who spoke Sunday evening in Olentangy Park Theater, in an interview. "The Socialists were defeated at the polls because the Republican and Democratic parties united on a fusion candidate, Dr. G. A. Bading.

"This is just what we had predicted and just what we desired. It makes the issue between them and us clear and, so far as we are concerned, simplifies the entire political situation, for the ultimate effect will be to strengthen the Socialist movement, not only in Milwaukee, but in the entire country.

"Socialists not only held their ground, but made a gain of 3000 votes. The result of one election cannot change the course of Socialism. Already we have begun our fall campaign and I predict that we will send two Congressmen from our state to Washington.

"The realignment of the parties which took place in Milwaukee is expected to spread throughout the state. In the coming national campaign I think the party will poll 1,500,000 votes.

"So far as I have been able to observe, the Socialist body in this city I think it compares very favorably with that of others. Columbus is going through what Milwaukee has already gone through."

Asked if his defeat would put him out of the running, Mayor Seidel answered with an emphatic "No," "I am in the fight in Milwaukee until I die," he declared.

MAYOR GAYNOR PRAISES SOCIALISTS AGAIN.

Says He "Felt Very Certain" That They "Exhibited No Disrespect to Our Flag."

New York.—The matter of the disturbance about the Stars and Stripes, which occurred at Union Square during the May Day demonstration, was the subject of a short correspondence between Mayor Gaynor and Police Commissioner Waldo.

Waldo's letter to the Mayor regarding the incident reads as follows:

"Sir—In reference to the Socialistic meeting held in Union Square on May 1:

"From the best reports that are obtainable, it appears that the American flag was torn down by some miscreant, but was immediately picked up by persons in the immediate vicinity. Order was restored before police interference was possible or necessary.

"The American flag appears to be still safe in the hands of the people, and does not require police protection to cause it to be respected. No other disorder requiring police action occurred during this meeting.

Very respectfully,

"R. WALDO,
(Signed) "Police Commissioner."

The Mayor lightly skips over the excuse regarding the lack of police on the occasion and says in his reply:

"Sir—I am very glad to receive your account of the American flag incident at the meeting of the Socialists in Union Square on May 1. I felt very certain all along that the Socialists exhibited no disrespect for our flag. That done by a lunatic or disorderly person should not be attributed to them. Very truly yours,

CIGARMAKERS AND STOGIE-MAKERS.

Washington. — Representatives of the International Cigarmakers' Union and Stogie makers met in Washington on May 3, 4 and 5 for the purpose of arriving at some basis upon which the stogiemakers might become affiliated with the International Cigarmakers' Union. The representatives of the cigarmakers offered extremely liberal terms to the stogiemakers, but the representatives of the latter organization refused the proposals, its representatives announcing that the stogiemakers' identity should not be submerged, and that the organization should, so far as its activities are concerned, remain in exactly the same position as it does now as an independent organization.

HOTEL AND RESTAURANT EMPLOYES.

Cincinnati.—Secretary Jere L. Sullivan reports to headquarters that a systematic effort is being made by certain individuals, last heard from at Susquehanna, Pa., to get out fake labor directories and also selling fake union bar labels. The Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America advises all concerned that no union bar label or union house card is now or ever has been displayed in any town or city whhere bartenders, cooks or waiters remain unorganized. Neither have these cards ever been rented or sold to any person, firm or establishment. These labels are issued exclusively by local unions under a trade union agreement which provides for the sale of union-made products and the employment of members of local unions of this craft in good standing.

TRADE MOVEMENTS OF CARPENTERS.

Indianapolis.—The local union of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters at St. Catherines, Ont., Canada, gained an increase in wages from 35c to 40c per hour and an increase of 2 1-2c per hour for foremen withhout strike. The local union at Sheboygan, Wis., gained an increase of 3c per hour, making the minimum wage for carpenters in that city 43c per hour. At Joliet, Ill., the outside carpenters have gained an increase of 5c per hour with a present wage scale of 35c after a three days' strike. The mill men in the same city have just reached an agreement providing for an increase from 17 1-2c to 25c per hour and an increase of 2 1-2c per hour for all men receiving over 25c to 30c inclusive. They also gained a reduction in hours from 10 to 9. These conditions were granted as a result of a strike lasting a month and all men are now back at work.

EIGHT-HOUR DAY FOR POSTAL EMPLOYES.

Washington.—In the consideration in the house of the postoffice appropriation bill a section was adopted which reads as follows: "That on and after July 1, next, following the passage of this act, letter carriers in the city delivery service, and clerks in first and second-class postoffices shall be required to work not more than eight hours a day, provided that the eight hours of service shall not extend over a longer period than ten consecutive hours, and the schedule of duty of the employes shall be regulated accordingly; that in cases of emergency, or if the needs of the service require, letter carriers in the city delivery service and clerks in first and second-class postoffices can be required to work in excess of eight hours a day, and for such additional services they shall be paid extra in proportion to their salaries, as fixed by law; that should the needs of the service require the employment on Sunday of letter carriers in the city delivery service and clerks in first and second-class postoffices the employes who are required and ordered to perform Sunday work shall be allowed compensatory time on one of the six days following the Sunday on which they perform such service."

NOTES FOR OHIO CARPENTERS.

The following are extracts from the official organ of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners:

Local Union 650, Pomeroy, O.—This Local Union has made a demand upon the contractors for a reduction of working hours from 9 to 8 per day and $3 per day as the minimum wage; the new schedule to go into effect the 1st day of May, 1912. While it is true that we have quite a number of non-union men to contend with around and about Pomeroy, Middleport, Syracuse and Racine, who will take advantage of our demands, as they have done heretofore, and hamper us somewhat, we believe that what we are asking for will be conceded without any great struggle.

Piqua, O.—All transient carpenters are advised to remain away from this place until further notice. At present trade conditions are very bad, contractors are only paying from 22 1-2 to 25 cents per hour, and good mechanics and all those unwilling to work for starvation wages are walking the streets. Piqua, O., is not a desirable place for union carpenters.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

With a tap from the gavel which kept order in the convention in 1803, the Ohio 1912 Constitutional Convention adjourned at Chihllicothe May 9 until 2 o'clock May 22, when it will meet again to put its work into final shape for submission to the people. The duties of the convention have been finished, save for the third and final reading of the proposals, and the determination of the method and time of submitting the amendments to the voters of the state. The committees on submission and address to the people, schedule and arrangement and phraseology are in session this week preparing their reports for the consideration of the convention when it reconvenes.

Proposals adopted during the past week of the convention were Fackler's proposal No. 170, continuing the present uniform rule of taxation. It makes provision for the reinstatement of bonds to the tax list and also for a graduated inheritance tax, with exemptions for inheritance exceeding $20,000. It provides also for a collateral inheritance tax, and for a graduated income tax for amounts over $3,000. It permits, too, excise, franchise and production taxes. The farmers in the convention fought hard to write into the constitution the Smith one per cent. tax law, but were defeated by a small margin.

Halenkamp's proposal No. 134 abolishes injunctions in industrial disputes and provides for a jury trial in all cases of contempt.

Thomas' proposal No. 34 abolishes contract prison labor and provides that no convict-made goods shall be sold in the state of Ohio unless conspicuously marked "Prison Made."

Proposal No. 309 abolishes the State Board of Public Works and creates in its stead the office of Superintendent of Public Works, said officer to be appointed by the governor.

Proposal No. 98 abolishes the office of State School Commissioner and substitutes for it the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction, said official to be appointed by the governor.

Anderson proposal No. 240 to abolish the statutory limitations of damages for wrongful death.

Proposal No. 334 authorizes the Australian system of land registration, under which the states guarantees and insures land titles.

Proposal No. 333 allows the state to regulate and limit the construction of billboards.

Radical changes in the criminal procedure of Ohio courts is provided in the adoption of the amendment of Delegate Riley to the Bill of Rights. It gives the legislature the power to fix the number of men to compose the grade jury. Also the number of said jurymen necessary to secure an indictment against an accused person. It also gives the legislatures power to provide by law for the prosecution in criminal cases outside the state. The court and counsel are also given the right to comment on the failure of the accused to testify.

Miller's proposal No. 51 allows the state to regulate the rates of fire and life insurance and permits the state or any of its political subdivisions to insure public property in mutual insurance companies. The short ballot and a proposal to increase the number of Courts of Appeal were killed by being laid on the table.

With the passage of the injunction and contract prison labor proposals the labor delegates in the convention have practically secured the adoption of every proposition they asked for except the recall, and an amendment to permit the state to go into the insurance business for itself. The latter amendment was tacked on to the Miller proposal instead of being reported out by the labor committee. It received 34 votes; it required 60 to pass.

It will be noticed that in adjourning to May 22 the convention has adjourned until after the primaries, which take place on May 21, and the purpose of recessing until that time, while ostensibly to give an opportunity for the committee to complete their work, was also due to the fact that about one-half of the delegates are candidates before the primaries for some, either legislative or executive, office and it was necessary that they be given some time, of course, to devote to their personal campaign.

Among the labor delegates who are candidates are Delegate Stillwell of Cuyahoga county, whho is running for congressman in the Twenty-first district; Delegates Farrell and Davio of the same county, who want to come back to Columbus next winter as representatives; Delegate Tetlow, who wants to represent Columbiana county; Lambert, Jackson county; Kunkle, Muskingum county, and Hoffman, Hamilton county, and Read of Summit county. As each of those delegates of labor merits the award thhat comes with the motto of "having well done thou good and faithful servant," the workers who still vote with the old political parties will turn out at the primaries and show their appreciation of the services rendered by them in this constitutional convention by nominating them as candidates for these respective positions.

PROVERBS.

An ounce of intelligent discontent is worth a pound of unintelligent submission.

If necessity is the mother of invention, shall we not label adversity the father of contention?

Religion has been defined by an eminent divine as being "The ligament that binds the soul to God." This seems a concise way of defining an elusive and much juggled word, but the office boy recommends a committee of rationalistic theological surgeons to examine ligaments.

What profit the corporations if they gain the whole control of their wage slaves and lose their sole control of the legislature at Washihgton?

OHIO SOCIALIST PLATFORM AND RESOLUTIONS

PLATFORM

Adopted at the 12th Annual Convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, April 28th, 1912.

We, the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, reaffirm our allegiance to the national platform of the Socialist Party of America and the principles of International Socialism by demanding the collective and public ownership and the democratic management of all natural resources and the means of wealth production and distribution. We demand for the workers access to the machinery of wealth production and the land at all times and the full value of their toil.

We declare that all government, whether city, state or national, is controlled by and administered in the interest of the economically dominant class—the capitalist class. We emphasize the growing power of the capitalist class, making it more and more difficult for the workers to gain a livelihood, and the continuous struggle on the part of the workers, forcing from capitalism more and more of its labor product, and realizing that with the economic growth of industries into the mammoth trust stage, thereby being brought more and more into the control of a few men; the workers to further protect and prepare themselves for their historic mission, the emancipation from wage-slavery, we, the Socialist Party, indorse and recommend to the workers the industrial form of organization as a means to protect their economic and political rights, and with their ballots elect representatives of their own class into public office. We maintain that political support of capitalist parties on the part of the workers, simply results in greater power for the capitalist class.

The Socialist Party is the party of the working class, able and competent to represent the interests of the producers on the political field. The resignation of each and every Socialist candidate on the Socialist ticket is in the hands of the Socialist organization, so that when elected to office, if he or she does not fulfill the pledges made previous to election, his or her resignation is demanded.

As measures that will strengthen the position of the workers in the struggle against capitalism, we demand:

First—Equal suffrage for men and women.

Second—The Initiative and Referendum, Proportional Representation and the Right of Recall.

Third—Compulsory Insurance against accident and death, the cost to be borne by the employers.

Fourth—That the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts be so corrected, modified and restricted that delinquent girls brought before such courts be humanely treated from a corrective and modern viewpoint, and that such delinquents be not condemned to practical and demoralizing imprisonment in sectarian institutions, wherein sweatshops, laundries and other industries are conducted for profit, and that the state immediately furnish modern and humane and industrial homes for the mental and moral education and the upliftment of such unfortunates.

Fifth—The abolishing of all exemptions from taxation of taxable property, including church property, convents, charity hospitals, etc., heretofore exempted from their just burden of taxation.

Sixth—We recognize that the question of race superiority injected into the minds of the white wage-worker against the negro and other races is only a tactical method used by the capitalist class to keep the workers divided on the economic field. We, therefore, call upon the negro workers and those of other races, to unite with the Socialist Party on the political field as the only avenue of abolishing wage slavery, and the only solution of the race question.

Seventh—Realizing that white slavery and prostitution is a direct result of economic exploitation of female labor, we insist that the women workers be protected by the state against low wages and long hours of labor.

Resolutions.

Resolved, That this convention instruct Victor L. Berger to introduce a bill into Congress to prevent the unnecessary loss of life on sea-going ships as was the case in the Titanic disaster.

Whereas, The splendid and victorious struggle of our 25,000 fellow-workers at Lawrence, Mass., has resulted not only in raising their own wages, but also those of 300,000 shamefully underpaid slaves in the textile industries; and,

Whereas, The brutal capitalist class of the State of Massachusetts determined at any cost and at all hazards to crush the rising revolt of the workers and has therefore, caused the indictment and arrest of our comrade, Wm. D. Haywood and other, notwithstanding the fact that directed by these leaders, the workers of Lawrence conducted themselves with great restraint and caution; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That we pledge ourselves to support the workers of Lawrence in their continued struggle and that we declare our confidence in Comrade William D. Haywood and heartily indorse his activity in behalf of the workers of Lawrence.

Whereas, The capitalist class of Lawrence, Mass., has broken its implied pledge to release Ettor and Giovanitti from jail and now propose to persecute these workers.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the delegates of Ohio, in convention assembled, do express our earnest protest against the unlawful and brutal imprisonment of those workers on the ridiculous charge of accessory before the fact of the murder of a comrade in the struggle for better conditions.

We demand for them a fair and immediate trial and pledge both moral and financial support in the efforts to gain their release.

Whereas, It is of great importance to the Socialist movement that the children of Socialist families be kept within the sphere of Socialist thought and influence, while being given opportunity for wholesome recreation and enjoyment; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the twelfth annual convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, That the organization of young people's Socialist leagues be approved and encouraged, and that the attention of the various locals of the State be drawn to this matter through the State Bulletin.

Whereas, The craft union movement has been largely rendered impotent because of its lack of solidity and its antiquated methods.

Whereas, Industrial progress has almost universally substituted large scale production for small scale production; and,

Whereas, The principles of industrial unionism are now made absolutely necessary for the protection and advancement of the working class;

Tehrefore, be it Resolved, by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That the membership of the party in this State be urged to recommend to the working class the principles of industrial unionism without the indorsement of any particular national organization.

The tragedy in Franklin Park last Monday, in which Cecelia Farley shot A. E. Zollinger, a married man, with Jerome Quigley, night clerk at the Neil House, close by, uncovers another case of improper conduct, domestic misery and possibly murder. There is one feature missing and that is the fact that not a single daily paper has been able to cite this as an example of Socialism breaking up a home. It is a plain, only too common story of sordid sin and shame for which the capitalistic system is responsible.

The sublime spectacle is presented to the people of the United States of President Taft and his immediate predecessor going about th country attacking each other with vigor and venom like two of the lowest class of old party politicians. Both are telling the truth; there is no doubt about that, and the public should take due notice thereof. Teddy is now in Ohio and the fight is fierce. On a smaller scale is a contest between Ned Taylor and Tom Clark for the Republican congressional nomination in this district. Wonderful to state, Ned and Tom are telling facts about each other.

Congressional investigations show that it is not necessary to steal. All you have to do is absorb. If pickpockets, instead of stealing a roll, would absorb it, they would get off without trouble. The Steel Trust has grown greater and ever greater through theis process. It absorbed Tennessee Coal and Iron and also the Tin Plate Trust. Of course, certain insiders benefited through this, but there must always be some stalls for the operators, and the stalls must get their rake-off.

SOOTHING EFFECT OF BULLETS

Pennsylvania's State Constabulary is organized and maintained for the purpose of killing during labor troubles, and it is probably the most effective body of the kind in the world. If it does not get a striker it may be depended upon to get an "innocent bystander."

Its record in this respect is not very carefully tabulated. It would never do for the workers to know how many people were killed from month to month, but as the owners of Pennsylvania fight strenuously for the continuation of the Constabulary it can be seen that it is a highly useful body.

In order to throw a proper sense of fear into the hearts of the idle miners, a troop of riders fired into a crowd and succeeded in killing a 14-year-old boy.

This may have had its benevolent features, also, as it probably prevented the boy from going into the mines and there being crushed by falling slate or suffocated to death.

So if the workers of Pennsylvania were properly appreciative they would understand all the hardships from which the riders keep them. They would understand that they merely inflict violent death a little earlier than it comes in the course of industrial accidents.

For that, surely, they deserve some credit. Consequntly, they should not be too vehemently denounced.

THE HOPE OF THE DEMOCRATS

About the only thing for which the Democrats can look in the coming campaign is that the Republicans will make such arrant fools of themselves that there will be a chance for an unterrified. But things are not shaping up right. Woodrow Wilson is sufficiently high-browed, but he is far removed from any vital understanding of public questions. Champ Clark has the vocal energy and the ceaseless flow of words. But he gave up thinking when he went to Congress for the first time, and that was many, many years ago. Harmon's popularity is confined, apparently, to himself, and he cannot vote many times without getting into trouble.

In New England there is not a man large enough to spread even over his own state. In New York the Democrats are small men who believe in the intensive cultivation of their own restricted political field. In the South, excluding Missouri, there is not a man large enough to draw a crowd in the other parts of the country. In the far West Democracy is dead.

The lack of men is emphasized in the lack of issues. Some moribund, discarded issues, of course, are in the Democratic platform. There are some demands the Reupblicans found to be worthless as issues that have been adopted by the Democrats.

But they form a rickety platform, and possibly the successors of Jefferson will have to turn again, when all others fail, to Old Doc Bryan. He is so accustomed to being defeated that he will probably be unhappy and make the others unhappy if he is not deefated this year.

When he began his career he seemed to possess some ability to learn and certain political non-conformers pinned their hopes to him. He has been steadily learning backward and at the present time has developed to a period somewhat before the Civil War.

He has been so busy writing, talking and traveling that he has not had the time to learn anything. As he has become richer, and he is in receipt of a big income, he has become more and more conservative.

So the Democrats are up against a big proposition. They do not dare move forward. They cannot move backward. Consequently, they might as well move out of the way.

RECOUNTED IN ONE DAY.

There are now approximately 150,000 members in the Socialist party, and as the growth is now about at the rate of 10,000 a month, it looks probable that the party will enter the campaign in November with a membership of some 200,000.

When the Socialist party was formed at Indianapolis in 1901 it started with a membership of about 6,000. To say the least, therefore, there has been considerable growth since.

And the vote has increased in that time from less than 100,000 to nearly 1,000,000, a considerable growth, also.

In the same time the Socialist vote of the world has increased from some 3,000,000 to well over 10,000,000.

And the Socialist tide is still flowing. As a sample of the progress now being made, we condense from yesterday's Call, confirming ourselves wholly to that one issue.

Socialists in Vienna, Austria, have captured six seats in the municipal elections and will contest eight more on the second ballot. The "Christian Socialist" party of that city, which is the political expression of the Roman Church, has been overwhelmingly defeated and has lost control of the municipality, only four of its previous fourteen members being re-elected.

Two Socialists have been elected to the National Assembly in th Argentine Republic, despite the active hostility of the church and the government.

In Naugatuck, Conn., the Socialist candidate for head of the municipality has been elected against the candidate of the combined Republican and Democratic parties, three others having been elected with him, thus making a Socialist majority on the Town Board. The successful candidate at the head of the ticket is, we believe, a Roman Catholic. Two Socialists were also elected as High School Commissioners.

A Socialist and labor daily paper has just been launched in London, England, and another one, for which a fund of $350,000 has already been collected, is about to appear.

The editors of the Appeal to Reason are on trial, answering to the charge of having sent "obscene" matter through the mails. Which means that they exposed vicious practics going on in Fort Leavenworth Prison. While the trial is proceeding, the Appeal, for the first time, has passed the half million mark in circulation and is still going up.

A Catholic Socialist society, which was started in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1906, reports enormous progress in lecture work, literature distribution and membership. It claims more adherents for Socialism among Catholics in Scotland that are gathered from any other denominational section of the community. All these items are taken from one issue of The New York Daily Call. They represent but the reports of one day.

VOTERS DON'T BE FOOLED.

The management of the Ohio State Journal and the Columbus Dispatch would have you believe that the Municipal Buildings of New York City are grouped so as to form a "Civic Center," in and about the Grand Central Terminal Station of said city. (See "Picture Show" description first page of Sunday's Journal and Dispatch and note the caption "WORLD'S GREATEST RAILROAD TERMINAL AND CIVIC CENTER.")

The management of these papers is well acquainted with the fact that New York City does not possess a Civic Center in and about the Grand Central Terminal, and that New York City does not possess a Civic Center at all. The Municipal Buildings of New York City are located at the extreme south end of said City, are not grouped and are at least three miles from the Grand Central Terminal.

Instead of a Civic Center, New York City has numerous well paved streets, all the streets that can be accommodated in the territory between the rivers. When these streets became inadequate, elevated railroads were built and when the elevated roads and streets combined were inadequate, then New York City created scores of miles of sub-ways. New York City in its wisdom provided streets, elevated roads and sub-ways that its population may go to and from their places of business quickly, comfortably and safely. She has no Civic Center. She thinks of comforts and conveniences first. Don't be fooled by such misrepresentation of facts as the editors of the Dispatch and Journal (under orders of course) would have you believe by the "Picture Show Civic Center ad. of Sunday.")

SOCIALIST PROGRAM AT THE PRIMARIES NEXT TUESDAY.

Congressman—J. L. Bachman.
State Legislators—A. C. Eby, D. J. Farrell, M. C. Green, Peter Kinnear, R. M. Woody.
Recorder—H. W. Weichers.
Prosecuting Attorney—W. C. Bates.
Treasurer—E. A. Palmer.
Clerk of Courts—F. E. Johnston.
Sheriff—O. G. Van Schoyck.
Surveyor—A. E. Smith.
Auditor—T. C. Southard.
Probate Judge—E. B. Eubanks.
Coroner—Dr. C. W. Albright.
Commissioners—D. M. Kuhns, A. C. Fries, Jacob Stoeszel.
Common Pleas Judges—Charles E. Belcher, Adolph E. G. Haak.

The above constitutes the ticket which Socialists will support at the primaries on Tuesday, May 21, in the various precincts of the city and county. The regular nominees for State Senator were excluded from the ballot by the board of elections and the Socialists in each precinct must write the name of one or more delegates who will later nominate candidates for State Senators from this district. Socialists should turn out to the primaries next Tuesday, not because there are any contests, but because every ward and township should write in the names of Senatorial delegates and also vote for County Central Committenmen from each ward and township.

The Bond Issue.

The Eelectric Light Extender claims the attention of Socialists. This paper is not authorized to publish instructions to Socialists upon this or any other bond issue. We can only say that, as a general principle, we favor the common ownership of all public utilities. We recognize the fact that many local questions in cities, and towns have but little bearing upon our ultimate aim—the Industrial Republic. We must, however, meet these issues.

The Third Street Viaduct.

Elsewhere in this paper will be found information upon this matter and a careful reading of the same is urged.

The Civic Center.

As to Civic Center, the Columbus Socialist believes that it would be untrue to its duty if it did not warn the workers that this scheme is backed by the same Chamber of Commerce gang that fathered the Park Commission plan now dead and damned. Nearly three months ago the management of this paper was appealed to by "gentlemen" representing the so-called Retail Merchants Association. The attention of these representatives was called to the fact that labor was not recognized in any of the details of the scheme. They (the "gentlemen") were invited to present their case to the general meeting of the local party but they side-stepped the invitation. The literature for the Civic Center has been printed by some scab print-shop. High street real estate sharks are behind the plan and the best advice we can give is to "SMASH THE CIVIC CENTER."

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

During the past week there has been a slight rally on the part of some of the Boosters, yet we are falling far short of what naturally should be expected from our organization. If all of you comrades could see and know the difficulties we are forced to meet each week, you would certainly rally to our support.

We have been calling your attention each week to the necessity of each comrade doing something towards boosting the circulation, as this will be practically the only source of income we will have for several months.

Remember, that owing to the advance in our contract rates, the paper is costing a great deal more to put out than it did a year ago.

If you never expect to get another subscriber, let each and every one of you comrades determine that you will get at least one subscriber the coming week. Let's make this office look like old times. Let's see the face of every old time Booster show up with one or more subs. This is the important thing now, and every one of us MUST do something NOW. Let the air ring with the sweet music of the social revolution. Let us carry the glad tidings of Freedom into the homes of every man and woman in this county.

ON TO WASHINGTON.

Comrade Diebert, Jr., of the First ward, went out last Sunday morning and took five subs for this paper and the Appeal for a year each. He says: "It was like shaking them off the trees, they came so easy." The boys in the First ward are always on the job.

Comrade Bates of the Sixth ward runs capitalism up a tree. He puts one Republican and two Democrats on the list and makes them pay for their own education. Three more voters gone crazy.

Comrade Fremont Brown of Urbana O., came into this office last wednesday and asked us to send a speaker over there and boost "The Columbus Socialist." "I take all the Socialist papers I can get," he said, "and the Columbus Socialist is the best of them all, not excepting the Appeal. I can get more real, solid, propaganda, revolutionary socialism out of it than out of any other Socialist paper, and I can see that it at least has abilty behind it if it has no financial backing," and he said, "I want you to send us a speaker to boost it to the Comrades in Urbana." We might just state that Comrade Lewis will fill a date in that town May 27th.

Comrade E. L. Fries of the Sixteenth ward punches capitalism in the nose and puts on two new ones.

Above all, don't fail to use the red ticket and purchase from our advertisers, as this is the weapon that every comrade and sympathizer can use very effectively.

Boosters with one or more to their credit: Comrades uck, Phelan, Phalen, Roberts, Fortun, Meier, Ellis, Zinn, Hartman, Fisher, Fries, Northrup and Howard.

The Express and Westbote, the Columbus German daily paper, on May 18, 1912, has the following timely comment concerning the misconduct of certain federal judges (translated by Comrade Haak):

"A most wise federal judge in Seattle, Washington, simply divested a citizen of the United States of his citizenship because this citizen admitted that he was a Socialist and that he advocated a change of the constitution of the United States. That is the best way to make more Socialists. At the same time, a federal judge is under investigation in Washington, D. C., because he has been accepting bribes in the most unblushing manner. Another federal judge, being unable to vent his spleen against two of the most highly respected labor leaders, has for years been trying his best to jail these labor leaders under the absurd pretext that they have been guilty of contempt of court. No wonder that the people are clamoring for the right of recall to rid themselves of such judges."

IN HIGH SOCIETY.

Senator Clarke occupies a mansion with his young wife and two small children in New York city, containing one hundred and tweney-five rooms, two elevators, three 275 horse power boilers, three turbine electric generators, thirty bath rooms, a huge swimming pool, passenger elevator for 25 people, half a million dollars worth of bronzes, one million dollars worth of rugs and two million dollars worth of pictures. Within a mile of this mansion there are one hundred thousand people crowded into dark rooms sometimes as many as twenty to a room.

THE MAGAZINE FOR WORKERS

"Absolutely the finest Socialist publication I have ever come across," is what a man in England wrote in commending this publication to THE INTERNATIONAL SOCIALIST REVIEW, the magazine that fights for the working class.

The REVIEW is the only publication of its kind in the world. It is the only monthly illustrated magazine which is devoted exclusively to the interests of working men and working women. It is the only magazine which actually gets right down into the ranks of the toilers and tells what they are doing and thinking and feeling. It stands for aggressive and uncompromising. The REVIEW is not only a magazine for Socialists; it is with the workers everywhere in their every struggle, not only in America but in other countries as well. Wherever there is a conflict between men and masters, there the Review has its correspondents and its photographers. Every month it is filled with pictures right from the scene of action. Its articles and stories come not only from trained writers but from the workers themselves. Its circulation has tripled in the last four years. It is growing bigger and better from month to month.

Several applications for membership approved.

Communication from state office requesting date for Com. Ben Wilson at $15.00 and expenses was turned down, as Local Columbus refuses to pay such exorbitant rates for speakers. The rank and file have made these speakers possible, and these men are now holding up the membership for exorbitant rates for speeches which makes it impossible for the weaker locals to secure their services.

Comrade Albright, the newly elected organizer will begin his duties Tuesday, May 21st according to a motion that prevailed.

The members, and especially the Secretary of the School Board advisory Committee have not been attending meetings and the school board members cannot make any progress. The Secretary was instructed to notify each member of the Committee to be present at the next meeting or the branch would be called upon to elect another delegate in their place.

NOTICE TO OHIO LOCALS.

Any Local in the State that desires to hold a propaganda meeting, this office is in a position to furnish you with a speaker, providing the Local will bear the expenses and allow us the privilege of selling subscriptions to this paper. Expenses of speaker to consist of railroad fare and entertainment. Send in your request at once, in order that we may arrange the dates.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

At the last meeting of the Board of Education Socialist member W. R. Draper introduced the following resolution:

RESOLVED, by the members of the Board of Education of Columbus, Ohio, school district;

That the Seventh and Eighth grades be established in the West Broad Street school, West Broad and Hague avenue, beginning with the school year September, 1912.

This was referred to the finance committee.

Superintendent J. A. Shawan was re-elected to fill his present position for the next two years, beginning Aug. 31.

The rooms of the board were crowded at the meeting with bidders on the new Lane Avenue school, and for contract work on various other buildings. Over 100 bids were read to the board. The bids on the Lane Avenue building averaged something over $25,000.

No mention was made of the petitioned increase by men and women teachers of the high schools. A third petition was presented from the teachers of the Junior high schools asking for a raise, claiming that they must meet the same requirements as the high school teachers, but that their increases come more slowly and in smaller amounts.

GOOD WORDS FOR COLUMBUS SOCIALIST.

Comrade Fremont Brown, of Urbana, Ohio, declares that the Columbus Socialist is the best Socialist propaganda paper that he knows of, and he knows about most of them. Comrade Brown is an old, gray haired radical in the fight since the days of the abolition movement.

A comrade from Pittsburg—he is a "Red," of course—declares that, next to one paper in the United States, the Columbus Socialist is the best party paper he has yet read. Praise from such sources is of some value.

The management of this paper tries to be modest and only prints the above to show how our paper is appreciated away from home. GET BUSY.

DRAMATIC CLUB.

The Dramatic Club meets every Sunday, 7:30 P. M., at 935 1-2 South High. Everybody will be welcomed.

GO AFTER ADVERTISERS.

Any comrade who knows of a prospective advertiser will confer a favor by reporting same to this office. Results from any adv. in this paper are quick and sure. Get your Groceryman, Milkman, Jewelryman, Shoedealer, in fact all the merchants with whom you do business to try this paper out for a month. We are sure he will continue after testing it out.

There may be exceptions, due to stupidity or misinformation, but as a rule you can set down the man who charges the Socialist movement with being against the home as a rascal.

What the Democratic party has done for labor since it has been in control of congress can be summed up in one word, "Nothing."

Capitalism has a strangle hold on the working class and until the workers get wise to the method of getting a half-Nelson on capitalists they will forever be crushed by the hold of the earth's greatest economic force.

If labor produces everythhing is it right that exploiters should enjoy the benefits of this toil?

If the working class wishes to be relieved from the bondage of wage slavery they must use the same instrument as the capitalists—the ballot. Politics controls industry, and to control industry the workers must control politics.

In these days of prosperity the Trusts are raising the price of living, and the announcement is now made that butter will soon reach a price of 50 cents a pound. Is it not time that the working class arouse themselves and vote to overthrow a system which compels them to be the suckers of idle exploiters?

With the announcement that the Government is going to investigate the Money Trust comes the statement that the financial power will secure a federal injunction to restrain an investigation of a private business. And the Government confesses that the Trust can defy the right to investigate the greatest bunco game of the century.

George W. Perkins, financial backer of Roosevelt, in his claim for the presidency, is the head of the Harvester Trust, which was protected from punishment by Roosevelt while he filled the chair of Chief Executive of the Nation. Can't you workingmen get it into your minds that the financial magnates are the controlling power behind the old political parties. If you can't, don't bellow when the Trust squeezes your pay envelope.

The government is "busting" the trusts and the trusts are raising the price of necessities of life. Thus you see the Trusts are greater than the government; in other words, the government recognizes its inability to curb the power of the Trusts. And at this time the Trusts are contributing to the campaign funds of the presidential candidates on the old party tickets, and for the giving of this slush fund they are undoubtedly promised immunity from punishment. Get wise, you workers, and bust the trusts by the power of your ballots.

CITY COUNCIL GIVES ANOTHER EXHIBITION

City Solicitor Bolin too Busy to give Strap-Hangers any Consideration Whatever

The long-suffering residents of the West Side have nothing to hope for from the majority of the city council as at present controlled by the Rail-Light. Last Monday night Socialist Councilman Wilson of the Tenth ward, introduced a resolution instructing the judiciary committee to hire attorneys and bring suit against the Rail-Light company to operate the Camp Chase cars around the loop, but met defeat. Conditions on the West Side street car lines are intolerable, but City Solicitor Bolin said he had taken the question up with the company, but owing to affairs left over by the other administration he had not had sufficient time to attend to this matter.

It will be recalled that Bolin had time to look up all the alleged decisions when Karb's pet paper, Sec-See Philbrick's Weekly Weak, got the city printing, but he is awful busy now when the working people of the West Side, as Socialist member Bohnert tersely told it, had to hang onto the car numbers to get home. The West Siders queered their case when they elected Socialist councilmen.

The city can take no action against the Columbus Gas and Fuel company, which forfeited its artificial gas franchise, for which it was to pay $4000 annually. This was the verbal opinion of Solicitor Bolin when it was insisted upon by Councilman Alcott. President Dave Logan rapped Mr Alcott on the wrist for asking such a question. You are in bad company, Louie.

The council, that is most of the members, worked themselves up to fever heat over a resolution directing Mayor Karb to file his charges against the civil service commissioners with the council instead of with the probers selected by himself. The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That the mayor be directed to comply with the provisions of sections 4268 to 4267, inclusive, of the general code of Ohio, and file charges, if any he have, against the civil service commission of the city of Columbus, at the regular meeting of the city council May 20, 1912.

Members Barry, Biederman, Luchs and McGuire voted nay on the resolution.

NOTICE.

A mass meeting of all Jews will be held on Sunday afternoon in Federation Hall at 2 o'clock P. M., to protest and if necessary to strike against the uncalled for raise of the price of all meats sold in the City of Columbus.

Several good speakers have been secured for the meeting and it is expected that definite action will be taken to prevent this outrage.

PROTEST IS MADE ON GIRL WORKERS.

Cincinnati—A protest against conditions surrounding girl workers employed at low wages was sent today to the Methodist General Conference at Minneapolis by the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union, which is seeking to unionize the plant of the Methodist Book Concern, the publishing house of the church in Cincinnati.

Attorney Nicholas Klein and Vice President Flannery of the union in sending the protest say girls employed in the bindery room of the concern are paid $3 a week and a maximum of $5.

Much ado has been made in the daily papers about the denunciation of child labor by the Methodist General Conference. It would seem that the conference should straighten out its own house at Cincinnati. Girls cannot buy very much for $5 a week these days. What?

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

Chicago, May 11.—The efforts of National Organizer O. F. Branstetter in South Carolina resulted in the state convention applying for a state charter. A state constitution was adopted. Wm. Eberhard, 857 King St., Charleston, was nominated for State Secretary, and J. A. Royal, 1622 Assembly St., Columbia, was nominated for National Committeeman.

The National Secretary, following the usual custom, will put the constitution and the nominees to a referendum vote of the state membership. If the vote on the constitution is affirmative, he will then put to the National Executive Committee the question of granting a state charter.

The convention also nominated a state ticket as follows:

Governor, R. B. Britton, Charleston.

Lieutenant governor, J. C. Inabinet, Newberry.

Secretary of state, P. I. Rawl, Lexington.

Comptroller general, J. F. Fink, Leesville.

Attorney general, John A. Mette, Columbia.

State treasurer, J. W. S. Pigler, Spartanburg.

Supt. of agriculture, O. W. Thompson, Reevesville.

Railroad commissioner, W. R. Charles, Pelzer.

State Secretary Dooley of Oklahoma reports as follows: "At the close of the first quarter of 1913, April 30, Oklahoma had a membership of almost 6000, with an average membership of 5400.

"Since Jan. 1, 1913, the State Office has issued over 300 charters to subordinate organizations. This number does not include charters for branches which number is probably about 150. Total number of branches and locals 574.

"'Our correspondence was as follows for the month of April just closed: 1123 letters received, 2815 letters sent out, 899 packages mailed out; total pieces of mail handled (exclusive of newspapers) 4637."

By a recent referendum in Ohio the following were elected members of the National Committee: Alvah C. Eby, 174 East Fifth avenue, Columbus, and William Patterson, 1727 Michigan street, Toledo. William Bessemer, 3584 East Fifty-fifth street, Cleveland, and Tom Clifford, 8617 Fulton Road, Cleveland, were re-elected to the same position.

The state convention of the Socialist party of West Virginia will be held in Charleston, beginning June 1st.

PPROPOSED NATIONAL PARTY REFERENDUM.

Paducah, Kentucky.

"Moved by Local Paducah, Kentucky, that a referendum vote be taken on the question of holding a Unity Conference, for the purpose of uniting the Socialist party and the Socialist Labor party, same to take place if adopted provided the Socialist Labor party concurs.

"Comment: We believe it folly to postpone this action any longer. At the rate we are progressing at present we believe that by uniting all the forces greater things could be accomplished. This is a duty we owe to ourselves and to the world-wide Socialist movement in order to overthrow our one common enemy and hasten the glorious day of freedom.

LANCASTER NOTES.

Local Lancaster meets every Sunday at 2:00 P. M. standard time, Corner Wheeler St. and Washington Ave. All readers of the Socialist in Lancaster should attend these meetings.

If we want Socialists in our day let us all be "boosters."

We have three big special propositions on hand that will benefit the movement in this locality if you can get all the Socialists you know to attend our meetings, and get to working for Socialism.

Let it not be any fault of ours if we do not let every working man in the County know before election what the real issue is.

J. A. BRADLEY,
Organizer.

May 13, 1913.

FROM BELMONT COUNTY.

Here are some of the happenings in Belmont County.

Comrade Beery, State organizer was with us three days last week, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. He arrived in Neff too late to arrange a meeting for him, but we took him to a meeting of the Miners to whom he gave a half hour's talk. On Wednesday he went to Pike Creek in the lower end of the County and organized a local of ten members. On Thursday en route to Columbus he stopped at Bethesda and organized a local with twelve members. This County is ripe for organization and with very little work we can have a local in every community in the County.

Local Bellaire is arranging for a Socialist Sunday School, and from appearance it has every assurance of success from the start. Local Bellaire's Sunday Propoganda Meetings are well attended and are creating much interest. Among the visitor yesterday were Harry Leeds of McMechen, W. Va., and J. H. House of Bailey's Mills. Local Klee will have a Propaganda Meeting May 23rd at which W. B. Hilton, editor of the Wheeling Majority will speak on Socialism and Unionism. A good meeting is assured for Walter can always draw a crowd.

APPEAL TO REASON TRIAL POSTPONED

Fearing Effect on Elections, Prosecution Put Case Over Until November.

Fort Scott, Kan., May 10.—Once again the enemies of the working class have shown their cowardice. Fearing the consequences of their course at the polls in the coming elections, the prosecutors of the Appeal to Reason, the fighting Socialist propaganda weekly of Girard, Kan., today postponed their case against the fearless editors of the insuppressible sheet until after the workers of the United States have voted next November.

This is the second time that the hounders of the Appeal have resorted to this trick in an effort to wreak their vengeance on their indomitable foe and still place themselves beyond the reach of the judgment of the American voters. In the last great trial of the federal authorities against Fred Warren the same thing happened. But even so, the powers that be did not dare send the fighting editor to jail and responsive to the pressure brought to bear by his terrior stricken masters, President Taft issued an unsolicited pardon to the fearless Warren.

From the Leavenworth Penitentiary, the house of shame and hell hole of brutality and degeneracy, which was exposed in the Appeal to Reason and for doing which three of its editors are now to answer to the charge of having sent obscene matter through the mails, Fred Warren had summoned sixteen guards to testify.

But the prosecution argued that the prison service would be crippled if the guards were all permitted to come to court and agreed to permit the taking of their testimony by deposition.

In the meantime, the Appeal will continue its battle with the corrupt and tyrannical federal judiciary and even though Warren, Wayland and Phifer are convicted in November, there are those who are ready to take the places that will be vacated by them and carry on with undiminished intensity and relentlessness the war on the capitalist courts.

"ANTI-GAG" PROVISION ADOPTED.

Washington.—The House has adopted a provision in the post-office appropriation bill which will prevent the imposition of the "gag-rule" on employes in the postal service. The vote on this provision was 183 in favor and 1 against, the Republican minority leader, Mr. Mann, recording his vote in the negative. This provision will restore to the employes of the government their rights as citizens under the constitution and prohibit the promulgation of any executive order denying the right of postal employes of the government to appear before committees in oCngress or engage in other activities in securing increases in wages, shortening of hours, or redress of grievances. The American Federation of Labor is directly responsible for the insertion of this provision in the bill, and the postal employes, as well as all other employes of the government, if this provision is accepted by the Senate, will be protected in their right to form labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. It is probable that the Senates will accept this provision in the bill, and as it is an amendment to the post-office appropriation bill, the President would be powerless to eliminate the provision except by vetoing the entire bill.

REPORT ON C. H. KERR COMPANY MADE TO NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Summary of the Facts as Gleaned after Thorough Examination

To the Comrades of the Socialist Party of America:

We, Clyde A. Berry of Joplin, Missouri, and Stephen M. Reynolds of Terre Haute, Indiana, as two of the Committee, make to you the following report:

First. On Nov. 23, 1911, Comrade Robert Hunter submitted to the National Executive Committee the following motion:

"I move that we request the National Committee to elect a committee of three to investigate and report the facts upon the following subjects:

"(1) Is the Chas. H. Kerr Co. a co-operative enterprise?

"(2) To what extent are the shares of that company owned by party members and party locals?

"(3) To what extent has that company a monopoly of the literature of Socialism?

"(4) If the company is a co-operative, in what manner if any can the stockholders control and manage their property democratically?"

Second. By request of the National Executive Committee made Dec. 7, 1911, this motion was submitted to the National Committee as Motion No. 10.

SUMMARY.

Replying to Question No. 1 of Motion No. 10, "Is the C. H. Kerr Company a co-operative enterprise?"

The term co-operative has been given many definitions, some very loose.

(a). The Standard Dictionary says: "A co-operative society is a joint stock association for establishing and maintaining a co-operative store or factory or for borowing and lending money among its members."

(b). A co-operative store is a store established by a co-operative society where merchandise is sold to MEMBERS at or near cost, PROFITS being divided among the members in proportion to their holdings of stock.

The C. H. Kerr Co. has not paid dividends, has not earned any, until 1911. The company has kept its promises to the stockholders in the manner provided, viz., by giving share-holders books at one-half (½) the retail price.

Question 4. The company is a stock company. It is owned by the shareholders. The shareholders can control and manage the property. The Socialist party of America has no more control of this publishing house than it has of the other publishing houses devoted exclusively to publishing Socialist books and magazines. The Socialist party can and does control all publications to a greater or less degree by giving or withholding its individual approval of things published or advocated.

Your committee wants to say that all the books of the C. H. Kerr Co., stock books, minutes of directors and stockholders' meetings, ledgers, letters, proxies and the names and residences of shareholders were promptly given to your committee and that we have carefully examined the same and have reported herein the facts as we have found them and we believe that no Socialist publishing house has more open methods of conducting the publishing business than this one. It is not the ideal. It is not owned or controlled by the party. The profits when made belong to the shareholders. Comrade Kerr owns a very large part of the stock, almost one-third (1-3). He has the LEGAL RIGHT to own it ALL.

His ownership has been paid for as the books show. It would be difficult for scattered stockholders to assemble their proxies and take control if they desired to. Evidently they do not desire to, for at the January, 1913, meeting of the stockholders, Comrade Kerr held, as shown, 1137 shares personally and 1382 shares by proxy out of 2507 shares represented and 3688 shares outstanding. This committee reports that Comrade Robert Hunter became a stockholders in the C. H. Kerr Co. on January 25th, 1900, and that he has been a stockholder ever since; that he now is and that he gave his proxy to Comrade Kerr in writing "good until revoked," that he and any stockholder has the right to attend in person or by proxy stockholders' meetings and to examine the books of the company; that Comrade Hunter could have answered the questions propounded in Motion No. 10 and have published his findings as fully as now published by this committee.

Your committee believes that in the best interest of the Socialist party a full report should be made and have intended this report to be such to give full information to the comrades who may have been confused by the motion itself and the comments made thereon.

We therefore submit the foregoing for your information and consideration.

Fraternally yours,
CLYDE A. BERRY,
STEPHEN M. REYNOLDS.

CIVIC CENTER vs CIVIC WELFARE

Editor The Socialist:

The voters of Columbus whose income is less than $2500 a year cannot afford to endorse, at the polls, May 31st, the Civic Center plans laid down by the Retail Merchants' Association and boosted by the Ohio State Journal and the Columbus Dispatch. Why?

The welfare of the working man, at present, is of greater significance to our city than is the civic pride augmented by millions of outstanding bonds in the hands of sleek capitalists upon which they will pay no taxes and upon which the workingmen will pay the interest.

The $850,000 bond issue for the purchase of sites is but a grain of sand compared to the millions of money that will be required to complete the scheme.

A city hall that would cost less than a million would not be "in keeping" with the project as outlined by the association. And this would "set the pace" for the other municipal buildings, and the final result will be our welfare will be buried beneath our pride.

Another reason why this plan should be defeated at the present time, namely, the citizens of Columbus are in need of other, more beneficent things—we need a respectable, sanitary market house. Numerous municipal plants and facilities which we should be prepared for just as soon as we adopt the constitutional provision of "home rule."

There are many provisions that will benefit the workingman's family much more than this Civic Center plan. For example, the municipal light extender; the Third street viaduct, grade crossings, comfort stations, etc. Since the municipality can vote only a limited bond issue, the more legitimate improvements should be done first.

There is a fallacy regarding the sale of the old city hall and the school administration building. The proposal to sell the city hall and the school administration building at what they are worth will be no easy task. Strict economy will forbid such sale, too, because the city has ample unoccupied ground (63½x187½) adjoining on the west, which will meet the needs of each for all time.

Again, the time is inopportune to vote on the Civic Center bonds even if we had these more needed facilities. We want the Home Rule provision to the constitution adopted first, and then we will be enabled to plan the future of our city to the better aggrandizement of the whole municipality.

From an economical viewpoint the river plan of Civic betterment is much preferable to the plan proposed by the Merchants' Association, because of its position and scheme of beautification.

Therefore the workingmen of Columbus will be better benefitted by voting down the Civic Center bond issue and thus save their franchise (because of the limit on bond issues) for more needed improvements under Home Rule.

E. A. PALMER.

Columbus, Ohio.

For some years we have been paying extravagant salaries to our city officials, and the result has been the demand for the palatial housing of these favored gentlemen. They now demand what they call Civic Center" and want a bond issue of $850,000 to give it a start. Then will follow demands for a series of further bond issues, to the amount of a million dollars or more, to cary on to a finish the uncompleted work, which, without this aid, would be valueless. Of course this will necessitate some land deals, the character of which, it is reasonable to believe, will have some of the characteristics of the late dam land deal, in which we were made to pay many times the true value of the land. Will the taxpayers of our town at the coming election vote to again set these officials up in the land business after having been so recently betrayed by them.

Ninety per cent of the expenses of our government—city, county, state and national—is paid through the direct and indirect taxation of the industrial multitude, whose average family income is less than $500 a year, while our tax eaters, for whose gratification this milion is to be expended, now are in the enjoyment of salaries that run up into the thousands. Our growing governmental extravagance, along with the literal robbery of the public by dishonest officials, is the sole cause of the great increased cost of living. The consumer has to foot the bill every time, and the working man is the consumer because he and his family are ninety per cent of our population. The working man raises ninety-five per cent of our children. Is it fair that he should be made to build palaces for those who have betrayed him?

This "Civic Center" project is one that is not entitled to the support of any honest man; and is fully entitled to the active opposition of every voter who earns through honest industry what he gets.

J. F. LINTON.

SOME PERTINENT POINTS.

Below is an article published in the "Letters from Our Readers. department of the Ohio State Journal, that is worthy of reprinting in this paper, and we gladly do so.

John Jacob Astor.

Editor Ohio State Journal:

De Mortuis nil nisi bonum—"concerning the dead say nothing unless it be good," is a free translation of an ancient sentiment, which must allow large latitude for exceptions. If obey literally and universally, it would destroy much good from history's teaching by examples. Better a life whose good cannot be evil spoken of than a life whose evil must seek shelter behind a grave mound. The press does well to pass in silence John Jacob Astor's scandalous divorce and marital record, which will always remain an unpleasant memory. His tragic death following so soon after elicits appropriate charity on that point.

But, for the good of others, it is necessery to refer to the inevitable disappointment of the world that one should die in this humanitarian age—and out of a fortune of $150,000,000 leave only a pitiful little $30,000 for the general welfare of mankind. That is really a sadder incident in Mr. Astor's career than his untimely death by disaster. How little cause the race has to cherish his memory! How much he might have done with just a few of his inherited millions to bless humanity, also to atone, in a measure, for his errors, and to awaken sympathy and admiration for his better nature eclipsed by an evil notoriety!

A few endowed hispitals, and orphanages, and homes for the aged indigent, would have proclaimed to the world forever that he was not the heartless, selfish man which many believed him to be. But that opportunity is now gone and will never return. Millions of New York's suffering poor will be embittered afresh by his disregard for their needs, and Socialism will find another forcible illustration of the inequitable and sinful distribution of the world's life sustenance, under our present social system.

In the oncoming centuries of growing altruism no towering shaft or massive mausoleum will be able to hide Mr. Astor's monumental sin of omission to the race, in selfishly bequeathing the vast fortune, accumulated from the generations of others' toil, to a few relatives and friends. Seventy-five years ago, an American citizen could call hundreds or thousands of his fellow men his "property" and sell them on the auction block at so much per head, because their skins were black. Seventy-five years hence it will sound just as strange as that does now to us for one man to claim twice $75,000,000 as all his own, to do with it just as he pleases, regardless of humanity's needs. Mr. Carnegie's celebrated aphorism, "He who dies rich, dies disgraced," will then be the fundamental faith of society. This doctrine was first taught by one who spoke the parable of a man clothed in purple aand fine linen and faring sumptuously every day, while a brother man lay at his gate with his dogs, covered with sores and feeding on garbage. If that be "Socialism," make the most of it.

FEDERAL JUDGE BEGINS FIGHT ON SOCIALISTS

Would "Expatriate" Man Who Tries to Change U. S. Constitution

Seattle, May 11.—On the ground that he had admitted a fraud when he swore to uphold the principles of the constitution of the United States, Judge Cornelius H. Hanford of the United States court, late yesterday ordered the cancellation of the citizenship papers of Leonard Oleson, a Socialist agitator.

This is the first case on record in which a man has been deprived of his citizenship because of alleged seditious utterances, and it is construed today as a direct and far-reaching attack on Socialism.

Oleson received his final papers from the Pierce County Superior court on Jan. 10, 1910. He is alleged to have participated in the disturbances involving the Industrial Workers of the World in the Northwest, and last week the United States district attorney began proceedings before Hanford at Tacoma to revoke Oleson's citizenship.

In his decision Hanford said: "He (Oleson) claimed to have a clear understanding of the constitution and he knew that by one of its articles, the deprivation of life, liberty and property without due process of law is forbidden. Yet the evidence introduced in his behalf proved that the party which he is affiliated has for its main object the complete elimination of the property rights in this country.

"He expressed himself as being willing that the people should retain their money, but he insisted that all land, buildings and industrial institutions should become common property of all the people, which object is to be obtained, according to his belief, by the use of the ballot, and when that object is obtained the political government of the country will be entirely abrogated, because there will be no use for it.

"He further admitted these beliefs were entertained by him at and previous to the date of the proceedings in the Superior court admitting him to become a citizen of the United States.

"The notion that citizens of this country may absolve themselves from allegiance to the constitution of the United States otherwise than by expatiation, is a dangerous heresy. The nation generously and cordially admits to citizenship aliens having the qualifications prescribed by law, but recognizing the principles of the natural law, called the law of self-preservation. It restricts the privilege of becoming naturalized to those whose sentiments are compatible with genuine allegiance. The existing government is defined by the oath they are required to take. Those who believe in and propogate crude theories hostile to the constitution are barred.

"The evidence in this case does not have to be analyzed to determine his (Oleson's) attitude. He has not recognizance for the constitution of the United States, no intention to support or defend it against its enemies and is not well disposed towards the peace and tranquility of the people. His propaganda is to create turmoil and ends in chaos."

The Federal courts will have a sweet old time "expatriating" two million or more Socialists now in the United States. But, just here, it seems to the "Old Man" that we need the thorough organizations of the working class upon both the political and industrial fields. The toilers are waking up and Judge Hanford has given them a swift kick in the ribs that ought to arouse anybody that isn't a corpse. Hanford is only a tool of the masters and has, unintentionally, given the cause of Socialism the biggest boost that it has had for years. "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." The master class is mad—money mad—and their system is doomed. The Hanford decision needs no comment.

Socialism is such an Atheistic thing that it guarantees the working class the right to live.

Stand for something, Mr. Citizen, before you are found standing in the bread line.

Fear is a commodity for those who do not live at peace with their own conscience.

A man who thinks for himself is always a fool in the eyes of those who let others do their thinking.

An exchange says: "Blessed are the meek, for there are only a few of us left." Wonder if they are millionaires?

A Philadelphia man claims he knows how to live on one dollar a week. Only fools will try to discover his secret.

The Brooklyn church that keeps burglar alarms on its "poor boxes" may have more or less faith in humanity, but is taking no chances."

The hight price of living is giving mental paralysis to the working class and gray hairs to the middle class business man.

Every imaginable vicious form of graft and exploitation can grow and flourish under the name of piety and righteousness. The shackles that bind us are ignorance. Every true exposure is enlightenment, every fearless unowned man or woman stands in the social cess pool its one redeeming sight. And in the meantime graft and capitalistic righteousness unite in breaking this sparse fruit of the mire.

SOCIALIST WARNINGS CONFIRMED AT PEN

Graft and Brutality at Last Noticed by Capitalistic Papers. State Inferno is Exposed.

The probing of the alleged shortage in the accounts of Chief Clerk I. N. Rex of the penitentiary has brought to light numerous petty grafting practices that have gone on at the institution.

Prisoners have been charged three cents for every letter and two cents for every postal card sent out for them. The explanation is made that the extra cent on letters is to pay for the cost of the stationery furnished the prisoners for writing. No explanation is made as to why a charge of two cents is made for a government one-cent postal card.

Another species of graft, which does not exist now, was the practice of selling parole blanks to the prisoners. The law contemplates that these papers shall be given free, but it is alleged they have been charged as much as $25 for them. It is declared that a trusty and a former chaplain profited by this.

Another allegation is that there has been a great deal of parole money unaccounted for. A case indicating this was that of Patrick Flynn, a former prisoner, who died at St. Anthony's hospital. He left $35 on deposit, and it is declared that no effort was made by the state to pay this money to his heirs.

Such is the pitiful story of graft as worked at the Ohio penitentiary. Months ago the Columbus Socialist printed the first dribbling reports as they came from convicts just released from the state inferno on the banks of the Scioto. Not one of these men was allowed to tell his tale of woe in full. Each one was driven from town by the police and detectives put on the trail as soon as the con left the grim prison. What was published, however, counted for something. Mike Flesher, the fiendish guard, was fired as the result of brutality that even the prison officials could not stand for. Then came the contract graft held in place by the consent of the authorities. That is to go by June first. Then, forced by the knowledge that THE SOCIALIST was getting next to the unspeakable conditions at the pen, the state house gang got busy and now the local papers are featuring articles like the above and will claim the credit therefor.

PREACHING AND PRACTICING MURDER.

From opposite sides of the continent have come incitements to murder and violence that, if uttered by Socialists would bring down upon them all the vengeance in the hands of organized plunder. Here is the plot to murder and its blessings by the spokesman of religion:

"And soon—it has begun to happen already—the plain citizen of every country will form a combine. Its object will be the suppression of sedition and anarchy in the persons of the professional agitators. Theirs will be a big, powerful, effective but very unostentatious revolt. It will work quickly, surely, silently. The first thing the plain citizen combine will accomplish will be the quiet removal of these gentlemen. They won't be blown up; they will just quietly disappear from human ken.—Harrison Gray Otis in the Los Angeles Times, November 2, 1911."

"The Socialist is busy. He flaunts his red flag and openly preaches his doctrines. His great point of attack is religion. His power is an actual menace to our city. There seems to be no law to suppress or control him. He is more dangerous than cholera or smallpox—yes, he is the mad dog of society and should be silenced if needs be by a bullet."—Rev. John L. Bedford, in the Nativity Mentor.

That these words did not fail to bear fruit is proven by the following facts and those told in the article on this page:

At Franklin Furnace, N. J., some zinc miners organized a union. A vigilance committee dragged these miners out of their homes, beat them and their wives, threw them into the street and chased them into the surrounding woods.

At Lawrence, Mass., beasts in uniforms beat up women and children, violated all the laws tha tgot in their road, and did it all in the name of profit.

At a dozen other places within the last few months reckless mob murder has been done against organized labor. Not in one single case has any one been punished for these things. There is no talk about "Murder is murder" from mouthy politicians. There is no flock of notoriety-seeking detectives with dictagraphs and vaults full of evidence. There are no screaming headlines calling for suppression of those responsible for this violence.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST IN CONVENTION commission form of government as mere capitalist reforms. The same view was taken by Berlyn, of Illinois who closed the opposition to the recomendation of the committee to continue the study of this subject. Chairman Thompson closed for the committee.

Delegate Branstetter, of Oklahoma, was chosen chairman for the third day of the convention, with delegate Maley, of Washington, as vice-chairman. Miss Maley presided during the closing hours of the day's session being the first woman to act as chairman of the convention.

Urging the Socialists of the United States to rise in protest against American intervention in the Mexican revolution as the German Socialists have threatened to do if the Kaiser attempted to invade France, L. Guitterez de Lara addressed the convention as fraternal delgate of the Mexican Socialist party.

The matter was referred to the committee on international relations. It is understood that the convention will go on record aginst intervention by the United States in the Mexican revolution.

National Executive Member Haywood secured the floor on a point of personal privilege declaring that a communication to the convention from the tenth ward branch of Local Denver, Colo., objecting to him having a vote and voice in the convention, had been given out to the capitalist press after it had been tabled without being read to the convention. He asked that the communication be read. This was done and then on the motion of Delegate Spargo, Vermont, it was again tabled.

Delegate O'Rielly, Illinois, introduced an anti-Boy Scout resolution. Duncan of Montana introduced resolutions declaring that religions be considered by the Socialist party as a private matter and providing for the establismment of a Department of Industry in the National Office for the purpose of collecting industrial data.

When the people oblige the Standard Oil octopus to go into court as a defendant and put itself to enormous court costs they must expect that it will make them pay the bill sooner or later. It is making them pay the bill now, for coal oil has been put up 30 per cent. in price and not only will the court expenses be got back but the higher cost of operating under the court decision will be met and a good deal be left over besides for dividends for Oily John and his crew.

SWEAT SHOP SYSTEM EXPOSED TO VIEW

How Children are Exploited Behind Convent Walls. Assessors' Reports Reveal Real Conditions.

Socialists generally welcome the "Flag Campaign" now opening all over the country and being pushed to the front by the capitalist class.

We welcome the issue along that line for the opportunity of showing to the unsuspecting public the real motives of the exploiting class, which is to hide the dirty system of exploitation beneath the folds of OLD GLORY. To prove these statements we have had our reporter look up the tax returns of some of the fellows who are closely associated with some of those other fellows who have in the past ranted loud and long about the Red Flag vs. The Stars and Stripes.

The public had not forgotten how D. A. Clark, a certain priest in the Tenth Ward, ripped a hamestring on the eve of election last November in order to vent his spleen against the Socialists, who bid fair to carry the Tenth Ward, and who did, in fact, carry that ward by electing a councilman and assessor. And herein lies the secret of the bitter attack on Socialism by the reverend gentleman above mentioned.

Listen—When the Socialist assessor called on said D. A. Clark that worthy stated that he had nothing to assess and that he had never been assessed for anything he possessed. But under the Socialist way of doing things he came across with $6000.00 taxable property in the name of David A. Clark (the word "Father" was dropped, so we drop it here).

Listen No. 2—When the Socialist assessor and two assistants asked D. A. Clark to go through the convent at the southwest corner of W. Broad St. and Sandusky St., they were refused until an officer was threatened. The said D. A. Clark had also informed the Socialist assessor and his assistants that there was nothing subject to taxation within the high walls of said convent. After reluctantly consenting that the assessors and his assistants could go through, said D. A. Clark refused a request of the assessor to accompany them through. Why? Was it because at every turn he would be met with the monumental evidence of his falsehood when he had a few minutes before told the assessor that there was nothing there subject to taxation. What did the assessors find? To enumerate all they found would be too tedious to mention, but they found enough to place that institution on the tax duplicate for $10,000.00, which, added to the aforesaid $4000.00, makes the neat sum of $14,000.00 on which the city will get $189.00 taxes. We are unable to find where this loud-mouthed opponent of the Red Flag ever paid taxes before and we understand that no assessor ever required him to list his property for taxation. We are also unable to find where those in charge of this convent have ever listed this property for taxation before or were ever required by the assessors to do so. These and such as these are the flannel-mouthed Anarchists who prate about the Red Flag. These are they who skulk behind the protecting sentiment of the Stars and Stripes, and on certain roorback occasions slander men and principles, the like of which such as they are not fit to even mention.

What did they find behind those cruel prison walls? Machine after machine owned by a great corporation in the city of Columbus, organized under the protecting laws of the great state of Ohio, the Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Company, located at No. 49 E. Chestnut St., Columbus, O., with Mr. A. W. Hershey, President, and F. C. Rice, Secretary and Treasurer. These machines are used by little children, orphans, waifs and otherwise unfortunates from the age of 10 to 14 years, who work from 6 o'clock in the morning till 8 o'clock in the evening, except during school term, when they work from 6 in the morning to 7 in the evening, with two hours only off for school, but only the loss of one hour a day from labor duties. These unfortunate children operate these capitalistic machines to make overalls and over-jackets for the Hershey-Rice Co. for a price which we dare the said company or said convent authorities to name under oath. What do these children get in return for the long hours of service at a hurry-up speed from the tender age of 10 years till sixteen, and, many at time, longer? Read the affidavit of Agnes Vaughn, which appeared in the columns of the Columbus Socialist last January. These sweat-shop goods into which has been sewed the life blood, brain and brawn of those tender, innocent and unfortunate children, go upon the open market in direct competition with the goods which you, labor unilon man, and you, labor union girl, are making at a wage which you cannot exist upon, and in order that you might satisfy hunger of the stomach and hunger for affection and love, the unmarried man offers the price and the needy and love-lorn girl accepted the price for her sacred body, only to repent in remorse and curse the system which makes it necessary to sell her soul into shame in order that she may stave off the time a little longer in the hope that some man will consider her worth his affection until death does them separate. Oh! Daughter, if you were free to live on the full fruits of your toil, if you were free to choose your own helpmate, if you were free to say NO to all indecent proposals, then, and not till then, would you be free indeed, and that is the kind of free love which Socialism teaches. That is the free love which is as high above purchased love of the capitalistic ideas as is Heaven above the bottomless pit. But to return to the enemy. The Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Co. is incorporated and capitalized at $150,000.00. Their tax return for the year 1911 shows the following:

Value of office fixtures and furniture	$ 100 00
Average value goods and merchandise	7000 00
Value all tools and machinery	600 00
Value all money in possession and on deposit	[illegible] 00
Value all credits (mort, real and personal)	800 00
Total of all above	$9125 00

Rather a small showing that for a $150,000 corporation, composed of men who do not invest their money for fun. The Board of Review looked on this return with some little suspicion evidently, as we find that the board made the following additions:

Average value of goods and merchandise	$42,653 00
Value all tools, implements and machinery	2,330 00
Value all moneys in possession and on deposit	850 00
Net amount of credits	65 00
	$45,815 00

The tax return of the Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Co. was sworn to by an officer of the company. The records show who that officer was and we dare him to justify his oath on the return to the assessor.

We have nothing to say about D. A. Clark's religion. He can be a Catholic, Sun Worshiper or a Protestant so far as we are concerned, or, if you please, an infidel. We have nothing to say of the kind of religion the officers of this corporation may be imbued. But we do say that we have serious doubts of the genuineness of any religion which they may espouse when it permits them to do things pointed out here, which we challenge them to disprove.

It is simply astounding to think that a man who calls himself Christian (Reverend Father) will lay himself open to such exposure by making an uncalled-for and wholly unwarranted attack upon an emblem and a body of men whose shoelatches he is unworthy to loosen. It must be humiliating and even galling to come down to a dead level with honest men and make an honest return of property long held in hiding behind high walls, and those men, the very ones he had so recently villified.

There will be much said in this campaign about undesirable citizens, sane administrations, honest dollars, and all such rot, and it will be said by just such as the above-mentioned gentlemen, and this article is partly to serve notice on such that they had better look well to the screening of the glass house in which they live, lest a stray stone shatter a brittle pane and the stench within escape.

KURNEL ROSENFELT INTERVIEWED BY OUR REPORTER.

Says He Is Student of Karl Marx and That Gene Debs Is a "Bully Fellow."

Naturally when Kurnel Rosenfelt arrived in this city I was awaiting him anxious to interview him in regard to party tactics, etc. This was of course a very hard matter, as the Kurnel was a very busy man. However, on the way to Olentangy Park, I was able to corner him. I began by introducing myself:

"Comrade Rosenfelt, my name is Comrade Spoopendyke, reporter of The Columbus Socialist."

The Kurnel's face beamed, "Delighted, I am always pleased to meet a comrade," he said.

"What do you consider will be the outcome of the primary election next Tuesday?" was my next question.

"We will slug 'em over the ropes, and we'll do it in the first round."

"If it is not presuming too much will you kindly tell me, Kurnel, just when you became a Socialist?"

His face was a study. "If I remember rightly it was shortly after I permitted the Tennessee Iron and Coal Company steal, and told Mr. Harriman that he and I were 'practical men.'" Continuing he said, "After I had given the Steel Trust everything I could, The Appeal to Reason exposed me, and I saw that if I expected to realize my ambition, and become once more President, that it was up to me to become revolutionary."

"You of course are a student of Karl Marx?" was my next question.

"Ah! yes. He was a great man. That book of his, 'Looking Backward,' is bully, bully. I have also read that great work of his entitled, 'Men and Mules.'"

"What is your opinion of Gene Debs?"

"He is a genius, a second Lincoln, and if it were not for me he would be elected President this fall."

At this point we reached our destination, and I was compelled to cut my interview short, after taking his subscription for The Columbus Socialist and Appeal."

COMRADE PROSSER DELIVERS A GREAT PROPAGANDA SPEECH

Pittsburg Preacher Tells the North Side People Some Plain Facts in Fourth Avenue Church.

A grand propaganda meeting, held under the auspices of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Ward branches, was held at the Fourth Avenue Church of Christ, Neil and Fourth Avenues, last Monday evening. Comrade W. A. Prosser of Pittsburg, Pa., was the principal speaker.

Comrade Prosser certainly opened up the eyes of some of the Democrats and Republicans in that neck of the woods. He gave a graphic description of the life of Karl Marx, showing how he was hounded from one country to another because of his preaching the doctrine of good tidings to the poor.

He then went on to show how the church had become perverted in her ways and no longer preached the doctrine of the lowly Nazarene, but was dominated by the business interests, which made the preacher subservient to their wills.

He showed in the plainest language that the Constituion was nothing but a class instrument, used by one class (the capitalist class) to keep another class (the working class) in subjection. "To hell with a Constitution that is used to murder, starve and beat the working class," hes aid. "To hell with laws that are used to keep the workers in subjection. Humanity is above the law. Humanity—man—should be the first consideration of society, and all law should be used to protect the weak against the strong, and to liberate, rather than oppress the people."

At the conclusion of the lecture a collection of $17.00 was taken up and $10.00 worth of literature disposed of.

The comrades of the North End desire to take this occasion to thank the trustees and members of the Fourth Avenue Church of Christ for their liberal attitude and support in making this meeting a success, and assure them that the kindness will not be forgotten.

We respectfully inyite you to our meetings, which are held every Tuesday and Friday evenings at Evans Hall, Third Avenue and Michigan, at 7:30.

THAT MAN DUNKLEMAN WITH ANOTHER LETTER

No Way to Head Him Off. He Can't Spell But He Knows a Whole Lot

I showed you conklusively last time I rote to you that a workin man got all he deserved. I was talkin about a man what worked hard last week. I want to tell you that feller what pays these loafers what get to work at 8 o'clock in the morning suffer for the time they lose for em all right. I can see these clerks a offishials deckeratin the places wher the street cars stop on High Street every morning. They stand ther trim to git a eye full when thes wimon with them tight skirts git off the cars. Some body ought to put a stop to ther rubberin. In the first place the wimon dont like it and they are wastin the bosses time an then, worse of all, som krank of a sky-pilot will jest about git to agitatin for an extra step on the street cars. Now them steps is low enof cause the conductors are always ther to help the people off. Why thet bottom step hant more than 18 inches from the ground. Ther is another reson why ther dont want to be a extra step. If ther was another step ther it sure wod be the caus of a bad axident somtime. The fool people wod pile on thet step an brake it off jest sure. You cant blam the street car kompany they got to get the money, caus you know the street car kompany could not aford to run any extra cars and furnish seats fer everybudy. The fellers you want to blam is the feller what rubbers. Hes most likely got his edgeukation at the Columbus bisnes kolledge an he shod no better then to wast his time that way, fer hes sure got memery enef to member the motto down ther: "Get all that you can!" Corse it dont say how to git it but thets the way it reads. If you dont believe its ther jest go down and take a look. Hopin this will cut off this wast [illegible] the man whats payin thes rubbernecks. I remane, yours truely,

WORKINGMEN NOT NUMEROUS AT PRIMARY.

The State-wide primary held in Ohio last Tuesday did not attract, accordingly to the daily papers, much attention from the working class. Teddy licked Taft "to a frazzle," getting 38 out of 48 votes in the State. Deacon Harmon seems to have more delegates in Ohio than Wilson but the toilers have little interest in either squabble.

In Franklin County the result confirms what The Socialist said months ago, to the effect that the Ross gang controlled the Democratic party and would try to let the Republicans have this county while the Demmies would hold the City Hall.

The Socialist vote at the primary was small, due to the fact that the party had no contests. As one local paper put it, "The Socialists settle all their contests before the primary is held." Even on the bond issues the Socialists manifested a supreme indifference.

Vote On Bond Proposals.

The total vote on the four bond isse proposals was:

"Grade crossing eliminations, 14,198 for; 6107 against; carried.

Light extender, 13,764 for; [illegible] against; carried.

Third Street viaduct, 7619 for; 12,000 against; lost.

Civic Center, 10,292 for; 9015 against; lost.

A two-thirds majority is necessary to carry a bond issue.

SOCIALIST STANDARD BEARERS, DEBS & SEIDEL

National Convention Concludes Its Work After Strenuous Week

Now for Gigantic Struggle with the Capitalist System

Indianppolis, Ind.—Unanimous satisfaction over the chosen standard-bearers of the Socialist Party in the 1912 presidential struggle is the spirit that pervades the closing hours of the national Socialist convention in session here.

It is a spirit that every one feels is echoed in every state of the land from coast to coast and portends a national campaign on behalf of the working class, the like of which the nation has not yet seen.

Eugene Victor Debs of Terre Haute, Ind., tireless agitator of the nation's struggling proletariat, and Emil Seidel, the first mayor to be swept into office in a large American city on the uprising tide of class conscious working class votes, represent two phases of the daily growing Socialist movement of the United States that are now meeting each other.

Debs is the personification of the great protest resulting from persistent agitation, while Seidel represents the careful patience of the working class using its acquired political power to the best advantage on behalf of its own interests.

Both have been long tried as campaigners for the scarlet banner in their many years' struggle for Socialism.

Debs was not here when the choice of the convention, representing the desires of the 150,000 members of the Socialist Party in every state, fell upon him as the best among them to carry the banner of working class political revolt in the United States in this year's national campaign.

Seidel, however, being a delegate to the convention, was on the ground.

Seidel took up the great struggle of the working class in the cities, showing how the city was the home of the worker, his wife and his children, how the worker couldn't take his family to Florida in the winter, or to the mountains in the summer, but must remain on the job in order that wealth may be produced and civilization maintained.

"It means that these cities are our homes—our worlds," he said. "What are we going to do about it? We must make our cities places where we can live, our factories places where we can work, and our schools places where we can bring up our children.

"For that reason we are vitally interested in our cities as they are today. I can show you that the streets where you live are neglected, while the streets where the others live are well kept. The same is true of the parks."

He then went on to show that the workers must get control of the powers of the city government and use them for their own interests.

"When you get control of the police department then you need not fear the boss,' he said. "Let us all try it."

Nominating speeches having been previously barred by the convention, a roll call of the states was had to name candidates for the office of president. When Arkansas was reached Dan Hogan nominated Debs. This was the signal for the most enthusiastic demonstration yet witnessed since the convention opened. The name of Emil Seidel was put by the California delegation. Charles Edward Russell was first nominated by Colorado. Job Harriman was named by North Carolina and Duncan McDonald by Braastetter from Oklahoma. Harriman and McDonald withdrew from the race.

Majority on First Ballot.

The convention took a roll call and the vote resulted:

Debs, 165.
Seidel, 56.
Russell, 50.

Seidel immediately moved that Debs' nomination be made unanimous. Russell seconded the motion. A shout "aye" that nearly shook Tomlinson Hall made the nomination unanimous. Again the convention applauded and cheered.

A score of names for the office of vice president was placed before the convention by delegates on the floor. Most of these were by states for "favorite sons." But only three entered the race. They were Emil Seidel, Dan Hogan and John W. Slayton. The balloting on these candidates resulted:

Seidel, 159.
Slayton, 34.
Hogan, 73.

A motion to make Seidel's nomination unanimous was then made by Hogan and seconded by Slayton. With a tremendous shout of approval the nomination was made unanimous.

Barnes to Manage Campaign.

The convention in its closing hours chose J. Mahlon Barnes, of Philadelphia, Pa., as Presidential campaign manager. Numerous nominations were made, from which the National Executive Committee and the candidates choose a Presidential campaign committee.

It is planned to have this committee take charge of the campaign, meeting in Chicago as often as is necessary. It is planned in this way to take this work from the National Executive Committee and the National Secretary.

Caroline A. Lowe reported for the Woman's National Committee, showing the work that had been done during the past two years.

"Men and women must not be divided upon a basis of sex in the Socialist movement," was the spirit of her report. "We must be united upon a basis of working class solidarity."

She pointed out that this question was now more important than ever before and should receive more attention from the Socialist Party.

May Wood-Simons reported the recommendations for this committee, urging the carrying of the propaganda of Socialism to the housewife, the woman on the farm, to teachers, foreign speaking women, to women in industry, and took a decided stand against the white slave traffic and the segregation of the social evil. The recommendations were adopted. The three conflicting reports of the Immigration Committee as printed in The New York Call of May 5 were shown scant courtesy, the members of this committe being ordered to continue their investigations and report to the next convention. Joshua Wanhope, of New York, resigned and the committee was given the power to fill the vacancy.

N. E. C. to Handle Press Plan.

The report of the party press committee, which included the advisability of establishing a party printing plant, was referred to the National Executive Committee for action.

The convention adopted the report of the Committee on State and Municipal Program, and its recommendations, providing for the continuance of the committee.

Delegate Spargo, Vermont, presented the final report of the Resolutions Committee and the convention voted equal political rights for men and women, in favor of a temperance propaganda, against the military education of children, against the Dillingham bill restricting immigration, and in favor of a special Socialist propaganda among the young.

It voted to denounce Judge Hanford of Seattle, Wash., for denying citizenship papers to Leonard Olesson, a Socialist, at Tacoma, in that State.

The last resolution extended the thanks of the convention to the Socialists of Indianapolis. The recommendations of the Ways and Means Committee, for raising funds, was referred to the National Executive Committee.

SOCIALIST DRAMATIC CLUB.

Tomorrow (Sunday) night will be a regular business meeting. There will be some important business to transact, and it is hoped that every one who has the interest of the club at heart will be there. We will have a grand entertainment Sunday, June 2. So be up and get into the harness. The big campaign is now on andd we want to see if we can help the cause. Comrades, come, every one, to Red Lion Hall tomorrow night.

AMENDMENTS TO OHIO'S CONSTITUTION, ADOPTED BY THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION, TO BE SUBMITTED FOR RATIFICATION TO THE VOTERS OF OHIO ON OR ABOUT TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1912.

No. 122, Mr. Farrell: Laws may be passed fixing and regulating hours of work, establishing a minimum wage, and providing for the safety, health, comfort and general welfare of all employes; and no other provision of the constitution shall impair or limit this power.

No. 206, Mr. Tetlow: Eight-hour work day on all public work, whether done by the state or any political sub-division thereof, whether done by contract or otherwise.

No. 24, Mr. Cordes: Compulsory workmen's compensation for accidents and occupational diseases, with the establishment of a state insurance fund, and determining how payments shall be made therefrom.

No. 64, Mr. Miller of Fairfield: Conservation of all natural resources, and providing that laws may be made regulating mining, weighing and sale of all minerals.

No. 166, Mr. Stillwell: Mechanics and builders' liens, or wages, material and work done on the construction or repair of buildings.

No. 184, Mr. Halenkamp: Provides that laws may be passed limiting the power to punish persons adjudged guilty of contempt, and granting, upon demand, a trial by jury of the person charged with contempt. Orders of injunction or other orders of a like character or similar effect shall not be made or issued in any case involving the employment of labor or in any controversy between employer and employe.

No. 34, Mr. Thomas: Abolishes contract prison labor, and provides that no prison-made goods shall be sold in the state unless the same are conspicuously marked, "Prison Made."

No. 261, Mr. Halenkamp: Provides that the state may establish its own printing plant.

No. 240, Mr. Anderson: Removes limitations for damages in case of wrongful death.

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS.

No. 2, Mr. Crosser: The initiative and referendum.

No. 7, Mr. Dye: Limits the work of extra sessions of the General Assembly to the proclamation of such extra sessions issued by the governor

No. 272, Mr. Fitzsimons: Provides for home rule in cities.

No. 202, Mr. Weybrecht: Provides that the state may be sued in the same manner as any other individual. Under the present constitution any claims against the state must be passed upon by the legislature. This will give an opportunity for workers who are injured in the state's employ, to sue as other employes have the right to do.

JUDICIAL REFORM.

No. 184, Mr. Peck: Reorganization of the courts, making the present Circuit Courts the Courts of Appeals, with final jurisdiction in all cases except those involving the constitutionality of laws enacted by the legislature, capital punishment and a few other important subjects. This will make it possible for the litigant to secure some kind of redress within a reasonable time, instead of, as now, requiring several years to go through the courts.

No. 34, Mr. Elson: Provides that nine members of a jury may render verdict in civil cases instead of requiring the whole number, twelve, as it does now, to declare a verdict, and this will mean a better opportunity for justice for the poor litigant than he has had heretofore.

No. 100, Mr. Fackler: Restricts jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace to the townships in which they are elected.

No. 82, Mr. Pierce: Abolishes capital punishment.

No. 15, Mr. Riley: Amends the Bill of Rights so that the prosecution may better be able to secure testimony against those charged with crime.

No. 232, Mr. Bowdle: Provides that the court shall employ its own experts to give medical testimony instead of permitting the prosecution and the defense to employ their own.

No. 304, Mr. Halfhill: Establishing a Court of Common Pleas in every county.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

No. 91, Mr. Kilpatrick: Equal suffrage for women.

EXECUTIVE FRANCHISE.

No. 163, Mr. Miller of Crawford: Appointment of women to certain offices.

No. 8, Mr. Cunningham: Elective franchise. Eliminating word "White."

LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

No. 151, Mr. Anderson: Licensing liquor traffic.

CIVIL SERVICE.

No. 169, Mr. Worthington: Civil service for state employes.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

No. 239, Mr. Knight: Organization of Boards of Education.

No. 96: Mr. Fess: Superintendent of Public Instruction.

SOCIALIST PARTY OF TRUMBULL COUNTY, OHIO.

Platform.

Section 1. The Socialist Party of Trumbull County, Ohio, by its delegates in convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of international Socialism as set forth in the national and state platforms of the Socialist Party.

Sec. 2. The aim of the Socialist Party is to organise the working class politically to the end that the capitalist system may be abolished and the workers emancipated from wage slavery.

Sec. 3. We declare that there is now in process of formation a new industrial and social system in which the machinery and apparatus of production, transportation and communication will be collectively owned, and in which each branch of industry will be controlled and administered democratically by the workers engaged in that branch of industry.

Sec. 4. We aim to institute a new system of distribution of the product of industry, based on the fundamental principle that all wealth is produced by labor.

Sec. 5. Foreseeing that under the future system, the administration of industry will be carried on by the workers industrially organized, we declare that it is the intention of the Socialist Party not to interfere with the industrial organization of the workers or the administration of industry by the workers, but to act in harmony with the co-operative industrial system; by shaping in conformity therewith all the insitutions of law and civil government.

Sec. 6. Our condidates for public office will, if elected, be guided in their official actions by considering only the question whether the proposed measure or act is conducive to the welfare of the working class, if it is, they will be in favor of it; if it is not, they will be opposed to it. Our candidates are pledged to act in accordance with this rule, and, if elected, to use the powers bestowed upon them by law, for advancing the interests of the working class alone.

Sec. 7. Declaring our firm allegiance to all the principles set forth in this platform, we call upon all the members of the working class to unite with us under the international banner of revolutionary Socialism to the end that we may soon patricipate in the inauguration of a new era of enlightenment, liberty, peace and happiness for the working class of the entire world.

To hell with a system that makes paupers out of millions and millionaires out of parasites.

DEPRIVED SOCIALIST OF CITIZENSHIP TO DIVERT ATTENTION.

Judge Hanford Fears Probe of His Private Deals.

TOOL OF "INTERESTS."

Perverted Power of Office To Further His Business Enterprises.

That the unconstitutional action of Judge Cornelius Hanford of the United States Court at Seattle, Wash., in cancelling, on May 11, the citizenship papers of Leonard Oleson, a Socialist, was a play by him to divert attention from his malodorous past record and to create the impression that he is being attacked by the Socialists, was the assertion made by a man in a position to know the facts.

As the past record of Hanford is of such a questionable nature that an investigation may soon be begun by the Committee of Judiciary of Congress, to the attention of which the judge's dealing has been called, he is endeavoring to arouse sympathy among the "interests" for attacking the Socialists.

A native of Hanford's city, Seattle, who has known the judge intimately for many years, said:

"Judge Hanford has never been accused by his best friends of being burdened with a surplus of brains. He was appointed when there were only Indians and a few white people to choose from at Seattle, but he has had the advice and counsel of some of the shrewdest attorneys and business men that can be found anywhere. He is associated with the same crowd which brought Ballinger from the small country town of Pt. Townsend, where he was a judge and had nothing against his reputation, so Seattle elected him Mayor and later on, through their connections, got him into President Taft's Cabinet.

"I had an opportunity," said the Seattle man, "to observe Hanford's methods between 1893 and 1903, when I was at Seattle looking after the interests of large corporations, who had matters coming before him. I soon got to know the proper attorneys to retain to get results.

"Knowing the methods of the 'Hanford crowd' so well, and also knowing that the Democrats have under consideration the matter of investigating his methods and commercial relations with the railroads and other large corporations having cases in his court, it is apparent that Hanford's attack on Socialism was made to divert attention from a more serious trouble that threatened him, to get the support of the Democrats who are opposed to Socialism to rally to his support, to get the Democrats in Congress to 'pigeon-hole' the proposed investigation of his methods, and to create the belief that only Socialists are opposed to him and are the only people fighting him."

One of the dealings of Hanford which the Seattle man told of which may come up before the Judiciary Committee, and because of which Hanford is trying to throw dust into the eyes of the committee, is the following case, which is sufficient to show what his reputation is like:

Several years ago the Hanford Irrigation and Power Company was organized, no "silent partner" methods being employed, but brazenly and openly.

A large tract of land was obtained from the Northern Pacific Railroad some years later by the company, and the stock of the company was readily disposed of to the attorneys who were practicing in the United States Court. When the attorneys "were seen" they subscribed liberally for the stock.

The funds of the company were all used, disappeared or became exhausted and the company quietly failed, laid down or cease dto do business. There were no complaints made, no "squealing" or "hollering" from the stockholders, the stockholders probably feeling that they couldn't afford to.

Later the "Power Trust" found that they "needed" that Hanford Irrigation and Power Company plant very badly; in fact, appeared to have to have it at almost any price. They bought it, although in the words of their engineer, it consisted of "old junk."

"Of course, it will be impossible to prove that Judge Hanford was influenced by these business deeds in rendering decisions in cases affecting the Northern Pacific Railroad and the subsidiary companies of the Power Trust that came before him," said the Seattle man, "but out West we don't like these things, and that is why we want the recall and other things.

"Although the Democratic Speaker was offered evidence, in writing, showing that the brother of this same United States Judge was offering to furnish litigants coming before the judge 'evidence' that would enable them to win, it has been impossible to get any action.

"It is rumored that Mr. Hill, of the Great Northern Railroad, has sufficient influence with the Democrats to protect Hanford. Can this be possible?"

WORDS OF WISDOM.

The Goddess of Liberty bows her head in shame over the desecration of the rights of man. When a nation of workers will supinely fold their hands and not raise a storm of protest while their fellow-workers are being persecuted demonstrates that they are indeed slaves. The fiendish agents of the system gloat over the suffering and persecution of the workers of San Diego, Cal., who demand only what the Constitution grants. The good and respectable citizens, who are urged on by their masters to further crime, only weld the yoke of wage-slaving more firmly in their necks. The fools know not what they do.

When a man joins a union he will go on a strike, suffer starvation and even jeopardize his life for his union, but on election day, where he could, without the cost of the least discomfort, put in office men of his own class, who would not betray him, he will be swayed by the rantings of the Old Party whips and vote for the master class that will use the bayonets and gatling gun on himself and fellow-workmen.

The slush fund raised by Ophr More, Secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' combine, has been put to work. You can hear the chirp of the sparrows around the dung pile. They make a lot of noise, so that the secretary may know that they are working.

The capitalists are now about to bring the great comedy to an end. The attention of the brawn and brains of the free-born American citizen has been gained. The Monkey Killer, the Trained Hippopotamus, the Boy Orator, the Professor, the Underbrush and Missouri Mud will now be put away for the winter, and the usual grinding of profits out of the bodies of women and children will go on for the amusement of the counts and no-accounts.

What the candidates of the capitalist are saying: You horny-handed Son of Toil, your brow resplendent with the most precious and glistening beads of sweat, which indicates greater value than all the jewels of this earth, I know you will place me in the White House. I still have all my sweat to use in your service and I am fresh and strong, for I have never toiled with my hands or brain. I will save you from the greedy vultures of this most terrible system.

The jobless workingmen may be and is arrested and then sentenced to the workhouse as a vagrant. He is then farme dout to a private contractor for a less sum than is expended for his keep by the city. His product is then thrown into competition with your labor power and so lowers your standard of living. When he has served his sentence he is turned out without a cent and his feet nearer the ground than before, and a police record that follows him until the dirt covers his coffin.

An investigation is now being made of the Beef Trust upon the recommendation of a Representative in Congress who claims to have evidence in his possesion that diseased cattle is being passed by government inspectors and that it is being offered to the general public for consumption. The investigator claims that conditions in the big stockyards are worse now than before the exposure by Upton Sinclair in his book, "The Jungle," which forced a government investigation some years ago. For years diseased cattle has been killed and sold and a great deal of sickness is traceable to the eating of impure and unfit meat. This is a crime that can be charged against the greed for profits. Not content with raising the prices on this most necessary of life's commodities, the Trust has thought so little of the public health that it is willing that the nation suffer that its owners might revel in the luxury which riches affords. Just so long as the American public stands for this imposition so long will it be poisoned by profit mongers. Therefore when Socialists propose a remedy, they are classed as anarchists who would destroy business and take away the livelihood of thousands of men. If Socialism can cure this evil, and would destroy this traffic in diseased meats, then it is time the people adopted Socialism.

THE "SUPERIORITY" OF STRICT TRADES AUTONOMY OVER INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM.

The pressmen employed by the English daily newspapers in Chicago, Ill. (with the exception of the Daily Socialist), are on strike. Differences had arisen between the pressmen's union and the management of the two Hearst papers, the American and Examiner, and when the pressmen employed on these papers went on strike the Chicago Newspapers Publishing Association, comprising all the other dailies, made common cause with Hearst and locked their pressmen out; up to that time the two Hearst papers had not been members of the Publishers' Association.

The nature of the differences between the pressmen and the newspaper capital does not matter here. Suffice it o state that the proprietors of the newspapers acted in strict solidarity conform to the principle so often cited by organized labor; "An injury to one is the concern of all."

But what did the other workingmen do employed by the same newspapers? The stereotypers went out on strike in sympathy with the pressmen, but the printers, members of the International Typographical Union, decided in a mass meeting not to assist the pressmen in their fight and to remain at work. While the feeling of solidarity was strong enough with the stereotypers to ignore the contracts entered into with the newspapers and to come to the assistance of the pressmen, the printers considered their contracts iron-clad and binding. They thought themselves bound by their contracts even when strike-breakers took the places of the striking and locked-out pressmen and stereotypers. The outcome was that in about one week the at first seriously crippled daily papers could come out again in their regular form and size, and the strike of the pressmen and stereotypers must be considered lost.

For us brewery workers the action of the printers has a kind of peculiar taste. However, to attach a direct blame to the printers would hardly be justified. Just as in a brewery both washhousemen and cellarmen are of equal importance in the manufacturing of brewery products, pressmen and printers are of equal importance to get out a newspaper; the only difference is that all men employed in a brewery are members of one and the same organization, while the men employed in a newspaper shop are split up into three, four and more different organizations. In other words, the men employed in the brewing industry are organized along industrial lines and the men employed in the newspaper industry are organized according to the principles of strict trades autonomy. Should the men employed in one department of a brewery be locked out, the men employed in all other departments, as a matter of course, will immediately take up the fight; they consider the attack of the employers directed against the entire organization and not against individual members. In the newspaper industry the principle of strict trades autonomy prevents any solidary action, not only as far as the industry as a whole is concerned, but in every single shop. A large number of printers may as individuals sympathize fully with the pressmen, but the system of strict trades autonomy prevents any practical solidarity action. To revolt against that system would mean for the individual to cut his own throat. Because the stereotypers' union violated the principle of strict trades autonomy its charter was revoked by their national president. A new stereotypers' union has been organized composed of men who, in fact, are nothing else but strike-breakers. The stereotypers acting and fighting in sympathy with the pressmen are left on the street and may have to suffer hunger and privations for a long time before they are able to secure work again at their trade. Many of the printers may have submitted to the command of their union and stayed at work, gnashing their teeth. For these reasons we said before that the printers can hardly be blamed directly for their action.

The blame for the lack of solidarity, the blame that the strike of the pressmen in Chicago is lost, the blame that the employers can play one labor organization against the other and thereby prevent any attempt of the workers to better their conditions, the blame that many honest and class-conscious workers are compelled to work side by side with professional strike-breakers, the blame for the violence committed against strikers by the police, the willing tools of capital; the blame for the sentences passed upon innocent men by servile judges only because there innocents committed the "crime" to exercise their right to strike; the blame for all that is to be attached to the antiquated and reactionary views still prevailing in the American labor movement.

There can be no harmony of interests between capital and labor. The interests of capital and labor have always been antagonistic and will be antagonistic as long as capital and labor continue to exist in their present forms. As long as classes exist in human society there will be a continuous struggle for supremacy of class against class, of labor against capital. And, as in any other struggle, the strongest will win. It is simply a question of power who will be the victor. To cling to antiquated ideas and to antiquated tactics in our fights is, therefore, entirely wrong; in doing so we only weaken ourselves, make our opponents the strongest and bring about our own defeat. It is high time that these antiquated ideas and tactics still to be witnessed in most of the American trade unions be done away with.

That the strike of the pressmen in Chicago, in addition to many other previous fights between capital and labor, is lost and that the capitalists are still laughing up their sleeves about the stupidness of the workingmen, that is the "superiority" of strict trades autonomy over industrial unionism.—Brewers' Zeitung, Cincinnati, O.

TRIAL OF WOMAN LABOR LEADERS.

VIOLATE INJUNCTION.

Jailed 15 days Without Trial Refused Bail.

"Not contempt of Court," they claim; "contempt for the opinion of a judge who violates people's constitutional rights to free speech and freedom of the streets."

Miss Josephine Casey, International Organizer for Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, who is assisting the Corset Workers' Union of Kalamazoo, Michigan, in a strike for a living wage and abolition of immoral and unsanitary conditions, is sufferng a fifteen-days' confinement n the county jail at Kalamazoo, Michigan, waiting for a hearing before Judge F. E. Knappen, the Circuit Court magistrate who issued a blanket injunction against picketing "or doing anything else whatever to influence" employes of the Kalamazoo Corset Company to leave or to refuse to enter the employment of complainant.

"Judge Knappen was well named," said Miss Casey. "He was either 'nappin' himself or else thought the people were asleep, to let such an injunction stand. Of course, women do not have any vote to make law or to elect lawyers to court, so maybe we don't know what law is. If that's the case, we ought not to be punished for not understanding what we have no show at. But it does not look like a constitutional proceeding to me and my four non-voting women fellow-prisoners.

"And we will not recognize it as law by getting bail. If that ruling of Judge Knappen is constitutional law, organized labor had better go out of business until it amends the Constitution to provide for free speech."

Miss Casey's prison mates were: Bella Yount, Mary Watson, Anna Beatty, Mabel Dustin and Angie Norton. The last four of whom accepted bail on Saturday night last because of the condition of their health. They were all striking corset workers, whose only offense was peaceful picketing. Every one admits that their actions were in accordance with legitimate picketing.

The hearing has been postponed from time to time at the request of the lawyer for the complainant, as a conference had been arranged whereby it was hoped a settlement of the strike might be effected. The slowness of the manufacturer to grant terms even as good as those which led to the strike has been the sole cause of the delay.

A conciliatory conference has been in session for five days, arranged by Mr. Stewart, President of the Local Central Federation of Labor, and Dr. Wm. Puffer of the Methodist Church, but up to date no concessions have been made by the firm any better than conditions before the strike.

The picketing is now being carried on in a picturesque manner. Day after day large delegations from the local unions take turns in "laying off" from work to show that they are ready to come out on general strike whenever called.

The girls have organized along Salvation Army lines and will have drums and tambourines and sing and pray for the souls of the hard-hearted "bosses" and superintendents and ask the Lord to save the girls, who have been ruined because of the low wages and temptations in the Corset Factory.

Miss Gertrude Barnum, General Organizer for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, is endeavoring to get the support of organized labor of the United States in this protest against government by injunction. She is in communication with the officers of the American Federation of Labor and of the strongest International Unions, which have locals in Kalamazoo, and expects their moral and financial support in the courts and in the strike.

"The American Beauty and the Mdame Grace corsets," she says, "are not likely to be popular with the public owing to the well established fact that the economic, moral and sanitary conditions in the Kalamazoo Corset Company have been a menace to the womanhood of our land.

"They are putting in tissue papers towel sand water fountains now. But every one who runs may read that only the union brought them to do that and the union alone can keep up tthe good work of protecting the helpless young country girls who are lured from their farm homes by inviting advertisements and are then left at the mercy of the greed of men—greed for money and greed for the flower of our young womanhood."

All are awaiting the trial of Josephine Casey, set for Thursday at 10 o'clock. Extra consulting counsel has been employed from Chicago and the Michigan Labor Unions are determined to learn at this time whether human rights are to be sacrificed to the greed of private business men. Now is the psychological moment to meet this issue, they claim, before the state and national political platforms and personnel are crystallized.

Funds may be sent to Homer F. Waterman, care Michigan Federation of Labor, 123 E. Main St. Please follow up this case by watching the case and keeping up publicity.

THIS GOT MANN ARRESTED.

The following article was from the first issue of the monthly journel, "The Syndicalist," of London, England, and its appearance for distribution among the soldiers in hand-bill form was what caused the arrest of Tom Mann and those connected with the magazine.

Open Letters to British Soldiers.

Men! Comrades! Brothers!

You are in the army.

So are we. You in the Army of Destruction. We, in the Industrial or Army of Construction.

We work at mine, mill, forge, factory, or dock, etc., producing and transporting all the goods, clothing, stuffs, etc., which make it possible for people to live.

You are working men's sons.

When we go on strike to better our lot, which is the lot also of your fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, you are called upon by your officers to murder us.

Don't do it.

You know how it happens. Always has happened.

We stand out as long as we can. Then one of our (and your) irresponsible brothers, goaded by the sight and thought of his and his loved ones' misery and hunger, commits a crime on property. Immediately you are ordered to murder us, as you did at Mitchellstown, at Featherstone, at Belfast.

Don't you know that when you are out of the colors and become a "civy" again, you, like us, may be on strike, and you, like us, be liable to be murdered by other soldiers?

Boys, don't do it!

"Thou shalt not kill," says the Book.

Don't forget that!

It does not say, "unless you have a uniform on."

No. Murder is murder, whether committed in the heat of anger on one who has wronged a loved one or by pipe clayed Tommies with rifles.

Boys, don't do it!

Act the man! Act the brother! Act the human being!

Property can be replaced. Human life, never

The idle rich class who own and order you about, own and order us about also. They and their friends own the land and the means of life of Britain.

You don't. We don't.

When we kick they order you to murder us.

When you kick you get court-martialed and cells.

Your fight is our fight. Instead of fighting against each other, we should be fighting with each other.

Out of our loins, our lives, our homes you come.

Don't disgrace your parents, your class, by being the willing tools any longer of the master class.

You, like us, are of the same class. When we rise, you rise when we fall, even by your bullets, ye fall also.

England, with its fertile valleys and dells, its mineral resources, its sea harvests, is the heritage of ages to us.

You, no doubt, joined the army out of poverty.

We work long hours for small wages of hard work because of our poverty. And both your poverty and ours arises from the fact that Britain, with its resources, belongs to only a few people. These few, owning Britain, own our jobs. Owning our jobs, they own our very lives.

Comrades, have we called in vain? Think things out and refuse any longer to murder your kindred.

Help us to win back Britain for the British and the world for the workers!

WAGE SLAVERY.

A question has been asked as to what is the difference between chattel slavery and wage slavery.

There is some difference between the chattel slave of days gone by and the wage slave of today.

The chattel slave had a place to sleep, was furnished food regularly, was clothed, and when taken ill, had the services of a physician.

The wage slave when unemployed is usually homeless, hungry, ragged, and, when ill, is without medical attendance.

A master had an INTEREST in a chattel slave, but a master has no INTEREST in a wage slave, for his place can be filled so easily by the victims of hunger and want. The chattel slave was OWNED, but no exploiter wants OWNERSHIP in a wage slave.

The wage slave of today is a cheaper commodity than the chattel slave of half a century ago.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST CONVENTION.

The National Convention of the Socialist Party held last week at Indianapolis, was a remarkable one from many viewpoints, and especially from the viewpoint of the fighting proletariat within the ranks.

For four days the situation was tense, as to whether the party would become conscious of its historic mission and bravely take a step forward in its relation to the economic contentions of the working class, or retograde into bourgeoisism, reformism, as a vote-catching device, in the interest of the dying middle class.

Heretofore our soapboxers and forum orators, told the working class that we were their representatives on the economic field, the working class, however, being able to read intelligntly, were unable to find such an expression in our party platform, consequently they looked upon us as like any other political party, that was only after the votes, with a definite program of middle class reform, such as Roosevelt and other capitalistic reformers are willing to offer, to retain or get possession of political power and office holding.

Heretofore the Socialist Party had only been a "Spook," within the meaning of its platform, representing neither the working class or the capitalistic class. The capitalistic parties however, represented the material interests of their contending capitalists and did not fail to express themselves along these lines, consequently they were entitled to the respect of all classes as they did not trim.

The Socialist Party appealing to the worker for support discovered that the time had arrived to throw off its "Spook," and take a position openly without any further trimming, as to its relation on the economic field, politically.

There were still those who held that we had nothing to do with the working class, that this was a question for the working class themselves to solve, and that our appeal should be to the working class and the good capitalist, who sooner or later might see the error of his way and out of the goodness of his heart inaugurate Socialism without a struggle.

This was a beautiful theory and in it they aptly endeavored to show the interests of the working class and capitalist class being identical, and that this was only a matter of ignorance on the part of both contending interests, that could readily be solved along the lines of political education and action.

The working class delegates bearing in mind the intense class war now on throughout the nation and especially at San Diego, failed to see where we could gain by political compromising with all classes on the economic field, and strenuously fought for a definite declaration and class political expression, pertaining to the working class.

In this they were successful. From now on every soapboxer and forum orator can point with pride to the labor declaration, and its significance and relation to the working class. From now on we have thrown off the "Spook," by bringing on its materialization and becoming the political reflex on the economic field of the working class. From now on we can show the working class the true meaning of its historic mission, and the necessity of strong compact organization to meet the high powered master—the capitalist, and by political action storm the stronghold of capitalism, and with their economic organization hold the same, and inaugurate a true industrial democracy.

On the question of taking a position of violence to the person and property, debate waxed warm. By the incorporation of the word "sabotage," which from our humble viewpoint, has twenty different ways of being pronounced, and from the different delegates' remarks, about five hundred different meanings, the party has taken a position on a question that it has never advocated. If it had not been for the intensity of the situation it would have been laughable. In other words, the intellectuals set up a straw man and then proceeded to knock him down at their hearts' content. If the word anarchy had been substituted in its stead, as some endeavored to leave the impression that it menat, debate would not have lasted two minutes, as every delegate present was positively opposed to anarchy.

However, after we go to expelling workingmen that know the true meeting of sabotage and as we in Ohio understand it, out party membership would consist of just middle class reformers, and not those that labor. However, the working class will keep right on, regardless of constitutions written on paper, and use those tactics on the economic field that will win victories. Our manifest duty from now on will be to educate the workers as to the true meaning of the word sabotage.

The minority report to strike out this section will be submitted with the original, giving the party membership an opportunity to express themselves on this straw man section, that started a tempest in a tea pot.

The surprise of the convention was the position of the farmers on the farm resolution. One and all arose and gave the intellectual element a good deal of food for thought. It even surprised some to see how well versed the farmer was in machine production and its significance to the farmer and worker alike. In other words, the farmer contended that it was not necessary on the part of the party to trim her sails to catch farmer votes, but stick at bed rock, machine production and its relation to all. For deep thinking without frills the farmer delegates have certainly shown themselves far advanced over some of us and we take great pleasure in acknowledging it. The farmer, to us always a doubtful element, will henceforth demand with the worker, the earth and the fullness thereof.

Our nominee, Eugene V. Debs, again demonstrated that in him we can can find common cause and unification of interests. Debs has progressed wonderfully, for always in the lead, taking up the battles of the workers, regardless of labels, he will get the support from the rank and file, that only come to those that are sincerely true to their ideals, to those that never waver from the ultimate goal regardless of imputations and we look forward—with regret, to that day when we will one and all be compelled to say, "Well done thou good and faithful servant in the cause of Socialism."

Truly a remarkable convention, one that was the turning point of time in its progressive march forward for better things for all humanity.

IS SOCIALISM A DREAM?

"Socialism may be all right in theory. It is a beautiful dream. But how are you going to put it into practice? And even though we may have Socialism in the distant future, what good is that going to do us today?" Such questions are put to Socialists repeatedly, and they deserve a fair answer.

The questions themselves are based on a misunderstanding of the Socialist movement. For Socialism is not a ready-made scheme or a sort of a social machine that can be put in operation at any time. The Socialist movement is a natural outgrowth of the economic and political needs of the working class. At present the capitalists control the instruments of production, and thereby control and rob the workers. In order to escape this robbery—in order to secure for themselves all that they produce—the workers are beginning to see that they must get possession of these instruments of production. But they cannot secure control of these machines, factories, mines, railroads, etc., as individuals, since they are too costly. Therefore they must unite as a class to get them. But even as a class they cannot buy them. Therefore they must secure control of the State, and through the use of the State, gain control of the instruments of production. Thus the workers are forced to go into politics as a class in order to secure control of the instruments of production and put an end to exploitation. This is the fundamental goal of the Socialist movement—to put an end to the robbery and injustice of capitalism by establishing the social ownership and democratic management of all important industries. But we realize that this cannot be accomplished in a day. It will probably take several years to educate a majority of the workers up to a point where they will realize that they can secure economic freedom and justice only through the social ownership and operation of industry.

Socialism is no longer a dream, but a growing reality. The Socialist party stands not for the ideal social system of the future, but for the immediate improvement of conditions in the present. The Socialist party is fighting the battle of the working class here and now; it is gaining concessions for the working class every day. Therefore it is not the working man who votes the Socialist ticket that is the "dreamer," but the working man who continues to vote the Republican and Democratic tickets. As long as we have voted the Republican and Democratic tickets we have been ignored and despised. Isn't it about time that we workingmen quit our political dreaming and tried the practical method of electing our own representatives to office?

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

Last Tuesday, while in a business house in this city, the writer happened to meet one of the Roosevelt committeemen. This man was a specimen of the kind of material from which the two old parties draw their strength.

He was so drunk he could hardly navigate, and he was loudly denouncing the Socialists as Anarchists, etc. The language he used was vile in the extreme and the writer asked him if he had ever read any Socialist literature. He said he didn't have time to read the d—— stuff and wouldn't read it anyhow.

It so happened that there was present a young man about twenty-five years of age, who inquired if the writer had any Socialist literature about him. He was gladly supplied and he then stated that the exhibition that the aforesaid committeeman had made had sickened him of the old parties and he now intended to read up on Socialism. This is an example of the desperate circumstances to which the Democratic and Republican parties are reduced. No man with any sense of honor or decency will do any work for them without pay, and even then the work is so nauseating that hey must fill up with liquor furnished by the bosses in order to not be overcome by the stench that arises from the corpse of the two old parties.

But here is the moral to the above. We must place in the hands of every man and woman a piece of literature each week. Don't be down-hearted if you ask a man to subscribe for this paper and he refuses. Keep on going and soon you will find some one who will. Remember the door of prejudice is not yet broken down, but we are hammering away a little all the time, and we are making great headway. Keep the paper in mind all the time and get subscribers at every opportunity. The paper will be the means of carrying this district this fall if you comrades will back us up.

Canvass every house in this city and county, and we can double our subscription list in a very short time. On to Victory.

Sending in his subscription for one year, Comrade S. A. Babbitt of Lockland, O., writes as follows:

"Dear Comrades—I send you herewith $1.00 to pay for the Socialist and Appeal for one year. I wish you continued success in your good work and trust that the writings in your paper may continue to be of much help to humanity. Oh! that they may see and act before it is too late. Let every man that desires freedom arouse from his careless way."

Comrade J. M. Renny of Greenfield, Ohio, writes as follows: "Dear Comrades: I read one of your papers that a comrade gave me and I thought that I would like to have the paper on my table. You will find $1.00, for which send me your paper for one year."

Comrade Albright is doing nice work. He puts on six subs this week. Comrade Comer is waking them up. He renews and lands a new one.

Comrade Suddick gets three as his donation this week. That's good work.

Don't forget to purchase from our advertisers and use the red ticket. This is a powerful weapon, which we must not neglect.

Boosters with one or more to their credit: Bues, Fries, Cassidy, Jones, Kimball, Cooper, Smith, Kinsell, White.

Hurrah for the Red Flag. Long may she wave.

Comrades F. Diebert, Jr., and Chas. Skinner of the First Ward were on the job again last Sunday. They dug up two yearlies, one six months and one three months. These two class-conscious comrades are always educating their fellow-men, and, at the same time, supporting our party paper. More power, boys.

Comrade E. S. Marquette, of the Tenth Ward, went out last Sunday in that ward secured five yearly renewals. Each one said The Socialist was "O. K." and Marquette says amen. This comrade is the kind of a Socialist who is so busy boosting that he has no time to knock. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

BACHMAN AT RED LION HALL.

Comrade J. L. Bachman, Socialist candidate for Congress, will speak at City Headquarters, 835½ South High Street, Sunday evening, June 3, under the auspices of the Socialist Dramatic Club.

You mine workers who pay taxes must feel elated at the presence of the Constabulary in your midst. Wherever the Constabulary appears they invite trouble and you taxpayers must foot the bill. And don't forget that it was Republican and Democratic office holders who created this armed force. And Socialists consistently fought the institution of this military power, knowing that it would be used to club the working class when a strike was on. These are but the experiences that compel labor to learn its lesson.

BOARD OF EDUCATION APPROVES SALARY INCREASE.

Teachers Get Benefit of Resolutions Presented by Socialist Members.

Increase in the maximum salaries of high school teachers from $1400 to $1500 annually; increase of the minimum for elementary teachers from $450 to $500, and provision for the establishment of four kindergartens, were among the more important items contemplated in the budget for the year 1912-13, adopted Tuesday evening at a meeting of the Board of Education.

These propositions as adopted are the result of resolutions introduced by Socialist Members John L. Michel and June Purcell Guild.

One of the resolutions adopted added $7500 to the miscellaneous fund of $17,500, to care for a possible sliding scale increase in the pay of janitors. The minimum for janitors is now $53 a month.

Socialist Member W. R. Draper introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, By the members of the Board of Education of Columbus, O., School District, That as the superintendent has made a partial canvass among the elementary teachers in regard to the time and manner in which they shall be paid, and that, out of one hundred and seventy-one voting, one hundred and seventeen wanted a change in the present methods. Be it further

Resolved, That the superintendent extend the canvass to the entire teaching force in the elementary grades without taking up the question with the principals or supervisors and report to the board at its next regular meeting.

SOCIALISTS IN COUNCIL WAKE UP OLDER MEMBERS.

Halt Proposal to Do Work for Less Than Actual Cost—Karb Bluffs City Dads.

The Socialist members of Council, Bohnert, Warren, Wilson and Simpfer, put a crimp in the proposal to have the City of Columbus take care of the sewage removal of the village of Bexley for 77½ cents per capita when it costs $1.24 per capita a year. Of course it was cheeky in Warren and Bohnert presenting a minority report calling attention to this fact. Socialists are not supposed to have any business sense, but they made the wise men of council sit up and take notice. The ordinance went back to the sewers committee for further consideration.

Council acted without authority in adopting a resolution demanding that Mayor Karb file with that body charges, "if any he may have," against the civil service commission. This is the contention of the mayor in a letter sent to council. The mayor holds also that council does not possess jurisdiction over any investigation of the enforcement of the civil service, which he contends is being probed properly and legally.

The letter explaining his action and his version of the law covering it says in part:

"You have adopted a resolution instructing the mayor to turn over to you such charges as he may have against the civil service commissioners of Columbus. In reply, permit me to say that, as mayor, I shall always submit to council such matters as should properly come before it under the laws of the state. I shall be as sincerely loyal in respecting every courtesy and right of council as I shall be insistent upon exercising the rights delegated by the same laws to the executive."

This is the mayor's polite way of tellin council to go to the devil.

Water-tight receptacles for household refuse are now mandatory and persons neglecting to provide them are liable to a fine of $5 to $50 for a first offense, according to an ordinance passed.

Eagan. Youngstown, Jos. W. Murphy, United Labor Congress.

After Secretary Thomas read the call for the conference, President Voll added a brief statement, showing the need of coming together at this time to outline a plan of campaign for the adoption, by the voters of Ohio, of those measures labor is pledged to, and that have passed second reading and undoubtedly will be adopted by the Constitutional Convention for submission to the people of this state, to be voted on and made a part of Ohio's Constitution.

He then introduced Miss Margaret Haley of the Chicago Federation of Labor and School Teachers' Union of Chicago, representing the Woman's Suffrage Association of Ohio, who addressed the delegates, showing them why they should give the women the right to vote, by telling some of the very interesting experiences she has has gone through in trying to secure remedial legislation for the school teachers and other women workers of Illinois. She said she had been informed that the Ohio Federation of Labor was already on record for equal suffrage, and she was there today to simply urge this conference to use their best efforts to get the woman's suffrage amendment adopted by the Constitution Convention, the same rights an dprivileges on the ballot for submission as all other proposed amendments, and requested the adoption of the following resolution:

"Whereas, It has been proposed to submit certain of the constitutional amendments adopted by the convention either on a separate ballot or on a separate place on the ballot.

"Resolved, That the Ohio Delegate Convention, representing the Ohio State Federation of Labor, is opposed to any such discrimination against any of the proposed amendments, and recommend the same treatment for all."

The resolution was referred to the committee on submission.

President Voll then called upon Secretary Thomas of the labor group in the Constitutional Convention to submit a report of the work done by the convention. Secretary Thomas then submitted, in detail, a report of the forty-two proposed amendments to the Constitution of Ohio that have passed second reading by the Constitutoinal Convention, and explained, definitely, the nature and benefits to be derived by having these proposals made a part of Ohio' Constitution. He also explained the manner agreed upon by the committee on submission for submitting these proposals to the voters.

President Voll then appointed the following committees:

Committee on Campaign—Thos. J. Donnelly, Chairman; Jas. Robinson, Secretary; John F. Mayer, J. W. Harbargar, C. H. Greham.

Committee on Amendments—James Egan, Chairman; Robt. McDermott, Secretary; Thomas Farrell, Charles Stalf, Ed. Wakefield.

Committee on Submission—Harry D. Thomas, Chairman; C. W. Rich, Secretary; Adolf Kummer, W. J. Winans, Joseph Smith.

On motion the session adjourned until 2:00 p. m

Afternoon Session.

Called to order by President John A. Voll at 2:10 p. m.

Delegate Robinson for the committee on plan of campaign submitted the following report:

"Gentlemen—Your committee, to whom was referred the subject of planning a campaign for the adoption of constitutional amendments, begs leave to report as follows:

"That the Executive Board of the State Federation of Labor request the assistance of the officers of all National and International Unions having organizations in Ohio, whether affiliated with the Ohio Federation of Labor or not, in the adoption of the constitutional amendments.

"We further recommend that the Executive Board take such steps as will bring about an organization in each county to conduct a campaign for the adoption of the new Constitution.

"That the President be instructed to appoint one person in each county to co-operate with the county organization or to bring about such an organization if none exists, such person to act as a direct representative of the Ohio Federation of Labor.

"That every union in the state be requested to arrange special meetings and invite speakers to address them on the amendments.

"That every Central Labor Union arranging to celebrate Labor Day is hereby requested to make the Labor Day address apply directly on the adoption of constitutional amendments."

The report was discussed by Delegates Roberts, Thomas, Donnelly, Murphy, Moss and W. F. Smith, each one urging that each of the delegates to the conference, when they went back home, do everything they possibly could to carry the plan recommended in the report of the committee into effect. The report of the committee was then unanimously adopted.

Chairman Egan, for the committee on amendments to the constitution, then submitted a report, which, after being discussed for some time by the delegates, was referred back to the committee.

Secretary Rich, for the committee on submission, then reported that the committee has been unable to agree on any plan of submission, and, upon the advice of the President, the whole subject was dropped.

President Voll then called upon Hon. Herbert Bigelow, President of the Constitutional Convention, who, in a few brief remarks, complimented and gave credit to organized labor for the good work that had been done by the Constitutional Convention in adopting so many progressive amendments to Ohio's Constitution. He called especial attention to the work of the labor group in the convention, and said that their work in action on progressive amendments had much to do with their adoption. He also urged that the labor organizations in Ohio join with other progressive organizations in Ohio in working for the adoption of these amendments by the voters of Ohio, and hoped that they would be able to all work together as they have done in the election of delegates.

Chairman Egan, for the committee on amendments, then submitted the following report:

"This conference, representing the organized wage workers of Ohio, compliments the progressive delegates to the present State Constitutional Convention for their successful efforts. We believe they have correctly interpreted the growing sentiment toward democratic ideals that is rapidly placing our state among the more advanced commonwealths of our nation.

"We refer with especial pride to the ability of the labor group in said convention. They have exhibited citizenship of a high order, and the unity and intelligence shown by the workers will be an inspiration to the men and women of labor, that those who produce wealth are eminently qualified to supplant those who neither toil nor spin, in directing the functions of government."

The report was nanimously adopted.

It was moved and seconded that this conference ask the Constitutional Convention to add the direct initiative to the I. and R. proposal on its third reading.

Delegate C. W. Dille, attorney for the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, made a short address, calling the attention of the delegates to the importance of the adoption by the voters of the judiciary reforms that had passed the convention.

Delegate G. W. Savage of the United Mine Workers suggested that every local be requested to appoint a committee of three, whose services would be devoted on election day to the getting out of the vote.

Delegates Creager, Mann, Ross, Reade, Goldsmith and others suggested other methods of carrying on a campaign of education between now and the election.

The session then adjourned, subject to the call of the Executive Board of the Ohio State Federation of Labor.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

FROM SAN DIEGO

To All Socialists and Workingmen:

By order of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party I call your attention to the following:

"San Bernardino, Cal., April 22, '13.

"To the Members of the State Executive Board of the Socialist Party of California:

"Your committee appointed to investigate the recent and present labor troubles in the city of San Diego, Cal., reports as follows:

"On arriving at San Diego on April 17, 1913, I learned that Mr. H. Weinstock, the commissioner appointed by Hon. Hiram Johnson, Governor of California, to make investigation of conditions at that place had arrived and would open his investigation on the following morning, I therefore concluded to attend the sessions and listen to all evidence presented. I was a constant attendant until 3 o'clock p. m. of April 30. As twenty-three hours were entirely consumed in listening to the stories of nearly a half hundred of witnesses, anything like a detailed report of the evidence is out of the question. A stenographic record of all that was said was taken by the commissioner and, I presume, the same will be submitted to the governor. What disposition he will make of it or what action he will take remains to be seen.

"For the sake of brevity I shall divide this report into two parts—

"First, the legislative enactments of the City Council of San Diego, and the response thereto on the part of the I. W. W., the Socialist Local and the Federated Trades.

Second, a synopsis of the campaign carried on by the city's police and detective forces, aided and abetted by a vigilance committee and the Merchants' Association, in an effort to drive from the city every person who so much as expressed the slightest sympathy for the workers in their contention for the light of free speech in that locality.

"First. Early in January of 1912 the City Council of San Diego passed an ordinance designating some six blocks as a district in which speaking on the streets was prohibited.

"This district included the corner of Fifth and E Streets, a point wheer meetings had been held for some years. Under the ordinance the meetings would have to be held one block farther east on E Street.

"This ordinance the labor forces refused to respect and obey for reasons—

"(a). The City Council have a legal right to enact such an ordinance, provided that the part of E Street east of Fifth is a congested district; but under no other condition. The declaration by the council that it is a congested district does not make it so. This the courts have already determined. That it is not nor never has been such a district is well known to all persons at all conversant with that city; therefore, the enactment was clearly outside the province of the legislative body and hence null and void.

"(b). The referendum should not be invoked. The ordinance was plainly a violation of the fundamental law of the United States and of the State of California and, hence, not a matter for determination by the voters of any municipality. It was clearly an attempt to arbitrarily deprive the workingmen of their legal right, and as such, did not merit respect.

"(c). In the courts they ha dno confidence; nor were they financially equipped to do legal battle with the unified capitalist forces before the capitalist tribunals.

"(d). They had nothing but their bodies to offer as a sacrifice in this struggle for their rights. In this fight their opportunity lay in refusal to obey the ordinance, go to jail by hundreds if need be, demand separate jury trials and thus clog the wheels of government and heap expense upon the capitalist opponents until they would be forced to grant the constitutional demands and right of the workingmen. As all other channels were closed, they would reach the capitalists through their pocketbooks.

"This policy was sanctioned by the local Socialist organization.

"Accordingly a parade was organized and was participated in by the Socialists, the trade unions and the I. W. W.

"The ordinance went into effect. The opposition disregarded it and went on with their speaking at the old stand. Arrests followed rapidly until the city jail was flooded and jammed by occupants, likewise the county jail and some sixty prisoners had been lodged in the prisons of adjacent counties.

"No resistance was ever offered by any person to these arrests nor was any sort of weapon ever found upon the person of one of the opponents of the law's enforcement, though hundreds were searched. Their conduct was an example of passive resistance crystallized.

"Then came rumors of hundreds of laboring men advancing pon San Diego from other parts of the country; but if even a score of them ever reached that city, the fact in no wise was developed during the commissioner's three days of taking evidence. Nor can the capitalists plead lack of opportunity to establish this point nor anything else that they desired to put in evidence, because for three days and a night the way was open for any person to offer any testimony that he saw fit to give. The hearing was as fair and open as such a thing could possibly be. An attempt was made to induce the commissioner to grant the merchants an opportunity to vent their grievances behind closed doors, out of hearing of 'this band of anarchists,' but the proposition was promptly turned down by the commissioner. Whatever they had to say must be said in the presence of any who desired to hear. Consequently the capitalists found it convenient to absent themselves and deny the authority of the Governor to make such an investigation. Wherein one of them ventured upon the stand, he made such a sorry mess of it that had he been an object deserving of pity, it would indeed have been extended without reserve.

"Second. Of the conduct of the police, detectives, vigilantes, Merchants' Association, City Council, etc.

"As soon as the capitalists realized that they were confronted by a condition as well as a theory and a very expensive condition at that, they opened a series of measures well calculated to crush every form of opposition that the laboring class could muster.

"They arrested about everything that came within the restricted district; but still the speaking went on around its borders. Then they had the City Council pass what is known there as the "move on" ordinance. This made it impossible to speak on the streets in any part of the city. That ordinance is still in full force and, rest assured, it is enforced.

"They added to their police and detective forces a goodly number of as shameless and brutal a lot of thugs as the human race can produce.

They organized a vigilance committee to co-operate with the police force; and the wonder is that so many human demons could be mustered in an American community of the population of San Diego.

"Most of these were stationed some twenty miles from the city proper, but at the northern boundary of the incorporated limits. The chief function of these upholders of 'law and order' was to receive 'prisoners' from the hands of the police at the city jail, transport them in automobiles to the said boundary and there administer a beating that would make the most hardened Russian executive sit up and take notes. The stories of their ministrations alike to the possibly 'guilty' and to the totally innocent cannot be paralleled in any civilized community of the earth.

"Something like two score of names were read into the evidence given the commissioner of men who were taken to the appointed place of execution and beaten nearly to death of whose 'arrest' there is no record of any sort in the city of San Diego. Their names are not even upon the police blotter. How many more would be included in such a list, could all be accounted for, is not known.

"The deported 'prisoners' were well guarded on the way by city police, detectives and vigilantes, armed with police clubs, pick handles, revolvers and rifles. They were liberally thumped and beaten over head and shoulders while taking the joy ride and, as a preface to what was to follow, were usually knocked down as each stepped from the auto.

"After a most terrific beating, these men would usually be placed in a sort of 'bull-pen' and kept from a few hours to a day or two without food or water, when they would be taken out for the flag-kissing ordeal.

"A flag had been hung up conveniently near. Before this stood a double line of vigilantes in open order. The 'prisoner' was ordered to advance between the two lines and kiss that flag. Foolish and sacrilegious as was such a performance, the previous experience of the victims had taught them that disobedience was not to be thought of. Each advanced in turn to do as told, but no one of them ever reached the goal. As one would stoop or reach for the flag, he would be knocked down, then kicked and made get up, then beaten to another station nearby.

"He next faced a double line of men, one on either side of the railroad track. He was told to pass between the lines; that if he attempted to do otherwise he would be shot down. And he had no reason to doubt the truth of this injunction.

"On the way he was nokcked over head and shoulders; often knocked down, sometimes into insensibility If he were still sensible, he would be kicked and made get up and proceed. At the end of the line he would be warned that if he ever again was found in San Diego he would be killed. Then, often without a cent of money—for in several instances this was taken from them—he wended his way toward Los Angeles.

"This beating was of such a nature as to lacerate face and scalp, and blacken shoulders and breast. Men left there for their tramp of about one hundred miles with face and clothes covered and hair matted with blood. They had been without food for a day or two and no earthly means of getting any.

In one instance a blow from a club severed the knee pan entirely in two and that victim is now in the hospital in San Diego, in all probability crippled for life.

"In another instance, an old man by the name of Hoy was ruptured from kicks and beaten so badly that he lived but a few days. At the hearing before the commissioner the County Coroner attempted to show that the inquest proved that the old man died from natural causes. He was made to admit that the three witnesses that were examined were not permitted to be cross-questioned; that they represented the officials, and that there were present at least eight other witnesses who had been regularly cited and who knew the entire history of the case who were not permitted to testify though the demand was made that their evidence be heard. The old coroner made a sorry spectacle as a witness. He injured his case irreparably.

"Some of the men who were put through the entire ordeal of beatings herein described and who testified to every detail of their punishment were not members of the I. W. W. or of the Socialist Party; were in no way connected with the contending forces in San Diego; had neve reven attended a street meeting in that city. They were simply grabbed by the police, taken to teh police station, held incommunicado for a day or two without food, then summarily deported and dealt with in the regular manner. Their misfortune lay in the fact that they have to work for a livng. Very conspicuous among these was one Julius Tum. I mention him because his case was particularly aggravated and his story should be printed in every paper in the land that can be induced to give it spec.

There were many instances of most brutal clubbing right on the streets of San Diego. Men and women were barbarously handled. In some instances persons were beaten into insensibility by the police in sight of numerous others but were not even arrested. The slightest hint of sympathy for the injured man or a suggestion that if he had committed any crime he should be arrested and not clubbed to death, from the lips of any bystander, would instantly bring a policeman's club down upon the head of the sympathizer that would silence him summarily. In all these instances no attempt was made to discriminate between the 'guilty' and 'innocent.' The city was in the hands of a lawless band of thugs and that band was backed in its every doing by the organized forces of the exploiters of labor—by those whose purses were touched or whose incomes were threatened through the conduct of the fight put up by the labor forces.

"The evidence deduced the fact that it is as much as a merchant's business is worth for one of them to even express the slightest sympathy for the laborers or a word derogatory of the Russian methods that there prevail among police and detectives.

"At the city jail unspeakable cruelty was inflicted upon the men by overcrowding of apartments. The evidence established that in some instances at least this was unnecessary—was a deliberate premeditation. When forty-five men are placed in one room that twelve would soon render unsanitary and are left there day and night to sleep upon a cement floor without any sort of bedding and even without toilet privileges, it is not necessary to discuss the consequences.

"On Sunday, March 10, the labor forces planned two meetings—one before the county jail and one in front of the city prison. In the former the writer took part. It was orderly and impressive. There was no objection whatever on the part of the authorities. Both these places are outside the restricted district and the 'move on' ordinance wa snot yet effective. Without the slightest suspicion that resistance to these meetings would be forthcoming, the audience adjourned to meet at the city jail.

Here, however, a reception awaited them that had not been publicly programmed. After futile effort to drown all that was said in the noise of a couple of motorcycles running on stands, the fire department was asked to come with hose and drive away the people. This call not meeting with a ready response, the police themselves took possession of the apparatus and turned a couple of streams upon the assembly.

"Many men and women alike were drenched both on the street and on the adjacent sidewalk. This fate was meted out to several passersby who were no part of the audience. One such woman and baby (in baby carriage) were literally swept into the gutter and almost drowned. Three lady speakersone an evangelist and not a member of any of the allied organizations—were drenched from head to foot. One was actually driven by the force of the water against a board fence with such force as to knock part of it down. For full two hours this water was played upon everybody who came within its reach. It should be kept in mind that these meetings were strictly within the law and no accusation has ever been made that one word was spoken to which any exception could be taken by the most fastidious capitalist.

"Several persons were jailed and deported for the crime of selling papers, especially the organ of the Federated Trades of that city and the San Francisco Bulletin. The latter, a purely capitalist daily guilty of an effort at telling the truth or at least an approximation to it about what was going on in this bit of Russianized America, was particularly repulsive to the advocates of 'enforcement of law and order.'

"The deportation, clubbing and semi-hanging of the editor of the labor paper was but an incident in the regular regime. The paper, however, managed to make its weekly appearance as per schedule and was boosted to an enviable circulation. It gave the truth as far as that was ascertainable; but that was sufficient to supply rather warm reading.

"This report might be extended indefinitely, but that is unnecessary. The main facts as developed by the evidence given before the Governor's commissioner are herein outlined and they are surficient.

"The frantic denilas on the part of the San Diego authorities that their police were in co-operation with the vigilance committee is in consonance with their entire line of conduct in this whole matter. No other point was more clearly established before the commissioner than was the connivance, the absolute accord, of these two bodies. Two persons who ventured before the commissioner on behalf of the San Diego authorities were at once identified by those who had received the regular allotment of clubbing at the hands of the vigilantes as member of that organization; and one of them is a city official. The other was shown a spot of blood upon his clothes that had issued from the head of the man who pointed it out. Very close observation was required to discern it at all; but the former 'prisoner' knew it was there as soon as he caught sight of the man who had beaten him.

"Some half dozen Socialists who did not participate in the 'illegal' speaking upon the street are now under arrest and out on bail charged with 'conspiracy to violate a city ordinance.' Among these are Comrades Harry McKee and Geo. Moodbey. The others who were really arrested now fill the city jail, the county jail and the jails of Orange and Riverside Counties. What will finally be done with them remains to be seen. Attorney Moore is constantly upon the ground looking after their interests and so will remain as long as one man is incarcerated. Whatever may be said of the wisdom or the unwisdom of the initiation of this struggle, the united labor forces of San Diego went into it. They have put up a strenuous battle for human rights. They are in prison and are suffering at the hand o fthe organized opposition. They must be defended and the means for that defense must come from their brothers and comrades outside as well as inside that municipality.

"Respectfully submitted,

"N. A. RICHARDSON,
"Committee."

Our National Executive Committee further directed me to call for contributions to assist in the San Diego Free Speech fight.

"FREE LOVE" FACT AND FICTION.

We are all familiar with the inflexible position of the Roman Catholic Church on the sanctity and indissolubility of marriage, and recently we have become even more familiar with the views of its most prominent spokesmen, who claim that one of the vital positions which utterly differentiates Socialists from Catholics is their antagonistic views on marriage. Socialists, say they, stand for "free love," and only the other day Cardinal Farley declared in public that "free love" was one of the planks in the Socialist platform and that Socialists themselves admitted it.

And on the very day when Farley made this admission—for the Socialists the question of "free love" versus marriage came up in the German Reichstag, in which there are 110 Socialists and a much smaller number of Catholics—members of the Centrum.

It seems that in the German colonies in Africa the good German bourgeois officials—not a Socialist among them—have been in the habit of contracting matrimonial alliances with the native women.

The legality of these marriages in German law was doubtful, so the question came up for settlement in the Reichstag.

The Catholic Centrum stood stoutly for the maintenance of these marriages in law. Its spokesmen declared that they should be permitted to the poorer German officials because of the difficulty of obtaining white wives and also because the native women very often brought a considerable dowry in cattle to their German husbands. In fact, the Centrum spokesmen laid particular emphasis on the economic aspect of the question as one of the principal reasons why these unions should be declared legal, an argument which seems rather strange in the mouth of a Catholic, seeing that they profess to regard marriage wholly as what they call a "sacrament," a divine institution, and, therefore, unconnected with mere economic considerations. In fact, one of their principal objections to the Socialist view of marriage is that the latter insist that marriage has an economical side at present and its form is largely determined by economic consideration, whether it be a "sacrament" or not.

And what position did the 110 Socialists in the Reichstag take on this question? This was their opportunity to "abolish marriage" and put forward the claims of "free love" as "one of the planks in their platform," according to Cardinal Farley. What did they do? Did they oppose the Catholic Centrum and vote against them, as might apparently be expected?

No, they didn't. They actually abandoned their "platform" and voted with the Catholics to uphold the legality of these colonial marriages.

What argument did they put up for their action? The economic aspect of marriage? Not so. Their spokesmen said not one word about cattle or dowries. They left that to the Catholics, who don't believe that these things have anything to do with marriage. They simply stated that those Germans who had married native women should be made to stand by the obligations they had incurred. They took the "moral" side of the question and left the Catholic Centrum to deal with the economic side.

And Socialist and Catholic stood together in the voting, and won out by 203 to 183.

That is to say, 110 Socialists and 93 members of the Centrum got together and defeated 183 capitalist representatives who wanted "free love" in the German African colonies.

And this took place in Germany on the very day Cardinal Farley in New York was declaring that "free love" was one of the planks in the Socialist platform and all Socialists admitted it.

But a fact of this kind Farley and his like cannot see. Fiction suits their purposes much better. For it becomes at times convenient to pretend blindness themselves.—New York Call.

ADVICE TO BIULDERS.

To the Editor of The Socialist:

Sir—I was much pleased to see recently an article advising those who expect to build to get first a competent and honest architect, instead of buying stock plans. The estimates on these latter are generally misleading, except for the locality in which they are made and the specifications, if there are any, are far from satisfactory for any responsible contractor. They are generally loosely drawn and furnish the basis of unending dispute. A good architect, at the outset, is just as necessary as a good plumber to complete the building.

Another thing the builder should do is, when he has his plans and specifications, to submit them to the Builders' Exchange or some responsible contractor, who employes union labor. A number of cases could be cited in which when a different course was followed, the irresponsible contractor has left the job incomplete or the completed structure was unsatisfactory. The man who follows the course I suggest will get all he pays for. The man who takes the other course will not. Yours truly,

W. H. RANGER.

PRICE FOR HONESTY.

It would appear that dishonesty is at a premium, for those who have toiled the least have amassed the most of the world's goods. There are some people who despise labor and yet they are wealthy; and since it is only by labor that wealth can be created, those who acquire wealth without labor do so by dishonest means. In truth they prey upon others by absorbing what they produce. This is the effect of a fundamental error in the theory of political economy, as taught by all capitalistic economists from Adam Smith down to the present time, as to what gives value to money.

We are taught to believe that money is a commodity created by labor, and it is treated throughout the entire civilized world as such.

Everybody is grabbing for more and more money, thinking that by so doing he will get more value, when, in fact, he only forces real commodities, created by labor, to a higher price level.

Money is not a commodity created by labor. Money is simply an instrument of credit and is created by law. All economists have overlooked the effect which the universal method (the 'employer' and employe method) of applying productive labor has had on money. This universal method is the mother of four great facts—credit, money, the arbitrary value of money, and price. These four facts will, when understood and acted upon by the people, not only reduce the cost of living, but will eliminate poverty from the earth and make wars impossible.

The white man's burden is simply a burden of dishonesty. If we were all honest, each one taking only what his labor produced, we would do away with the policeman, the army and the navy and the army of political blood-suckers. The civilized world is simply paying an enormous price for its own dishonesty. The great majority of the people do what they think is right; but we are all doing the wrong thing, because we are all educated to an error in political economy. Correct the error in theory, thereby causing a correct line of thinking, and the result will be right actions.

The coming revolution should be a bloodless one. It should eliminate ignorance and superstition. It should be a revolt for right, not might.

Indeed, one of the most harmful superstitions now extant is that gold is a measure of value. Only when society comes to realize that labor is the just measure of value will strife cease and justice prevail.

Charles Edward Russell in the "Coming Nation" answers the arguments of those apologists of the capitalist system, who claim that Socialism would destroy the home. He points out very clearly that he agrees with the opinion of our critics and proves that the socialized state will do away with the harems maintained by idle rich, who support cottages by the sea, homes in the country and the town house with a mistress in each home. Socialism would destroy such homes, for when the rich must produce sufficent to feed a lot of retainers who are only playthings for those who live in filth and debauch their manhood. And to such a conviction we add amen.

THE SOCIALIST PLATFORM

Adopted by National Convention at Indianapolis, May 17, 1912

The Socialist Party of the United States declares that the capitalist system has outgrown its historical function and has become utterly incapable of meeting the problems confronting society. We denounce this outgrown system as incompetent and corrupt and the source of unspeakable misery and suffering to the whole working class.

Under this system the industrial equipment of the nation has passed into the absolute control of a plutocracy which exacts an annual tribute of millions of dollars from the producers. Unafraid of any organized resistance, it stretches out its greedy hands over the still undeveloped resources of the nation—the land, the mines, the forests and the water powers of every state in the Union.

In spite of the multiplication of labor-saving machines and improved methods in industry, which cheapen the cost of production, the share of the producers grows ever less, and the prices of all the necessities of life steadily increase. The boasted prosperity of this nation is for the owning class alone. To the rest it means only greater hardship and misery. The high cost of living is felt in every home. Millions of wage-workers have seen the purchasing power of their wages decrease until life has become a desperate battle for mere existence.

Multitudes of unemployed walk the streets of our cities or trudge from state to state awaiting the will of the masters to move the wheels of industry.

The farmers in every state are plundered by the increasing prices exacted for tools and machinery and by extortionate rent, freight rates and storage charges.

Capitalist concentration is mercilessly crushing the class of small business men and driving its members into the ranks of propertyless wage workers. The overwhelming majority of the people of America are being forced under a yoke of bondage by this soulless industrial despotism.

It is this capitalist system that is responsible for the increasing burden of armaments, the poverty, slums, child labor, most of the insanity, crime and prostitution, and much of the disease that afflicts mankind.

Under this system the working class is exposed to poisonous conditions, to frightful and needless perils of life and limb, is walled around with court decisions, injunctions and unjust laws, and is preyed upon incessantly for the benefit of the controlling oligarchy of wealth. Under it also the children of the working class are doomed to ignorance, drudging toil and darkened lives.

In the face of these evils, so manifest that all thoughtful observers are appalled at them, the legislative representatives of the Republican, Democratic and all reform parties remain the faithful servants of the oppressors. Measures designed to secure to the wage earners of this nation as humane and just treatment as is already enjoyed by the wage earners of all other civilized nations have been smothered in committee without debate, and laws ostensibly designed to bring relief to the farmers and general consumers are juggled and transformed into instruments for the exaction of further tribute. The growing unrest under oppression has driven these two old parties to the enactment of a variety of regulative measures, none of which has limited in any appreciable degree the power of the plutocracy, and some of which have been perverted into means for increasing that power. Anti-trust laws, railroad restrictions and regulations, with the prosecutions, indictments and investigations based upon such legislation, have proved to be utterly futile and ridiculous.

Nor has this plutocracy been seriously restrained or even threatened by any Republican or Democratic executive. It has continued to grow in power and insolence alike under the administrations of Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft.

In addition to this legislative juggling and this executive connivance, the courts of America have sanctioned and strengthened the hold of this plutocracy as the Dred Scott and other decisions strengthned the slave power before the civil war.

We declare, therefore, that the longer sufferance of these conditions is impossible, and we purpose to end them all. We declare them to be the product of the present system in which industry is carried on for private greed, instead of for the welfare of society. We declare, furthermore, that for these evils there will be and can be no remedy and no substantial relief except through Socialism, under which industry will be carried on for the common good and every worker receive the full social value of the wealth he creates.

Society is divided into warring groups and classes, based upon material interests. Fundamentally, this struggle is a conflict between the two main classes, one of which, the capitalist class, owns the means of production, and the other, the working class, must use these means of production on terms dictated by the owners.

The capitalist class, though few in number, absolutely controls the government—legislative, executive and judicial! This class owns the machinery of gathering and disseminating news through its organized press. It subsidizes seats of learning—the colleges and schools—and even religious and moral agencies. It has also the added prestige which established customs give to any order of society, right or wrong.

The working class, which includes all those who are forced to work for a living, whether by hand or brain, in shop, mine or on the soil, vastly outnumbers the capitalist class. Lacking effective organization and class solidarity, this class is unable to enforce its will. Given such class solidarity and effective organization, the workers will have the power to make all laws and control of industry in their own interest.

All political parties are the expression of economic and class interests. All other parties than the Socialist party represent one or another group of the ruling capitalist class. Their political conflicts reflect merely superficial rivalries between competing capitalist groups. However they result, these conflicts have no issue of real value to the workers. Whether the Democrats or Republicans win politically, it is the capitalist class that is victorious economically.

The Socialist party is the political expression of the economic interests of the workers. Its defeats have been their defeats and its victories their victories. It is a party founded on the science and laws of social development, It proposes that, since all social necessities today are socially produced, the means of their production and distribution shall be socially owned and democratically controlled.

In the face of the economic and political aggressions of the capitalist class, the only reliance left the workers is that of their economic organizations and their political power. By the intelligent and class conscious use of these they may resist successfully the capitalist class, break the fetters of wage slavery, and fit themselves for the future society, which is to displace the capitalist system. The Socialist party appreciates the full significance of class organization and urges the wage earners, the working farmers and all other useful workers everywhere to organize for economic and political action, and we pledge ourselves to support the toilers of the fields as well as those in the shops, factories and mines of the nation in their struggles for economic justice.

In the defeat or victory of the working class party in this new struggle for freedom lies the defeat or triumph of the common people of all economic groups, as well as the failure or the triumph of popular government. Thus the Socialist party is the party of the present-day revolution, which marks the transition from economic individualism to Socialism, from wage slavery to free co-operation, from capitalist oligarchy to industrial democracy.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, the co-operative commonwealth, and, to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

1. The collective ownership and democratic management of railroads, wire and wireless telegraphs and telephones, express services, steamboat lines and all other social means of transportation and communication and of all large-scale industries.
2. The immediate acquirement by the municipalities, the states or the federal government of all grain elevators, stock yards, storage warehouses and other distributing agencies, in order to reduce the present extortionate cost of living.
3. The extension of the public domain to include mines, quarries, oil wells, forests and water power.
4. The further conservation and development of natural resources for the use and benefit of all the people:
   (a) By scientific forestation and timber protection.
   (b) By the reclamation of arid and swamp tracts.
   (c) By the storage of flood waters and the utilization of water power.
   (d) By the stoppage of the present extravagant waste of the soil and of the products of mines and oil wells.
   (e) By the development of highway and waterway systems.
5. The collective ownership of land wherever practicable, and, in cases where such ownership is impracticable, the appropriatnon by taxation of the annual rental value of all land held for speculation.
6. The collective ownership and democratic management of the banking and currency system.

The immediate government relief of the unemployed by the extension of all useful public works. All persons employed on such works to be engaged directly by the government under a work-day of not more than eight hours and at not less than the prevailing union wages. The government also to establish employment bureaus; to lend money to states and municipalities without interest for the purpose of carrying on public works, and to take such other measures within its power as will lessen the widespread misery of the workers caused by the misrule of the capitalist class.

The conservation of human resources, particularly of the lives and well-being of the workers and their families:

1. By shortening the workday in keeping with the increased productiveness of machinery.
2. By securing to every worker a rest period of not less than a day and a half in each week.
3. By securing a more effective inspection of workshops, factories and mines.
4. By forbidding the employment of children under 16 years of age.
5. By the co-operative organization of industries in federal penitentiaries and workshops for the benefit of convicts and their dependents.
6. By forbidding the interstate transportation of the products of child labor, of convict labor and of all uninspected factories and mines.
7. By abolishing the profit system in government work and substituting either the direct hire of labor or the awarding of contracts to co-operative groups of workers.
8. By establishing minimum wage scales.
9. By abolishing official charity and substituting a non-contributory sytem of old-age pensions, a general system of insurance by the state of all its members against unemployment and invalidism and a system of compulsory insurance by employers of their workers, without cost to the latter, against industrial diseases, accidents and death.

Political Demands.

1. The absolute freedom of press, speech and assemblage.
2. The adoption of a graduated income tax, the increase of the rates of the present corporation tax and the extension of inheritance taxes, graduated in proportion to the value of the estate and to nearness of kin—the proceeds of these taxes to be employed in the socialization of industry.
3. The abolition of the monopoly ownership of patents and the substitution of collective ownership, with direct rewards to inventors by premiums or royalties.
4. Unrestricted and equal suffrage for men and women.
5. The adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall and of proportional representation, nationally as well as locally.
6. The abolition of the senate and of the veto power of the president.
7. The election of the president and the vice president by direct vote of the people.
8. The abolition of the power usurped by the Supreme Court of the United States to pass upon the constitutionality of the legislation enacted by Congress. National laws to be repealed only by act of Congress or by a referendum vote of the whole people.
9. The abolition of the present restrictions upon the amendment of the constitution, so that that instrument may be made amendable by a majority of the voters in a majority of the states.
10. The granting of the right of suffrage in the District of Columbia, with representation in Congress and a democratic form of municipal government for purely local affair.
11. The extension of democratic government to all United States territory.
12. The enactment of further measures for general education and particularly for vocational education in useful pursuits. The bureau of education to be made a department.
13. The enactment of further measures for the conservation of health. The creation of an independent bureau of health with such restrictions as will secure full liberty for all schools of practice.
14. The separation of the present bureau of labor from the department of commerce and labor and its elevation to the rank of a department.
15. Abolition of all federal district courts and the United States circuit courts of appeals. State courts to have jurisdiction in all cases arising between citizens of the several states and foreign corporations. The election of all judges for short terms.
16. The immediate curbing of the power of the courts to issue injunctions.
17. The free admmistration of justice.
18. The calling of a convention for the revision of the constitution of the United States.

Such measures of relief as we may be able to force from capitalism are but a preparation of the workers to seize the whole powers of government in order that they may thereby lay hold of the whole system of socialized industry and thus come to their rightful inheritance.

Following is the report of the committee on labor organizations, which was unanimously adopted by the National Socialist convention at Indianapolis:

The undersigned members, constituting a majority of the committee, recommended the adoption of the following declaration:

Political organization and economic organization are alike necessary in the struggle for working class emancipation, working class movement—the Socialist party and the labor unions.

The labor movement of the United States has of recent years made marvelous progress in all directions. It has steadily increased in numbers and has reached trades and industries which were before unorganized. It has in many instancesss concentrated its power and increased its efficiency by the amalgamation of related trades into federations and industrial unions. Many unions have opened their meetings and journals to the discussion of vital social and political problems of the working class, and have repudiated the demoralizing policies represented by the National Civic Federation. The organized workers are rapidly developing an enlightened and militant class-consciousness.

The reality of this progress is attested by the increasing virulence with which the organized capitalists wage their war against the union. The improved economic organization is not a matter of abstract theory, but grows out of the experience of the wage workers in the daily class struggle. Only those actually engaged in the struggle in the various trades and industries can solve the problems of form of organization.

The Socialist party, therefore, reffirms the position it ha salways taken with regard to the movement of organized labor:

1. That the party has neither the right nor the desire to interfere in any controversies which may exist within the labor union movement over questions of form of organization or technical methods of action in the industrial struggle, but trusts to the labor organizations themselves to solve these questions.
2. THAT THE SOCIALISTS CALL THE ATTENTION OF THEIR BROTHERS IN THE LABOR UNIONS TO THE VITAL IMPORTANCE OF THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED, ESPECIALLY THE IMMIGRANTS AND THE UNSKILLED LABORERS, WHO STAND IN GREATEST NEED OF ORGANIZED PROTECTION AND WHO WILL CONSTITUTE A GREAT MENACE TO THE PROGRESS AND WELFARE OF ORGANIZED LABOR IF THEY REMAIN NEGLECTED. THE SOCIALIST PARTY WILL EVER BE READY TO CO-OPERATE WITH THE LABOR UNIONS IN THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED WORKERS, AND URGES ALL LABOR ORGANIZATIONS, WHO HAVE NOT ALREADY DONE SO, TO THROW THEIR DOORS WIDE OPEN TO THE WORKERS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE TRADES AND INDUSTRIES, ABOLISHING ALL ONERous CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP AND ARTIFICIAL RESTRICTIONS. IN THE FACE OF TH ETREMENDOUS POWERS OF THE AMERICAN CAPITALISTS AND THEIR CLOSE INDUSTRIAL AND POLITICAL UNION, THE WORKERS OF THIS COUNTRY CAN WIN THEIR BATTLES ONLY BY A STRONG CLASS-CONSCIOUSNESS AND CLOSELY UNITED ORGANIZATION ON THE ECONOMIC FIELD, A POWERFUL AND MILITANT PARTY ON THE POLITICAL FIELD AND BY JOINT ATTACK OF BOTH ON THE COMMON ENEMY.
3. That it is the duty of the party to give moral and material support to the labor organizations in all their defensive or aggressive struggles against the capitalist oppression and exploitation, for the protection and extension of the rights of the wage workers and the betterment of their material and social condition.
4. That it is the duty of the members sof the Socialist party who are eligible to membership in the unions to join and be active in their respective labor organizations.

HUMANITY'S PRAYER IS VOICED BY WORKINGMAN

Goal of Freedom is but Short Step Away When Toilers Awake to the Situation

Humanity's prayer has long been for freedom. Since the world began humanity has never known the real meaning of the word, but we have slowly but surely been creeping up to that goal. It is but a short step and we will soon be there. This is no idle dream, for to the thinking mind it is a concrete reality.

The freedom which the establishment of the co-operative commonwealth will accomplish will not be for a few but for all. The prayer of all the downtrodden will be answered. The child will sing its gladsome song. The workers, masterless, joyous and free, shall work gladly for family and home, sure of what they earn, unafraid of the morrow, unhaunted by the fear of illness or unemployment, safe from the scrap-pile of trade, ennobled by the dignity of labor that pays no tribute to a taskmaster.

Women, God bless them, will then be able to choose a mate unhampered by artificial conditions created by poverty or riches and in that freedom she will be able to rear her brood under conditions which will give to us a race of giants and not pigmies.

In that day the bawdy house will disappear. Of all the uncivilized, brutal and animal institutions this is the worst, but it is the direct result of our barbarous civilization.

Religion of that day will be one that will use these beautiful words, "Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you," and we will then and not till then be able to practice it.

The home will be a pleasant dwelling place with all the comforts necessary to cultivate the grand and noble in the mind of man and woman. Truly the earth will take on an altogether different appearance. Man for the first time will walk upright. The dreams of the Utopian and the scientific philosopher, of Marx and Engle will be realized.

How, did you say? First we must educate the people that there are only two ways to handle this matter. One is by individual ownership, the other is by collective ownership. In other words, WE of ME. History has proven that individual ownership makes for slavery, therefore the only way to do away with slavery is to establish collective ownership of the thing which we must use and have for our physical wellbeing. This accomplished slavery will disappear. In order to do this we must organize those who are educated to understand that fact, educate those who are agitated or discontented. Agitate, educate and organize those who are not agitated, educated or organized. Capture the political power, not to use it against the rich man but to use it for the benefit of the working class, the courts to get just decisions, the army, militia and navy, not to turn the guns against the rich, but to keep them from turning them on us. In the industrial field too we must organize the unorganized so that when the time arrives to take over the industries we will have a concrete organization which will be able to manage industry and the wheels of progress will not stop for one minute.

It's not such a big task, comrades. So with heads erect and hearts tuned to love, liberty and truth let us not falter but "March on! March on! All hearts resolved on victory or death."

Under the scarlet banner, that signifies Universal Brotherhood, we must win for the sake of the innocent little children whose lives capitalism is blighting. We must do this great work.

O comrades far and near,
Raise the chant loud and clear
Of Love's good song;
In our restless might
Thunder the creed of right,
Justice and truth unite
Against the wrong.

MR. DUNKLEMAN AGAIN EXPRESSES HIS VIEWS

Nobody is Responsible for His Ideas or Language

Mister Editor:—

I bin tendin some of your metins an I sure am proud of that orgenazashon you got in this hear town. Most of the fellers wants to fight it out on ther own pertikular line an if any body happens to think a little bit different it makes em awfull mad. last time I was up ther ther was a paper red frum the felers on the hill an they seem to hev it in fer you. i think you ought to let them fellers get your paper up fer you fer a while. i bet they wod hev alot more readers. Only thing again it is thet a lot o people wod cry ther eyes out tryin to get one.

them fellers dont seem to care much bout a paper, they believe the felers what own the tools will mak votes fer your partie by starvin the people out. They talk abot the bred and buter Socialist. Dont you ever git it in yur hed thet any such thing is goin to happin. Thes hear fellers what own the tools nos them fellers hant a good Socialist unles hes hungry, an you bet they will find a way to git em a job an take the wrinklis out o ther stomacks befor lectiun day. Jist go on pendin on your bred an buter Socialist an every thing will be lovely fer us fellers. I bin talkin to som o them an all they no bout Socialism is thet they are hungry.

Thers another bunch o fellers whats wise to what Socialism is but they dont com out an talk fer it. They are the bizness fellers, the fellers whot thinks hes in the middle class an hant got branes enof to no hes in the same boat with the rest of you. He does no, if he ever gits canary, an goes to talkin fer Socialism that the fellers what own him will simple pinch thet pimple off his shoulders. Hes bluffed alright. Hes almost afraid to draw his breth an when he goes to vote on lectiun day he tryes to git in the back way fer fear some feller wil find out he voted, cos when a feller only got to ways to vote hes got to snub somebody. You can tel by the primery elekshun how thes fellers feel about it.

I am glad fer the sake of the fellers whot own the tools to see you fellers tryin to put the paper on the hummer. I was kinder worried bout this fer a while but I think I can see a grand futur for the people wot own the earth fer a long time if you jist let your perliticul orgenazahun git a little more infected with such tactics.

Yours truelie,

J. J. DUNKLEMANN.

P. S.—As long as you fellers get your Socialism through your stumacks an keep it out o your head, the kapitalist class hant goin to suffer much.

FINANCIER MORSE IMPROVES

Charles W. Morse, the financier, who broke several New York banks, has returned from Europe apparently in the best of health.

When Morse, about six months ago was a resident of the government prison at Atlanta, Ga., the doctors made affidavit that one of his feet was already in the grave and it was only a matter of days that the other foot and all the rest of Charley would be in it also. Therefore, to spare Morse the ignominy of dying in prison, he was pardoned.

It is stated that Morse's release from prison cost him $250,000 and that a big slice of this went to Harry M. Daugherty, of Columbus, Ohio, who has a strong pull with the Taft administration. Harry undoubtedly earned his fee. Some poor devil who had stolen a small sum would stay in the pen until his time was out or death released him.

A lot of grafters are now making a good living attacking Socialism. Peculiar, though it is a fact, that these retainers of capitalism take to the tall timbers when asked to meet a Socialist in debate. Of course, they expect to live and succeed by lies, but the Socialists have a habit of making these "intelligent" spellbinedrs look like the proverbial ass that they don't wish to have their ignorance displayed on the public platform.

COUNTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The County Central Committee of the Socialist Party met Wednesday evening and organized by electing R. M. Woody, Chairman; D. M. Kuhns, Secretary; W. S. Rutherford, Treasurer; Chas. Weinrich, Jr., Financial Secretary. The committee will meet next Wednesday evening.

BIG COFFEE JOKE PULLED OFF BY THE BILL TAFT REGIME

Trust Enjoined from Selling 950,000 Bags of National Necessity. Just Read It.

New York.—The government lost its initial action in its suit to curb the alleged coffee trust today when the United States Circuit Court refused to issue an injunction restraining the alleged trust from disposing of 950,000 bags of coffee stored in a Brooklyn warehouse.

The suit was directed against Herman Sielcken, the noted coffee importer. The department asked that he and his associates be restrained from disposing of the stored coffee, which it claimed was held in storage in order that the supply on the market could be limited and the price forced up.

Do you notice the irony of the joke pulled off on you in the above? No, of course you don't, you thick brained timberheaded Democrats and Republicans. It takes a Socialist to see through the game. In the first place, Taft must keep up his sham game of busting the trust. He has busted them all, clean up to Standard Oil, with the exception of the Coffee trust, and a few hundred other. Now—the coffee ginks have been getting real bad, so Billy Boy must needs chastise them. After a long and perilous search it was discovered that there actually existed a Coffee trust, and that they were charging the American people about six times as much for coffee as the government would do were it in the coffee business and furnishing the product to the people at cost.

Next it was discovered that the Coffee trust had stored away 950,000 bags of the said bean, which they were holding in order to keep up prices.

Now, notice how that bunch of Anarchists down at Washington proceeded to "Bust the trust."

Action was brought in the U. S. Circuit Court, asking for an injunction to restrain the Coffee trust from selling this 950,000 bags. "Shades of Caesar's Ghost." In the first place the trust stores it away and won't sell, and then the government, in order to make the trust sell, tries to get out an injunction to prevent the trust from selling.

Oh you dern fool working men. To think that you have a ballot, to think that you have an opportunity each year to vote for a sane system, of government, and then to think how you continue to throw that ballot away, by voting a scab Democrat or Republican ticket. Barnum was sure right, you "like to be humbugged," and the master class know you only too well. Arouse yourselves from your sleep of ages, and go to the ballot box and kick out this dirty bunch of blood-sucking vampires, who are living on the blood of you and your wife and children.

Will you arouse yourselves or will you wait until it is too late and you are swept into the maelstrom of a bloody revolution?

Soon you will have another chance to vote for freedom or continued slavery, for your family or the family of a few worthless parasites, for capitalism and death, for life for all. Take your choice. Which will it be?

EXTRA COPIES.

The Columbus Socialist will have extra copies of this week's issue printed. It should be understood that these copies are for SALE at the rate of $1.00 per hundred; single copies 3 cents; ten or more, 2 cents each. This office cannot supply the papers free. Our paper is worth the price asked for propaganda purposes. Get busy.

According to Bradstreets, one of the best posted mercantile agencies in the country, the cost of living has advanced two per cent during the past month. How is that, for prosperity.

The Socialist Candidates for President and Vice-President Accept

DEBS' TELEGRAM OF ACCEPTANCE.

"Girard, Kansas.

"This is to acknowledge the receipt of your telgram of notification and to advise you, the delegates of the Socialist party in national convention assembled, that I accept the nomination for President of the United States tendered to me, with the deepest sense of confidence it implies and the responsibility it imposes.

"Having sought in every way that seemed proper to have the nomination tendered to some other comrade of whom there are so many qualified, I feel all the greater my obligation to yield obedience to the collective will of my comrades in convention assembled and to serve the party to the full extent of my power.

"Allow me to congratulate the convention heartily upon the most efficient manner in which the delegates performed their arduous labors and the splendid success of their deliberations; also upon the unity, harmony and enthusiasm which the convention has inspired in the party at large. The convention this year marks a new and brilliant era in the American working class movement. All things are combining to make this years our year.

"It is written in our stars that Socialism is to be the only issue in the coming campaign. Let us all unite and strive with all our energies to make this campaign forever memorable in the annals of the International Movement.

"With hearty greetings to the convention and deepest thanks to each and every delegate and with sincere congratulations upon the nomination of Comrade Seidel for Vice President, I remain most faithfully your comrade and fellow worker.

"EUGENE V. DEBS."

SEIDEL'S FIRST WORDS

Amid prolonged cheers Emil Seidel, the vice presidential candidate, forced upon the rostrum upon demand for a "speech" said: "The only difference shown in this convention were our tactics, but on the principle of abolishing the capitalist system and establishing Socialism all are a united, fighting phalanx."

"For us there will be only one issue in this campaign, and that issue will be: When shall we be a free people?" said Seidel. "One thing must be clear, and that is that the working class problem is a problem that the working class alone can work out."

CINCINNATI HAS INFERNO THAT MATCHES COLUMBUS

Preliminary Report That Indicates What is to Follow. To be Continued in Our Next Issue

Another institution of human slavery has been found to exist in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio. More diabolical if that were posible, is the conditions existing in the Convent of the "Good Shepard" at Price Hill in Cincinnati, Ohio, where sweat-shop goods are made by the innocence, not only of youth, but of mere infants, who are compelled to do the tasks set for them or be punished for not doing so. Great private corporations profit off the blood and brain of the female infants who are to be the mothers of future generations, but how well they will be physically, mentally and sexually capable of performing the full duty of motherhood let the immediate issues of this paper tell in the language of those who have been there and who actually know what is being done inside the high walls of these institutions of toil and shame. In the aforesaid institution there are between seventy-five and one hundred sewing machines (power machines) on which is put to work girls under the age of fourteen years to perform tasks of sewing on shirts, overalls and jackets, making as many as 960 shirt sleeves as a day's work or task before they can have any supper. Mere children are made to kneel down and kiss the dirty floor and ask forgiveness of the "Mother Superior" or some other so-called-mother for mere talking, knocking over a chair, or some other trivial infraction of the rigid rules. We wonder if this is where the Capitalist class gets the idea of compelling the industrial workers to kneel down in the mud or dust and kiss the American flag to inspire them with the full measure of loyalty, patriotism and allegiance to Capitalistic Institutions.

Think of it, girls who are about to pass into the flower of life are compelled to eat bread saturated with salt petre, alum or some other drug in order to deaden the functions of nature, take away the passion for the oposite sex and rendered them stupid, mentally, and sexually in order that they may become the more easily managed and submissive to the rules of the institution and lessen the desire to gain freedom. Who dare say that this abomination will not be stamped comes to know these horrors? Who will dare inaugurate the fight against this outrage on future generations yet unborn, but the Socialist Party? Is there any wonder the Pope of Rome had sent a special message to the President of the United States, William Howard Taft, in care of the special envoy Major Butt who, when he saw his doom on board the fated Titanic deliberately took from hiding the manuscripts bearing the Pope's message and burned them least by some chance of Providence that message become known.

In this fiendish institution at Price Hill there are also other sweat-shops which do the laundrying of some of the most well known corporations, fashionable clubs and wealthy citizens of that boss ridden burg, among which is the Gibson House, the Country Club, Grand Hotel and others who deliver their dirty laundry to these children to be washed, ironed and finished in the best and most careful manner. Two hundred girls work in this laundry for their board which consists of malnutritious conglomerations of junk doped with salt petre and other drugs. These two hundred girls are taken to this laundry by way of an underground tunnel which is damp, mouldy and unhealthy and has no ventilation, and the laundry is kept closed and without proper ventilation. We have heard of underground railroads to free the Black slaves of the South, but these were actually on top of the ground, but operated secretly. We did not before know there actually existed an underground tunnel, actually under the ground for the purpose of keeping enslaved innocent childhood right under our eyes if we will but look. But who has the power to look? The law gives the Probate Judges of each County the right to inspect the "Hell Holes" but what do they do. Former Judge Galloway of Franklin County, Ohio, visited the children occasionally in the school room and sang some of those pretty songs he knew and our present Probate Judge has never been known to have been inside of the accursed walls of these institutions, and sentences most, if not all of the girls who come under his protecting care to the aforesaid Convent at Cincinnati, O., where he as such Judge, has no right to enter, in his official capacity and so these institutions are allowed to prosper off the toil of infants and children. Why does not the State of Ohio send its Inspector of Workshops into these factories? Why do we not hear something said from that office about enforcing the laws? If a female over eighteen years works in a restraurant over ten hours on any one day or more than fifty-four hours in any one week the employer is yanked up before some magistrate forthwith. It is possible that that law so reads as not to be applicable to Convents where they have to release the convict at the age of eighteen if there is any one to attend to it, but where they continue to stay and sweat until the age of eighty years if no friends or relatives come to demand release? Has the hand of the Pope reached out in silence and subtility and dictated the law over females so that the law will not apply to females under eighteen years old? While Protestants sleep, Rome attends to her business in the most exacting manner for what? Economical determinism. Nothing more and nothing less.

Following upon the heels of this exposure of this nefarious system will come more and more each week as the facts are all in our possession which we will be able to use for the next three months and each day brings in more and more and the web is being woven more and more closely about the "Spider," this time by the innocent flies of youth who have escaped with their souls and part of the body and enough of mind to tell a correct story under oath of their experiences while incarcerated behind the high walls of Romanism. Comrades if you want to help in this fight bring in the subscriptions to this paper and anything along this line which you may know to be true and to which you can make verification. Push the paper. Get busy and the good we will do humanity will be our reward.

COLUMBUS LABOR FEDERATION AFTER SWEAT-SHOPS

Demand Investigation of the Convent on West Broad Street.

The Columbus Federatoin of Labor, last Monday evening went on record in demanding an investigation of the sweat shop located on West Broad Street. This action is timely and the state can no longer dodge the responsibility for the conditions there. The resolution is as follows:

WHEREAS, It has come to our notice that Hershey-Rice Co. is running a sweat shop under the contract labor system, and,

WHEREAS, Shirts, overalls, and jumpers are manufactured in competition with honest working women, and,

WHEREAS, This is a violation of the Wertz law, in spirit if not in letter, and,

WHEREAS, It is correctly rumored that girls of tender ages are being worked in violation of the child labor law. Therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That we demand that the Inspector of Factories and Workshops investigate said shop, situated at Broad and Sandusky Streets, and enforce the law, the same as in other factories.

SOCIALIST DRAMATIC CLUB.

The Socialist Dramatic Club will give an entertainment and lecture tomorrow (Sunday) evening, Comrade J. L. Bachman will speak. Every Comrade should come and bring a friend, so that we may have a rousing good meeting to wake up some of the sleeping workers that they may realize the class struggle and find the road to Freedom. Don't forget that every worker wants to break his chain. He must do it himself, no good friend of labor will ever do it. Come to Red Lion hall, Sunday, June 2, 7:30 P. M.

GRAFT--ITS CAUSE AND ITS CURE

The recent disclosures of an almost universal system of bribery suggests a study of its causes, its effects, and its cure. Social problems are so little understood in their fundamental aspects that such a study is more necessary in view of the increasing frequency and extent of an evil that concerns the very integrity of society itself. And as the disease becomes more virulent, we must be prepared to consider it in its true relations,—its causes and its effects,—that a correct remedy may be ascertained and that we may be able to discard the lotions and salves of those political quacks, who would attempt to cure deep seated social diseases by the application of flaringly advertised nostrums.

It is safe to say that the revelations of bribery made in the recent past constitute but a fraction of its actual occurrence. This conclusion bears more weight from the secret character of the offense and its multiform nature, which rqender its detection impossible, except in the most glaring instances.

Its cause in general, may be stributed to two factors,—the desire of some special privilege or immunity on the part of the bribe-giver and the desire for unearned wealth on the part of the bribe-taker.

Bribery is not an unnatural crime, as is commonly supposed, but is a natural sequence of a system which amasses wealth in the hand of a few out of the toil of the many and awards unearned or socially created wealth as spoils to those possessing the greatest skill in commercial and financial manipulation. In other words, it is a true product of the exploitation of the laboring masses through the devious chicanery of business and finance. Given a society which offers special privileges and immunities as the reward of business success, and you create a class who will seek to obtain these wealth creating privileges and immunities by purchase, and another class who will seek a portion of this unearned wealth by the sale of their own political rights and the rights of others which they may happen to hold in trust.

Examples of Great Wealth.

Examples of conspicuous wealth with its attendant luxury whet the appetite for pleasures that in their very nature can be enjoyed by but a few. The increasing concentration of wealth incident to a regime of special privilege and special immunity increases the conspicuous luxury of the few and the conspicuous poverty of the many, and adds zest to the desire of those outside the inner circle of conspicuous wealth and conspicuous luxury to enter therein. Those endowed with the mental qualities necessary to business chicanery and the sinuosities of finance are able to control and direct some department of the financial and business system and subvert its orderly development to their own ends, using it as a means of exploitation. Those with the desire for conspicuous luxury, but without the aptitude for the intricacies of commerce become parasites upon the skilled financial pirate, willing for a consideration that will enable them to indulge their lust of conspicuous luxury and imitate their master, to do his bidding. Thus in the evolution of bribery there occur these stages, first, a state of society sufficiently complex that public rights have acquired a considerable financial calue; second, a concentration of wealth incident to the acquisition of special privileges and immunities; third, conspicuous luxury on the part of the possessors of conspicuous wealth; fourth, imitation on the part of those not possessing conspicuous wealth but eager to enjoy conspicuous luxury. Thus through the operation of these forces and to maintain the standard of conspicuous luxury and conspicuous waste set up by the wealthy, the politician becomes the pawn of big business in its schemes for still further exploitation. In such a state of society, bribery is not an occasional evidence of social depravity, but is a systematic, universal and necessary instrument in the evolution of business and financial chicanery.

Effects of Bribery.

The effects of bribery are as little understood as its causes. The real evil is not the bribery and the social corruption incident thereto. As we have already stated, bribery, from the very secrecy attending its operations, is seldom detected. In itself it is not an evil at all, but becomes so only in virtue of the consequent bartering away of public rights and the endowment of a few persons with special privileges and immunities which enable them to seize vast public recources which they use in schemes of financial spoilation, and the consequent impoverishment and corruption of the multitude. The effect is the same whether special privileges and immunities are given away or bartered away; whether a portion of the value of a public right or a special privilege is given to those possessing for the time being the power of its bestowal or whether the whole is given away gratuitously. Thus ignorance and prejudice on the part of the political pawns of organized wealth are as inimical to public welfare as bribery itself. To the public generally it make no difference whether a valuable franchise or public right is sold or given away. The result in either evnt is the same. And it bespeaks a much more acumen, if not a higher state of morality, to betray a public trust for a consideration, than to be wheedled into it for the mere asking. The astute sergeant of arms of the Ohio Senate was not far wrong when he said that the special interests ought not to expect to put through a measure worth millions for a bottle of pop. If they are to get the legislation worth millions, let them at least have the decency to divide up with the donors.

Why Anti-Bribery Crusade.

And right here we get an insight into the zeal of certain interests in their crusade against bribery. They do not want to divide up the swag, but would get away with it for nothing or perhaps for a bottle of pop. And the astute politicians, eager for the enjoyment and pleasure that their portion of the spoils will yield, put up the price to an unconscionable figure. In the resulting quarrel, the general public has little interest and the flapdoodle of flamboyant prosecuting attorneys or the unctuous sanctity of the courts constitute but a bit of stage play for public consumption to cover up the real offenders against public morality. Our graft prosecutions are all necessary farces because they tend to conceal the real forces at work underneath the surface. As the official realizes the market value of his position, the price of legislation and special privilege goes up. The business interests seek to depress the market, and graft prosecutions are usually the instruments employed to fetch the recalcitrant official to time, or to punish him for his overweening avarice. The remedy is as fundamental as the cause and it certainly does not consist in the prosecution of individual cases. Listen to what a writer on Roman history has to say on the subject

"Not long after the second Punic war, it was needful to pass a law, against bribing. But it was found to be quite impossible to put the practice down, so long as the rich men were willing to buy the votes of the people, and the people were willing to sell them. Law after law was passed, each more severe than the last; but the only result was that more ingenious devices were invented to elude them; and bribery was never so bad as in the closing days of the Republic."

Human Nature Little Changed.

Human nature was not essentially different two thousand years ago from what it is today. Nor was Roman human nature different from American human nature. Like causes operating under like circumstances produce like effects. Given abnormal wealth in close proximity to abnormal poverty (and the one naturally and necessarily follows the other), and the riches of the wealth will inevitably constitute their most potent argument in seeking public favor. It was so in Rome two thousand years ago. It is so in America today. It is so always and everywhere. This mere statement illuminates the whole question of bribery and graft, as no amount of flamboyant rhetoric from grandstand progecutors or unctuous legal hypocrisy could possibly do. The destruction of abnormal riches would drain the very reservoir of graft, bribery and corruption. Nothing else will. It has been tried and failed. Prosecuting the individual grafter is worse than useless, and not only is useless, but unending. If you want to destroy graft and corruption, get at the bottom of it and destroy the conditions which make it. Otherwise leave it alone and let it fester in the dark. In this way you can least give public morality the semblance of decency. It is useless to parade the sores of the body politic in public, unless you intend to try to effect a cure.

The foregoing will briefly illustrate our theme in its economic aspects. It remains to consider it in its legal and political setting. The dead hand of the past retains a firm hold upon the present in a rigid and outgrown constitution and an archaic system of law. Both our political and legal systems have failed to respond to the stress of modern industrial conditions. Our political system has evolved into unresponsive and irresponsible governments and our legal system into despotic courts and an inflexible body of law wherein the doctrine of property has been stretched to its elastic limit. The result is that we has displaced the hereditary despot by one periodically elected. With our legislatures—national, state and municipal—possessed of almost absolute authority in the bestowal of vast public resources, privileges and immunities, and with no means of preventing the enforcement of an act of these bodies, however corruptly procured, it will be readily seen that the very rigidity of such a system lends itself to the machinations of bribery. Once a coveted privilege or immunity has been secured, any subsequent showing of bribery in connection with its acquisition will not avail, if in the meantime property rights have been acquired on the courts, by the application of an ingenious bit of medieval legal sophistry to our modern industrial and economic relations, hold that public rights, once filched and successfuly lodged in innocent hands, become vested and irrevocable. Under the cover thus afforded has grown up a system of public plunder as brazen, defiant, and merciless as any in the world's history. The corruption of our legislatures incident to the giving away of valuable public rights seeps down into the body politic, and out of it grows a systematic corruption of the voters. Places in legislative bodies become financial assets and the stakes played for are so big as to enable candidates to buy their way into coveted seats, afterwards recouping themselves by the sale of the very public rights they were elected to protect.

Our System Causes Graft.

Thus, whatever may be the accepted legal or political theory, we behold the irresponsible legislatures into which our system has evolved and a rigid doctrine of vested rights converge toward the fastening of vested wrongs irrevocably upon the community, despite the taint connected with their original procurement. Economic conditions tend to make bribery and graft an indispensible part of our industrial mechanism. Our political machinery invites them and bids them a hearty welcome. Our legal doctrines fasten their results upon society with a firmness that permits of no evasion. Thus society is held in a three-fold bondage, and the occasional sporadic campaigns against graft seem but to fasten it upon us more securely by skillfully covering up its underlying causes and attributing it to the depravity of individual men. Individual remedies are useless where the causes are universal. The causes of bribery and graft are not in the depravity and perversity of men, but in the system in which we live. Inaugurate a system that does not invite or necessitate graft and we will hear little of it.

THE WORKER AND THE MACHINE.

In making bread boxes, three workmen can do the work of thirteen box makers by old methods.

In leather manufacture, modern methods have reduced the necessary number of workers from five to fifty per cent.

A carpet measuring and brushing machine, with one operator, will do the work of fifteen men by the old methods.

In the manufacture of flour, modern improvements save 75 per cent of the manual labor that once was necessary.

By the use of coal mining machines 160 miners can mine as much coal in the same time as 500 miners by the old methods.

One boy, by machinery, in turning wood work and materials for musical instruments, performs the work of twenty-five men by the old methods.

In the manufacture of boots and shoes, the work of 500 operatives is now done by 100—a displacement of wage earners of 80 per cent—by aid of machinery.

In stave dressing, twelve co-laborers, with a machine, can dress 13,000 staves in the same time that the same number of workmen, by hand, could dress 2,500 staves.

In the cotton mills the manual labor has been reduced about 50 per cent. Now one weaver manages from two to ten looms, where one loom was formerly tended by one worker.

In the manufacture of brick, improved devices save one-tenth of the labor; and in the manufacture of fire brick, 40 per cent of the manual labor is displaced.

In the manufacture of agricultural implements, 800 operatives, with machinery, including 18 classes of wage earners, do the work of 2,145 wage earners, without machinery, displacing 1,545 workers.

The introduction of machinery in the manufacture of children's shoes during the last thirty years, has displaced six times the manual labor now required, and the product of the manufacturer has been reduced 50 per cent to the consumer.

In the manufacture of wall paper, one worker, by the aid of machinery, does the work of 100 workers by manual labor; and in cutting and drying paper by machinery, four men and six girls do the work of 100 operators by old methods.

In manufacturing gun stocks, one man, by manual labor, was able to turn and fit one gun stock in one day of ten hours, while three men by a division of labor and the use of machinery, can turn and fit 125 to 150 gun stocks in ten hours. This displaces the work of forty-four to forty-nine wage workers.

Do you know what this means for the worker, this constant, this almost miraculous improvement in machinery? When thousands of men are displaced by the installment of a new machine in a factory, it means thousands of men out of work, thousands of men tramping the streets looking for work. Thousands of men lengthening the bread lines of our great industrial centers.

And thousands of men out of work and clamoring for a job means the lowering of wages for those who still hold their jobs, because competition always cuts down wages.

The invention and improvement of machinery today means hunger and misery for great armies of working men and women.

And yet the machines are not to blame. It is the private ownership of the machines that is to blame. The factory owner is in business for profits. He puts in an improved machine that does the work of a hundred skilled workmen and can be operated by unskilled workmen. He saves the wages of the former and cuts down the wages of the latter. He is "making money." That is what he is in business for.

This is what they would do: They would cut down the hours of labor so that all could work, and they would shares equally, according to the amount of labor, the increased product of the machine. With the hours of labor cut to a minimum, and a proportional distribution of the increased product, the machines would, instead of making slaves and beggars of the workers, become their servants, doing their work for them, and securing a better living for them.

Now, the question is: Why don't you worling men and women OWN the factories and the machines? Why don't you turn them to YOUR good? Why do you permit yourselves to remain slaves to them and their few profit-making owners?

The Socialist Party stands for the collective ownership of the machines of production. The Socialist party says that the workers shall own the tools they work with. The Socialist party is pre-eminently a working class party. It is the only party through which the worker can gain control of the means of life. The only party that will free him from slavery and give him the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

The Socialist party is also an organization of thinkers. Not until the workingmen and women THINK can they be free.

It is to his interest, then, first to know of the existence of such a party, then to read its literature and learn its meaning; and, finally, to join its ranks and vote its ticket.

When the majority of the workers have done this, the machines, which have come to serve the people and not to enslave them, will be theirs.

WILMINGTON IS ON THE MAP

The streets were well crowded and while most of the people seemed to be out for the purpose of doing the usual Saturday evening shopping, it was evident that there was something else in the air. Nobody said anything, but many people continued to pass and repass the Court House corner. Of course, they did not want to stop there, fearing that someone might think they had come to hear a "Socialist Bum," that was said to be due to explode on that corner at 7:30. Somebody saw several men walk up the stone steps to the balcony. One fellow said, "Come over here men, we are going to open a keg of nails." Other passers-by stopped. The fellow that said he was going to open a keg of nails, said not to afraid for he had searched the stranger by his side and there were no explosives found in his possession. The people moved up closer; more passers-by stopped; more people were coming that way, by accident, of course, and they all stopped. The fellow from the balcony said the Socialists had arranged to give a lecture on that corner, and that the speaker was ready, but that they would have to give close attention, for there was a possibility that the lecturer, (not the people, of course) was afflicted with the new disease known as "ingrowing intellect." Comrade Frederick Guy Strickland, of Dayton then stepped forward and gave one of the most remarkable talks that was ever heard in Clinton County. He knocked them down and rubbed it in, but they didn't know it. He smiled and they smiled. Occasionally the truth would soak through the skull of some fellow, and he would let go the rebel yell all alone. Some fellow said, "We vote for the candidate." Comrade Strickland said, "we quit that years ago, we vote for ourselves." A lawyer said, "what's everybody's business in nobody's business." Comrade Strickland said, "Well what did you build this Court House for?" A voice: "For lawyers like old ——— ———." One fellow wanted to know what we would do with the fellow who wouldn't work. Comrade Strickland calmly informed him that we would not let him eat for a few days and that would probably cure the habit, or at least, it would not have the tendency to grow on him. Another sufferer wanted it explained as to how a working man would be able to own a home under Socialism. Said no Socialist could explain that. "How many houses do you own now?" asked another. "None," replied the questioner.

Well, that's about the way the fur flew, during the time offered for questions. But every question was answered so skillfuly nobody knew he was hurt. Comrade Strickland handed a sugar rag to some of the old boys and they are still sucking it.

We can't tell you all about it, but WE ARE ON THE MAP.

HORACE L. DUDLEY,
Secretary Local Wilmington.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS.

Washington.—The bureau of immigration and naturalization has just issued its March immigration bulletin showing the number of immigrants landing at the various ports in the United States. As before noted in the News Letter the Italians coming from southern portion of Italy are still in the lead numerically, and it would appear that if this ratio is continued southern Italy will be depopulated. The number of Southern Italians landing during the month of March reached 19,044. Other nationalities coming to this country are as follows: Polish, 9,812; German, 6,099; Hebrews, 5,860; Greeks, 5,428; Croatians and Slovenians, 3,939; Northen Italians, 3,544. The remaining number of immigrants landing came from about 27 different countries. The total immigration for March was 91,-185.

ANTHRACITE MINERS ACEPT.

Washington.—At a convention of the anthracite mine workers, held in Wilke-Barre, Pa., May 13, it was decided by a vote of 335 to 64, to accept the agreements entered into by their sub-committee with the coal operators. Following this decision approximately 170,000 men will return to work almost immediately. The suspension of work took place on March 31, when the agreement entered into in 1909 expired. The advance secured is 10 per cent with the old sliding scale abolished. The increase will net about 5½ per cent. Other concessions contained in the agreement provide for grievance committees at all times, which shall have power to meet the officials of the coal companies and adjust complaints. Representatives of the miners' organizations are to have the privilege of meeting with the committees when they take up the grievances with the company officials. President White, after the decision of the convention, gave out the following:

"This agreement insures the anthracite mine workers the highest rate of wages ever paid in the anthracite coal industry; the most improved conditions of employment; and was secured under the most unfavorable circumstances, of any contract heretofore negotiated for the anthracite men. I am sure that now, after it is properly understood, the anthracite mine workers, as a body, will appreciate the work done by their representatives and will strengthen and prepare their organization fo future usefulness."

PROPOSE MINIMUM WAGE SCALE.

Portland, Ore.—A minimum wage bill which will permit no man over 20 years of age to work as a clerk, mechanic, railroad man, bookkeeper or factory hand for more than 10 hours a day nor more than six days a week, for less than $2.50, has been prepared by direction of the State Federation of Labor and will be placed on the ballot in the coming November electoin. It is also proposed that women are not to be employed a greater period of time for a minimum wage of $1.65, per day. Children under 18 are not to be permitted to labor for less than 15 cents per hour for not more than six hours per day, and then only in harvest time. Farm work is placed in another class with $1.65 minimum per day, with board not to be charged in excess of $4 per week.

BREWERY WORKERS REJECT PENSIONS.

Cincinnati.—The pension plan prepared by a joint committee of the United States Brewers' Association and the Internatoinal Union of United Brewery Workmen to provide adequate compensation for injured workmen and for an old age pension, has been voted down by a referendum vote of the brewery workers. The vote was 22,936 against to 12,888 for. The plan was unanimously endorsed by both the United States Brewers' Association and the International Union of United Brewery Workmen's conventions, and it was confidently expected that it would receive endorsement by the membership, but the vote indicates that the view of the membership was overwhelmingly against the plan.

KIRBY'S UTOPIAN DREAM.

"Ah, Love, could you and I with Him conspire
To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire,
Would we not shatter it to bits—and then
Remold it nearer to the Heart's desire?"

Though probably not a disciple of old Omar nor content with a book of verses and a loaf of bread, Mr. John Kirby, of the Manufacturers' Association, nevertheless possesses yearnings, aspirations and Utopian fancies all his own, practical business man though he be.

And the pity of it all is that his desire to shatter the present sorry scheme of things political and remold it in accordance with his particular fancy of what should be can hardly be gratified in this prosaic though decaptive age, and if it could, it is altogether likely that the scheme of things as he would mold them would prove much sorrier than the present one—for Mr. Kirby.

But as he never can know and never can understand these things, Mr. Kirby may be allowed to go on dreaming of a world remolded on the Kirby plan and directed by people like himself, and we confess to a sort of sympathy with his unfulfilled desire.

Mr. Kirby is dissatisfied with the present political parties—all of them. He is dissatisfied with the Republican and Democratic parties not because he loves the Socialist party but because he hates it with a fierce and undying hatred and thinks the Republican and Democratic parties inadequate, because they do not extirpate it on the spot. So he calls for a new party to supplant both, a party composed of "sober-minded" (?) persons like himself, which will exterminate the Socialist and labor agitator root and branch and usher in the permanent rule of the small business man, the millennium of petty exploitation.

The Republican and Democratic parties, he contended in his recent address at the annual convention of the Manufacturers' Association, are arrayed practically with labor and against capital; they continually compromise and concede the demands of the demagogue and labor agitator and are thus, while professing to preserve, really undermining the foundations of the republic, destroying our institutions, opening, as old Sir Leicester Dedlock was wont to say, "the flood gates of society," and performing other similar reprehensible stunts against the interests and welfare of the nation, as represented by Kirby and his ilk. The Civic Federation, though composed of the most powerful business elements in the country, is nothing more than a tool of Sam Gompers, who, in turn, is not only a Socialist but an anarchist likewise. So Kirby wants a new party, composed of people like himself, a party that will shelve the Republican and Democratic parties and proceed to preserve our institutions by enthroning small business conservatism upon the necks of its enemies of high and low degree, the trust, the Civic Federation, the labor unions and the Socialist party.

Kirby is the type of business man who, knowing nothing whatever of the exigencies of capitalist politics, would supplant deception and duplicity with open and undisguised suppression. He has not the slightest conception of the imperative necessity of lying to the working class, which is the very nature of things imposed upon the Republican and Democratic parties. He thinks that capitalism has no need of fraud and that it can rule by force alone.

It would seem that there are many small business men who, driven to desperation by the "extortions" of the labor unions, think as Kirby does, but unfortunately there are not enough of them nor have they sufficient influence to enforce what they desire, more's the pity. Utterly ignorant of the nature of capitalist government and the methods necessary for its maintenance, they would, were it possible, openly proclaim the class war, still more clearly differentiate the exploiter from the exploited, wipe out even the sham pretense of democracy necessary to the very existence of capitalist class rule and proceed to rule openly by the iron hand, casting aside the velvet glove as a useless impediment.

Unfortunately, we say again, it is not possible. The iron hand is not theirs. It is in the possession of their big capitalist rivals, who possess infinitely more political sense than the Kirbys and know that the velvet glove is indispensible. The yearning of Kirby is born of weakness, not of strength; of weakness too ignorant to know that it is weak or to know that were its desires realised the capitalist system, root and branch, big exploiter and petty profit taker, would be instantly shattered to bits and remolded not by the Kirby of society but by Socialism. Kirby, all unknowingly, would hasten the social revolution; his wiser and more powerful brethren understand their capitalist politics and he doesn't.

We have no objection to the Kirby dream, for we ourselves are dreamers of sorts. Could it be realized, or, rather, started on the road to realization, we should be content to abide the outcome, recognizing that the superlative fool capitalist always plays directly into the hands of Socialism. A government with such a policy, if it comes into existence, will be in the hands of the stronger capitalists rather than their weaker brethren and can never be maintained in the interests of the latter. Many fools there be in the capitalist world, but, alas, it is not dominated by its most foolish fools. Would that it were.

Kirby is one of them. He means well toward Socialism, but doesn't know it. It is only the dreams that nations dream that come true, and the nations are not dreaming of a recrudescence of the Kirby reigme. The Kirbys are not the nation now. Once they were, but that epoch is now definitely closed, and they are merely "has beens" who can never be again. The nations are dreaming of Socialism instead, and so, for that matter, is Kirby in his own distorted small business way, except that with his little pin head stuck in the petty cash drawer, he hasn't vision sufficient to interpret his own dream and the real meaning thereof.—N Y. THE IRREPRESSIBLE CLASS STRUGGLE AGAIN.

Evidently Mr. Mallock's British capitalists are fast losing that "superior ability" which their sycophantic literary defender attributed to them as the cause of their dominant position and the justification of their existence.

It seemingly never consisted of anything else than the ability to swindle the workers out of the wealth they produced, and at the same time reconcile them to the robbery. That ability has been exerted for generations, but the signs are that it is now becoming played out.

A hundred and fifty thousand dock and transport workers who have been swindled in this manner in the settlement last summer are out again, and once more London faces the prospect of a temporary famine with the almost certain prospect of another general strike in all industries unless the demands of the men are granted.

The increased wages and shorter hours promised have not materialized, and the condition of the workers is no better than last summer, despite the promises of their employers. In fact, thy have discovered that the usual swindle has been workd upon them.

And the miners, over a million strong, who struck a few months ago, have made a similar discovery. They had been bilked into accepting a minimum wage by district wage boards appointed for that purpose, and are now realizing through bitter experience that the output of wages from these bodies is so exceedingly "minimum" that they are no better off than before their institution. In this case they feel that the swindle was due to the superior ability of the capitalist government, which led them to expect a reasonable living wage would be fixed by the boards appointed. And they also are preparing to repudiate the swindle and call for a new deal.

All the much-talked-of labor unrest in England is due to nothing whatever but the one fact that great masses of militant workers are beginning to recognize the eternal swindle and chicane underlying the capitalist system and are determined to put an end to it.

The best method they know at present is the strike—a doubtful weapon at best, and not always even partly effective. The strike of last year, though it scared the British employing class almost out of their senses, didn't scare them into dealing honestly with their employes. To the very end of its existence capitalism will remain a fraud upon the workers, and to get rid of the fraud, it will be necessary to get rid of capitalism, root and branch.

WARNING TO POLITICIANS.

Mr. Dies fears that the history of Rome, Greece, Italy and President Roosevelt, roasted Speaker Clark and called Wilson "Parson" Wilson.

Mr. Dies efars that the history of Rome, Greece, Italy and France would be repeated in the event of the election of Roosevelt. Someone called him a pessimist. He said the Democrats were not upholding the spirit of Democracy as advanced by the Democratic party, that Mr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania and Minority Leader Mann had deserted from their political faith. "Mr. Berger," he said, referring to the lone Socialist Congressman, "is the biggest man in Congress. He is heading toward Socialism, while you (referring to Clark, Dalzell and Mann) are backing away into it."

How long are these politicians going to scrap among themselves to keep themselves up at the pie counter? How long is it going to take them to realize that Socialism is inevitable? Don't they understand that all the powers of man cannot stop its onward march? Can't they see the hand writing on the wall? Can't they see that their doom is sealed and that the next step is the the Industrial Democracy? Shout, rant, lie, vilify, pamper, pet, coax, fight, holler till your your lungs are sore, but it's coming with 150,000 earnest, sincere comrades working day in and day out. You cannot expect to beat it. You may hand the working class a sop now and then, but the more you hand them the more they will want. The working class want the earth and you politicians, plutes and parasites will have to put on a pair of overalls and go to work, and like the rest of us earn your bread by the sweat of your face. You had better do some practicing to toughen up your hands for soon you will need them. Hurrah for the dawn of equal opportunity—Socialism.

DENOUNCING SOCIALISM.

The Catholic Federated Societies met several weeks ago and passed resolutions denouncing Socialism. At the same time they endorsed a beautiful program of labor reforms as a panacea for Socialism.

We would suggest that these worthy gentlemen at once put this program into practical operation in their own institutions run for profit, thereby demonstrating to an anxiously waiting working class how quickly and easily Socialism can be demolished by the church solving the question.

Now hurry, gentlemen. Waste no time in this noble work of elevating the workers from your viewpoint.

CONVENT LABOR.

If conditions as alleged and set forth by the Socialist assessors as existing at the Good Shepherd Convent on West Broad street are true, it is high time that the state shop inspectors get busy.

The laws of the State of Ohio plainly state that girls under eighteen and over sixteen years shall not be employed longer than eight hours, while girls over eighteen shall not work more than nine hours.

It is to the existing shame of the State of Ohio that these demoralizing conditions exist within convents. Why such institutions as these should be exempt from state inspection and supervision we do not understand; unless behind the deal stands an immense organization held in fear by both political parties, trading votes for the privilege of exploiting the tender girlhood of the state in the name of charity and religion.

Every man and woman within the State of Ohio that does not at once get busy with open protest to the governor and state shop inspector, demanding the immediate repeal of that section of the juvenile code giving judges privilege to sentnce girls to these convent prisons, will be derelict in duty.

The greatest danger lies in the fact that other manufacturers, seeing the easy snap enjoyed by others to get labor (even if girls) at a bare cost to themselves of a meager existence on the part of their victims, will insist on the same privilege being extended to themselves.

This will mean to meet the demands of these institutions for cheap labor (cost of a bare existence) that the juvenile laws will be so strengthened and revised, that any slight misdemeanor on the part of a girl will man immediate sentence to these convent prisons for a long term, wherein she can be exploited to the heart's content of the capitalists holding such privilege.

Bear in mind it is only a step from shirts, overalls and jackets to shoes, underwear, hats, etc. The privilege extended to one or more manufacturers to exploit these girls will in time be demanded by all manufacturers. Free labor in this instance will find itself in the same position that the workers of France and Portugal found themselves. Driven to the last extremity by convent and monastic competition they arose in open revolt against the governmnt that countenanced such a condition.

Regardless of a man's religious opinion, be he Catholic, Protestant or Jew, he must work to live. He also in time will discover that his religion does not supply him with bread and butter. When the shoe worker, shirt worker, overall worker, underwear worker, hat worker, etc., some morning discover that their factory is closed and the work is being done behind convent walls, by the trained girls in these different trades, that through starvation wages have become delinquent to live, and sentenced by a benevolent juvenile judge to these institutions to work for nothing for the same employer, who since has become a religious reformer, by insisting on prayer before and after work in his convent factory to save their morals and souls; hell will break loose.

The working men and women having one spark of manhood or womanhood left will not stand for this hypocritical deal. If the sons and daughters of the workers have become delinquent the fault lies with the exploiters of children, who grind their little bones into profit and who exploiting them again behind convent walls as a means to raise their morals without pay, is only adding insult to injury.

This benevolent, churchified condition of exploiting the daughters of the workers in convents MUST STOP. The state must at once supply havens of retreat and education for these unfortunates, where they can be educated in their life's work to better and more model citizenship, and not in the name of commercialized religion, forced to produce large dividends and luxury for these favored capitalists.

What a mockery this religious reform must be to those that have felt its fangs of exploitation. What a blight, what a shame, what a travesty of law.

However, no benefit can be expected from the present condition of the Democratic and Republican parties. They are looking for votes from this organization. No decent, self-respecting Socialist running on the ticket is looking for any favors from this direction. He does not want it.

The folds of the red flag are protecting wings of angels, in comparison to getting entangled with the greedy talons of these vultures exploiting the daughters of the workers.

However, the Socialists, if victorious this fall on the congressional, legislative and county ticket, will quickly settle this matter, by the introducing of such laws in the legislative bodies as will forever separate this unholy alliance of church and state. We will be under no political obligations to silently close our eyes to this evil of evils, but shall hammer away until it is forever wiped off the statute books, and the children of the state brought directly under her protecting folds. If you want this get busy, as your daughter tomorrow may become ensnared in the meshes of this unjust law, and sentenced to work for nothing for some benevolent capitalist.

SOMETHING GOOD, EVEN IN THE WEEK.

"Woman, Where Are These Thine Accusers?" This is the headline of an editorial in The Week of May 25, 1912. The editor goes on to say that the world has not changed, after two thousand years of Christianity, advancement and civilization during which time woman has advanced from man's slave to his equal. Yet, he says, the one sin, has ever remained the same. He further states that there has been no change except that the lowly Nazarene is no longer on the corner to stop the man that pursues.

But the real representatives of the lowly Nazarene are on the corner and they will stop the mob, they will lift up the fallen woman, they will place her back where she belongs and they, and they alone, can do it, and they are the Socialists.

The able editor speaks of $4 a week girls. He relates in strong language how the employer must have his blood money and how the girl must pay the price with her virtue.

How she sees Mrs. Newlyrich and envies her, and desires the pretty clothes that she sees Mrs. Newlyrich wear. Then the tempter comes and she falls, weak from underfeeding, racked with the shame of being poorly dressed she goes down to the depth of sin. Shame on a society that demands such a price; shame on a civilization that defends such conditions.

There is no remedy being applied now, says the able editor. The remedy lies not in men, but systems. It is this infernal grasping, get-rich-quick system that is at fault, Mr. Editor of The Week. You know what's wrong, you too know the remedy and he who realizes that something is wrong and knows the remedy and does not try to have it applied is either a fool or a scoundrel.

The selling of human bodies for bread must stop and it's up to those who have a spark of manhood left in them to stop it. Investigate the philosophy of Socialism. If it is right, climb into the band wagon and boost it. If it is wrong, use your wits and get something better. Give to the worker the full social value of his toil and his daughters will not have to become prostitutes in order to live.

Follow the lowly Nazarene, and let he who is without sin cast the first stone.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

Well, girls and boys, the time for the last grand rally is here. On the front page of the paper we have been carrying a notice, 5000 new subscribers by July 1st. Owing to the extremely hard times last winter, and spring, we were unable to reach the coveted mark. In going over our subscription list, however, I find that we have made a clean gain of 1,126 since the middle of December when we started on this campaign.

We want to—in fact WE MUST, make it at least 2000 by July 1st. This leaves only 874 new subscribers to be put on in June. Just a little more than 200 per week. CAN YOU BOOSTERS TURN THE TRICK? I know your answer. It is, "WE CAN, WE WILL."

Let every comrade, no matter who or where you are, do your share in this matter. Think what it will mean if we can say that we have gained 2000 subscribers in 6 months. The Ohio Manufactures' Association, the scab Chamber of Commerce and all the rest of the boodlers and stock gamblers will immediately issue another call for aid to fight Socialism.

With the hot stuff that this paper is now handling, it is in great demand.

STRIKE, COMRADES, STRIKE, WHILE THE IRON IS HOT.

Remember, all we need is 874 new subscribers this month to make a clean gain of 2000.

Every subscription turned in is one more nail in the coffin of capitalism. Let the advance begin all along the line.

We have nothing to lose but our chains, we have a world to gain.

The off and on report will show each week, during June. Let the first report next week be a hummer.

Number of new subs to get by July 1st, 874.

Comrade Thress of Milo, O., renews for one year, and brings another with him.

Comrade McQueen brings in a sub. blank with four names. Comrade McQueen has been threatening dire things to capitalism and he has landed on the old goat in the weakest spot. Do it some more, Comrade.

Allow me to impress upon the Comrades and readers of this paper the vital importance of purchasing from our advertisers and using the Red Ticket, especially at this time of year, as it is between seasons and merchants are not advertising heavily at this time. However, if all our Comrades and sympathizers will purchase from our advertisers and make it known why they did so, we will have no trouble getting advertising. Remember, firms that refuse to advertise with us are enemies and we must learn to control and use our purchasing power accordingly. Comrades and friends, don't fail to remember this and act as suggested and in this way suport your own newspaper.

The following each land one or more: Comrades Hyland, Remaly, Martin, Southard, Lombard, Smith, Reed, Davie, Evans, Fries, Meier, Warkin, Swope, Bellman, Rogers, Newell, Stage, Albright, Bates, Clark, and Zimpfer.

THE MODEST CANDIDACY.

Under the ethics of the Socialist Party, no candidate is encouraged to say publicly that he wants a nomination. No boosting or electioneering is permitted. The idea is that a candidate is born, not made. He is supposed to be the flower of public confidence. He is a natural, not artificial, product.

There is something delightful about this idea. It is the rule of the public spirit. It is very like the call of the Lord. When the matter is analyzed closely this awful anxiety to serve the people does ont always find its roots in patriotic fervor or the love of duty. Therefore it is a time when modesty becomes a real grace.

We know a man who objected to this idea once. He criticized a certain gentleman because he didn't come out and say he wanted a certain office, and make a fight for it. That critic was a boodler, and all he wanted was a chance to do business. When a man announces he is a candidate, he forthwith goes about in a cringing sort of way, apparently seeking an opportunity to do everybody a favor. We don't like that. We like to see a candidate free and independent, so that when a man comes to him and wants to borrow five dollars he will be nerved to say: "Get out of here, you —— sneaking, two-faced boodler."—Editorial in Ohio State Journal.

THE REASON WHY.

Read, Study, Reason from effect to cause. Why is it that in the midst of plenty that you are always on the verge of starvation? That the cycle of your life and the lives of your fellows is so narrow and monotonous? Why is it that so many toil without ceasing, have nothing and the few who toil not, have so much? You will find that ignorance is the cause, at least it is so in this country. Where we have the franchise and the toilers have the majority, they know not how to use their power.

Government does not form society, but society makes Government.

Government is the mirror of the social intelligence of the people.

Enoch B. Eubanks, Socialist candidate for Probate Judge and, Wesley C. Bates, Socialist candidate for prosecuting attorney, will speak at Reynoldsburg, on Public Square, Saturday evening, June 1st., 1912, at 7:30 o'clock, P. M.

Subscriptions to this paper will be received by the speakers.

ETTOR AND GIOVANNITTI PROTEST MEETING

Last Sunday afternoon a successful protest meeting was held in the Columbus Federation of Labor hall under the auspices of the Columbus Federation of Labor, Socialist Party and Local 54, I. W. W. The meeting was a success from all points of view. Several good speeches were made, and it certainly was refreshing to listen to Comrade Bachman as he fearlessly told the truth and handled these capitalistic tyrants without gloves. Many comments were heard and the sentiment seemed to be it was his best speech of any delivered at any time in the past. Comrade and Fellow Worker Minturn, in a short but spicy talk, said things which can only come from a real Revolutionist. Comrade Bates showed by his remarks, that his whole heart was in all he said. Comrade Bachman gave the history of this now widely and celebrated case, telling how poor Anna Le Peizze was shot down while the strikers in Lawrence were peaceably marching in parade, at that time Ettor and Giovannitti were two miles away speaking to a crowd of German comrades, but nevertheless they were arrested and held in jail without bail as accessories before the fact, the authorities stating because of their radical and incendiary speeches they had influenced the minds of the workers to cause them to commit violence, and think the poor girl that was killed was also a comrade in the same fight with them.

Does any sane person think if any killing or violence was to be committed that they would select a poor defenseless woman and especially a comrade? What a gigantic conspiracy, and unless we awake from this long sleep of indifference these two brave and loyal workers will be stretched by the neck just as Parsons, Lingg and the rest of those innocent workingmen were in the Haymarket in 1887. And if such an imfamous murder is to be allowed we the working class will be branded as a crowd of cringing cowards, and not fit to be shown one iota of mercy. Then there is also another side to this case. If these fellow workers are found guilty, a dangerous precedent will have been established and we can upon the slightest pretext be hauled before these merciless tyrants and have absolutely no mercy shown us. However the worm will turn and when the workers at last have awakened and take possession of what rightfully is their's, then these criminals, THESE REAL CRIMINALS, will be called to account, and charged with murdering thousands and thousands annually, in the mills, mines, and factories, and they will be charged with murder as accessories before the fact, and forced to pay the penalty, now if they wish to establish this precedent and take the lives of our two fellow workers, because of their loyalty to their class, we say they will pay the penalty and while doing it we will not forget what J. Pierpont Morgan said, "God, ——— the Labor Unions, we will wipe them off the face of the earth." No, we will keep this well in mind and their reward will be swift and sure. After Comrade Bachman finished a collection of $12.35 was sent to our Comrades and fellow workers.

BRAVE SOCIALIST WORKER IS KILLED IN RAILROAD WRECK

Comrade Okert Meets Death After Years of Labor for Loved Ones.

Comrade Oscar Okert, residing at 1090 Bennett street, was killed Thursday of last week near Bradford, O., when a Panhandle train, on which he was fireman, went into the ditch. He lay, pinned under the wreckage for nearly two hours and died before he reached Bradford. Comrade O'Kert was a member of the Sixth Ward Branch Socialist Party, and formerly was in the old Fourth Ward. He was a tireless and effective worker and disseminator of literature. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at Wesley Chapel, Northwest of the city. The Sixth Ward Branch provided a beautiful floral emblem in the shape of a Socialist pennant bearing the inscription, "Comrade." Upon the breast of the corpse there shown the red button of the Socialist party in compliance with the dead comrade's request. A brave soldier of the revolution has died in the battle for bread for his loved ones. He is survived by his widow and four children. He was honest, tender, true and class-conscious. We sadly miss such as Comrade Okert.

NINTH WARD.

Ninth Ward meets every Thursday night at 8 p. m., 335½ South High Street.

MOUND STREET FOLKS ANXIOUS FOR WATER

It Seems To Take a "Pull" To Get It From This Administration.

There are a lot of property owners on West Mound street, who for years have been trying to get the benefits of the city water system. They use water out there to drink, for culinary purposes and to bathe. For three years these people have beseiged the authorities, but have always been turned down. Just recently, however, somebody, "with a pull," was able to get the city to lay mains to supply two houses on Evans alley. Now the Mound Street folks are thinking deeply as to just how this was accomplished. They have no city water yet, but Evans alley has.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF 14TH AND 15TH WARD BRANCH

Members of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Ward Branches will take notice that a joint meeting of the two Branches will be held next Tuesday evening, June 4th, at Evans hall, Third and Michigan Avenues. Don't fail to attend as important matters are to be taken up and discussed.

THE COMMITTEE.

POLICE ARREST BICYCLE RIDERS; AUTO SPEEDERS ARE UNMOLESTED

There's a Difference, You Know, In the Eyes of the Authorities.

Almost every night bicycle riders are being "pinched" for not carrying lights on their wheels. Just recently a working man was arrested after midnight on a deserted street, for this offense. There is no effort made to protect the lives of people getting on and off street cars from the reckless auto speeders. Bicycles are used almost entirely by wage earners, while autos are owned by the plutes who have no respect for law, life or limbs.

SOCIALIST COUNCILMEN ASK MORE PERTINENT QUESTIONS

Raise Point Concerning Bonding of Policemen and City Paying Damages.

Socialist Councilmen went on record last Monday evening against the force of compelling policemen to bond themselves in surety companies that then force the officers to make good any amount paid by the company. Socialist member Bohnert raised the issue and denounced the plan in language that was both forcible and earnest.

Councilmen are a unit in criticising the action of the bonding companies, which, after charging policemen fees of $6 and $7 a year, make them contract to repay the company any financial outlay in damage or other cases, it is alleged. All risk of the company is removed by this transaction, according to the contention of Socialist councilmen. The city furnishes the attorneys in damage suits against police and all the companies do is to collect their annual fees.

An ordinance was introduced at the request of City Engineer Maetzel authorizing an issue of $250,000 bonds for a new Fourth Street viaduct with widened approaches and structure. Director of Public Service Bargar asked for an issue of $9750 to build a garage at the city prison to house the emergency automobile and police motorcycles.

Two finance emergency issues passed. One was to purchase 40 fireplugs to be used along the new waterworks extensions at a cost not to exceed $5000. The other was for $10,000 to make connections between the cluster lighting system and the municipal light plant.

Socialist member Wilson's resolution to compel the Ohio Electric line to sprinkle the improved streets which it uses, was passed.

Socialist member Zimpfer's resolution to compel the Big Four to keep a watchman at its Dennison avenue crossing at night was pased.

The proposed amendments to the building code were referred back to committee after a protest from Socialist Councilman Warren.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

There are no more copies of Berger's tariff speech in Congress to be had. Several million copies were printed and circulated.

South Carolina Socialists have formed a State organization and placed a ticket in the field. South Carolina was the last of the States to swing in line with a State organization.

Prof. Shedd, who was recently required to send in his resignation as a teacher in the university at Rochester, N. W., because he talked Socialism has been elected organizer by the Socialist local in that city.

Austrian Socialists have won another election for member of Parliament. This time it happened in Graz, where the Socialist candidate had more votes than both old party opponents combined.

In the municipal election in Vienna, Autria, the Socialists carried seven districts for the City Council out of a total of 21. The Clerical (or Christian Socialist) party, which controlled the council, seems to have lost control. The Liberals also made gains, as did the Czechs.

Another seat in Parliament has been gained by the Socialists of Switzerland. In a special election in Nurenberg the Socialist candidate secured 10,100 votes to 9,258 for the Radical candidate. This makes 17 Socialists in the Parliament of Switzerland.

George Allan England is writing a new Socialist novel called "The Golden Blight," which is being printed in serial form in the Weekly Cavalier, a New York publication. England has been given free reign and says it is the best thing that has yet come from his prolific pen.

Socialists of Connecticut are in a merry mood. At Naugatuck the two old parties combined against the Reds and were slammed good and proper. The Socialists captured the City Council and several other positions, although bitterly fought by a number of rich gents and prominent politicians.

In the city of Zurich, Switzerland, the Socialists elected four out of 10 local justices and lost a fifth seat by a fluke. In Geuf the Socialists won in a referendum compelling the adoption of the proportional representation system in elections, which will materially add to their strength.

Oklahoma Socialists are organizing so rapidly that their movement is threatening to sweep the State in November. Over 200 charters to new locals have been issued since Jan. 1 and the total number of locals and branches is now 574, with a dues-paying membership of nearly 6,000.

The old partyites put through a recall on two Socialist city officials in Berkeley, Cal. In the election that followed the two officials were again chosen and by a majority of about 2,000, trebling their vote of last year. They won't attempt to oust any more Socialists in Berkeley until the next regular city election at least.

A Catholic Socialist society, which was started in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1906, reports enormous progress in lecture work, literature distibution and membership. It claims more adherents for Socialism among Catholics in Scotland than are gathered from any other denominational section of the community. A similar society in Ireland is reported to be making equally rapid progress and that some of the clergy who formerly opposed the organization are now secretly supporting it.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE PLANS.

(National Socialist Press, by J. L. Engdahl.)

Chicago, Ill.—The question of having another "Red Special" for the year's presidential campaign is practically in the hands of the Socialist State Secretaries the country over. Their views will be sought on this important question and the action of the campaign committee will largely depend on whether they think it will be advisable and prove as great a success this year as it did four years ago. The "Red Special" in 1908 was on the road for 68 days before the close of the campaign and cost the national office $36,000. One plan this year is to use a "Red Special" as the big windup of the struggle taking in all of the big industrial centers of the country during the last thirty days of the campaign. In this case two "Red Specials" might be used, one for Debs and the other for Siedel, each accompanied by a corps of speakers the best that can be found in the party.

This matter will be among the first to be taken up by the national campaign committee after its election.

J. Mahlon Barnes, of Philadelphia, Pa., has taken up his duties as 1912 campaign manager of the Socialist Party with the following encouraging statement:

"With its increased sentiment, its great growth in dues-paying membership, in fact unprecedented progress in every phase of it, the Socialist movement of the United States should wage a presidential campaign this year five times as great as that of 1908, when nearly half a million votes were cast for Debs.'

Barnes points out that the membership of the Socialist Party in January of 1908 was only 30,000. During the same month of this year the dues-paying membership of the party was hovering around the 125,000 mark, while it is now up towards 140,000, and still rising by big leaps and bounds.

It is planned to enlist every labor organization of every description in the political battle of the working class by giving them an opportunity to contribute to the campaign for the election of their representatives on the political field.

The Chicago Socialists are going ahead and preparing every detail for the opening of the big fight which is to take place on Sunday, June 16, at Riverview Park, in this city.

While the war on the newspaper trust still in force, the entire city has split on the issue of union labor and anti-union labor, and the Riverview Park demonstration is expected to win more workers for Socialism in Chicago than has ever before been the case in the history of the city.

Then one of the next big events will be the state picnic scheduled for July 21st, at Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

It is expected that the candidates will spend considerable time during the summer touring the Socialist encampments, most of which are to be found in the Southwest, especially in the states of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

State Secretary Stewart, of Idaho, reports ten locals organized in that State during the month of April.

The campaign manager elected by the National Convention, J. Mahlon Barnes, has taken up his duties. Additional quarters for campaign purposes have been secured in the same building where the National Headquarters are located.

Communications regarding the campaign should be addressed to J. Mahlon Barnes, Campaign Manager, 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

Communications concerning the regular national office business should be addressed as usual to John M. Work. National Secretary, 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

The National Executive Committee and the candidates for president and vice president, as instructed by the national convention, are now electing a Campaign Committee from the nominees placed in nomination at the convention. The nominees are as follows: Carl D. Thompson, Wisconsin; Tom J. Lewis, Oregon; Wm. M. Brandt, Missouri; J. W. Slayton, Pennsylvania; Frederick Krafft, New Jersey; S. M. Reynolds, Indiana; S. C. Garrison, Indiana; W. E. Rodrigues, Illinois; O. F. Branstetter, Oklahoma; A. M. Simons, Kansas; Clyde J. Wright, Nebraska; Seymour Stedman, Illinois; Dan Hogan, Arkansas.

The National Executive Committee is also voting on a question by the National Secretary as to whether or not he is at liberty to give to each employe of the National Office, who has worked in the office six months or more, a week's vacation on full pay, some time during the season.

State Secretary Dooley, of Oklahoma, reports eleven locals organized in that State during the month of April.

There is a large supply of Berger's Brief Speeches still on hand. Fifty cents per hundred. Address National Office, Socialist Party, 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

By a recent referendum in Rhode Island, Fred Hurst, 51 Broad Street, Providence was re-elected State Secretary. James P. Reid, 8 Baltimore Street, Olneyville, was elected National Committeeman.

State Secretary Schawe, of Ohio, reports that E. A. Ault and J. H. Stahl, have been expelled by Local Lorain, for violating Section 8, Article 18, of the State Constitution of the party.

Attention is again called to the fact that the National Office has got out a tasty pocket for membership card. It is made of tough red cardboard and is intended to protect the membership card from wear and tear while carrying it about. Every member should have one. Local secretaries should lay in a supply. The members will want them as soon as they see them. Price, six dollars a thousand. Same rate in any quantity, less or more. Address, National Office, Socialist Party 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

The National Office is prepared to supply to local and branch secretaries Delinquency Notices, for the purpose of notifying lapsed members of the amount of dues owed by them. These notices are in the form of mimeographed letters, to be signed by the proper local or branch official. Price, twenty-five cents per hundred. Address, National Office, Socialist Party, 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

CARPENTER MOVEMENT.

Indianapolis.—The United Brotherhood of Carpenters reports that the mill men in Spring City, Pa., have secured an increase in wages from 28 cents to 30 cents per hour. After a strike of three days' duration the carpenters of Saskatoon, Can., gained an increase in wages of 5 cents per hour, the rate now being 50 cents. The carpenters at Washington, Pa., secured a 10 per cent increase in wages with every contractor in the city signing the agreement. In Fort Wayne, Ind., 33 out of 37 employers have signed the agreement with the local union for the union shop and a minimum wage of 40 cents per hour, which is an increase of 5 cents over the old rate. A strike was called on May 1, terminating one week later, and during the strike period the union made a gain in membership of over 100.

Roosevelt's campaign for the presidency has already cost almost $1,500,000. The men who are furnishing the money are going to be represented if Roosevelt is elected, and not you sovereign citizens who do the voting and shouting.

CRITICISM ON MIAMI VALLEY SOCIALIST ARTICLE.

Comrade Editor—

I hereby call your attention to an article published in the Miami Valley Socialist. The comrade who wrote this article seems to have a different idea from any I have ever observed in Socialist propaganda. It seems he would have the Socialist Party erect a monument to John H. Patterson and his life work—the quintessence of capitalism run wild.

It appears to have been written for the purpose of drawing the wool over the eyes of the National Cash Register Company, hoping thereby to get the votes of the employes of that institution for the Socialist Party.

It is perfectly awful that any one opposed to the methods of John H. Patterson should have the brazen effrontery "to step into JOHN H. PATTERSON'S DAYTON and" solicit the votes of JOHN H. PATTERSON'S WORKINGMEN." God help the "patriotic citizens" who so far forgot themselves as to cheer the utterances of this great enemy (?) of John H. Patterson. Try to forgive and forget the "members of the chamber of commerce" who showed their lack of respect to John H. Patterson's greatness. Try to look over, as the rantings of some poor unsophisticated, benighted workingman, the fact that there were men who dare to cheer who were on the salary roll of John H. Patterson's factory. "They should have blushed to have been there."

The working men of Dayton had better wake up to the fact that if they are to win the class struggle they must get into it and fight, not to make an idol of any man who has exploited them or to suggest a monument for a system that has permitted it, but by telling the true story, unvarnished and untrimmed, of Socialism. Let them look to it that the newspapers that are spreading their propaganda for them does not become contaminated with such silly, yellow, abominable, miserable rantings from the most narrow minded, shallow brained, political prostitute that ever pushed a pen. The Managing Editor of the Miami Valley Socialist, is the one who should hang his head in shame, to let the subscribers know how they will lick the hand of capitalism for the sake of a few votes.

Yes, we hope—we are certain there are men in the sweaty work-shops of Dayton who appreciate the life work of John H. Patterson better than this craving political monger, who wrote this delightful spasm.

If the upbuilding of the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, Ohio, has been a blessing to the people who worked in that factory then the entire program of Socialism is a miserable lie. If there is ever a monument standing to the memory of John H. Patterson it will be the N. C. R. under the co-operative commonwealth. If there are ever any heroes of a new age it will be the working men who cast their ballots to abolish the profit system that has permitted John H. Patterson to rise from a lowly log cabin to a palatial mansion at the top of Brown Street hill. Not by the sweat of his brow has he gained all the luxuries of life, but by the sweat of other men's brows. By exploiting not only the working men and women of Dayton, but by exploiting thousands of small business men, by forcing out of business all rival manufacturers making cash registers and establishing a monopoly.

It must ever be remembered by the working class in general and especially by the rank and file of the Socialist organization that men who are capable of currying favor with any capitalist concern are equally capable of at some future day betraying them.

The time has arrived when the strength of the party is being recognized and it behooves the workers to look to their laurels and see that some oily tongued politician does not usurp their rights in the interest of his personal ambition. Far better would it be that we go down to defeat in an honest effort than to gain a victory through sophistory, with an impelled promise attached.

Workers, it must be remembered that we cannot "honeyfugle" the capitalist system off our backs. The only way to do it is to throw it off. The way to throw it off is by teaching the class struggle and educating the voters. A compromise is a principle defeated; we want no half loaves.

Yours, for the real article, Socialism,
EDGAR WOOD.

THE SOCIALIST PLATFORM

Adopted by National Convention at Indianapolis, May 17, 1912

The Socialist Party of the United States declares that the capitalist system has outgrown its historical function and has become utterly incapable of meeting the problems confronting society. We denounce this outgrown system as incompetent and corrupt and the source of unspeakable misery and suffering to the whole working class.

Under this system the industrial equipment of the nation has passed into the absolute control of a plutocracy which exacts an annual tribute of millions of dollars from the producers. Unafraid of any organized resistance, it stretches out its greedy hands over the still undeveloped resources of the nation—the land, the mines, the forests and the water powers of every state in the Union.

In spite of the multiplication of labor-saving machines and improved methods in industry, which cheapen the cost of production, the share of the producers grows ever less, and the prices of all the necessities of life steadily increase. The boasted prosperity of this nation is for the owning class alone. To the rest it means only greater hardship and misery. The high cost of living is felt in every home. Millions of wage-workers have seen the purchasing power of their wages decrease until life has become a desperate battle for mere existence.

Multitudes of unemployed walk the streets of our cities or trudge from state to state awaiting the will of the masters to move the wheels of industry.

The farmers in every state are plundered by the increasing prices exacted for tools and machinery and by extortionate rent, freight rates and storage charges.

Capitalist concentration is mercilessly crushing the class of small business men and driving its members into the ranks of propertyless wage workers. The overwhelming majority of the people of America are being forced under a yoke of bondage by this soulless industrial despotism.

It is this capitalist system that is responsible for the increasing burden of armaments, the poverty, slums, child labor, most of the insanity, crime and prostitution, and much of the disease that afflicts mankind.

Under this system the working class is exposed to poisonous conditions, to frightful and needless perils of life and limb, is walled around with court decisions, injunctions and unjust laws, and is preyed upon incessantly for the benefit of the controlling oligarchy of wealth. Under it also the children of the working class are doomed to ignorance, drudging toil and darkened lives.

In the face of these evils, so manifest that all thoughtful observers are appalled at them, the legislative representatives of the Republican, Democratic and all reform parties remain the faithful servants of the oppressors. Measures designed to secure to the wage earners of this nation as humane and just treatment as is already enjoyed by the wage earners of all other civilized nations have been smothered in committee without debate, and laws ostensibly designed to bring relief to the farmers and general consumers are juggled and transformed into instruments for the exaction of further tribute. The growing unrest under oppression has driven these two old parties to the enactment of a variety of regulative measures, none of which has limited in any appreciable degree the power of the plutocracy, and some of which have been perverted into means for increasing that power. Anti-trust laws, railroad restrictions and regulations, with the prosecutions, indictments and investigations based upon such legislation, have proved to be utterly futile and ridiculous.

Nor has this plutocracy been seriously restrained or even threatened by any Republican or Democratic executive. It has continued to grow in power and insolence alike under the administrations of Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft.

In addition to this legislative juggling and this executive connivance, the courts of America have sanctioned and strengthened the hold of this plutocracy as the Dred Scott and other decisions strengthned the slave power before the civil war.

We declare, therefore, that the longer sufferance of these conditions is impossible, and we purpose to end them all. We declare them to be the product of the present system in which industry is carried on for private greed, instead of for the welfare of society. We declare, furthermore, that for these evils there will be and can be no remedy and no substantial relief except through Socialism, under which industry will be carried on for the common good and every worker receive the full social value of the wealth he creates.

Society is divided into warring groups and classes, based upon material interests. Fundamentally, this struggle is a conflict between the two main classes, one of which, the capitalist class, owns the means of production, and the other, the working class, must use these means of production on terms dictated by the owners.

The capitalist class, though few in number, absolutely controls the government—legislative, executive and judicial. This class owns the machinery of gathering and disseminating news through its organized press. It subsidizes seats of learning—the colleges and schools—and even religious and moral agencies. It has also the added prestige which established customs give to any order of society, right or wrong.

The working class, which includes all those who are forced to work for a living, whether by hand or brain, in shop, mine or on the soil, vastly outnumbers the capitalist class. Lacking effective organization and class solidarity, this class is unable to enforce its will. Given such class solidarity and effective organization, the workers will have the power to make all laws and control of industry in their own interest.

All political parties are the expression of economic and class interests. All other parties than the Socialist party represent one or another group of the ruling capitalist class. Their political conflicts reflect merely superficial rivalries between competing capitalist groups. However they result, these conflicts have no issue of real value to the workers. Whether the Democrats or Republicans win politically, it is the capitalist class that is victorious economically.

The Socialist party is the polticial expression of the economic interests of the workers. Its defeats have been their defeats and its victories their victories. It is a party founded on the science and laws of social development. It proposes that, since all social necessities today are socially produced, the means of their production and distribution shall be socially owned and democratically controlled.

In the face of the economic and political aggressions of the capitalist class, the only reliance left the workers is that of their economic organizations and their political power. By the intelligent and class conscious use of these they may resist successfully the capitalist class, break the fetters of wage slavery, and fit themselves for the future society, which is to displace the capitalist system. The Socialist party appreciates the full significance of class organization and urges the wage earners, the working farmers and all other useful workers everywhere to organize for economic and political action, and we pledge ouselves to support the toilers of the fields as well as those in the shops, factories and mines of the nation in their struggles for economic justice.

In the defeat or victory of the working-class party in this new struggle for freedom lies the defeat or triumph of the common people of all economic groups, as well as the failure or the triumph of popular government. Thus the Socialist party is the party of the present-day revolution, which marks the transition from economic individualism to Socialism, from wage slavery to free co-operation, from capitalist oligarchy to industrial democracy.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, the co-operative commonwealth, and, to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

1. The collective ownership and democratic management of railroads, wire and wireless telegraphs and telephones, express services, steamboat lines and all other social means of transportation and communication and of all large-scale industries.

2. The immediate acquirement by the municipalities, the states or the federal government of all grain elevators, stock yards, storage warehouses and other distributing agencies, in order to reduce the present extortionate cost of living.

3. The extension of the public domain to include mines, quarries, oil wells, forests and water power.

4. The further conservation and development of natural resources for the use and benefit of all the people:
(a) By scientific forestation and timber protection.
(b) By the reclamation of arid and swamp tracts.
(c) By the storage of flood waters and the utilization of water power.
(d) By the stoppage of the present extravagant waste of the soil and of the products of mines and oil wells.
(e) By the development of highway and waterway systems.

5. The collective ownership of land wherever practicable, and, in cases where such ownership is impracticable, the appropriatnon by taxation of the annual rental value of all land held for speculation.

6. The collective ownership and democratic management of the banking and currency system.

The immediate government relief of the unemployed by the extension of all useful public works. All persons employed on such works to be engaged directly by the government under a work-day of not more, than eight hours and at not less than the prevailing union wages. The government also to establish employment bureaus; to lend money to states and municipalities without interest for the purpose of carrying on public works, and to take such other measures within its power as will lessen the widespread miserv of the workers caused by the misrule of the capitalist class.

The conservation of human resources, particularly of the lives and well-being of the workers and their families:

1. By shortening the workday in keeping with the increased productiveness of machinery.

2. By securing to every worker a rest period of not less than a day and a half in each week.

3. By securing a more effective inspection of workshops, factories and mines.

4. By forbidding the employment of children under 16 years of age.

5. By the co-operative organization of industries in federal penitentiaries and workshops for the benefit of convicts and their dependents.

6. By forbidding the interstate transportation of the products of child labor, of convict labor and of all uninspected factories and mines.

7. By abolishing the profit system in government work and substituting either the direct hire of labor or the awarding of contracts to co-operative groups of workers.

8. By establishing minimum wage scales.

9. By abolishing official charity and substituting a non-contributory sytem of old-age pensions, a general system of insurance by the state of all its members against unemployment and invalidism and a system of compulsory insurance by employers of their workers, without cost to the latter, against industrial diseases, accidents and death.

Political Demands.

1. The absolute freedom of press, speech and assemblage.

2. The adoption of a graduated income tax, the increase of the rates of the present corporation tax and the extension of inheritance taxes, graduated in proportion to the value of the estate and to nearness of kin—the proceeds of these taxes to be employed in the socialization of industry.

3. The abolition of the monopoly ownership of patents and the substitution of collective ownership, with direct rewards to inventors by premiums or royalties.

4. Unrestricted and equal suffrage for men and women.

5. The adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall and of proportional representation, nationally as well as locally.

6. The abolition of the senate and of the veto power of the president.

7. The election of the president and the vice president by direct vote of the people.

8. The abolition of the power usurped by the Supreme Court of the United States to pass upon the constitutionality of the legislation enacted by Congress. National laws to be repealed only by act of Congress or by a referendum vote of the whole people.

9. The abolition of the present restrictions upon the amendment of the constitution, so that that instrument may be made amendable by a majority of the voters in a majority of the states.

10. The granting of the right of suffrage in the District of Columbia, with representation in Congress and a democratic form of municipal government for purely local affair.

11. The extension of democratic government to all United States territory.

12. The enactment of further measures for general education and particularly for vocational education in useful pursuits. The bureau of education to be made a department.

13. The enactment of further measures for the conservation of health. The creation of an independent bureau of health with such restrictions as will secure full liberty for all schools of practice.

14. The separation of the present bureau of labor from the department of commerce and labor and its elevation to the rank of a department.

15. Abolition of all federal district courts and the United States circuit courts of appeals. State courts to have jurisdiction in all cases arising between citizens of the several states and foreign corporations. The election of all judges for short terms.

16. The immediate curbing of the power of the courts to issue injunctions.

17. The free admmistration of justice.

18. The calling of a convention for the revision of the constitution of the United States.

Such measures of relief as we may be able to force from capitalism are but a preparation of the workers to seize the whole powers of government in order that they may thereby lay hold of the whole system of socialized industry and thus come to their rightful inheritance.

Following is the report of the committee on labor organizations, which was unanimously adopted by the National Socialist convention at Indianapolis:

The undersigned members, constituting a majority of the committee, recommended the adoption of the following declaration:

Political organization and economic organization are alike necessary in the struggle for working class emancipation, working class movement—the Socialist party and the labor unions.

The labor movement of the United States has of recent years made marvelous progress in all directions. It has steadily increased in numbers and has reached trades and industries which were before unorganized. It has in many instancesss concentrated its power and increased its efficiency by the amalgamation of related trades into federations and industrial unions. Many unions have opened their meetings and journals to the discussion of vital social and political problems of the working class, and have repudiated the demoralizing policies represented by the National Civic Federation. The organized workers are rapidly developing an enlightened and militant class-consciousness.

The reality of this progress is attested by the increasing virulence with which the organized capitalists wage their war against the union. The improved economic organization is not a matter of abstract theory, but grows out of the experience of the wage workers in the daily class struggle. Only those actually engaged in the struggle in the various trades and industries can solve the problems of form of organization.

The Socialist party, therefore, reffirms the position it ha salways taken with regard to the movement of organized labor:

1. That the party has neither the right nor the desire to interfere in any controversies which may exist within the labor union movement over questions of form of organization or technical methods of action in the industrial struggle, but trusts to the labor organizations themselves to solve these questions.

2. THAT THE SOCIALISTS CALL THE ATTENTION OF THEIR BROTHERS IN THE LABOR UNIONS TO THE VITAL IMPORTANCE OF THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED, ESPECIALLY THE IMMIGRANTS AND THE UNSKILLED LABORERS, WHO STAND IN GREATEST NEED OF ORGANIZED PROTECTION AND WHO WILL CONSTITUTE A GREAT MENACE TO THE PROGRESS AND WELFARE OF ORGANIZED LABOR IF THEY REMAIN NEGLECTED. THE SOCIALIST PARTY WILL EVER BE READY TO CO-OPERATE WITH THE LABOR UNIONS IN THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED WORKERS, AND URGES ALL LABOR ORGANIZATIONS, WHO HAVE NOT ALREADY DONE SO, TO THROW THEIR DOORS WIDE OPEN TO THE WORKERS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE TRADES AND INDUSTRIES, ABOLISHING ALL ONEROUS CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP AND ARTIFICIAL RESTRICTIONS. IN THE FACE OF TH ETREMENDOUS POWERS OF THE AMERICAN CAPITALISTS AND THEIR CLOSE INDUSTRIAL AND POLITICAL UNION, THE WORKERS OF THIS COUNTRY CAN WIN THEIR BATTLES ONLY BY A STRONG CLASS-CONSCIOUSNESS AND CLOSELY UNITED ORGANIZATION ON THE ECONOMIC FIELD, A POWERFUL AND MILITANT PARTY ON THE POLITICAL FIELD AND BY JOINT ATTACK OF BOTH ON THE COMMON ENEMY.

3. That it is the duty of the party to give moral and material support to the labor organizationss in all their defensive or aggressive struggles against the capitalist oppression and exploitation, for the protection and extension of the rights of the wage workers and the betterment of their material and social condition.

4. That it is the duty of the members sof the Socialist party who are eligible to membership in the unions to join and be active in their respective labor organizations.

CONSTITUTION CONVENTION

The labor proposals have all passed their third reading and are now in shape to be submitted to voters for ratification. About one half of the other proposals have also passed the same stage, some of them with slight amendments, but none of them with any particular change from the manner in which they passed their second reading. A lot of time in the Convention was taken up considering the several amendments to these proposals, and for the balance of the week the real fight will be over the amendments desired to the Initiative and Referendum and taxation proposals, but it is not expected that there will be any radical change made in either, and the whole of the proposals will practically go to the voters in the manner sent out in the bulletin last week.

The labor group has presented to Brother W. J. Winans, Legislative Agent of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, signed by all of the members, the following resolution, in appreciation of the good work he has done in aiding to get the labor proposals in proper shape for passage:

"State of Ohio, Constitutional Convention, Columbus, May 23rd, 1912.

"We, the undersigned members of organized labor, delegates in Ohio's Fourth Constitutional Convention, herewith heartily commend Mr. W. J. Winans for his efficient and untiring efforts in behalf of the cause of labor has been successful in having adopted measures which will give the working people greater opportunity for progress and advancement, and we submit this testimonial to you for having contributed so much to the passage of the labor measures. The labor group in the Convention desires to congratulate the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen in having a representative, who has faithfully and intelligently represented them so well at this Convention. This marks a new era in the forward movement for the benefit of mankind."

Signed by the following delegates:
Stephen S. Stillwell, Cuyahoga.
Thomas S. Farrell, Cuyahoga.
Wm. C. Davio, Cuyahoga.
Harry D. Thomas, Cuyahoga.
Percy Tetlow, Columbiana.
Jas. W. Harbarger, Franklin.
Henry F. Cordes, Hamilton.
Wm. P. Halenkamp, Hamilton.
John C. Thompson, Hamilton.
Otto W. Harter, Huron.
F. P. Lambert, Jackson.
Illion Moore, Muskingum.
L. P. Kunkel, Muskingum.
A. Ross Read, Summit.
A. V. Donahey, Tuscarawas.

We also added to the resolution a gold watch charm as a memento of that appreciation.

The big question yet to come before the Convention is the manner of submitting the amendments to the people. The Committee on Submission will recommend that the special election shall be held on Tuesday, September 3rd—the day following Labor Day; if this is passed, the Central Bodies should make it a point to see that Labor Day speakers are secured to talk on Constitutional amendments.

Whether we will get through this week or not, it is hard to foretell. The members are working both day and night in an effort to finish up. The amount of discussion which is taking place on amendments offered on the third reading of proposals, makes it hard to determine whether we will get through or not. The office of the Ohio State Federation of Labor in Columbus will be closed this week, and the future address of the Federation will be 310 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Secretary.

SENATE COMMITTEE FIXES THE BLAME FOR TITANIC DISASTER.

Summary of Those Responsible For Loss of Hundreds of Lives.

The committee of the United States Senate has reported upon the Titanic distaster through Senator W. A. Smith He pays a glowing tribute to those who perished as heroes. The following is a summary of the responsibility for the horror:

Captain Stanley Lord of liner California—For ignoring distress rockets "from indifference or gross carelessness," when less than 19 miles from the Titanic.

Captain Smith of the Titanic—For ignoring repeated ice warnings without decreasing maximum speed, doubling lookouts, or warning passengers after collision.

Operators of Titanic—For refusing details of accident to the steamer Frankfurt when asked to explain C. Q. D.

Titanic's Officers—For failing to notify passengers; neglecting to load lifeboats to capacity and absence of discipline.

British Board of Trade—For cursory tests and inspection of the new ship; lax lifesaving regulations; obsolete maritime laws and antiquated rules.

Shipbuilders—For failing to make "water-tight compartments" actually water-tight.

Operator Cottam of Carpathia—For failing to send J. Bruce Ismay's message from Carpathia to New York until two days after accident.

Operators Bride of Titanic and Cottam of the Carpathia—For suppressing news to sell to New York newspapers for "blood money."

Marconi Company—For countenancing operators' suppression of news mercenary motives.

International Mercantile Marine Company—For manning Titanic with scant, undrilled, untrained crew.

White Star Line—For suppressing news for 16 hours and then sending misleading messages to friends and relatives of those aboard the Titanic.

Survivors of Crew—For failing to "bunch" survivors in half-filled boats and return with empty lifeboats to rescue drowning swimers.

The National House of Representatives is made up in the main of lawyers, but the majority of bills passed by Congress are declared unconstitutional. Then what confidence can we have in the legal fraternity to pass legislation in favor of the working class? Better send a few men who will pass laws of benefit to the toilers and then place a curb on the courts to declare them unconstitutional. It sounds reasonable, doesn't it, Mr. Workingman?

EVIDENCE IS INCREASING AGAINST SWEAT-SHOPS

Some Facts About Convent Methods Supported by Affidavits—And More to Follow

Following closely upon the heels of the exposures of the Convent of the Good Shepherd in Columbus and Cincinnati, Ohio, affidavits are pouring into this office from the city and other towns over the State, showing up the terrible conditions in said institutions as known by those who have been imprisoned there and who are not only willing to state the truth but anxious that they have the chance and praice "The Socialist" for the courage and ability to undertake this great work for humanity. Mutterings from the enemy are heard upon the streets against this righteous exposure but no sooner heard than they are silenced with the facts and assurance that more facts are coming and that the only way to safety from the burning truth of exposure of the nefarious traffic in infant human souls is to at ONCE CEASE THE TRAFFIC.

Following is an affidavit of the Aunt of Gladys Crawford, who was sentenced to the Convent at Price Hill, Cincinnati, O., telling of the awful condition in which Gladys was sent to her, after they had demanded and she furnished statements of her good character over the signatures of ministers, lawyers and merchants of undisputed standing in the city of Mansfield, Ohio. If this infernal sweat-shop known as the "Convent of the Good (?) Shepherd" can demand and secure such eminent and exacting recommendations for the good character of the person to whom these released prisoners are to be sent; if they can refuse to release the child to its mother without regard to the rights of that mother, then why is it that the mother, the aunt or any one else having an interest in that child, cannot demand written certificates from honorable citizens who know the facts that these institutions are fit and suitable places for these females? From the facts stated in the following affidavits is too much for" The Socialist" to ask, yea demand that Judge Samuel L. Black give proof of the fitness of the nuns and others in control of these Convents to properly care for, educate and Christianize these defenseless females before he sentences any more of them to such places of toil and torment, and education has no place.

The day Gladys Crawford was released from said Convent there was three others imprisoned. Why? Because it takes 200 girls to run the sweat-shop laundry within those prison walls. It is an undisputed fact that there are officers all over the country, paid by the public funds from taxes gathered from the people, are spying on girls, in league with both Protestant and Catholic, who decoy Catholic girls waiting and watching to ensnare some unsuspecting infant female so that the said army of 200 may be kept to its full quota. Sorry it is to say that not all of these officers are of the Catholic faith, but the greater shame is it that some are Protestant and still more shameful is it that Protestant Judges lend their aid knowingly if not for profit to keep up this army of 200 sweat-shop infants. Only a few days since a certain Police Judge fined an infant female and then remitted the fine upon condition that the female go VOLUNTARILY to the Convent of the "Good Shepherd" at the corner of West Broad and Sandusky Streets, and only last week, Judge Samuel L. Black sentenced the wife of an honorably discharged member of the Navy of the United States to the Girls Industrial School at Delaware and when the husband and sister-in-law went before him to protest the Judge politely told them where to head in.

READ THESE AFFIDAVITS:

AFFIDAVIT

State of Ohio, Richland County, SS.

Mrs. Carrie Foster being first duly sworn says she is the aunt of Gladys Crawford, to whom Gladys was sent from the Convent at Price Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio, and that she was well acquainted with Gladys before she was sentenced to said Convent; that Gladys had spent the summer with her about two years ago and that when Gladys came to her on the 5th day of May, 1912, from said Convent she was not like her former self; that she was very nervous, had a wild and glassy look out of her eyes and appeared under the influence of some drug; that her mind and memory was like one in a trance; that Gladys has not yet resumed her normal and former self or condition; that her clothes are now too large for her as she is gradually losing her bloated or puffed up appearance and that her hands and feet were covered with blisters and her head and hair was full of virmin (lice) and that while H. L. Richards, Attorney of Columbus, Ohio, who accompanied Gladys from Columbus to Mansfield was here, Gladys put all of us to shame by continually scratching her head from the torment of said virmin; that this affiant makes this affidavit in the interest of humanity and with malice toward none but a determination to arouse public feeling against such outrages to coming womanhood who are to be the mothers of generations to come.

(Signed) MRS. CARRIE FOSTER.

Sworn to before me by said Mrs. Carrie Foster and by her subscribed in my presence this 1st day of June, 1912.

AFFIDAVIT

State of Ohio, Richland County, SS.

Mrs. Dean Penn being first duly sworn says she is the wife of Dean Penn and that her former name was Mrs. Rose Crawford and that she is the mother of Gladys Crawford, who was sentenced December 19th, 1912 by Judge Samuel L. Black to the Price Hill Convent at Cincinnati, Ohio, and that when said Gladys Crawford came home from said convent on May 5th, 1912 her hand and fingers were blistered and sore, her feet were sore with large brown blisters from standing on the cement floor in the laundry and that she was bloated in flesh and appearance and acted very strange, to-wit: she seemed dazed or dreaming and had the appearance of some one coming out from under the influence of opiates or drugs of some kind and was unusually nervous for several days and was not her former self and is not yet the same in appearance and manner as when she was sent to said convent; that when she came home head and hair were full of vermin (lice); that all the letters she received from Gladys while she was in said convent were written with lead pencil and that Gladys told her they would not allow her to use pen and ink; that in several of said letters which Gladys wrote home sentences and whole lines would be erased and that letters which Gladys now says she wrote asking for a short letter from her mother once a week was changed and read "once a month;" that Gladys told affiant when she came home that Virginia M. Murray, Chief Officer of the Juvenile Court at Columbus, O. read the recommendations of her aunt with whom Gladys was to stay, from good and influential people in Mansfield, O., among whom was C. H. Huston, attorney, Rev. T. G. Eiswald, Otto Sprunger and Enos Sprunger, grocerymen, and that said Murray said to her, Gladys, that "these are the trash who your mother sent over to get your release and that if you, Gladys, knew when you was well off you would go right back to the concent, not for punishment, but because it would do you good;" that Gladys told this affiant that there was only one toilet room for the use of the one hundred girls in the room where she slept and only three in the laundry where the two hundred worked; that this affiant holds no hatred or revenge against any individual for the treatment of her said daughter but makes this affidavit and uses these names in the interest of humanity and to show up the awful system which makes it necessary for invididual to parties to any such outrages against childhood and even against the unfortunate infants compelled to work at regular tasks when they should be rocked in the cradle, and further affiant saith not.

(Signed) MRS. DEAN PENN.

Sworn to before me by said Mrs. Dean Penn; (Rose Benn) and by her subscribed in my presence this day of June, 1912.

DAVE LOGAN SEES RED WHEN SOCIALISTS SPEAK

Councilmen Under His Guardianship —New Street Car Franchise Presented.

The City Council last Monday evening was not distinguished by anything startling except the deep interest that President Logan took in one of Socialist member Bohnert's improvement ordinances, providing for paving Sullivant avenue along the South Side of the State Imbecile institution. The measure was one of a batch presented by the Eleventh Ward Councilman. Clerk Barr, when he commenced to read it made one of his dramatic pauses and this was the cue for Logan. Assessments have been remitted for all sorts of institutions but when a Socialist presents something desired by the Ward he serves it must pass the close scrutiny of Logan's eagle eye. An option clause, giving the city the right to purchase at the end of 25 years, is contained in an ordinance introduced granting Fifth Avenue Railway and Light Company a franchise to operate a crosstown street car line in Fifth Avenue from the Sunbury pike, near St. Mary of the Springs, to Arlington Avenue, Marble Cliff.

Under the ordinance the company is to maintain a schedule of at least 15 minutes and sell eight tickets for 25 cents with universal transfers. The line is to be built within two years. Should the city desire to purchase the road, six months' notice would have to be given and the price set by a board of arbitration. The ordinance was given a second reading and transferred to the railroads and viaducts commitee.

Mayor Karb vetoed the ordinances to repay Officers Nichols and Shellenbarger the damages they were assessed in a suit against them.

No explanation was given by the Public Service department as to when the paving torn up to place the wires for the cluster lights would be replaced properly. The contractor is paying only $1.75 per day for labor, we are informed, and this is one possible reason for the delay.

A MUZZLED NEWSPAPER.

This paper submitted to the Columbus Dispatch a classified ad. calling attention to the exposures we are carrying in "The Socialist." They were tendered payment for same at their regular rates, but after a conference of the officials the advertising was turned down. Rome has muzzled this paper probably because the owner of the Dispatch and Hierarchy are in the same business of exploiting child labor.

Many people object to Socialism because it will destroy their chances of getting a political berth where graft is the principal emolument.

SEATTLE SOCIALIST GETS NEW TRIAL

Washington—President Taft and Attorney General Wickersham ordered federal officials at Seattle to grant a new trial to Leonard Oleson, whose citizenship papers were cancelled by Federal Judge Hanford at Seattle, because Oleson was a Socialist.

This is the result of Socialist Congressman Berger's move to impeach Judge Hanford.

There is a close relation existing between ballots, bullets and bread.

COMRADE EBY SPEAKS PORTSMOUTH, OHIO

Holds Two Large Meetings With Good Results.

Comrade A. C. Eby went to Portsmouth last Saturday and spoke at a street meeting that evening and the next day at a big rally at Millbrook Park. Mrs. Eby gave two select readings. They certainly made good with their audiences for they brought back $24 worth of subs for the Socialist. Comrade Nate Rickey, who lives in Portsmouth now, was on the job also to boost.

IMPORTANT

At the request of hundreds of AMERICAN CITIZENS of this city and State, we will next week reprint the article that appeared in our issue of May 25, in reference to the sweat-shop at the corner of Broad and Sandusky streets, this city. We will also, in connection, publish additional facts in regard to the institution that we have unearthed.

This will be a good propaganda issue, and every Ward in the city, every local in the State, and every individual Comrade should order a bundle for free distribution.

Orders must be in before we go to press next Thursday as only enough papers will be printed to supply the demand.

JONES TELLS OF TORTURES IN THE SAN DIEGO JAIL

Free Speech Prisoner is Put in a Mesh Iron Cage the Size of a Coffin

After Twelve Hours of Agony in a Cage So Small That He Could Neither Sit Nor Stand, William Denny Jones Refuses to "Get Out of Town" at the Demand of His Inquisitors.

What happened to William Denny Jones, who served 6 days in the San Diego jail and was then released on his own recognizance—the authorities desiring nothing so much as that he would disappear from the face of the earth—is best told in the victim's own language:

"I was arrested by Detectives Meyers and Shepperd, without a warrant and without cause, as I was simply selling papers on the San Diego streets. They took me to jail and put me in the waiting tank.

"I called out to the boys in an adjoining cell the news about the big English coal strike and how two million men were out. This made the jailers mad and one of them called back: 'Jones, we want you!' To which I answered: 'What are you going to do now? Commit another murder? You would not be getting anything if you got me.'

"'Never mind,' they said; 'we will take care of you.'

"Then they gave me a violent yank out of the cell, and one great six-footer hit me a blow on the shoulder blade. Luckily I had steadied myself and so saved a bad bruising which would have come if I had been flung against the steel bars. Then one of the officers said: 'Take off your coat.' I did so.

"'Take off your shoes!' came the next order. I obeyed.

"In front of me on the jail floor there was a cage made of heavy wire netting. An oblong thing, a little larger than a coffin box. On the bottom of it was a thin mattress.

"They pulled open the door of this cage and told me to crawl in.

"There was nothing for it, and I did so.

"Now, the boys in the cells knew what was going on and were determined to make protest against the torture. They simultaneously raised a yell and beat on the bars with their fists and tin cups until the din was terrific.

"In one of the jails I shouted back to them: 'Never mind me, boys. They can't frighten me. I'll stay in the box all night without a murmur.'

"This quieted down things a bit and the jailer agreed to give me back my coat. I laid in that box cage for twelve solid hours before they let me out. Why they did not turn the hose on me and complete their torture I did not understand. Probably it was because they were afraid of another shindy from the boys.

"The mugging and the Bertillion system was given to me as follows: Stripped to the waist, they measured my hips, my forearm, my head and fingers. Then they rolled my index finger in a black mixture and made a print of it on some paper. The next finger was treated in like fashion. Then they took all the fingers. If Miss McKamey was also mugged and measured, as was testified to, you can judge of what happened.

"They were anxious to get rid of us and one day the jailer told me if I would keep still and leave the city he would let me out. I told him I would not keep still if they killed

"When I was finally taken before Judge Puterbaugh and pleaded not guilty, I asked how soon I could get a trial.

"'Probably not until 1916 if these things keep on,' was the encouraging reply from the judge. On the 5th of April thirty of us were transferred to the Riverside jail and from that place released. Eighteen of us were turned loose, leaving nine still in jail in Riverside.

"This last word I have to say: Don't forget the boys still in jail in Riverside and Santa Ana. Prospects for winning this fight were never brighter. We are al on the job and we mean to stay."

The tale told by three other boys, Raymond Cabeeste, E. G. Bell and I Albert, repeats with varying tragic coloring the experiences related by Jones. All had been released, "on their own recognizance," until the time of their trial, set for May 27. They have but one purpose in mind—as a man would go to his wedding so will they go back to San Diego and again meet their oppressors face to face.

KARB GANG FIGHTS VERDICT OF PEOPLE

Propose to Knock Out the Electric Light Extender Bond Vote

The Karb administration is certainly making good with the Rail-Light. City Solicitor Bolin now announces that he will bring suit to test the validity of the electric light extender and grade crossing bonds.

Mayor Karb in issuing his proclamation for the special elections on the bond issues, based the proclamation on a statute passed by the general assembly in the spring of 1911, and which the board of elections holds applies only to urban districts and not to registered cities.

This statute provides that the polls shall be opened at 5:30 in the morning and shall remain open until 6 o'clock in the afternoon. The board of elections issued its instructions that the polls be closed at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon, under a former statute expressly fixing that time for closing.

The will of the people will thus be annulled, no doubt. Karb and Bolin, we repeat, are certainly "delivering the goods." Bolin's point in this case is about like his contention that the Socialist could not do the city advertising because the Socialist party was a small bunch when the legislature passed the legal advertising law. Deep mind that man Bolin has.

Trinity Church, New York, is the richest Christian church in the world. This institution has property worth seventy-five millions and an annual income of one million dollars, yet the most disgraceful tenement property in New York City is owned by the church. May the great ruler of the Universe have mercy on the 9,000 members who constitute this church!

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION WAS HOWLING MOB

Ohio G. O. P. Hold Most Disgraceful Shindig in History of State.

The Republican State Convention held in this city last Monday and Tuesday, was the most riotous and disgraceful ever held in the history of the State of Ohio. It was simply a howling mob in two rival divisions from the start to finish. Senator Burton presided and Malcolm Jennings was secretary and made up the poll of the Counties. Taft won by 28 votes in the selection of the six delegates-at-large to the National Republican Convention. Anybody who ever knew Jennings can account for the result. It was a case of "dog eat dog," and the federal officials (with Jennings) boosted Taft. The working class have not as much interest in the jamboree at Memorial hall as they would have in a baseball game on North Central avenue, Columbus. The baseball games there are clean sport, the convention was an assembly of political cutthroats. Taft's "big six" at Chicago will be, T. E. Burton, Cleveland; H. M. Daugherty, Franklin; W. G. Harding, Marion; Charles P. Taft, Hamilton; A. I. Vorys, Franklin; D. J. Cable, Allen.

"Teddy the Terrible" carried Ohio at the primaries by 40,000 majority, but money swayed the convention delegates because Bill Taft's brother Charles, has a hogshead full of boodle. Teddy's backers were outbid by "Brother Charley." This is the plain, blunt truth. Roosevelt and Taft both want the job of serving Wall Street. It pays and they need the cash.

SOME OBJECTIONS TO SOCIALISM ANSWERED.

By R. A. Dague.

Some people who have not carefully studied Socialism say it presents a fine theory, but it cannot be established until all selfishness is eliminated out of human beings and they all become not only good, but very wise. Those using that argument are "standpatters" and do not believe in evolution or progression. They think civilization has reached its zenith and a representative government is the most perfect that can ever be established on earth.

Now, Socialists are not trying to eliminate all selfishness from people, but propose a system of industrialism which will prevent the very few sharp, tricky, and extremely selfish from exploiting other people, especially women, children, the aged, and those who are not able to protect themselves from the powerful and crafty.

If you owned a bunch of swine and a few big, strong hogs ate up all the swill and crowded away from the trough all the little pigs would you say there is no way by which that unfairness can be prevented until all the hogs are converted, or educated, and made into unselfish and wise hogs?

China has recently established a republic and enfranchised women. Did the able statesmen there wait until all the four hundred millions of inhabitants were republicans and in favor of universal suffrage? Did Abraham Lincoln wait until three millions of negroes demanded freedom before he emancipated them? Socialists do not propose to change human nature, nor do they suggest any visionary or impracticable thing. Their chief proposition is to so adjust affairs that a few human hogs shall not be allowed to eat all the swill.

This can be quite easily accomplished by establishing a co-operative commonwealth, in which all utilities of a public nature shall be owned publicly, instead of by private capitalists, and in which every citizen shall have equal opportunity with every other one and every worker in every useful occupation shall receive the full value of his labor, a system under which stock-watering, monopoly, and hoggish selfishness, and the getting of something for nothing by the big swine will be prevented. It is not at all necessary that a hundred millions of Americans shall become pious and good, and pure unselfish angels before we establish a decent system of industrialism and a democratic government in these United States.

The opponents of Socialism are lamentably inconsistent and illogical. At one time they say Socialism is not possible until all the people become so good that they will have no desire to exploit their fellow men. At another time they say: "Socialism is wrong because, if established, it will take from the people their incentive or (selfish) desire to amass private wealth, which would destroy all civilization, for, say they, "selfishness is the motive-power or force essential to all human endeavor, although only a few of the 'fittest' succeed, while the millions are thereby forced into poverty, squalor, and slavery."

Now, these pessimistic standpatters look backward for all wisdom.

They are timid souls, who must have authority and precedents for every thought they think and for everything they do. If they had lived in 1776, they would have opposed George Washington and the Revolution. If they had lived before 1860, they would have contended that slavery was a divine institution. Every good institution in this civilization is co-operative or socialistic. To operate or carry on any enterprise collectively or co-operatively is to do it socialistically. There are but two methods or systems of industrialism and government. One is known as "Individualism," and includes monarchy, theocracy, plutocracy—the right of the few to govern and exploit the many. The other is "Collectivism," which includes co-operation, democracy, and socialism, or government of the people by the people themselves.

The prehistoric savage with his stone hatchet practiced pure individualism. His hand was against all others. He lived for self. When he joined a neighboring savage to unitedly fight against ferocious beasts or savage enemies, he took his first step toward democracy and socialism. The most perfected civilization is the highest expression of collectivism or socialism. Socialists are evolutionists. They are not trying to make perfect angels out of people, but they are trying to educate enough of them in the principles of co-operation that they will vote to take the trusts and other utilities of a public nature out of the hands of greedy monopolists, and put them into the ownership and control of the public. They further advocate the establishment of an industrial and political democracy in which the majority shall rule. There will be courts and jails and penalties for violators of law, and teachers, and leaders, and men in authority, in the Socialist government, but that government will be a democracy in which the people, acting by majorities through direct legislation, or the initiative, referendum, and recall, will be their own masters,—their own employers,—their own bosses.

Let us be done with the untrue, the often refuted, and shallow objection that Socialism proposes some visionary, unattainable condition of society. They say civilization has arrived at the threshold of a new cycle or era; that less individualism and more collectivism is necessary; that owned and operated by and for all the people collectively. Their rallying cry is: "Let the nation own the trusts."

THE CHILDREN UNDER A SANE ORDER.

It is only under Socialism that the workers will learn to look upon their children as something more than human fodder upon which to feed the vultures of a profit mongering class.

Socialism, by making all men work, the idler in ermine as well as the idler in rags, and putting the millions engaged today in unproductive toil (soldiers, stockbrokers, flunkies and all the other dependents of the parasite class) to useful work, will destroy every excuse for that crime.

It is only under Socialism that men will really learn how to love and appreciate children. For Socialism will make the discovery of all time, a discovery greater, grander, nobler, than that of physicists, the navigators or astronomers. Socialism will discover children, their charm, beauty, grace and joy-bringing power.

Socialism will emancipate the child.

Socialism will regard all children as members of the human race, having equal claims upon human society for opportunities to lead to a clean, healthy, happy human life.

Socialism will not allow the mere accident of birth to damn one child to a life of toil and shame and insure another all the material comforts of life.

Socialism will not crucify the children of one class upon a cross of ignorance and want, in order that the children of another may inherit a kingdom of culture and leisure.

Socialism will give to every child equal opportunities for mental and physical development; good food, good clothes, good housing, bright schools situated among the flowers and the fields, where the morning song of the rising lark shall gently wake it from its slumbers instead of the horrible buzzer of the factory hell, where during the school hours its mind will be not maimed, where it will learn to seek truth instead of fleeing in terror at its approach, where it will learn that it is more important to live well than to die well, and at the day's close wander amid the ripening corn or watch the sun pass through the gateway of the golden west.

Recognising that children are the real foundation stones of human society, Socialism will see that every child is as carefully and fully developed, mentally and physically, as possible to fit it for its great work, building up from a foundation of free, healthy, happy, children a superstructure of truth, justice and beauty, wherein all humanity shall dwell in a holy bond of brotherhood.—New World (British.)

PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE

To Which Class, Mr. Worker, Do You Belong?

Today we seem to, and do have, a class who live today in the past. A class who never see farther back than yesterday, nor farther ahead than tomorrow. Also a class who are not satisfied with either the past or the present, but look to the future. The man or woman who lives in the past, have they anything to tell us, that would make us any the better or the world at large any the wiser, that has not had a trial at some time in our history? They may point out some of the great men in the world's history to substantiate their claim; that we must go back for the good things of this life. I cannot see why men or women of this class do not seem to kow that "the world do move," and will not admit of such a thing as evolution. We have had many men in the past who have left a great influence in the world for good. We must note here that most of our great men were not great in their day; it always takes years and many times centuries for the world to awake to a man's greatness. Who are our great men today? Methinks it would be rather hard to point them out and prove it by logical argument. If we should at the dawn of the twenty-first century be asked to name a few of the great men who lived in the beginning of the twentieth century, no doubt but what it would be an easy matter to name them. It will be surprising indeed in 100 years from now, to look the literature of that date and see the comment on the men whom we think great today and see how significant they are, if mentioned at all. What constitutes making a man great? A man's greatness is based on the amount of good he is to society as a whole (weigh some of our present-day great men in this balance). One may call a man great and good, another man may not think him great at all. Greatness must be measured by society as a whole. Great men are men who live before their time, so to speak. If we look back to history this statement can be easily verified. Some may point to our inventors as great men. We must now raise the question, do great inventions benefit society as constructed today? I say NO, for several reasons. The great invention is supposed to benefit the inventor, or his finances. (Bear in mind that greatness today is, as a general thing, reckoned in dollars and cents that you happen to possess). The majority of inventors die poor; this is another fact in history. An invention in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred is a labor-saving device. Now, is a labor-saving device a benefit to the workers, who are the great majority, when they are privately owned as at present? No, it is not. When we stop to consider that in this country alone we have at all times 2,000,000 unemployed and just at present from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 —with the problem of unemployment staring us in the face, I cannot see wherein the inventing of a labor-saving device makes a man great. With labor-saving inventions privately owned, they tend toward augmenting the unemployment of the workers, where, if they were collectively owned, as we Socialists contend they should be, they would then become a benefit to society, by shortening the work-day, in that particular line of work. Under this condition of society inventors can become great and then only. The people who live in the present are the great majority. These people do not admit of evolution, neither do they look back farther than they can remember without effort; they have all come from Missouri, so it seems. They as a class are almost wholly optimistic.

The people who live in the future are, as a class, the ones who alway try to make the world a better world for it. The man who lives in the future is always one who is a keen observer of the past and present, a believer in evolution; also that the world can and will be made better, and is willing to do his part toward that end, be it ever so little.

All Socialists have great faith in the future.

Friends, educate yourselves in the practice of the Golden Rule and to your own interests as a class. Then we will have a world wherein all can get a living and not have to beg for a "JOB."

Then we will not have to ask you to what class you belong, or which state you seem to be from.—C. E. GARVER, 389 Vance Avenue, Memphis Appeal.

NOTES AND COMMENT

The Branch meetings should be the school, the wage-worker should attend. He should take part in the organization and be the motive power, talk on every motion accept the committee work, do the work, that your Comrades elect you to. When all committees are elected and you find that you are left out, do the work that is before you, that is, see to it that every non-Socialist has an opportunity to read some leaflet, book and subscribe for a Socialist paper, never go out without several pieces of literature on Socialism in your pockets. Keep yourself busy in spreading the propaganda to the worker. Accustom yourself to argument, become grounded in the Simple Philosophy of Socialism, which is nothing more than the understanding of surplus value in the acquiring of which you learn of the class struggle, economic conditions and what it is leading to, you will see it as plain as the nose on a man's face, that we are moving to Industrial Democracy, and that you are one of the mighty army that is going to save the world and establish the system that will make the work of securing a living easy and that the people may develope in body and intellect so that they can enjoy the works of nature.

Exploitation smells just as bad on the Revolutionary as on the Economic field. It is one and the same thing.

When a man or party declares that the working class are not competent to govern themselves, they should be thrown on the dump, for they are preparing to betray the working class.

Oh, ye Gods, why not trust the Proletariat, who, according to the facts of evolution must emancipate themselves.

The interests of the laborer and capital are one, because capital is the creation of the laborer. Socialism means that the laborer must own the tools of production and distribution (capital), the laborers can get along nicely, thank you, without the fleas (capitalist.)

The capitalist is a malignant growth and has the same history as cancer, it waxes strong and becomes more intolerable as the 'Hoss' or the laborer becomes more anemic or dependent.

Father John L. Belford of the Brooklyn Catholic church of the Nativity says, that the statement made by him, that Socialists should be treated the same as you treat mad dogs—with bullets; that he was speaking as a man and citizen and not as a priest.

Would the Rev. Father be guilty of murder if some one of his congregation put into practice, his teachings, which he delivered as a man and citizen?

Is he guilty as accessory before the act of the outrages being committed in San Diego, Cal.? I am asking this as a man, not as a Socialist, you know, Socialists are never impertinent. You see as a Socialist I know that Father Belford is only the result of the capitalist system, worked over-time and the other things of San Diego are the same.

When a Rev. Father speaks, writes a lie, or counsels murder, is he doing it as a priest or as a man? Please let us know how we are to know when he is holy and when he is just a man; when we are to obey and when we should shun him. Whether he remains a priest while he is a man or does he continue as a man when he is a priest.

BEWARE THE VORTEX!

By John M. O'Neill,
(Editor Miners' Magazine.)

The editor of the Catholic Universe of Cleveland, O., has shown symptoms of alarm, and through his sheet has emitted the following scream:

"If this country is not to be swept into the vortex of Socialism with all its attendant immoralities, then the Catholic church, through he members, must save it.

The above editorial hysteria shows conclusively that this sectarian editor is very seriously affected, and some humanitarian whose heart bleeds with pity for the mental pangs endured by religious editors should rush to the rescue of this unfortunate scribbler, who beholds our glorious country being "swept into the vortex of Socialism."

It would be an awful calamity if the members of the Catholic church ignored the warning of this Judas, who, under the cloak of Christianity, attempts to render service to a class of privilege, whose piracy condemns impoverished age to the poorhouse, penniless womanhood to the brothel and innocent childhood to the mills and sweatshops.

Capitalism is here "with all its attendant immoralities," and yet this editor, blind to the conditoins produced by capitalism, calls upon the membership of the Catholic church to arm themselves and fight the doctrines of Socialism—doctrines that proclaim the emancipation of labor from the fetters of wage slavery. Catholics must fight Socialism and perpetuate the hellish system that forces woman to sell her honor for bread, the system that breeds 70,00 divorces annually in this country, that puts 2,000,000 in the penitentaries of profit, that claims 7,000,000 of the gentler sex to the benches of ill-paid toil and that has filled a nation with 6,000,000 of unemployed, whose future is almost as barren as a desert scorched by the torrid rays of a tropical sun.

Catholics must fight the system that upholds riot, [illegible] diamond collars on dogs and rags on babes, that builds palaces and hovels, churches and prisons, and starves a world in order that the Morgans and the Rockefellers, through their economic power may hold in their custody the destines of 90,000,000 of people.

Must they?

JUST WHAT IT MEANS, AND WHY

A Thumb Nail Study In Socialism. By Rev. Roland D. Sawyer.

A word with you, friend—Do you know that Socialism is the question of the hour? We want you to understand it. Will you give a moment to thoughtfully consider these propositions? They mean something for You and your children. Now then, Socialism means just this:

That the community shall take all property not obviously personal, and administer all industrial affairs under the democratic management of all the people, for the good of all the people, and not for the profit of a small class as at present.

LOOK AT THESE SCIENTIFIC PROPOSITIONS—WHY WE WISH TO DO THIS

First: Labor (the thinking brain and the skilled hand) exerted on the resources of Nature produces all the good things in life.

Second: This labor uses a great and complex machinery, our social heritage from the society of the past. No man, nor class of men, living today created it nor has any right to it. It was created by all the society of the past; it should belong to all the society of today.

Third: We find here when we come on the planet, all the resources of Nature, land, water, air, coal, the laws that grow things and generate power, no men nor class of men made any of it nor have any right to own it.

Fourth: Under our present political and industrial system, a small class own or control these resources and this machinery, and the mass of men and women must apply to this capitalist class for the chance to use it.

Fifth: This capitalist class allow the willing workers to use it only on the ground that it shall return to them profit in the shape of dividends, rent and interest.

Sixth: The workers who operate so as to give the biggest profit get the chance; that means that work goes to the cheapest worker.

Seventh: As the inventive genius of man constantly improves machines, it means more men constantly thrown out of work; this means that more and more, only those who are hardy and willing to work at lowest possible wage can get work.

Eighth: This means just a living for the working class; no education, no pictures, no luxury. A pretty offere to you?

Ninth: No capitalist parties, like the Democrats or Republicans, can remedy these things, even were they honest in trying, which is not the case.

Tenth: The only relief is in Socialism, which will go to the root of the matter, and take over the means of production and distribution and operate them for the good of all.

If you want a part in this grand ment and don't know any local Socialist write to. Secretary J. C. Schawe, 121½ East Town Street, Columbus, Ohio.

PRINTERS GET MORE WAGES.

Toledo, O.—After several conferences the local Typographical Union and newspaper publishers have agreed on a new wage scale which means an increase of $2.25 per week for every member employed on the Toledo newspapers, and the aggregate will total an increase of $76,000 per year. The new rate will be $36.75 for night work and $33.75 for day work. The agreement calls, of course, for the strictly union shop, together with regulations regarding apprentices, who will be given a thorough education in the printing trade by the union after the first six months. This education comprises a technical training under the system inaugurated by the International Typographical Union.

POWDER TRUST HIT.

Washington—During the consideration of the naval appropriation bill, an item appropriating $1,150,000 for the "purchase and manufacture" of smokeless powder, an amendment was offered and adopted eliminating the word "purchase," and also reducing the appropriation to $900,000. The appropriation bill thus provides that the government shall "manufacture" smokeless powder, thus eliminating the trust.

LEATHER WORKERS WIN.

Chicago—The leather workers of this city, after a struggle with the employers, have returned to work with an agreement that all differences are to be adjusted by a committee of the union and the employers.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THIS?

Washington—During the consideration of the naval appropriation bill an amendment was offered that no part of the appropriation be expended for foreign coal to be used by the marine corps on the Pacific coast of the United States. After a slight modification of this amendment it was agreed to. Then followed an amendment offered by "Uncle Joe Cannon" that staggered those who have been watching his performances in the house of representatives. "Uncle Joe's" amendment provided "That the coal shall be mined by labor that is not exceeding eight hours a day." After considerable discussion this amendment was adopted. Verily, but times and opinions do change.

FEDERAL UNION GETS MORE MONEY.

Mineville, N. Y.—The Federal Labor Union of this city, comprising approximately 700 members, employed in and around zinc mines, have just secured a 10c a day increase. The company has also agreed that it will meet with a committee from the union in the future. Further, that another conference will be granted in three months to consider a still further increase in wages, and also the question of reducing the workday. Negotiations have been in progress for several weeks, and at one time a strike appeared imminent, but matters, as stated above, have been worked out satisfactorily to both employees and employers.

HATTERS' CASE AGAIN.

Washington—The re-trial of the famous hatters' case will commence on August 20 at Hartford, Conn. Judge Martin will be the presiding judge. This case was remanded for trial by the circuit court of appeals with the decision that the charges made against the union must be proved against every individual member of the organization involved, or, in other words, absolute proof must be adduced showing knowledge and participation in every act charged by the prosecution.

A VISION.

Often when I have been sickened by the stupidity of the mean idiotic rabbit warrens that rich men build for themselves in Bayswater and elsewhere, I console myself with visions of the noble communal hall of the future, unsparing of materials, generous in worthy ornament, alive with the noblest thoughts of our time, and the past, embodied in the best art which a free, and manly people could produce; such an abode of man as no private enterprise could come anywhere near for beauty and fitness, because only collective thought and collective life could cherish the aspirations which would give birth to its beauty, or have the skill and leisure to carry them out.—William Morris.

CARPENTERS VOTE TO REAFFILIATE.

Washington—Since the St. Louis convention of the Building Trades Department, A. F. of L., the United Brotherhood of Carpenters has not been affiliated with the department. The controversy was afterward taken up and amicably adjusted, and the United Brotherhood submitted to a referendum vote the question of reaffiliation with the department. That vote has been taken and resulted favorably, there being 32,077 votes for reaffiliation and 15,490 against.

BUILDING TRADES DEPARTMENT CHARTERS.

Washington—The Building Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, has recently granted charters for local departments at Fargo, N. D., and Fort Wayne, Ind., and applications are pending for the Indiana State Building Trades Council, Newburg, N. Y., and Kankakee, Ill.

UNIONISM AND SOCIALISM.

From the press of Charles H. Kerr & Company, Chicago, comes a striking new pamphlet with topics now much under discussion and which were the leading subjects of debate at the recent National Socialist Convention, namely: industrial unionism, syndicalism, "direct action," the general strike, "sabotage," etc. The book is called "Labor Union Socialism and Socialist Labor-Unionism," and is by William English Walling, whose writings are well known to Socialists and unionists. Mr. Walling has rendered a real service here in defining and explaining the terms over which there has arisen so much confusion. He discusses with some detail all the well known yerieties of both political and economic action and neither approves or disapproves wholly of any of them. He declares that the only remedy for the present condition is class unity on both the industrial and political fields. The price of the book is 15 cents and may be ordered from the publisher or through this office.

Kerr & Company have also just issued a new and revised edition of the the popular "What to Read on Socialism," written by Charles H. Kerr, himself. A copy may be secured gratis by addressing the publishers at 118 West Kinzie street, Chicago.

THE BEST OF JOKES

You can always pull a laugh out of the idea of the waiter, the silent, attentive person who feeds you when you are drowsy, helps you into your overcoat and hands you your hat when you cannot find it, guides your faltering footsteps over the floor when it becomes unsteady, and when you reach the door, see that there is some one to take care of you until you reach home—one of those homes which should not be broken up.

The waiter is a joke, a jest, a source of infinite merriment, a fellow with no place except behind the chair, a man who is so little of a man that merely because he has been working fourtten or fifteen hours shows signs of weariness, a man who grows flat footed from much standing, who sags occasionally because he must remain on one spot, who, compared with the complaining policeman on stationary post, is a fixture nailed to the floor.

But the New York papers have been having lots of fun at his expense. He has been on strike because he does not like conditions. He cannot live on the imaginary tips handed out to him by joke writers who never give a tip. He wants more wages, and he wants better conditions.

The flabby faced, bagging eyed, girthy gent, and his real bediamonded lady, are much provoked over it. The gent never did a thing to put anything on the table at which he feeds so sumptuously. The lady could not on her life prepare one of the dishes. They have to be fed by this silently moving person who has the temerity to go on strike. They have to be cared for by him. They have to be watched as they drool over the costly foods, or toy with them, contaminate them or mess them. What a couple at the usual "swell" hotel pays for a meal is probably as much as what the waiter receives as a week's wages. So what possibly has the waiter in the way of complaint?

He has a few little items on his side. The fact that the slobbering gents and ladies insult him is negligible. But he must eat. He cannot eat in the place in which he is employed. He cannot sleep there. He has to have some life apart from the humdrum, costly, disgusting squalor, and in order to get it he wants better conditions and more wages. That is the very thing the proprietors do not wish to grant him. So they have refused, in the big hotels, to treat with him.

It is this which has given the writers such a splendid opportunity for their fine work in the way of satire. They have tried to make a joke of this, at the waiter's expense.

But let us see. The waiter is a workingman supposed to be engaged in the honorable employment of serving food to other human beings. In most of those places on strike the human beings have the money with which you purchase. Before they get it they take it from those who produce. There is not a single thing on the table to the production or the transportation or the preparation or the serving of which they have contributed anything. They simply eat it, or blubber over it. The waiter to them is not a human being, but a sort of capable slave, a man who does their bidding, and when he rebels he becomes a beast who should be suppressed, and to the ordinary news writer he becomes a fellow about whom to write jesting paragraphs.

This waiter's strike, however, is a most serious thing. It is the beginning of the solution of the great subject of distribution. To the present the waiters have distributed mostly to the rich, to those who stole the means of buying the service of the very ones they despise. Whatever the waiters themselves think of the matter is of little consequence. They have become factors in the great, world-wide uprising of the working class, and they must be recognized as factors in the working class movement.

The strike of the waiters is only the beginning of the social rearrangement. It is not a joke. It is an indication of the big and serious things that are about to happen.—N. Y. Call.

The Harmon administration is getting busy now to hasten some provision for the dependent children of the state.

Judge Daniel Babst of Crestline and Attorney Harry Baldwin of Cleveland, were appointed by Governor Harmon to codify all state laws touching the care of these children. This is clearly the result of the exposures of the Convent system made by the Columbus Socialist and the recent action of the Socialist State convention denouncing these sweat-shop concerns.

Not a flag floated from the arches on High Street Memorial Day as is usual in honor of the Civil War Veterans dead and alive. The Chamber of Commerce blames it on the Rail-Light, who have charge of the flags and who always attend to this when any convention visits town. The Chamber of Commerce and the Rail-Light are too busy promoting the dark schemes of crooked politicians to pay any attention to the old soldiers.

A warrant for the arrest of Thomas E. Watson, once candidate for President on the Populist ticket, was issued at Macon, Ga. The warrant charges Mr. Watson with sending obscene matter through the mails. Mr. Watson was arrested at his home in Thomson, Ga., and taken before the federal commissioner at Augusta. The warrant is an outcome of an article in Mr. Watson's magazine alleged to reflect on the Catholic religion. Watson's offense was in publishing some Latin phrases used by priests in the confessional when women apply for absolution. Rome is becoming frantic and will invoke the Federal power to crush the rising tide against it.

The suspension of the Constitution by the elected servants of the people of Cuba is for the benefit of the Capitalist, the exploitation of labor, that they may be permitted still further to exploit, and that they may hunt the laborer down as you would a beast just to make an example, that the rest of the workers may be filled with fear and that they will submit to the task-maker without complaint. If this is just a feeler thrown out by the Capitalist to see if the workers of America will stand for it, the same thing will be tried here. Workers your duty to your class is to protest that the American Capitalist take their hands off and let the workers of Cuba solve their own life problem.

The Capitalist papers, when the Lawrence strike started, said that the strikers were only a lot of ignorant foreigners that was causing the trouble. When the laborers of Cuba struck and demanded better conditions, the same papers announced that the uprising as caused by a band of negroes. The same animus in both instances, the purpose of engendering more hatred that they may be permitted to go on their crooked way.

The Capitalists of the United States, who have interests in Cuba asks protection from the negroes. They say that the negroes are striking against Spanish and Cuban employers who pay the lowest wages for labor. This is like the good man Capitalist saying that he must pay low wages, because the bad man Capitalist pays low wages. Every Socialist knows that the low wage is what all labor is falling to, under this system and that the Capitalist good and bad, will use the power of Government to do it.

Better stay away from the phone when it is lightning. It matters not if the phone is defective, your folks will get no damages if your are killed. Such is the decision of Federal Judge Anderson of Indianapolis in a case of this kind. Whose fault is it when property is defective? Who should pay the damages in a case like the above?

Socialists—real scientific Socialists—have no quarrel with any individual. They recognize that all, the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the powerful and the impotent, are victims of a system and that Socialism will result in a benefit to not only one class in society by to ALL CLASSES, though primarily intended to emancipate the exploited class, both intellectual and physical workers.

Texas has organized 216 Socialist locals during the past three months. Rev. Trawin of the Baptist church and Rev. Sellens of the Congregational church, Boise, Idaho, have joined the party. Nebraska has added 10 new locals during April. Now, is Socialism growing?

It is conservatively estimated that Americans have donated to Morgan and allied interests fully $100,000,000 since 1909, as extra profits on coffee above what they would have been, had 1909 prices remained in force. The way the extra profit was obtained was by the storing away of millions of bags and limiting production.

John I. Breen, the school councilman of Lawrence, Mass., who "found" dynamite in several buildings during the textile strike and did his dirtiest to cast suspicion on the half-starved workers, has been found guilty of planting the explosives himself and was fined $500 and costs. It is probably that the manufacturers paid Breen's fine. Had Breen been successful in foisting the crime on some poor striker he or she would have been sent to the penitentiary. It is because such dastardly tricks have been played upon labor before during strikes that working people were loth to believe the McNamara brothers guilty of resorting to dynamiting scabs. We have scanned daily newspapers in vain for heavy editorials and comments from Kirby, Post, Drew & Co. denouncing the rascally Breen and his cowardly act. There's a reason!

CHANCE FOR MUNICIPAL HOSPITAL.

The Socialist party and its representatives in the City Council have been consistently and persistently in favor of a municipal hospital, where people can be cared for without the taint of charity or paying tribute to private or sectarian institutions. We never expected, however, to find Mayor Karb aiding in this matter. He seems to favor the municipal plan for he neglected to include in the budget for the next year levies for the Protestant and St. Francis hospitals provided in an ordinance passed by the last council. The levy designated is .013 mills, which will raise about $30,000. This was to be divided equally between the hospitals in payment of care and treatment of so-called city charity patients, during the year. The budget has not been acted upon by council.

It is a well-known fact that "charity" patients in the hospitals get short shrift. These institutions, besides getting $30,000 get numerous concessions and exemptions that amount to as much more. It would be cheaper and more effective in relieving suffering for the city to secure a hospital of its own free from all other influences.

We are glad that Mayor Karb seems to be helping this idea along. It is humanitarian and deserves the support of all citizens without respect to party.

There has never been an organized campaign against Socialism. This year there is. It is only within a few months that the first of the anti-Socialist publications was launched. There is not one of them that anywhere near pays for the cost of publication. They could not, on the basis of money-making, be continued a week. As they are useful, or supposed to be useful, they have been sustained through the generous support of "disinterested" persons. Their existence is about the best and most significant tribute to the growing power of Socialism that we have. They will increase in numbers as Socialism increases in power, for the only really two antagonistic forces in society today are Socialism and anti-Socialism. Anti-Socialism may call itself by whatever name it chooses, but it is the same thing.

For the Socialists this is an especially momentous year. The Republicans and Democrats are well-supplied with money. The Presidential preliminaries of these two parties will cost over $5,000,000. Public opinion must be sustained, public enthusiasm nourished and public loyalty held after the nominations are settled. That will cost easily as much more. But it is worth it. The interests are going to play both sides of the game and whichever wins the interests are going to be amply reimbursed. They always have been. They will be this time. While it is a sure thing for them whether Roosevelt or Taft, Harmon, Bryan, Clark or Wilson gets the office, yet the contest must be kept at fever heat because otherwise the American people might begin to think more of their own interests and less of the interests of the candidates. The American people might actually, seriously and intelligently begin to consider their own affairs. That would end the political flimflam game.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

The fight is now on in earnest. The Comrades from all over the State are beginning to respond. We must have the united aid of every loyal, class-conscious, Comrade to tide us over at this time. Let every Ward Branch take decided action and make an effort to systematically canvas the Ward and get subscribers. Let every Comrade go out next Sunday morning and bring 'em in by the dozens. Everybody do something to boost. That's the war-cry, "Boost."

Remember, we want to put on those 874 new ones this month and unless there is a decided rally, we mark. Let's hear from every Ward will not be able to reach the coveted in the city and every local in the State the coming week.

On with the Revolution!

Our Hilltop Booster is back on the job. He turns up with nine yearlys, for this paper and the Appeal. The boys on the hill are going to set the pace for the rest of the city.

Comrade Kinnear puts on 5 new ones and the grave-digger gets busy.

Comrade Eby while at Portsmouth last Sunday, sold subscriptions to the amount of $13.25. We don't know how it happens to happen, but whenever Comrade Eby goes after them, he gets 'em.

Comrade Smith is in with 2 yearlies. Nice work.

Comrade Crawford is always doing something for the cause. His work for this week is one yearly and one 6 month.

Those Germans are never satisfied unless they are doing something for Socialism.

Comrade Stieber of the South End, renews and brings another with him for one year.

Comrade Coffman sends us 2 by mail and their education will commence this week.

Comrade Clyde Longfellow has joined the Boosters and starts out by getting us a new one. We always welcome a new addition to the ranks of the Boosters and trust that Comrade Longfellow will be with us often.

Don't fail to use the Red Ticket and purchase from our advertisers. This is important and should not be neglected.

Comrades with one or more to their credit: Eubanks, Seamans, Freeman, Albright, Cather, Bates, Burger, Reed, Goodman, Noe, Emrich, Trump, Okert, Van Schoyk, and Wilson.

Balance to get last week.....	874
New subs put on.....	26
Balance to get by July 1st.....	848

The above report is not very promising but the Boosters are just beginning to get down to work. By concerted effort of every one we can reach the mark set very easily.

NOTICE FROM ADVERTISING MANAGER

The Advertising Manager of this paper has been repeatedly solicited to publish photographs and political advertising for candidates on the old party tickets.

It is beyond the comprehension of this department why such boodlers and intellectual prostitutes should want to disgrace the fair pages of the only decent newspaper in this city.

However, we wish to serve notice on all such aspirants regardless of whether you are Democratic "progressive" or "standpatter," or a Republican "progressive," or "standpatter," that this office in general, and the Socialist Party in particular know you to be a bunch of child exploiting, hero worshiping, subservient tools of your masters, and there is not enough money within the limits of this State to pursuade us to defile our fair sheet by publishing your photo or mentioning your names, except to show you up as tools of the masters at whose feet you fawn.

JOINT SESSION HELD BY LOCAL COLUMBUS

The joint session of the Socialist branches at Red Lion hall last Sunday afternoon was one of the best attended meetings held for some time. Comrade D. M. Kuhns was elected chairman and Comrade W. C. Bates as reading clerk to assist Secretary O. G. Van Schoyck. The following resolution was adopted by a vote of 67 to 12:

RESOLVED, That the Socialist Party of Columbus, Ohio, stands for political action only, and that in its opinion all methods of organization tactics on the Industrial field should be left to and settled by the workers themselves.

RESOLVED, That our paper, the Columbus Socialist, advocate as its policy, political action only; but that its columns be open at all times to free discussion by our party members.

Some very kind things were said about the management of the Socialist in the discussion of the resolution presented by the loyal Comrades of the German Branch. This resolution was adopted by practically a unanimous vote.

A new plan for the City Central Committee was adopted together with other provisions. The Ward Branches will each elect one delegate and one alternate and one additional delegate for each one hundred members in good standing. Hereafter all new members of the party must be obligated in their respective Wards. The organizer is to be furnished a list of available speakers. Precinct captains are instructed to poll their precincts and secure data and each Branch is to make a special effort to secure subs for the Columbus Socialist and the Appeal. The resolution adopted by the Columbus Federation of Labor demanding an investigation of the Convent on West Broad street, was endorsed.

In order to increase enthusiasm in Socialist meetings it was decided to distribute 500 copies of the "Marseillaise," with music, to be sung at the propaganda gatherings.

At last the popular election of U. S. Senators is a possability, it only being necessary for the action of Congress to be ratified by two-thirds of the states. The matter was first taken up by Congress in 1826 but the Senate has succeeded in side-tracking the issue for 86 years. It is a safe prediction that it will not require as long a time to abolish the Senate.

COMRADE SEIMER NOW A MISSIONARY

Comrade John Seimer of Mt. Vernon, was in Columbus this week. John is a glass worker and the fires are out in the factory so he has decided to do missionary district work in the Fourteenth district during the summer. He will sell Socialist literature to the farmers and residents of the smaller towns. He can do it.

NOTICE TO LOCAL AND BRANCH SECRETARIES

The County Central Committee desires a complete list of all local and branch secretaries in this County. Please report names to Comrade D. M. Kuhns, secretary, 184½ South Sigh street, at once.

FOURTEENTH DISTRICT NAMES STORCK FOR CONGRESSMAN

The Socialists of the Fourteenth Congressional district met at Wellington last Sunday in delegate convention and nominated Comrade Geo. A. Storck, of Lorain, as their candidate for congressman.

REYNOLDSBURG MEETING

Last Saturday evening, Comrades W. C. Bates, E. B. Eubanks, and F. E. Johnston held an enthusiastic propaganda meeting on the Public Square at Reynoldsburg. For about an hour and a half, the crowd, which was large for a village of that size, stood and listened while the principles of Socialism were being expounded. The courteous attention accorded the speakers, speaks for itself, as it shows that the working-class in that vicinity also feel the iron heel of the masters.

SOCIALIST DRAMATIC CLUB HOLDS EFFECTIVE MEETING

Comrade J. L. Bachman Delivers an Instructive Address.

The Socialist Dramatic Club held another good meeting last Sunday evening at which Comrade J. L. Bachman gave a timely and instructive address on the basic principles of Socialism. The club desires every member and other Socialists to attend these meetings whenever possible, as they miss something good each time they are absent. These programs will strengthen and post the workers to fight the battle of our class against the masters. A collection was taken last Sunday evening for the San Diego free speech cause. Tomorrow evening the session will be principally devoted to business and the next week another good lecture and entertainment will be given. Remember the place, Red Lion hall, 335½ South High Street.

COMRADE JUNE PURCELL GUILD RESIGNS FROM THE SCHOOL BOARD

This Action Is Necessitated By Removal From the City.

Chicago, Ill., June 8, 1912.
Local Columbus, Socialist Party:

Dear Comrades—Today I am sending my resignation as member-at-large of the Board of Education to the Board. Words fail me when I attempt to express my deep regret that this is necessary. If there were any possible way of avoiding it I should most certainly take the other way.

My husband has just accepted a most excellent business offer which makes it necessary for us to remove to Kansas City, in the near feture. Not only is it to our financial advantage to go, but we are hopeful that the climate will prove beneficial for my throat trouble.

I shall go to my new home with never-ceasing devotion to the cause of Socialism and strong in the hope that I may be of assistance to the Comrades who are in the movement there.

Fraternally yours,
JUNE PURCELL-GUILD.

WOMEN SHOT DOWN BY POLICEMEN

Strikers Driven Into Grave-Yard and Several Fatally Wounded.

New York, June 4.—Two clashes in the insuppressible class conflict occurred one at Kearny, N. J., and the other at Clinton, Mass. In both cases the workers, who were engaged in picketing, were attacked and fired upon by police and in both cases several of the numbers of the strikers were wounded, perhaps mortally. In both cases, the striking workers were unarmed and their assailants suffered comparatively no injury. In the case of Clinton, particularly, the police were guilty of a dastardly and unprovoked attack on a large number of textile workers who were on the picket line. They were driven by the minions of "law and order" into a nearby churchyard where they huddled on the slope of a hill while the guardians of the law fired their revolvers.

HARMONY

A Valuable Essay upon the Benefit of Co-operation in Fight on Master Class.

Harmony within an organization comes only from a clear and true understanding of its aim and object. Where this condition holds true, those within this organization will sacrifice their all to attain its ultimate goal as embodied in its declaration of principles.

An inharmonious condition within an organization can be created, from two causes—lack of information or lack of experience. We may have the information but lacking experience, the time to adjust the mind in the same harmonious condition to the individual that has both, is indefinite.

Then again we may have the experience, but lacking the proper information, the mind becomes skeptical and confused. This creates within the individual's mind a narrowness, which however, when the proper information is applied clarifies this condition instantly. That moment doubt leaves and true harmony is restored.

Individuals within an organization having the same thing in mind, may view it from as many different angles as there are individuals contained within its folds. However, their ultimate goal being the same, holds them together in one solid mass, regardless of internal opinions, and tactics.

Let an outsider attack the ultimate goal this organization is striving after, then, regardless of petty internal dissensions, harmony becomes at once solidified, the organization stronger within itself, greater than any individual within its folds; and moves en-masse against the common enemy.

An inharmonious condition within an organization striving after a great ideal is not dangerous. Its comparison can be likened to a large family where all the children, full of life and good health, are loud and boisterous. An outsider might infer that the family were eternally quarrelling and that an inharmonious condition prevailed.

But let the mother take sick, and lo, and behold, these same noisy, boisterous children, become quiet as mice, and compete with one another in affection and efforts to eliminate the mother's sufferings. The mother's suffering becomes the common cause of all that pertains to the welfare of the home and instantly eliminates all differences among the children.

So men disagreeing honestly with one another are not dangerous to any movement. The moment they find their organization in danger they will rally en-masse. Honest men from the very fact of their honesty, will always retain a doubt within their minds. They will always assume the poition that they are open to reaon, for well they know that the mind is eternally undergoing changes and these changes bring about changes in opinions.

Many an individual furthering an idea that was original has had to stand alone, and find organized society arrayed against him. He was a mile-stone of progress. Feeling firm in the belief that he was right, then it was only a matter of time until the mass caught up with the idea.

Within organizations where the right is denied no man to express opinions there is absolutely no danger of disorganization, from the very fact that where this holds true the organization feels assured of its own honesty of purpose and qualification to get the erring individual right.

However, where the organization assumes a counter-course, then the danger leading to disorganization becomes grave, for then the individual attracts to him the moral sympathy of others, who may feel that certain rights of opinions that they retain may also become jeapordized.

No man whose purposes are absolutely honest within an organization, would place in jeapardy the interests or life of this organization. His zeal may be interpreted by some to be otherwise, but take the individual and get his view point in a quiet manner and the difference of opinion that you hold vanishes, for you discover he is sincerely honest. You may not agree, but you must respect his sincerity of purpose.

So then an organization having a latitude that allows its membership a free, open, honest expression of opinion cannot disintegrate, but with every storm within clarifying the atmosphere, draws its membership closer and closer for battle in a common cause.

No matter how intense opinions of individuals may be, the common goal that the organization is striving for will far outweigh the intensity of the individual in the recognition of this fact.

This is the harmonious balance wheel that stimulates the ideal and holds the organization in line with true progress, by its harmonization of all factional differences.

SHOULDER TO SHOULDER WORKERS

The working class movement is subject to changes. This is the reason why we hold conventions and change our constitutions to suit the times. Sometimes the membership moves more rapidly than the leaders to some particular policy, then one side is named the "reactionary," and the other the "progressive." The reactionary side makes no moves that will endanger their own position. Briefly speaking they play politics for positions instead of general principles, but not so with the progressives, because, they are not yet in power. If you will read history you will find that the party in power is always reactionary because, "Self-preservation is the first law of nature."

What is the use of quibbling over politics? Why blame the other fellow for their defective vision. Remember that the near-sighted are generally far-sighted. No one has less esteem for your particular generalities than the man who never saw you and thereby cannot understand your motives. Don't worry, capitalism is no respector of persons. He who is up today may be down tomorrow. Then why quibble. Let's stand shoulder to shoulder, Comrades.

Monday June Tenth, Begins the Festival of Roses.

June roses everywhere—Great banks of Red Roses and White Roses and Tea Roses—Roses of all kinds in fact, and who has ever seen a rose that was not a thing of beauty.

Of course, not all are natural—For many of the Decorations that will remain a week or more it would be impossible to use real roses—But how natural and beautiful are the artifical kinds—One is almost tempted to stop to inhale their fragrance.

All The World Loves A Lover And Everyone Loves a Rose.

And for all lovers of Roses a week of rare pleasure and plesant surprises.

From time to time our Store News in the Daily Papers will mention events of especial interest to rose growers, and all interested in the culture of these beautiful flowers.

And With The Festival of Roses an Assembling Extraordinary of the best Merchandise the World Affords.

And economies of rare worth and seasonableness prevail—Every department participates in this great June event—Merchandise specially purchased and much from our own good stocks—An event that means the actual saving of many thousands of dollars to the people of Columbus and Central Ohio.

Come Monday and every other day.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS

Austin Lewis, the well-known speaker and writer of San Francisco, has withdrawn from the Socialist party and joined the I. W. W.

An Indianapolis paper remarks that during the Socialist convention week in that city not a single case of drunkenness or disorderly conduct was noticed by any reporter or policeman.

Homer Castle, the Prohibition candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania in 1906, has joined the Socialist party, admitting that most of the evils of which he complained were due to economic causes that can only be remedied by the Socialist movement.

The fight that the Socialists and Radicals made in Italy to extend the franchise has proven victorious. Parliament pased a bill giving the right to vote to 5,000,000 men over 30 years of age, who were disfranchised because of illiteracy and other reasons.

The first case against the Appeal to Reason editorial staff called in the Federal Court at Fort Scott, Kan. having fallen flat, it is believed that the other cases will meet a like fate when they are called in November, after the election, although the Appeal force will not relax their vigilance.

According to the International Socialist Review the funds supporting the Lawrence strike came from the following sources: Socialist locals, $40,000; I. W. W. locals, $16,000; A. F. of L. locals, $11,000. In most cases this contribution represented individual donations ranging from 5 to 25 cents, but these nickels and quarters were sent from all parts of the country. This little item may come in handy for future reference.

The great strike in Budapest, which was called by the Socialists to force the ruling class to concede universal suffrage, was partially won, the government agreeing to bring in a bill to extend the right to vote. The Emperor and his advisors became thoroughly frightened during the height of the demonstration at the fierce onslaught of the people, and feared that a revolution would be precipitated unless concessions were made. The Socialists are not entirely satisfied, but accepted the compromise for the time being. They have given notice that the strike will be repeated if the ruling class betrays the people.

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

By direction of the National Executive Committee, the National Office has laid in a stock of 200,000 copies of "The Usurped Power of the Courts", by Allan L. Benson. The book bears the imprint of the National Office, and on the rear cover is an appeal to the reader to not merely protest but to join the party organization.

It is a sixty-four page book. It tells a graphic and extremely readable story of the way in which the courts have taken over to themselves powers which it was never intended that they should have.

The author goes right back to the source of information, the constitutional convention of 1787, which framed the constitution of the United States, and proves from the original documents that the framers of the constitution never intended to give to the courts the power to pass upon the constitutionality of laws. He shows that they usurped that power. It follows that a Socialist administration need not recognize any such power.

It is of the utmost importance that such information as is contained in this book be disseminated among the people.

Price, 1,000 copies for $25.00; 100 for $3.00; 50 for $1.75; 25 for $1.00; single copies 5c. Transportation prepaid.

Address National Office, Socialist Party, 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

State Secretary Otten, of Oregon, reports that fourteen locals were organized in that state during the month of April.

The Woman's National Committee is sending out a special letter to the secretaries of all locals, to the state secretaries, to the local woman's committees and to many other active workers as can be reached.

This letter announces the necessity of immediate action being taken if they are to save their splendid woman's paper, The Progressive Woman.

Josephine Conger-Kaneko has carried on the work of editing and publishing the magazine, and has devoted all her strength to reaching the women of the United States with the message of Socialism. One year ago she was obliged to move to Chicago. The additional expense is so great that she can no longer fight the battle alone.

The Woman's National Committee, upon the advice of the National Executive Committee has devised a plan for making the paper the greatest woman's magazine in the United States. With the co-operation of every local it can be done and no person is asked to donate a cent. All that is asked is co-operation.

Any one not receiving a copy of the letter can get it by writing to the General Correspondent of the Woman's National Committee, 111 North Market Street, and stating that he is interested in the plan for educating every working woman to an understanding of her class interests.

A statement appearing recently in one of the papers to the effect that the Lyceum course would not start until May 1, 1913, was an error. The National Executive Committee at its recent session decided that the lectures should start February 1st. The preliminary work is already in full swing.

The National Secretary has not yet received the minutes of the national convention. The transcript of the stenographic report, however, has been delivered. From it, the referendum ballot for platform constitution and resolutions, as required by the national constitution, will be prepared as speedily as possible and shipped to the state secretaries.

The attention of the Socialist press is called to the fact that the platform adopted by the national convention does not become the official platform of the party until it is ratified by referendum vote of the party membership. The national constitution of the party requires that all national platforms, amendments of platforms, resolutions, and amendments to the constitution, be submitted seriatim to a vote of the membership.

The pamphlet, "How To Conduct a Local Branch," has now been revised and is being printed. Price the same as before, five dollars per thousand, same rate for any quantity, less or more. Address, National Office, Socialist Party, 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

To the Workers of America:

Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovanitti are in jail in Lawrence, Massachusetts, charged with the murder of Anna La Pizza, a working girl who took part in the recent strike of the textile workers in Lawrence, Massachusetts. The arrest and imprisonment of these two workingmen is one of the most lawless and infamous acts ever committed by the ruling class of this country. At the time of the brutal murder of Anna La Pizza, Ettor and Giovanitti were leading the Lawrence strike. They were straining every nerve to preserve and not to destroy the lives of the strikers. It is a notorious fact that Anna La Pizza was wantonly shot to death by one of the police officers, and that Ettor and Giovanitti were miles away from the scene of murder. The were arrested and prisoned for the sole purpose of weakening the position of the strikers and forcing their surrender to the brutal mill owners of Lawrence. It is not charged that Ettor and Giovanitti were directly concerned with the killing of Anna La Pizza or that the instigated or aided in the dastardly deed. The theory upon which the indictment is based is that the strike leaders made inflammatory speeches which led to a violent conflict resulting in the death of the unfortunate mill girl. If this theory is allowed to stand and to acquire the force of legal precedent it will be the heaviest blow dealt by the courts of this country to the rights and liberties of the citizens.

Every labor union official leading a strike and every Socialist arraigning capitalist misrule in a public speech, may be held guilty of a capital offense, if the police or other hired thugs of the employers should deliberately incite riot and cause murder in connection with any labor struggle.

The attempted outrage must be frustrated by the Socialists and organized workers of America. Public sentiment must be thoroughly aroused. The case of Ettor and Giovanitti must be fought to a finish.

The Socialist Party hereby calls upon all locals of the country to arrange demonstrations and public protest meetings, against this latest and most sinister judicial attack upon freedom of speech and labor's rights, and to raise funds for the defense of Ettor and Giovanitti.

Fraternally yours,
VICTOR L. BERGER,
JOB HARRIMAN,
WILLIAM D. HAYWOOD,
MORRIS HILLQUIT,
ALEXANDER IRVINE,
KATE R. O'HARE,
JOHN SPARGO,
National Executive Committee Socialist Party.

JOHN M. WORK,
National Secretary.

BERGER CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

That Milwaukee will send two Socialists to congress next fall is the confident prediction of Berger. The Milwaukee Socialist movement is stronger than ever and conditions are most favorable, according to Berger who has just returned to Washington after a short visit to the Wisconsin metropolis.

"The old parties have been very much disappointed by the failure of the Wisconsin legislature to pass a law permitting fusion for candidates for congress," said Berger. However, they may yet form some sort of a combination. They may have only a Republican running in the fourth Congressional district and a Democrat in my district. But even then we shall carry the day in both districts. We are strong enough to beat them even if they have this clumsy combination."

MISERY OF COURTS.

Oh, the misery, the degradation, the utter hopelessness and despair which is seen in the police courts of the large cities.

Old men, young men old long before their time, old women, young women, women who are mothers, and women and men who will never realize the natural joys of motherhood, of fatherhood, the simple-minded and the knaves, the vicious and the shrewd, drug fiends, whisky slaves, all file before the court in an unending procession, day after day, year after year, and silently pass away; some to the city's prison, some to the hospitals, and some are patronizingly set at liberty to face the same conditions which were directly or indirectly instrumental in bringing them before the majesty of the law.

"Are you working?" is the first question generally put to the unfortunates who are brought before the court officials and this question is followed by the further inquiry, "When and where did you work last, and how long did you work?"

The occupational worker, both skilled and unskilled, or those who do odd jobs, either manual or otherwise, receive but short shrift from the so-called guardians of property and morals when haled before them for some accidental breach of law.

The constantly growing army of men and women who are being thrown out of employment is the most vital problem now facing the capitalist class and the capitalist courts.

The lack of steady and profitable employment for a constantly growing number of men and women, the continuous unemployment of 6,000,0000 men who are permanently thrown on the scrap heap, is the cause of the moral and physical degeneration which leads to the perpetration of nearly all the misdemeanors and crimes which are committed.

Prostitution, due to economic oppression and unfavorable environment; drunkenness, due wholly to enfeebled physical conditions, and begging take up the time and the activities as well as provide the entire finances of almost the entire army of police and court attendants.

This is why the large cities of the United States are dotted with jails quite as numerously as they are dotted with schools and colleges.

It is the profit system throughout the entire world, stimulating, urging and dominating the minds and the actions of men and women, from before their birth till death forever stills their restlessness, their blind, unknowing struggles.

The struggle for existence is growing harsher, and the physically unfit are today at a greater disadvantage than at any time in the world's history.

Capitalism, or production for profit; capitalism, the epoch of the machine; its beneficiaries, the owners of the machines, and untold misery for the workers must be changed.

No move for betterment will avail without the program and the reasons being understood and the conditions aimed for must be fundamental.

This program is the basis of the Socialist movement and it will finally prevail.

OLD PARTY HUMBUG.

By R. P Fleming.

The working class of this country is in revolt today against the capitalist system, but don't know it. They believe they are in revolt against the Republican Party.

Unless they wake up and inform themselves that revolt is liable to find expression by turning out the Republicans and putting in the Democrats at the coming Presidential election. Should they commit this monumental folly they will have four long years to regret it and to fully realize the truth of what I here state.

In those four years they will learn that they have but jumped from the frying pan into the fire.

Under no circumstances can or will the Democrats do anything save to make a bad situation worse. The Democratic party is not only equally powerless, but just as unwilling and without honest intention as the Republicans, to change conditions.

The Democrats are as guilty of criminal deceit when they tell you they can benefit the working class by tariff jugglery as are the Republicans when they tell you that a high protective tariff is passed for the benefit of labor.

The tariff jugglery is a humbug, pure and simple. They have been fooling the people for many years with it—both the old parties—and both the Democratic and Republican leaders know it as well as I do. They know that the working class can be and will be—as now—skinned to the tariff-for-revenue, any old tariff, no tariff at all. It is pure bunk, no matter which party tells you so.

The working class were bunked once before and committed the supreme folly of electing Cleveland, and they got lower wages, soup houses, Coxey's armies, and millions of their class couldn't earn any wages large or small.

Until the working class becomes conscious, until they see and know the monumental hypocrisy, the cunning and deceit of the capitalist class and their henchmen, the managers of the two old parties and the old-line politicians; until they know that the Democratic and Republican parties are merely two devices to milk the same cow—labor; that they are simply two different masks behind which the capitalists, the parasites and the robbers and exploiters of labor hide their faces, and the instruments by which they hold the worker in subjection and keep him docile while they pluck him and pile up in their own class the product of the worker's toil, there is no star of hope shining for the working class.

The only party that can or has the slightest intention to—change conditions for the benefit of the workers is the Socialist party.

The working man elects the president.

Has he learned nothing since 1884 than to be capable of now repeating his old folly ad be worse than bunked again?

The tariff is—the tariff—hang the tariff!

The working class has no more interest in it than has a chicken to choose how it shall be cooked—fried or baked.

LABOR MUST GO INTO POLITICS

The most successful state convention ever held by the West Virginia Federation of Labor closed at Wheeling, W. Va., after a four day's session, and after having endorsed the political and economic solidarity of labor.

Delegates Val. Reuther, Fred Reiber, and Charles F. Schmidt presented a resolution which asserted that labor must unite on political as well as economic lines, and that nothing except the union of labor and Socialism would bring about the emancipation of labor. Spirited discussion followed the introduction of the resolution. Several of the delegates opposed the resolution on the grounds that the labor unions should not take up such matters. After some discussion the resolution was adopted by a decisive viva voce vote.—Socialist and Labor Star, Huntington, W. Va.

NUTMEG SOCIALISTS TO WAR ON MILITIA

Hartford, Conn.—At the annual State convention of the Socialists here an amendment was made to the party constitution prohibiting any member from belonging to the State militia.

All members belonging to the militia must resign at the end of their term of service, under penalty of expulsion from the party.

A state ticket was nominated, with Esther S. Suisman, of Hartford, as the candidate for Secretary of State.

THE SOCIALIST PLATFORM

Adopted by National Convention at Indianapolis, May 17, 1912

The Socialist Party of the United States declares hat the capitalist system has outgrown its historical function and has become utterly incapable of meeting the problems confronting society. We denounce this outgrown system as incompetent and corrupt and the source of unspeakable misery and suffering to the whole working class.

Under this system the industrial equipment of the nation has passed into the absolute control of a plutocracy which exacts an annual tribute of millions of dollars from the producers. Unafraid of any organized resistance, it stretches out its greedy hands over the still undeveloped resources of the nation—the land, the mines, the forests and the water powers of every state in the Union.

In spite of the multiplication of labor-saving machines and improved methods in industry, which cheapen the cost of production, the share of the producers grows ever less, and the prices of all the necessities of life steadily increase. The boasted prosperity of this nation is for the owning class alone. To the rest it means only greater hardship and misery. The high cost of living is felt in every home. Millions of wage-workers have seen the purchasing power of their wages decrease until life has become a desperate battle for mere existence.

Multitudes of unemployed walk the streets of our cities or trudge from state to state awaiting the will of the masters to move the wheels of industry.

The farmers in every state are plundered by the increasing prices exacted for tools and machinery and by extortionate rent, freight rates and storage charges.

Capitalist concentration is mercilessly crushing the class of small business men and driving its members into the ranks of propertyless wage workers. The overwhelming majority of the people of America are being forced under a yoke of bondage by this soulless industrial despotism.

It is this capitalist system that is responsible for the increasing burden of armaments, the poverty, slums, child labor, most of the insanity, crime and prostitution, and much of the disease that afflicts mankind.

Under this system the working class is exposed to poisonous conditions, to frightful and needless perils of life and limb, is walled around with court decisions, injunctions and unjust laws, and is preyed upon incessantly for the benefit of the controlling oligarchy of wealth. Under it also the children of the working class are doomed to ignorance, drudging toil and darkened lives.

In the face of these evils, so manifest that all thoughtful observers are appalled at them, the legislative representatives of the Republican, Democratic and all reform parties remain the faithful servants of the oppressors. Measures designed to secure to the wage earners of this nation as humane and just treatment as is already enjoyed by the wage earners of all other civilized nations have been smothered in committee without debate, and laws ostensibly designed to bring relief to the farmers and general consumers are juggled and transformed into instruments for the exaction of further tribute. The growing unrest under oppression has driven these two old parties to the enactment of a variety of regulative measures, none of which has limited in any appreciable degree the power of the plutocracy, and some of which have been perverted into means for increasing that power. Anti-trust laws, railroad restrictions and regulations, with the prosecutions, indictments and investigations based upon such legislation, have proved to be utterly futile and ridiculous.

Nor has this plutocracy been seriously restrained or even threatened by any Republican or Democratic executive. It has continued to grow in power and insolence alike under the administrations of Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft.

In addition to this legislative juggling and this executive connivance, the courts of America have sanctioned and strengthened the hold of this plutocracy as the Dred Scott and other decisions strengthned the slave power before the civil war.

We declare, therefore, that the longer sufferance of these conditions is impossible, and we purpose to end them all. We declare them to be the product of the present system in which industry is carried on for private greed, instead of for the welfare of society. We declare, furthermore, that for these evils there will be and can be no remedy and no substantial relief except through Socialism, under which industry will be carried on for the common good and every worker receive the full social value of the wealth he creates.

Society is divided into warring groups and classes, based upon material interests. Fundamentally, this struggle is a conflict between the two main classes, one of which, the capitalist class, owns the means of production, and the other, the working class, must use these means of production on terms dictated by the owners.

The capitalist class, though few in number, absolutely controls the government—legislative, executive and judicial. This class owns the machinery of gathering and disseminating news through its organized press. It subsidizes seats of learning—the colleges and schools—and even religious and moral agencies. It has also the added prestige which established customs give to any order of society, right or wrong.

The working class, which includes all those who are forced to work for a living, whether by hand or brain, in shop, mine or on the soil, vastly outnumbers the capitalist class. Lacking effective organization and class solidarity, this class is unable to enforce its will. Given such class solidarity and effective organization, the workers will have the power to make all laws and control of industry in their own interest.

All political parties are the expression of economic and class interests. All other parties than the Socialist party represent one or another group of the ruling capitalist class. Their political conflicts reflect merely superficial rivalries between competing capitalist groups. However they result, these conflicts have no issue of real value to the workers. Whether the Democrats or Republicans win politically, it is the capitalist class that is victorious economically.

The Socialist party is the polticial expression of the economic interests of the workers. Its defeats have been their defeats and its victories their victories. It is a party founded on the science and laws of social development, It proposes that, since all social necessities today are socially produced, the means of their production and distribution shall be socially owned and democratically controlled.

In the face of the economic and political aggressions of the capitalist class, the only reliance left the workers is that of their economic organizations and their political power. By the intelligent and class conscious use of these they may resist successfully the capitalist class, break the fetters of wage slavery, and fit themselves for the future society, which is to displace the capitalist system. The Socialist party appreciates the full significance of class organization and urges the wage earners, the working farmers and all other useful workers everywhere to organize for economic and political action, and we pledge ouselves to support the toilers of the fields as well as those in the shops, factories and mines of the nation in their struggles for economic jusstice.

In the defeat or victory of the working class party in this new struggle for freedom lies the defeat or triumph of the common people of all economic groups, as well as the failure or the triumph of popular government. Thus the Socialist party is the party of the present-day revolution, which marks the transition from economic individualism to Socialism, from wage slavery to free co-operation, from capitalist oligarchy to industrial democracy.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, the co-operative commonwealth, and, to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

1. The collective ownership and democratic management of railroads, wire and wireless telegraphs and telephones, express services, steamboat lines and all other social means of transportation and communication and of all large-scale industries.

2. The immediate acquirement by the municipalities, the states or the federal government of all grain elevators, stock yards, storage warehouses and other distributing agencies, in order to reduce the present extortionate cost of living.

3. The extension of the public domain to include mines, quarries, oil wells, forests and water power.

4. The further conservation and development of natural resources for the use and benefit of all the people:
(a) By scientific forestation and timber protection.
(b) By the reclamation of arid and swamp tracts.
(c) By the storage of flood waters and the utilization of water power.
(d) By the stoppage of the present extravagant waste of the soil and of the products of mines and oil wells.
(e) By the development of highway and waterway systems.

5. The collective ownership of land wherever practicable, and, in cases where such ownership is impracticable, the appropriatnon by taxation of the annual rental value of all land held for speculation.

6. The collective ownership and democratic management of the banking and currency system.

The immediate government relief of the unemployed by the extension of all useful public works. All persons employed on such works to be engaged directly by the government under a work-day of not more than eight hours and at not less than the prevailing union wages. The government also to establish employment bureaus; to lend money to states and municipalities without interest for the purpose of carrying on public works, and to take such other measures within its power as will lessen the widespread misery of the workers caused by the misrule of the capitalist class.

The conservation of human resources, particularly of the lives and well-being of the workers and their families:

1. By shortening the workday in keeping with the increased productiveness of machinery.

2. By securing to every worker a rest period of not less than a day and a half in each week.

3. By securing a more effective inspection of workshops, factories and mines.

4. By forbidding the employment of children under 16 years of age.

5. By the co-operative organization of industries in federal penitentiaries and workshops for the benefit of convicts and their dependents.

6. By forbidding the interstate transportation of the products of child labor, of convict labor and of all uninspected factories and mines.

7. By abolishing the profit system in government work and substituting either the direct hire of labor or the awarding of contracts to co-operative groups of workers.

8. By establishing minimum wage scales.

9. By abolishing official charity and substituting a non-contributory sytem of old-age pensions, a general system of insurance by the state of all its members against unemployment and invalidism and a system of compulsory insurance by employers of their workers, without cost to the latter, against industrial diseases, accidents and death.

Political Demands.

1. The absolute freedom of press, speech and assemblage.

2. The adoption of a graduated income tax, the increase of the rates of the present corporation tax and the extension of inheritance taxes, graduated in proportion to the value of the estate and to nearness of kin—the proceeds of these taxes to be employed in the socialization of industry.

3. The abolition of the monopoly ownership of patents and the substitution of collective ownership, with direct rewards to inventors by premiums or royalties.

4. Unrestricted and equal suffrage for men and women.

5. The adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall and of proportional representation, nationally as well as locally.

6. The abolition of the senate and of the veto power of the president.

7. The election of the president and the vice president by direct vote of the people.

8. The abolition of the power usurped by the Supreme Court of the United States to pass upon the constitutionality of the legislation enacted by Congress. National laws to be repealed only by act of Congress or by a referendum vote of the whole people.

9. The abolition of the present restrictions upon the amendment of the constitution, so that that instrument may be made amendable by a majority of the voters in a majority of the states.

10. The granting of the right of suffrage in the District of Columbia, with representation in Congress and a democratic form of municipal government for purely local affair.

11. The extension of democratic government to all United States territory.

12. The enactment of further measures for general education and particularly for vocational education in useful pursuits. The bureau of education to be made a department.

13. The enactment of further measures for the conservation of health. The creation of an independent bureau of health with such restrictions as will secure full liberty for all schools of practice.

14. The separation of the present bureau of labor from the department of commerce and labor and its elevation to the rank of a department.

15. Abolition of all federal district courts and the United States circuit courts of appeals. State courts to have jurisdiction in all cases arising between citizens of the several states and foreign corporations. The election of all judges for short terms.

16. The immediate curbing of the power of the courts to issue injunctions.

17. The free admmistration of justice.

18. The calling of a convention for the revision of the constitution of the United States.

Such measures of relief as we may be able to force from capitalism are but a preparation of the workers to seize the whole powers of government in order that they may thereby lay hold of the whole system of socialized industry and thus come to their rightful inheritance.

Following is the report of the committee on labor organizations, which was unanimously adopted by the National Socialist convention at Indianapolis:

The undersigned members, constituting a majority of the committee, recommended the adoption of the following declaration:

Political organization and economic organization are alike necessary in the struggle for working class emancipation, working class movement—the Socialist party and the labor unions.

The labor movement of the United States has of recent years made marvelous progress in all directions. It has steadily increased in numbers and has reached trades and industries which were before unorganized. It has in many instancesss concentrated its power and increased its efficiency by the amalgamation of related trades into federations and industrial unions. Many unions have opened their meetings and journals to the discussion of vital social and political problems of the working class, and have repudiated the demoralizing policies represented by the National Civic Federation. The organized workers are rapidly developing an enlightened and militant class-consciousness.

The reality of this progress is attested by the increasing virulence with which the organized capitalists wage their war against the union. The improved economic organization is not a matter of abstract theory, but grows out of the expefience of the wage workers in the daily class struggle. Only those actually engaged in the struggle in the various trades and industries can solve the problems of form of organization.

The Socialist party, therefore, reffirms the position it ha salways taken with regard to the movement of organized labor:

1. That the party has neither the right nor the desire to interfere in any controversies which may exist within the labor union movement over questions of form of organization or technical methods of action in the industrial struggle, but trusts to the labor organizations themselves to solve these questions.

2. THAT THE SOCIALISTS CALL THE ATTENTION OF THEIR BROTHERS IN THE LABOR UNIONS TO THE VITAL IMPORTANCE OF THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED, ESPECIALLY THE IMMIGRANTS AND THE UNSKILLED LABORERS, WHO STAND IN GREATEST NEED OF ORGANIZED PROTECTION AND WHO WILL CONSTITUTE A GREAT MENACE TO THE PROGRESS AND WELFARE OF ORGANIZED LABOR IF THEY REMAIN NEGLECTED. THE SOCIALIST PARTY WILL EVER BE READY TO CO-OPERATE WITH THE LABOR UNIONS IN THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED WORKERS, AND URGES ALL LABOR ORGANIZATIONS, WHO HAVE NOT ALREADY DONE SO, TO THROW THEIR DOORS WIDE OPEN TO THE WORKERS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE TRADES AND INDUSTRIES, ABOLISHING ALL ONEROUS CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP AND ARTIFICIAL RESTRICTIONS. IN THE FACE OF TH ETREMENDOUS POWERS OF THE AMERICAN CAPITALISTS AND THEIR CLOSE INDUSTRIAL AND POLITICAL UNION, THE WORKERS OF THIS COUNTRY CAN WIN THEIR BATTLES ONLY BY A STRONG CLASS-CONSCIOUSNESS AND CLOSELY UNITED ORGANIZATION ON THE ECONOMIC FIELD, A POWERFUL AND MILITANT PARTY ON THE POLITICAL FIELD AND BY JOINT ATTACK OF BOTH ON THE COMMON ENEMY.

3. That it is the duty of the party to give moral and material support to the labor organizationas in all their defensive or aggressive struggles against the capitalist oppression and exploitation, for the protection and extension of the rights of the wage workers and the betterment of their material and social condition.

4. That it is the duty of the members sof the Socialist party who are eligible to membership in the unions to join and be active in their respective labor organizations.

DANGER THREATENS IN POSSIBLE CRISIS

Only Hope is in Immediate Revolt of the Workers Against Oppression

Most every day we hear the same old stereotyped argument used against Socialism. It generally takes this form:

"Well it always was this way, and it always will be." Very well. In that case life itself will take pains to enlighten you.

One day a crisis comes, one of those crises which are no longer mere passing phenomena, as they were awhile ago, but a crisis which destroys a whole industry, which plunges thousands of workers into misery, which crushes whole families. You struggle like the rest of us against the calamity. But you will soon see how your wife, your child, your friend, little by little succumb to privations and fade away under your very eyes. For sheer want of food, for lack of care and medical assistance, they end their days on the paupers stretcher, while the life of the rich sweepes past in joyous crowds through the streets of the great city gleaming in the sunlight—utterly careless and indifferent to the dying cries of those who perish.

THEN you will understand how utterly revolting this society is; you will reflect upon the causes of this crisis, and your examination will go to the very depths of this abomination which puts millions of human beings at the mercy of the brutal greed of a handful of useless triflers; then you will understand that Socialists are right when they say that our present society can be, that it must be, reorganized from top to bottom.

To pass from the general crisis to your particular case. One of these days YOUR MASTER will try by a new reduction in wages to squeeze out of you a few more pennies in order to increase his fortune still further. Naturally you will protest, but he will answer haughtily: "Go to h — — and eat rice and beans, or work for what I offer." Then you will find that your master not only tries to shear you like a sheep, but that he looks upon you as an inferior kind of animal altogether; that, not content with holding you in his relentless grip by means of the wage-system, he is further anxious to make you a slave in every respect. Then you will either bow down before him, and give up every feeling of human dignity, or the blood will rush to your head, you will shudder at the hideous slope on which you are slipping down, and you will retort, and, turned out workless on the street, you will understand how right Socialists are when they cry to you from the house-tops:

"REVOLT, REVOLT," arise and throw off this economic slavery. Then you will come and take your place with us and you will work with us for the complete destruction of all slavery—economic, social and political.

Some day, again, you will learn the story of that charming young girl whose brisk gait, frank manners, and cheerful conversation you so lovingly admired, after struggling for years against poverty, she left her native village for the city. There she knew that the struggle for existence must be hard, but she hoped to be able to gain her living honestly. Well, you know what has been her fate. Courted by the son of some capitalist, she allowed herself to be enticed by his fine words, she gave herself up to him with all the passion of youth, only to see herself abandoned with a baby in her arms. She struggles on, but breaks down in the unequal strife against cold and hunger, and ends her days behind the walls of some house of prostitution.

And you, women of the people, has this left you cold and unmoved? While caressing the pretty head of that child who nestles close to you, do you never think about the lot that awaits him, if the present social conditions are not changed? Do you never reflect on the future awaiting your young sister and all your own children?

Do you wish that your sons should also vegetate as your father vegetated with no other care than how to get his daily bread with no other pleasure than that of the saloon? Do you want your husband, your sons, to be ever at the mercy of some blood-sucking parasite? Are you anxious that they should remain slaves for a master, food for gunpowder, mere dung wherewith to manure the pasture lands of the rich exploiters of their labor?

NO! NEVER! a thousand times NO! I know that you have admired those Spanish women who in a popular uprising presented their breasts to the bayonets of the soldiery, in the front ranks of the revolutionists. I am certain that you mention with reverence the name of the woman who lodged a bullet in the chest of that ruffianly official who dared to outrage a Socialist prisoner in his cell, and I am confident that your heart beats faster when you read how the women of Paris gathered under a rain of shells to encourage "their men" to heroic action.

Every one of you, who are honest, who love the human race, above every thing else, you will understand your rights and you will come with us. You will come with us in order to work with your brethren in the preparation of that Revolution which sweeping away every vestige of slavery, tearing the fetters assunder, breaking with the old worn-out traditions, and opening to all mankind a new and wider scope of joyous existence, shall at length establish TRUE LIBERTY and REAL EQUALITY throughout human society. Work with all, work for all—the full enjoyment of the fruits of their labor, the complete development of all their faculties, a rational, human and happy life.

Poverty is on the increase, but we are told that the working class is living above its means. In other words, they have advanced from the soup bone to tough steak with milk in their coffee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

In compliance with resolutions passed at joint session of the Sixth and Seventh Ward Branches, Tuesday night, relative to the death of Comrade Oscar Okert, we beg to submit the following for publication in The Socialist.

The Socialist Comrades of the Sixth and Seventh Ward Branches deeply regret the sudden taking off by death in the railroad wreck at Bradford, Ohio, our much-loved Comrade Oscar Okert, who lived at 1090 Bennett Street, Columbus, Ohio. Comrade Okert was a charter member of the old Fourth Ward Branch, now the Sixth Ward and was the most active literature agent in the city of Columbus. He not only made friends, but Socialists in his every-day honest manner of living. Being a good Socialist, he was therefore a good husband and father, a good neighbor and friend, courteous and humane in all his dealings. Comrade Okert was a member of the Locomotive Firemen and Enginmen, and when killed wore the emblem of that order and the Socialist button and was never known to scab on the train nor at the ballot box. A man of influence in his craft, yet was class conscious, and fought to secure industrial and political emancipation of his class.

His family loses more than money can buy or lips suggest.

The community will scarcely find another more worthy of their confidence and the Socialists of Columbus suffer the loss of one of their most alive and consistent Comrades. A wife and four children survive to murn his death.

NEW YORK WAITERS GO OUT ON STRIKE

High-Toned Hotels and Restaurants are Badly Crippled.

New York, May 30.—The first serious strike New York hotels have experienced occurred last night when the waiters walked out of the Waldorf-Astoria, the Gotham, the Breslin and Rector's, in the midst of the evening dinner hours, leaving hundreds of hungry patrons in the lurch.

Approximately 100 waiters and cooks from these four well-known hotels simultaneously went on strike and with those who had joined previous strikes at the Belmont, the Knickerbocker and Churchill's make a total of more than 1200 who have actively praticipated in the fight for higher wages and better working conditions.

June 4.—The number of hosteleries affected by the activities of the international Hotel Workers' Union continued uninterruptedly to increase today. Despite the assurances of the members of the Hotel Men's Association that they have the situation well in hand and that the strikers are "beaten to a frazzle," four more hotels were struck at about 7:15 last night. They are teh Navarre, Seventh avenue and 38th street, where about 100 cooks and waiters walked out; the Empire, Broadway and 63rd street, where about 75 cooks and waiters quit their posts; the West End, the New Weston, a family hotel at Madison avenue and 49th street at which about 50 cooks and waiters walked out, and Pabst's restaurant, 125th street, where about 250 cooks and waiters joined the ranks of the strikers.

COST OF LIVING KEEPS CLIMBING UP

"Economists" Differ As To Reason for This Tendency.

New York.—It costs more to live in this, the month of June, 1913, than ever before in the history of the United States, except perhaps during war time.

Prices were high a year ago, but today they are on the average nearly 10 per cent higher yet, according to trade authority quotations. Food products are the highest on record. Meat, eggs, butter, fish, potatoes, coffee, tea, sugar, salt, molasses, rice, beans and peas average 23 per cent higher; wheat, corn, oats, barley, flour, etc., 34 per cent higher.

Fruits are the only things good to eat that have grown cheaper during the last twelve months, but they are still higher than in 1910.

Leather products cost 12 per cent and chemicals and drugs 13 per cent more than a year ago.

The average increase in food products is nearly 20 per cent, which means that the housewife must pay $6 to fill a market basket that only cost her $5 to fill in 1911. In other words $1 will only buy five-sixths as much as it did a year ago.

The biggest advances have been in meat products, beef, 25 per cent; hog products, 40 per cent, and mutton over 50 per cent.

Economists differ as to the reasons for the general upward tendency of all commodities during recent years which has been worldwide.

PERSECUTION

If a Socialist were to be denied American citizenship because of a perfectly honorable and rational belief, it would be a disastrous outrage. A theory of violence is proper ground for rejection. Mere names frighten some people almost to death. What matter whether Victor Berger calls himself by one name or another? He is a singularly honest, comprehending, sympathetic man, far more valuable to the community than most of his fellow statesmen. If there is any dangerous quality in the revolutionary tendencies of the day, it comes from predatory asses—dull souls, whose sympathy and official power goes to those who have. A stupid judge, like Hanford, might add one hundred thousand votes to the Socialist poll for next November. A little futile and idiotic persecution goes a long way. It would certanly be proper to exclude a member of the I. W. W. who professed a belief in sabotage. The country has a right to say what kind of citizens it desires, but it doesn't wish anybody excluded for political beliefs to be enforced only at the ballot box. Our views of Hanford's general attitude were made clear during the Ballinger case. The use of the law to help one class in social contests is a dangerous wrong. The oppression of Ettor and Giovannitti in Lawrence could not be properly described without subjecting us to the charge of being sensational agitators, and as we can make our point just as well in mildness, we subdue a vocabulary more appropriate to the outrageousness of the facts.—Editorial in Colliers' Weekly.

Plain Statement of What She Endured in Price Hill Catholic Sweat Shop

FACTS FOR FOLKS WHO THINK

The Columbus Evening Dispatch approves the things in Spain that THE SOCIALIST approves in Ohio. Editorial appearing in the Columbus Evening Dispatch Thursday May 30, 1912:

"Law and Its Enforcement."

"There was a fire in a cinematograph picture show in a Spanish village, the other day, and eighty persons lost their lives, having been burned or crushed in the panic. Now the proprietor of the place of amusement has been arrested for giving a performance without a license and without submitting his apparatus for official inspection. But what of the officials whose duty it was to see that the law was enforced and the disaster prevented? Certainly, some responsibility must rest also with them. They who permitted the dangerous conditions are as guilty as the man who planned them, and they should not escape punishment. That is the lesson we have learned in America, and it is just as good for Spain as for this country. Officials who work only when work is brought to them are surpassed in inefficiency only by those who do not work at all and have no care except to draw their salary when it is due.

"An interesting fact, stated after an expert examination, is that Columbus has an ordinance governing such shows that is one of the best in the country. But ordinances alone will not protect; there must be enforcement, rigid and continuous."

Will the Editor of the Dispatch read the following affidavit and then say the same thing about the enforcement of the law relating to wine rooms, visiting the same by females and the enforcement of the law against working females more than the law allows for such persons?

Will the Dispatch uphold these officers who heard the conversation of Gladys Crawford and the other two and say they did right when they allowed those girls to enter the wine room after a friendly conversation with them and then arrest them and let the spy go and send the innocent girls to the Convent sweat-shop? We challenge the Dispatch to state its position in this matter as it applies to Columbus.

Again, we ask the Dispatch to inform its readers corncerning the lack of proper fire escapes on the Convent of the Good Shepherd at Cincinnati, Ohio, the long hours of labor of females over eighteen years of age; the lack of proper ventilation in the laundry and other sweat-shops there; the employment of children under 14 years of age; the failure to see that children in this and other similar institutions get the proper schooling and many other things which the State and city officials all over Ohio are criminally neglecting. Mr. Dispatch you live in Ohio and we want you to know you do not have to go to Spain to find officials drawing full pay, and, in some instances pay on the side as we will soon show through the columns of this paper, for not doing their sworn duty.

AFFIDAVIT

State of Ohio, Richland County, O., SS.

Gladys Crawford, being first duly cautioned to tell the truth and then sworn, says she is the Gladys Crawford who worked at Kresge's, Mr. Hill, Manager at number 113 & 119 N. High Street near Long St., Columbus, Ohio, says during the month of December, 1911, that on the 15th day of December, on Monday night at 10:15 o'clock P. M., she drew her pay amounting to $4.85 for one week and part of another week's work; that her wages was only $3.50 per week; that on said 15th day of December 1911 she had commenced work at 7:30 o'clock a. m. and worked continuously till 10:15 o'clock p. m. except one hour for dinner and forty-five minutes for supper; that after drawing her pay at 10:15 o'clock as stated she left said store after waiting some ten minutes for an opportunity to get to the toilet in said store, in which store there is only one closet and only two commodes for the accommodation of something like forty employes; that when she left said store she was in company with Mary Brown, aged about 18 years; Margaret Carson, aged about 21 years, and Marie Bartlett, aged about 17 years, none of whom had been able to get to the toilet room in said store and were forced, when on the street, to seek such accommodations; that affiant did not know where to go and it was first suggested by Margaret Carson that they go into the ladies' toilet of hte wine room at southwest corner of High and Spring tSreets, Columbus, Ohio; that affiant objected going into said place but said Margaret Carson urged her and the others to go; that affiant went into the shooting gallery of Mr. and Mrs. Cohen near the corner of Hgih and Spring streets intending to ask Mrs. Cohen for toilet accommodations as she was acquainted with her, but she was not in and affiant would not tell her distress to Mr. Cohen; that when affiant came out of the shooting gallery she saw Margaret Carson talking to three men whom affiant did not then know and who were not dressed in officers' clothes or uniform, but who affiant has since learned were Officers Robinson, Bragg and the third name she did not hear; that while said men were standing there said affiant, said Margaret Carson still talking to them, affiant said to the other girls in the hearing of said officers that Mrs. Cohen was not in and she would not ask Mr. Cohen, when said Margaret Carson said, well come on up with us then and that affiant did go and said officers made no objection; that they all went direct to the ladies' toilet, did not stop in wine room going to closet nor coming from closet till they were stopped by said same three officers, who arrested her, took her first to Police Station and from there to the Detention Home, No. 50 East Mound Street, Columbus, Ohio, where she was kept imprisoned until December 21, 1911, when she was taken to the Convent of the Good Shepherd at Price Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio, under the one name "Evelyn," where she remained until the 4th day of May, 1912.

Affiant further says that said Margaret Carson told her she had been in some convent from the time she could remember till she was 18 years old and that she was a Catholic and that affiant now believes said Margaret Carson was working and conspiring with said officers to get her sent to said convent; that on the trial before Judge Samuel L. Black on the 19th day of December, 1911, affiant was not given any opportunity to explain her actions and that when said judge inquired the cause of her arrest Miss Virginia M. Murray, the chief officer of the Juvenile Court, spoke in undertones so affiant could not hear what she said; that the mother of affiant was present at the trial but was given no opportunity to say anything; that when affiant arrived at the convent at Price Hill she was taken into the school room and given the name of "Evelyn" as above stated and was told she must not tell any one her real name nor why she was sent there; that said Marie Bartlett, who was sent to said convent at same time was given the name of "Marion" and given the same instructions; that after they were served with dinner, consisting of potatoes, gravy, steak, pie, bread and butter and coffee, she was then taken to the dressing room and put in uniform and at same time had to give up all jewelry, combs for the hair and everything of her own except her shoes; that she was then taken to sewing room and put to work on power sewing machines (owned by some outside parties) making shirts; that her task after the first week was to do all sewing on the sleeves of forty dozen shirts per day or eighty dozen sleeves (two sleeves to one shirt) or nine hundred and sixty sleeves per day, which was supposed to be done from seven o'clock a. m. till six o'clock p. m. with one hour off for dinner, but that affiant was not able to do her task but twice and then had to work part of the noon hour to do so; that she worked on said sewing machines about a month and she was then placed in the mangle room of the laundry building, where outside laundry from The Gibson House, The Schuler's Cafe, The Country Club, Grand Hotel and also work of private parties consisting of two rough dry and two lots of finish work came in each day; that said laundry goes in the name of "Bank Street Laundry" on the outside of convent walls although nowhere near Bank Street; that the task set in said laundry was that all work that came in each day had to be done before they could go to supper; that in going from her room in the morning to the laundry she had to go through a long underground tunnel that took about five minutes to go through and that no daylight could be seen from said tunnel and that the only light was by electricity and there was no ventilation except from small holes with heavy iron bars which were usually closed; that the walls of said tunnel were of cement and damp, mouldy odor and that water covered the floor of said tunnel nearly and in places quite over the shoe soles; that while affiant and the other thirty odd girls who work in the mangle room and the two hundred girls who work in said laundry are passing through said tunnel there are always from three to four nuns stationed in said tunnel to see that the girls do not talk to each other; that if the girls do talk to each other they are punished by having to kiss the laundry floor, if on the way to the laundry by kneeling down in front of the Sister Superior or her assistant, kiss the floor then say "Mother, please forgive me and then kiss the floor again; that if they refuse to do so they were sent to the penance room and kept on nothing but bread and water till they would kiss the floor and ask pardon; affiant says she had to kiss the floor twice for talking on way from church, twice for knocking chair over, twice for singing the song

VIGILANTES CONTINUE TERRORIZING SAN DIEGO

State Authorities Fail to Give Protection to Citizens Against Thugs

San Diego, Cal., June 3.—There is little improvement in conditions here. The Attorney-General has come and gone, leaving his assistant in charge. It is very evident that the vigilantes and police are confident that they will be protected. It is impossible for any labor or Socialist organization within the city to speak on the streets, even outside of the restricted district.

Vigilantes and police are active and the local organs of the vigilantes are today advocating that all witnesses brought here to testify before the Attorney-General or the new Grand Jury be run out of town.

This morning the farcial charge of "resisting an officer" placed against Comrade A. B. Carson, who was beat up by police on May 28th, was dismissed. The reporter of a local newspaper who is personally friendly to us urged Carson to leave town immediately, as he feared that Carson would suffer violence at the hands of the Vigilance Committee.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon L. A. Schiffran attempted to speak on the corner of Seventh and E Streets, two blocks outside of the "restricted district. Public notification of the speaking had been given and although the police had arranged for a fake "protection" stunt, they could not control the vigilantes. Shortly before 1 o'clock the vigilantes, headed by J. M. Porter and Francis J. Bierman, appeared upon the scene. They were accompanied by a large body of police in charge of Detective Shepherd, who has himself served as a vigilante. One of the comrades happened to overhear a conversation between Porter and Shepherd and it was agreed that a demonstration be made against the speaker, but no violence offered him, and that the police should intervene and "protect" him.

The Assistant Attorney-General had been notified and was on the street corner. Unfortunately for them all the police had not been let in on the plan. Schiffran had not completed his first sentence when one of the policemen kicked him. Shepherd promptly interfered and the police surrounded the speaker, not permitting any but a few of the vigilantes to approach him. Schiffran still tried to speak, Porter and Bierman then alternately would approach him from the rear or side and violently shove him. This continued for some five minutes without deterring the speaker and without the police making any effort to stop it.

A vigilante in an automobile and wearing the American flag then appeared upon the scene. He tried repeatedly to run down the speaker and Porter and Bierman attempted to shove Schiffran under the car. Then the great "protection" stunt was pulled off.

Shepherd heroically announced that "the man who interfered with the speaker would run into him." By this time a large crowd had gathered and the vigilantes by a noisy demonstration tried to suppress the speaking. Schiffran spoke a few minutes longer and then adjourned the meeting. He was escorted by the police to the Yuaken building, a block away, and there eluded the crowd.

The Assistant Attorney-General was heard to remark that "his treatment was not so outrageous." It is not known whether he made any observation as to the presence of the vigilantes and the threats hurled at the speaker. J. M. Porter, when finally forced to desist by Shepherd, said. "All right, we can get him later." The significance of this may or may not have been apparent to the Assistant Attorney-General.

Socialism is dying so rapidly in Pennsylvania that the dues-paying membership has increased from 4,000 to 13,000 in the last two years. No wonder the fanatics are getting badly scared.

A SCAB KINDERGARTEN CONDUCTED BY RAIL-LIGHT

Employes Shipped to Boston to Act as Strike-Breakers There—Fine Work

The Columbus Rail-Light, according to authentic reports, is running a scab kindergarten in this city. The past week 67 men have been sent from here to Philadelphia, from whence they are shipped to Boston, where they are to act as strike-breakers. The street car men in the New England metropolis have revolted against unbearable conditions.

The motormen and conductors from Columbus go under the assurance from the Rail-Light that they will receive $5 per day and extenses. More than this, every man will hold his job here. Of course, if one of them should happen to kill a citizen in Boston the company will protect him just as Foty was by the Rail-Light in this city when that worthy murdered a passenger.

BERGER IMPEACHES U. S. JUDGE HANFORD

Files Serious Charges of Personal and Official Mis-Conduct.

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington.—Victor L. Berger, Socialist Representative from Wisconsin, has impeached on the floor of the House Federal Judge Hanford, of Seattle, Washington. Mr. Berger said:

"I rise to a question of privilege of the highest importance. By virtue of my office as a member of the House of Representative, I impeach Cornelius H. Hanford, Judge of the Western District of the State of Washington, of high crimes and misdemeanors.

"I charge him with having annulled, on May 23, 1912, in violation of the Constitution and on an utterly frivolous charge, the naturalization papers of Leonard Oleson.

"I charge him of having been guilty of a long series of unlawful and corrupt decisions.

"I charge him with having issues, in the collusive suit of Augustus Peabody vs. the Seattle, Renton and Southern Railway, in August, 1911, an injunction in the interests of the company and against the interests of the citizens of Seattle flagrantly in violation of justice and law.

"I charge him with being an habitual drunkard.

"I charge him with being morally and temperamentally unfit to hold a judicial position.

"In accordance with former proceedings before the House of Representatives in like cases I submit the following resolution:

"RESOLVED, That the Committee on Judiciary be directed to inquire and report whether the action of this House is necessary concerning the official misconduct of Cornelius H. Hanford; whether he has been repeatedly in a drunken condition while presiding in court; whether he has been guilty of corrupt conduct in office, and whether his administration has resulted in injury and wrong to litigants of his court and to others affected by his decisions.

"That this committee is hereby authorized and empowered to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to employ, if necessary, an additional clerk and stenographer, and to send a sub-committee whenever and wherever necessary to take testimony for the use of said committee.

"That the expenses incurred in this investigation shall be paid out of the cotningent fund of the House."

Berger also submitted specifications to support his proposition of impeach. They are as follows:

"Specification 1. That the annullment of the naturalization certificate of Leonard Oleson was unlawful and an usurption of power by the said Hanford. The said Oleson had obtained his final papers on January 10, 1910. On complaint of a local officer of the Department of Commerce and Labor, without consultation with the department, that Oleson had publicly uttered seditious sentiments, the acting United States District Attorney, also without consultation with his department, brought an action for the annullment of Oleson's certificate. On the trial the defendant denied that he was an anarchist or that he was opposed to organized government. No testimony to the contrary was produced. He admitted that he was a Socialist and that he was in favor of bringing about certain changes in the laws and constitution by the use of the ballot. On the ground of these admissions, and wholly without warrant of law, the said Hanford arbitrarily canceled the said Oleson's certificate of naturalization.

"Specification 2. The said Hanford's reputation for rendering corrupt decisions is a matter of common and long standing notoriety. His record has been published in part in the newspapers of Seattle and Tacoma and in periodicals of National circulation, and has further been proclaimed in mass meeting of 5000 citizens of Seattle assembled to protest against one of his decisions. Sworn testimony regarding his numerous acts of corruption will be placed at the disposal of the committee.

"Specification 3. The injunction issued in the suit of Peabody vs. Seattle, Renton and Southern Railway was fraudulent and dictated by corrupt motives. The mattery pending in this case which concerns street railway fares and transfers, has been settled by certain decisions of the Supreme Court of the State of Washington, and by a formal settlement in court between the contending parties. Thereupon, Augustus Peabody, of Chicago, as trustee of the bondholders of the railway company, in collusion with its officials, instituted suit against his own company, to prevent the carrying out of these decisions. This injunction in effect compelled the people of Seattle to pay fifteen cents transportation charges for what the State courts, after long litigation had decided that they were entitled to get for five cents. It further prohibited the company from carrying a formal stipulation which it had entered into in court, with the city, regarding needjunction aroused public sentiment to a degree which forced the said Hanford to dissolve the injunction shortly afterward.

"Specification 4. The charges of habitual drunkenness in court and of moral and temperamental unfitness to hold a judicial position will be sustained by sworn testimony covering his record on the bench for many years."

The resolution to impeach Hanford was referred to the Committee on Judiciary, of which Representative Clayton, of Alabama, is chairman. It is not likely that the committee will order an investigation of Hanford before the present session of Congress adjourns. However, it is generally believed that Hanford will resign during the recess of Congress rather than face an investigation next December.

Condemns Federal Judiciary.

"The Federal Judiciary of the United States is generally considered by the people to be the last resort of the corporation and the railroads and all kinds of plutocratic evil-doers whenever they are in straits," declared Socialist Representative Berger, in an interview.

"From the Federal Judiciary they have got injunctions and judge-made laws to suit every occasion," said Berger. "Experience has shown that Federal Judges are accustomed to blind their eyes to law, justice and human welfare whenever they have to decide questions regarding the rights of the laboring class.

Pointing out that unlike State judges the Federal judges are appointed for life, Berger said:

"The Federal Judiciary is, therefore, rightly considered as an enemy of our democratic institutions and of the common people."

"The Federal judge is usually appointed upon the recommendation of prominent business men, railroad presidents and wealthy manufacturers. He has often obtained his legal status as a corporation lawyer. As a rule, the very environment of a Federal judge makes him part and parcel of the American aristocracy."

THE SWEAT-SHOP SYSTEM EXPOSED TO PUBLIC VIEW

How Children are Exploited Behind Convent Walls. Assessors' Reports Reveal Real Conditions.

[REPRINTED BY REQUEST]

Socialists generally welcome the "Flag Campaign" now opening all over the country and being pushed to the front by the capitalist class.

We welcome the issue along that line for the opportunity of showing to the unsuspecting public the real motives of the exploiting class, which is to hide the dirty system of exploitation beneath the folds of OLD GLORY. To prove these statements we have had our reporter look up the tax returns of some of the fellows who are closely associated with some of those other fellows who have in the past ranted loud and long about the Red Flag vs. The Stars and Stripes.

The public has not forgotten how D. A. Clark, a certain priest in the Tenth Ward, ripped a hamestring on the eve of election last November in order to vent his spleen against the Socialists, who bid fair to carry the Tenth Ward, and who did, in fact, carry that ward by electing a councilman and assessor. And herein lies the secret of the bitter attack on Socialism by the reverend gentleman above mentioned.

Listen—When the Socialist assessor called on said D. A. Clark that worthy stated that he had nothing to assess and that he had never been assessed for anything he possessed. But under the Socialist way of doing things he came across with $4000.00 taxable property in the name of David A. Clark (the word "Father" was dropped, so we drop it here).

Listen No. 2—When the Socialist assessor and two assistants asked D. A. Clark to go through the convent at the southwest corner of W. Broad St. and Sanduky St., they were refused until an officer was threatened. The said D. A. Clark had also informed the Socialist assessor and his assistants that there was nothing subject to taxation within the high walls of said convent. After reluctantly consenting that the assessors and his assistants could go through, said D. A. Clark refused a request of the assessor to accompany them through. Why? Was it because at every turn he would be met with the monumental evidence of his falsehood when he had a few minutes before told the assessor that there was nothing there subject to taxation. What did the assessors find? To enumerate all they found would be too tedious to mention, but they found enough to place that institution on the tax duplicate for $10,000.00, which, added to the aforesaid $4000.00 on which the city will get $189.00 taxes. We are unable to find where this loud-mouthed opponent of the Red Flag ever paid taxes before and we understand that no assessor ever required him to list his property for taxation. We are also unable to find where those in charge of the convent have ever listed this property for taxation before or were ever required by the assessors to do so. These and such as these are the flannel-mouthed Anarchists who prate about the Red Flag. These are they who sulk behind the protecting sentiment of the Stars and stripes, and on certain roorback occasions slander men and principles, the like of which such as they are not fit to even mention.

What did they find behind those cruel prison walls? Machine after machine owned by a great corporation in the city of Columbus, organized under the protecting laws of the great state of Ohio, the Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Company, located at No. 49 E. Chestnut St., Columbus, O., with Mr. A. W. Hershey, President, and F. C. Rice, Secretary and Treasurer. These machines are used by little children, orphans, waifs and otherwise unfortunates from the age of 10 to 14 years, who work from 6 o'clock in the morning till 6 o'clock in the evening, except during school term, when they work from 6 in the morning to 7 in the evening, with two hours only off for school, but only the loss of one hour a day from labor duties. These unfortunate children operate these capitalistic machines to make overalls and over-jackets for the Hershey-Rice Co., for a price which we dare the said company or said convent authorities to name under oath. What do these children get in return for the long hours of service at a hurry-up speed from the tender age of 10 years till sixteen, and, many at times, longer? Read the affidavit of Agnes Vaughn, which appeared in the columns of the Columbus Socialist last January. These sweat-shop goods into which has been sewed the life blood, brain and brawn of those tender, innocent and unfortunate children, go upon the open market in direct competition with the goods which you, labor union man, and you, labor union girl, are making at a wage which you cannot exist upon, and in order that you might satisfy hunger of the stomach and hunger for affection and love, the unmarried man offers the price and the needy and love-lorn girl accepts the price for her sacred body, only to repent in remorse and curse the system which makes it necessary to sell her soul into shame in order that she may stave off the time a little longer in the hope that some man will consider her worth his affection until death does them separate. Oh! Daughter, if you were free to live on the full fruits of your toil, if you were free to choose your own helpmate, if you were free to say NO to all indecent proposals, then, and not till then, would you be free indeed, and that is the kind of free love which Socialism teaches. That is the free love which is as high above purchased love of the capitalistic ideas as is Heaven above the bottomless pit. But to return to the enemy. The Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Co., is incorporated and capitalized at $150,000.00. Their tax return for the year 1911 shows the following:

Value of office fixtures and furniture	$ 100 00
Average value goods and merchandise	[illegible]
Value all tools and machinery	[illegible]
Value all money in possession and on deposit	[illegible]
Value all credits (mort., real and personal)	[illegible]
Totals of all above	$9136 00

Rather a small showing that for a $150,000 corporation, composed of men who do not invest their money for fun. The Board of Review looked on this return with some little suspicion evidently, as we find that the board made the following additions:

Average value of goods and merchandise	$42,652 00
Value all tools, implements and machinery	2,230 00
Value all moneys in possession and on deposit	850 00
Net amount of credits	11 00
	$45,825 00

The tax return of the Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Co. was sworn to by an officer of the company. The records show who that officer was and we dare him to justify his oath on the return of the assessor.

We have nothing to say about D. A. Clark's religion. He can be a Catholic, Sun Worshiper or a Protestant so far as we are concerned, or, if he please, an infidel. We have nothing to say of the kind of religion the officers of this corporation may be imbued. But we do say that we have serious doubts of the genuineness of any religion which they may espouse when it permits them to do things pointed out here, which we challenge them to disprove.

It is simply astounding to think that a man who calls himself Christian (Reverend Father) will lay himself open to such exposure by making an uncalled-for and wholly unwarranted attack upon an emblem and a body of men whose shoelatches he is unworthy to loosen. It must be humiliating and even galling to come down to a dead level with honest men and make an honest return of property long held in hiding behind high walls, and those men, the very ones he had so recently villified.

There will be much said in this campaign about undesirable citizens, sane administrations, honest dollars, and all such rot, and it will be said by just such as the above-mentioned gentlemen, and this article is partly to serve notice on such that they had better look well to the screening of the glass house in which they live, lest a stray stone shatter a brittle pane and the stench within escape.

AFFIDAVIT

State of Ohio, Franklin County, SS.

Agnes Vaughn, being first duly sworn says she lives with her husband at No. 2070 South High St., Columbus, Ohio; that she was left an orphan from date of birth and was adopted by her aunt, who cared for her until she was twelve years old; that neither her parents nor aunt were Catholics, but opposed to the Catholic faith; that through the influence of Catholic people and Father Silley, of Springfield, Ohio, they succeeded in placing her in the Convent of St. Aloysius Industrial School, Columbus, Ohio, located at the Corner of W. Broad St. and Sandusky St., under Sister Theresa, Mother Superior, of said institution; that she was placed in said institution as being 14 years of age, when in fact she was but 12 years old; that from the time when she entered said so-called school she was required to work six days each week from six o'clock in the morning until six o'clock in the evening, being allowed one hour at noon and two hours after supper for recreation; that she remained in said so-called school for four years, during which she received but little schooling; that the only time she was taught or permitted time to study was during school term from September to May of each year, and then only from 1 to 3 o'clock each day, and was compelled to work one hour over-time on school days; that on Saturdays there being no school was the day of horrible drudgery when she and Mary Vaudin, who was older than affiant, was compelled to carry the filth (stool and urine) from the closets on account of improper sewerage, and that said filth had to be carried by hand in wash tubs to the extreme southwest corner of said premises and dumped in the open near the orchard and cemetery; that said cemetery has about thirty graves; that when a child inmate disobeyed they had to kneel down and after they are punished by whipping the hand (and that she had a thumb bursted in this way by Sister Columbia, for talking in ranks and because she did not cry, Sister Columbia cut off her hair); that after kneeling down the child had to assume the attitude of prayer, kiss the dirty floor and say to the class Mother: "Mother, please forgive me"; that each child was given a certain task for each day and if they failed to perform the task they were punished; that children six to eight years old would have to stand on their feet all day and wind yarn, those doing such tasks would have the flesh cut away to the bone by the yarn; that those somewhat older had to crochet as many as eighteen fascinators per day; that Lucy Wilhelm, a girl paralyzed in one hand, packed the goods so made and once per week shipped same to Cleveland, Ohio, to a Jewish firm; that on one occasion Sister Columbia punished one Agnes McQauid, aged thirteen years, until her shoulders were black and blue for not doing her task; that frequently all children were required to hurry up and finish task and clean up and and placed in class rom and sit quiet and look pretty until finally Judge Tod B. Galloway would come in, play the piano and sing some and sometimes the children would sing; that all the children must look pleased and happy or be reprimanded afterward if they appeared otherwise; that when her time was up Sister Columbia wanted her to go over and be a Magdalen, a class of Nuns who take the vow for one year and who neither mingle with the children or other Nuns; that affiant refused to do so and asked for her release and that her aunt came for her, but she refused to go with her because the Sisters had led her to believe that if she did she would lose her soul because she had embraced the Catholic faith and the aunt was a Portestant; that said Sister secured affiant who was then sixteen years old, a position as general domestic at the Mt. Carmel Hospital, where she remained for one year, and after leaving she was paid the sum of $16 in full for year's services, but that she was told when entering there she would get six dollars per month with clothes, room and meals furnished.

(Signed,) MRS. AGNES VAUGHN.

Sworn to before me by the said Agnes Vaughn and by her subscribed in my presence this 2nd day of January, 1912.

W. C. BATES,
Attorney.

The government is what the people make it. Therefore, if you vote to retain in power those forces which enslave you, it is but natural that your taskmakers will bind you hand and foot, and when there is no blood left they will reduce your bones to fertilizer. A pleasant prospect, is it not?

The coal operators do not fear the power of the miners on the industrial field, but they are greatly concerned how you vote. They will take care that you do not vote for you own interest, because by so doing you will interfere with their little game of skinning you under the guise of an agreement.

Be happy an contented, you wage slaves. Dog dinners are becoming a fashionable fad with the wealthy. The choicest steaks are served to the animals, and the metropolitan newspapers print the pictures of the mongrels for you edification. When you become hungry, just draw the picture, and you will bring to your mind, the result of the capitalist system.

THE FARM PROGRAM.

(In addition to the platform declarations at Indianapolis, the following farm program, embodied in a resolution, was adopted. It shows the practical measures Socialists offer the farmer.)

Article 1.

The retention and constant enlargement of the public domain:

By retaining school and other public lands.

By purchase of arid and overflow lands and the State reclamation of such lands now held by the State or that may be acquired by the State.

By the purchase of all lands sold for the non-payment of taxes.

By the purchase of segregated and unallotted Indian lands.

By the retention of leased lands after the expiration of leases and the payment of the improvements thereon at an appraised valuation.

Article 2.

Separation of the department of agriculture from the political government by means of—

Election of all members and officers of the board of agriculture by the direct vote of the actual farmers.

Introduction of the merit system among the employes.

Article 3.

Erection by the State of grain elevators and warehouses for the storage of farm products; these elevators and warehouses to be managed by the board of agriculture.

Article 4.

Organization by the board of agriculture of free agricultural education and the establishment of model farms.

Article 5.

Encouragement by the board of agriculture of co-operative societies of farmers—

For the buying of seed fertilizer.

For the purchase and common use of implements and machinery.

For the preparing and sale of produce.

For the working of land by groups.

Article 6.

Organization by the State for loans on mortgages and warehouse certificates, the interest charges to cover cost only.

Article 7.

State insurance against disease of animals, diseases of plants, insect pests, hail, flood, storm and fire.

Article 8.

Aid and encouragement to be given the actual workers of the farms in the formation of district co-operative associations which shall be given the power to issue bonds for the purchase of suitable farming lands—bonds to be redeemable in forty years. Individual purchasing such lands shall pay the purchase price of land in share or cash annual or semi-annual rentals extending over a period of forty years, or may at their option pay in full in any given number of years.

Article 9.

Exemption from taxation and execution of dwellings, tools, farm animals, implements and improvements to the amount of one thousand dollars.

Article 10.

A graduated tax on the value of rented land and land held for speculation.

Article 11.

Absentee landlords to assess their own lands, the State reserving the right to purchase such lands at their assessed value plus 10 per cent.

Article 12.

Land now in the possesion of the State or hereafter acquired through purchase, reclamation or tax sales to be rented to landless farmers under the supervision of the board of agriculture at the prevailing rate of share rent or its equivalent. The payment of such rent to cease as soon as the total amount of rent paid is equal to the value of the land and tenant thereby acquires for himself and his children the right of occupancy. The title to all such lands remaining with the commonwealth.

THE WEAKNESS OF CRAFT UNIONISM.

The Circuit Court of Cincinnati handed down a decision reversing the decision of the Common Pleas Court and holding unconstitutional the law, which under Section 12943 of the General Code of Ohio, makes it unlawful for an employer to discharge an employee because he is a member of a trade union. The decision was handed down in the habeas corpus cases of Saul Berger and William Skahn, employees of the Roth Shoe Company and the MacDonald & Kiley Company, who were arrested on charges of having discharged employees because they were members of the United Shoe Workers of America. Circuit Judge Jopes dissented from the opinion, which was concurred in by Judges Smith and Swing. Judge Jones announced that he will hand down a memoranda upon his dissent at a later date.

Judge Gorman, in the Common Pleas Court, held the law constitutional, declaring that, while the question was a close one, it should be decided in favor of the law. The Circuit Court says in part:

"An essential element of the right to enter into a contract of employment is the right of the parties to fix the terms of the employment, and of either party to terminate the employment at pleasure when it is not otherwise agreed upon. When the constitution declares that every person has an inalienable right to liberty and to acquire, possess and protect property, it guarantees to him the right to make and enforce all proper contracts, and to employ, in carrying out his business, such persons and such lawful means as he may choose, free from all restraint, except such as are necessary for the common welfare.

"Upon examination of the authorities mentioned, together with numerous others cited by counsel, we can reach but one conclusion, that the great weight of authorities is that statutes characteristic of the one in question are unconstitutional and void, and we so hold in this case. Demurrer to the answer is sustained."

The decision is of some importance and may have even disastrous results where labor unions organized on the principle of craft unionism are involved. Craft unionism means a more or less open shop, a shop where union men have to work side by side with non-union men and where an employer finds it an easy matter to discharge a union man and hire a non-union man in his place. In the case in question two different organizations of shoe workers are being used by the employers to fight each other. The members of one organization went out on strike and the members of another organization took their places. Both organizations comprise shoe workers but are divided because craft unionism will not permit them to come together. Neither organization is therefore strong enough to hold its own against the employers. In this particular case the political end of the class struggle is in favor of the workers; there is a law preventing an employer from discharging an employee because he is a member of a trade union. Economically the workers are at the mercy of the employers. If all workers in the shoe industry were organized along industrial lines, that organization would be strong enough to prevent discrimination against its members, even if there would be no law making such discrimination unlawful. No employer would think of discharging a man just because he is a member of the union. Industrial organization will do away with the possibility for the employer to employ non-union men. Through its economical power an industrial organization can enforce the re-instatement of a discharged member when there is nothing against him but the fact that he is a member of his union, while an organization based upon strict trades autonomy is powerless to do so. This and the further fact that strict trade autonomy is an incentive to form so-called dual organizations, shows the weakness of craft unionism in the class struggle.—Brewery Workers' Journal.

REPORT ERRONEOUS.

Springfield, Ill.—It has been reported that a conference has been held and an agreement reached at Detroit, Mich., between the regular organization of Electrical Workers and the seceding faction. This report is erroneous, and has no foundation in fact. The local unions of Electrical Workers in Detroit which have, since the split, remained loyal to the Reid or seceding faction, at a conference held recently with the executive officers of the regular organization made a proposition to re-affiliate with the regular organization and it was accepted by the executive board of the McNulty organization.

WHAT IS THE GANG?

It is simply a body of men and women, through political favoritism, operating outside the recognized channels of industry. The gang kills. But not as many, comparatively, as are killed in industry. The gang is organized for the purpose of immediate profits. It works through our present society in the shortest, easiest way. The gang leaders know what they can do politically and they know what they can do in the way of renting houses. So there is but one difficulty in their way, and that is the social opposition to the sale of human beings. As this has long been recognized as a degrading occupation, and as it is exceedingly profitable, it seems almost criminal to interfere with it. But the gang is merely an ever changing body of men who are able to profit by the criminal practices of certain down and out members of society, usually women. That, together with gambling, swindling, robbery, occupy most of the time between elections. When the voting comes around the gang must show why they should or should not retain their power, and make a demonstration of the fact that they are among the sturdy upholders of pure democracy. That is, they have to deliver the goods.

THE SERPENT SHOWS ITS TEETH.

Sir:—Kindly discontinue sending your paper to H. G. Studer, 74 Euclid avenue. It's so full of dirty lies and rottenness that I don't care to have it delivered at my home. I can't see how you ever expect to prosper with such lies on YOUR conscience, or WHOEVER writes the articles against "The Good Shepherd Convent." Thanking you for giving this matter your prompt attention,

Respectfully,
H. G. STUDER, 74 Euclid Ave.

If the brother who writes the above thinks that our articles in reference to the convent sweat shops are "dirty lies," and can prove it, he or the institution has a perfectly clear case against this paper for libel.

Nothing has yet apepared in the columns of this paper but what has been backed up by affidavits, and what has appeared in the past is nothing to what we have on file to use at the proper time.

Every word printed is truth, and these hellish exploiters of child labor know it, and it might perhaps be very enlightening to the American people to have the case aired in court, for just as sure as the sun rises in the east, we will subpoena and drag from behind those prison walls, every little child now held prisoner and allow them to tell their story in open court.

CLASS JUSTICE.

At its last session, the legislature of Ohio was induced to enact a law making it a criminal offense for an employer to discharge an employe for membership in a labor organization.

Three circuit judges at Cleveland, siting en banc, have held the law to be unconstitutional, with one of the judges assenting. The majority of the judges held that the discharge of a workingman is a private matter between the employe and employer in which the legislature has no concern.

We believe that the supreme court of Wisconsin several years ago held a similar statute to be unconstitutional. The same court, however, has held valid a law aimed at boycotting, as can be testified by The Wisconsin, The Sentinel and The News, of Milwaukee, which, falling out with The Journal, were haled into court and their publishers branded as criminals. The supreme court of the United States sutained the ruling of the several courts through which the case passed.

The law was designed to prevent organized workingmen from using the boycott as a weapon and its legality, of course, could not be questioned. But the law to prevent the employer from boycotting workingmen who belonged to labor unions is another thing—it's unconstitutional.

It is natural enough that judges should void laws designed to protect the employe from the employer. His training and his associations and his material interests prompt him to share the views of those who can make or mar his fortunes.

Judges reflect the views and saftguard the interests of big business. It is inevitable that they should do so, for if they should run counter to the interests of those who dominate our financial and industrial life and our political institutions they would immediately become "dangerous characters, incendiaries and revolutionists," to be banned and ostracized.

When Justice Taney said that the negro slave had no rights which his white master was bound to respect, he stated an exact fact, unpleasant as it was to those who insisted that slavery could be made a beneficient institution. In theory, the slave did have rights which could be enforced in law, but in fact the slave, in appealing to the law and the courts, merely appealed to the master from whom he sought redress.

There will be no difficulty in finding laws constitutional that are in the interests of the workingman when the workingman shall become class conscious and shall put judges out of office who decide, as some have decided, that a verdict of $4,000 is excessive for the life of a 10-year-old boy killed by a street railway company, and that $2,000 is enough; or that a workingman with four children to support on a wage of $15 a week is not entitled to the benefits of the law designed to exempt the poor man from giving a $250 bond in appealing to the higher courts.

It is not a question of constitutionality or unconstitutionality. It is merely a question of the bias of judges and of the forces which are dominant in our civilization. When the workers shall unite at the ballot box and take possession of the powers of government for their own uses, they will have no more difficulty in getting judges to find that the constitution is not an unsurmountable obstacle to the enactment of laws to protect them from capitalistic exploitation than they have to get sympathy from a Democratic convention.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

The inability of the daily papers of this city was never more manifest than last Monday in reporting the meeting we held in Schiller park last Sunday.

The reporter on the Journal must have been out to the "doubleheader" at Neil park, and DREAMED the report he made of our meeting. He credited Comrade Eby with things he never said, and then went on to say that Comrade Farrell spoke on the "Growth of Our Organization."

The fact of the matter is, Comrade Farrell was fourteen miles from Schiller park, and did not speak at all. In the evening "THE CITIZEN" reported the same thing, their report being practically a rewrite of the Journal article in the morning.

Had this been a meeting of capitalist politicians, everything would have been reported per schedule, with the possible exception, that they would have cut out all reference to the drunken and disgraceful acts that always characterize a Democratic or Republican meeting.

If the working class want the truth at all times they must back up and support their own press. You Comrades must build up this paper and get it into every home in this city, County and State. Every new subscriber put on means a possible convert to our cause, and if we expect to establish the co-operative commonwealth, we must get the people to read and use their brains. If we do this, and we once get a majority of the voters of this County educated to the principles of Socialism, we need have no fear, as they will go to the ballot box, and vote for their emancipation.

Go after them Comrades, let's make it a clean gain of 2000, by July 1st. WE CAN DO IT. Remember the working class must emancipate themselves.

ON WITH THE FIGHT.

Comrade Michel of the First Ward is some Booster. He slips us five new ones.

Comrade Marquette of the Tenth, eats them alive. Once more we credit him with five.

Comrade Margraf brings in three to help keep the grave-digger busy.

Since "Everybody's Doin' It," Comrade Souder got busy and brought in three.

Attention is called to the fact that we last Monday eve distributed to the delegates at the C. C. C. about 10,000 Red Tickets. If you are out of them, or have never had any, we wish to say that they will be for distribution at your Ward Branch. In making any purchase, always look over the advertising in this paper and purchase from our advertisers, and in this way support the paper. There is no use giving your hard-earned money to the enemy. Use your purchasing power in every possible way, to suport your own movement and this is one of the most effective ways to use it.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

There is not a banker who buys government bonds of a foreign nation that is not guilty of furnishing arms and ammunition that are primarily for the purpose of use against the nation to which the banker owes allegiance and for the subjugation of the laboring masses in all countries at the least excuse. For example: Mexico, Cuba, Tripoli, Belgium. So you see that the patritism of capitalism is like the celibacy of a Tom cat.

Capitalism knows no country except to graft upon labor. Labor should know no country except to emancipate labor by overthrowing capitalism.

The general unrest throughout the civilized world is caused by the greed of capitalism, which thrives under monarchal and republican forms of government alike and the capitalist is protected by the same methods under both forms—the saber and gun.

Who cares for the people's interest? The asphalt pavement on East Broad Street from Taylor Avenue east is worn out. This pavement was guaranteed for ten years. It has been bad from the start and is now gone. The city's interest has been neglected by the servants of the people, since the street extends along the north side of Franklin Park from Franklin Park east to Alum Creek. The city stands to be cuchered out of thousands of dollars, which if saved might be applied to the wages of the common people in the city's employ.

The only constructive work that is needed is to get the workingman to realize that he is the goat of capitalism. He will then butt the daylights out of it by organizing industrially and voting his class into power. We need not concern ourselves about the feelings of our masters. Go after the system that produces masters.

Less than one-third of the population are engaged in agricultural pursuits. In the race for the dollar we have forgotten the most important and necessary requisite of life—food.

Socialists in office are necessary to restrict the greed of capitalism and assist the workers in their fight for the industrial common wealth by organizing them along the plan of modern industry.

THE JUNE REVIEW.

The June number of the International Socialist Review appears with a full account of the recent National Convention of the Socialist Party at Indianapolis and a striking cover, showing the two presidential candidates, Debs and Seidel, in a framework of red. There are intersting articles by W. D. Haywood, John Randolph, Eugene Wood, "John D," and other well known revolutionary writers.

If you want to curb the arrogancy of the Coal Trust why don't you help elect a few more Congressmen on the Socialist ticket? That will throw a fit of fear into the capitalist that will haunt them like a nightmare.

Local Party News

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin County. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

THE CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE

CITY HEADQUARTERS AT 335½ SOUTH HIGH STREET.

HAYWOOD COMMITTEE

The committee in charge of the Haywood meeting will meet next Monday evening at 335½ South High Street. All Comrade who have not settled for tickets should report not later than that date.

PARTY REFERENDUMS

The attention of Socialist Party members is called to the fact that, during the next two weeks they will be called upon to vote upon various State Party questions in their respective Branches and Locals. These issues include the State platform, resolutions, constitution, executive committee, State Secretary and woman's State correspondent.

LOCAL CINCINNATI

Local Cincinnati Socialist party is arranging to publish a newspaper. It will probably be out by Sunday, July 21, the date of the angual picnic of the Hamilton County Comrade at Coney Island, where Comrade Emil Seidel, our candidate for vice president, will speak.

NOTICE TO OHIO LOCALS

The Socialist Publishing Company has several good speakers who will fill dates Fridays, Saturday and Sundays anywhere in Ohio. Terms: Actual expenses and the privilege of boosting the Columbus Socialist. All our speakers are approved by the State Office of the party. Address, The Socialist, 108½ South High St., Columbus, Ohio.

SOCIALIST DRAMATIC CLUB.

The Socialist Dramatic Club will give another entertainment and lecture tomorrow evening (Sunday, June 16) at Red Lion Hall, 335½ South High Street.

Comrade D. J. Ferrell, candidate for the Legislature, will be the speaker. Get the other fellow to thinking by bringing a non-Socialist friend.

Members of the club are asked to bring their cards so they can be ed street improvements. This inchecked up by the committee.

FIRST PARK MEETING.

The first park meeting of this campaign was held last Sunday afternoon at Schiller park and was attended by about 800 people. The principal address was delivered by Comrade A. C. Eby, candidate for the legislature. He gave a clear-cut treatment of the political economic situation. Mrs. Eby gave an original reading, "My Dream," and in response to an encore, "Prayer and Potatoes." Comrade E. B. Lewis, editor of the Socialist, presided and also gave several speeches. The collection netted $11.80. The musical part of the program was supplied by the Socialist band under the efficient leadership of Comrade Galloway.

GRAND FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION.

"The Socialist" is going to hold a Grand Celebration the Fourth of July. Every Booster is going to celebrate by bringing in a bunch of subs. Every sub. brought in will be a giant cracker tied to the tail of capitalism.

Now is the time boys and girls to begin to "line 'em up." Get all the prospects you can and then go out on the Fourth and get them by the dozens, and make it a celebration that we can all remember. Get 'em boys. Line 'em up.

CROWDED ELEVATOR FALLS EIGHT FLOORS

Young Lady Seriously Injured in the Harrison Building.

A crowded elevator in the Harrison building fell eight floors last Monday. Miss Blanche Foster, a stenographer, was seriously injured. This is one of the many "accidents" of this sort. Will it require the sacrifice of scores of human lives before something is done to compel the capitalists who own tall structures to make proper provision for the safety of people compelled to use elevators? In many cases young boys with no experience operate elevators carrying thousands of passengers daily.

The coming change will be the elimination of class and will not be the substitution of one class for another, but will be equality of opportunity and the guarantee that each and every human will labor for his bread and get it. The man working in the trench, the cellar or sweeping the street is doing as necessary and valuable work for the city as the engineer, auditor or the employer. The cant about the money and time spent in fitting the engineer, auditor or any employer is passed. The workers toiled while they lived on the eight parts taken from labor.

RAILWAYS DECIDE TO RESUME EXCURSIONS

Will Grant Low Rates Beginning Probably July 1st.

The railways of Ohio now gravely announce that cheap excursion rates will be again granted about July 1.

Many local railroad passenger officials started for Chicago Tuesday afternoon, to attend a meeting of the Central Passenger association there Wednesday. The general impression among railroad men was that the association would rescind its order abolishing excursions, thereby leaving the way clear for all railroads in Ohio to resume them at once.

The position taken by the state in this matter was that the railroads could not have simultaneously stopped excursions without an unlawful agreement, violating the Sherman anti-trust law. The state demanded that the railroads resume Sunday excursions and threatened prosecution if they did not.

Of course the agitation started by the Socialist against the railway combine had no influence. It is wonderful, however, that everytime The Socialist raises a dust the corporations take some action to counteract the grievance.

AUGLAIZE SOCIALISTS ARE IN ACTION

Two years ago there was one Socialist Local in Auglaize County—St. Marys, which consisted of 21 members. Last Sunday there were 22 delegates present at the County convention representing Wapakoneta, Cridersville, New Bremen and St. Marys, representing 176 members, which shows that Socialism is rapidly dying out in this County.

D. H. Sherman of St. Marys, was elected chairman and Clarence Heil secretary. The following ticket was nominated.

Representative, Ralph A. Burton, St. Marys; Treasurer, Clarence Heil, New Bremen; Auditor, Fred Burton, Wapakoneta; Recorder, A. E. Bennet, St. Marys; Clerk of Court, L. C. Jordon, New Bremen; Probate Judge, Chas. Thomas, St. Marys; Sheriff, F. C. Waldman, Wapakoneta; Commissioners, J. W. Osborn, Noble Township, Fred Grothaus, New Bremen, G. A. Carter, Cridersville.

Plans of conducting the campaign will consist of distributing literature although there will be several prominent Socialist speakers engaged. The congressional convention will probably be held at Lima sometime in June.—St. Marys Socialist.

19TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CONVENTION

Held at Canton, Sunday, June 2nd. W. E. Lelansky Congressional Nominee.

The delegates representing Locals of the Socialist party of Mahoning, Columbiana and Stark Counties, composing the 18th Congressional district of Ohio, met in convention at Canton, Sunday, June 2nd, and nominated the Socialist candidate for Congress for this district.

The convention took up many matters of interest to the members, but the important campaign features were turned over to the campaign committee. The campaign committee will meet at Alliance, Sunday, June 16th, and will outline the work for an aggressive campaign.

Comrade W. E. Lelansky was selected as the candidate to go on the ballot for Congress.

SENATORIAL CONVENTION IS HELD AT WARREN

Socialists of Mahoning and Trumbull Counties Met in Mass Convention At Warren, Thursday, May 30.

George A. Bates Nominated for State Senate.

A mass convention of the Socialists of Mahoning and Trumbull Counties, comprising the 33rd Senatorial district of this State, met at Socialist headquarters, Warren, Ohio, Thursday, May 30. The convention was called to order at 10:30 a. m. by David T. James, of Mineral Ridge, County Organizer for Trumbull County. Joseph Coope of Youngstown was chosen chairman, and E. S. St. John, of Warren, elected secretary.

All present seemed to center on a candidate for Senator from Youngstown. Comrade George A. Bates was nominated unanimously, and called upon to speak. He took the floor and asked all Socialists to work for Socialism and not for votes for him.

The convention adjourned to partake of a bountiful repast prepared by the lady members of Local Warren.

AVERS BABIES ARE SOLD.

Information Shows That Infants Bring From $10 to $100 Each.

Cincinnati, June 6.—Discovery of the alleged wholesale selling of babies at prices ranging from $10 to $100 is the latest development in the war on the baby hospitals headed by R. A. Longman of the Children's Home, last year's president of the State Conference of Charities.

Information in the case of Nora Davis appeared to show that her baby, which has been born in one of these hospitals, was not dead, as she had been notified, but sold. Habeas corpus papers have been drawn up to gain possession of the child.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

W. R. Draper, Socialist member from the West Side, put in resolution, requiring the board to name a special committee of three to investigate the invention of Thomas Edison, wherewith he proposes to teach school children through the medium of moving pictures. The committee is to be named at the next meeting.

The preferential vote on the plan for the payment of teachers' salaries showed a majority favoring the following:

"First pay day at the close of the first two weeks in September and after that, at the end of each period of four school weeks until the close of the schol year in June."

RAIL LIGHT GRACEFULLY BOWS TO PUBLIC DEMAND

Camp Chase Cars Now Run Around the "Loop" As Of Yore.

The Columbus Rail-Light, under the new management of President S. G. McMeen, has made another bid for popular favor. Everybody on the West Side knows what it meant when the Camp Chase line cars ceased to go around the "Loop." It meant that all West Siders, who desired to reach the center of the city, had to do so by changing to a "transfer car," thereby forfeiting their transfer slip. The Columbus Socialist and Socialist Councilmen Bohnert, Wilson, Warren and Zimpfer, manfully fought the plan. The State public utilities commission was appealed to, but without waiting for a hearing the Rail-Light, on Wednesday, restored the direct "Loop" service. President McMeen seems to be wiser than E. K. Stewart, the bankrupt, and knows when to "get off the perch." The Socialist did it with its little hammer.

COUNCIL WILL TEST VALIDITY OF BONDS

Solicitor Bolin To Have Chance To Get In His Work.

First steps toward testing the validity of the grade crossing elimination and light extender bond issue were taken by council last Thursday night when an ordinance directing the mayor and auditor to issue the $700,000 elimination bonds was introduced. After a second reading it was referred to the finance committee, which is expected to recommend it, in compliance with the will of the voters May 31.

After the ordinance is passed the bonds will be placed before the sinking fund trustees, who may ask for a court decision on the legality of the issues, since the polls closed half an hour earlier than the closing time given in the mayor's election proclamation.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES

Saturday, June 22nd, is the date set for our Socialist County convention, which will be held in the beautiful little village of Sugar Grove. The Lancaster delegation will go down on the 1 o'clock train and return at 6:48 p. m. All local readers of the Socialist are invited to go down with us.

Comrades Johnson and Sheets were in Lancaster last week completing arrangements for the convention.

There will be a splendid meeting of Local Lancaster, Sunday, June 16, 2 p. m. standard time. Socialist Hall, corner Washington Ave. and Wheeling St. A program has been provided that will be of interest both to the members and to all visitors.

Comrade Bretz is one of the Comrades who believes in "doing something." This Comrade donates the use of our Hall and has placed in it his large collection of relics, Indian flints, geological specimens, etc. The collection is the result of years of patient and intelligent collecting and never fails to excite the admiration of our visitors. All are invited to attend our meetings every Sunday afternoon, at the close of the meeting Comrade Bretz will be pleased to have you inspect this wonderful collection. Special invitation extended to Columbus Comrades spending the day in Lancaster.

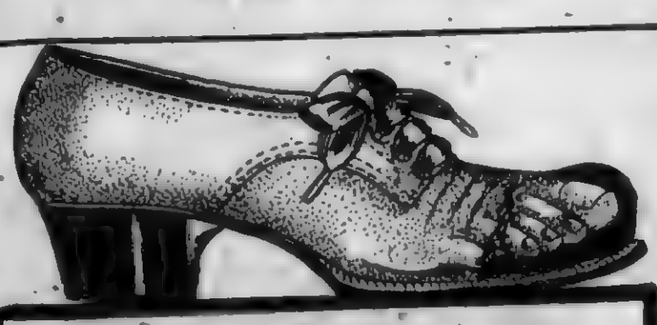
SHOES AS GOOD AS CAN BE MADE

Literally true of every pair of Home Store Shoes—Shoes of the best materials obtainable, of the best workmanship and from the best makers.



Higher priced shoes are made than Home Store kinds, but the increased cost is due to ornamentation. Shoes with diamond buckles for instance would naturally be expensive and yet their wearing goodness and comfort no greater than the best of the moderately priced kind.

Home Store Shoes Are Carefully Gathered.

Not all from one maker—But every pair from a maker noted for some particular excellence of his shoes—Every pair the best possible we can find of their kind. At any time a manufacturer can convince us his shoes are better than the ones we have, we will buy his line—Of this then you may be positive—that every pair of Home Store shoes you buy carry a guarantee of the greatest amount of wearing goodness and comfort, possible to put into a shoe at their price.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

During the month of May, 1911, the National Office received for literature the sum of $554.79. During the same month in 1912 the amount received for literature was $1076.07.

During the first five months of 1911 the receipts for literature were $1842.79. In the same period in 1912, the literature receipts were $3999.59.

The periodical slump in dues came in the month of May, the amount redues in that month being $5042.85, as against $6799.15 in the banner month of April.

The average membership for the first five months of 1912, as indicated by the dues received, is 122,589.

As instructed by the national convention, the National Executive Committee and the candidates for President and Vice President (Debs requested to be excused from voting) have elected from the candidates placed in nomination at the convention the following Campaign Committee:

O. F. Branstetter, W. E. Rodriguez, A. M. Simons, Seymour Stedman and Carl D. Thompson.

The National Executive Committee is voting on a motion by Spargo that all recommendations, requests for instructions, suggestions, etc., emanating from the National Office, shall be made to the committee through the National Secretary, and not directly by subordinate employes in the office.

The comittee is also voting on a motion by Harriman that Arthur Brooks Baker be empowered to investigate the various machines and other equipment necessary or desirable to establish a printing plant for the rapid and cheap manufacture of leaflets, books and pamphlets, with instructions to record and systematize such information, as:

Cost of machine, cash payment required, terms of deferred payments; production capacity, guarantee of manufacturer and where available production records by users of similar machines; labor requirements, number of workers to operate, wages, union regulations; power consumption, size and price of motor equipment, cost of power in various localities; floor space, to operate machine, to handle and store product; maintenance, knife-grinding, roller-casting and all incidental and overhead costs which it is possible to schedule with reasonable accuracy.

The whole investigation and report to cover a plant costing not over $50,000.00 for machines, equipment and installation; and that such investigation be so systematized that experts may be able to pass upon the same; and that there be appropriated for such purposes from the general fund a sum equal to the salary of a first-class printer for such time as is necessary to make such investigation not exceeding two months.

The committee is also voting on a motion by O'Hare to hold a joint meeting of the Executive Committe and the Campaign Committee on June 22, and an amendment by Irvine to hold it on June 15.

The committee has approved the request of the National Secretary that he be authorized to give to each employe of the National Office who has worked six months or more a week's vacation on full pay some time during the season.

The National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party has appointed J. E. Snyder to act as a General Secretary Organizer for a period of six months in the following states: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia, provided, of course, that the State organizations give their consent.

Headquarters will be established at several points and Comrade Snyder will endeavor to keep in touch with all the locals in the entire South during the six months as well as planning out campaigns for speakers who live in the different states. Many locals can be organized by mail and this will be pushed.

The Southland is ready for Socialist propaganda and organization.

Self-organized locals are the best locals as a rule and Comrade Snyder is especially proficient in getting the rank and file to help themselves into systematic organization. He has served the party in many different capacities in the past twelve years, being State Secretary of Oklahoma and Kansas, National Organizer in nearly half the states in the union, and has worked on several Socialist papers.

Comrades who are willing to do organization work, lecture, or aid in any other way should get in touch with Comrade Snyder at once. Not a moment of the six months should be lost.

Address all communications until further notice to J. E. Snyder, care National Office Socialist Party, 111 North Market Street, Chicago, and they will be forwarded.

The ballots for Referendum B, 1912—the platform, resolutions and constitution adopted by the National Convention—are now being printed and will be shipped to the State Secretaries as soon as ready.

Campaign Manager Barnes has called the Campaign Committee to meet at the National Headquarters Saturday, June 15. The candidates for President and Vice President are also expected to be present, as they speak at the opening of the campaign at Riverview Park the following day.

JOHN M. WORK,
National Secretary.

SEATTLE ATTORNEY MAKES CHARGES AGAINST HANFORD

Evidence Comes to Support the Fight of Congressman Berger.

Washington, June 10.—Declaring Federal Judge Cornelius H. Hanford, of Seattle, is a "judicial pervert, a moral bankrupt and a tool of corporations and special privilege," Attorney John H. Perry, of Seattle, Wash., today filed with Representative Norris (Rep., Neb.) an affidavit to supplement the impeachment charges already filed against the magistrate by Socialist Congressman Berger.

"Nine specifications" of alleged misconduct are made by Perry against Hanford. That Hanford has violated his oath to give equal justice to rich and poor alike is Perry's first indictment. Perry also includes the charge that Hanford was the "corrupt tool" of the Seattle, Renton and Southern Rajway in granting an injunction against lowering of street car fares.

Agent of Politicians.

A new charge is that Hanford, as the "agent of corrupt politicians" enjoined the "recall election" in Seattle, March 7, 1911, when the removal of Mayor Hiram Gill was sought.

A more serious charge is that Hanford "conspired" with Attorneys Carry and and McCord, of Seattle, in bankruptcy proceedings in 1906, in which the Alaska Packers' Association was intersted. Perry also asserts that Hanford gave the attorneys a receiver's fee of $140,000 and then all three organized the Hanford Irrigation and Power Company. That the attorneys were "commercially and financially" associated with the judge, is charged.

That Hanford, on motion of the attorneys, later set aside a judgment of $12,000 which a Russian named Melovich, secured against the Stone and Webster corporation for the loss of an arm, is another charge. Other general charges made sweeping allegations of judicial and personal corruption, Perry declaring Hanford "has lost the confidence of law-abiding citizens."

DUNKLEMANN GETS REAL MAD AND WRITES US

If You Don't Like What He Says Find Him and Kick Him

June 7, 1912.

Mr. Editor:—I got kinder mad at you las weak the way you talked abot my ideas. Il tel you fer your onw benifit thet ther hant no bodie responsible fer em. If you fellers wod jist lisen to reson you wod be alright but the truble is you always got a bee in your bonnit bout something thet dont konsern you at all.

Thet feller sayin that a laberin man dont git but 16 cents out of every cartwheal he earns. Dont he no thet thet is the only way you can keep a man workin all the time. Jist let the laberin feller alone. Hant he pruved to you thet he likes it? To hell with his entrest, if he dont no enof to vote fer wots good fer him. Jist member thet magorities rule all the time as as long as the most o fem wont the rebuncocrat politikal fellers to look after thear entrest, keep mum.

An say old man the way you proclate the goodnis sof Mayer Carb in lettin you fellers hav a meetin at Shiller park. You ought to be ashamed to be seen on the street. Talk abot ownin thet park jist as if Carb hant got the right to say who can go thear.

I see you makin a sultin remarck abot the streat being owned by the streat car cumpanie. Fer the Lords sake, hant they payin fer em? Hant they got a franshize? An they be fixed to hold thear rights to. Did you ever see them nice purty bumpers on the ends o them streat cars? Its a wonder thet som of you fellers wodent want em to put aprens on them cars same as they hev in most every other town in the countries? I spose the reson you hant said any thing is caus you no its a humane thing to hev the cars fixed so thet a feller whot gits hit with one wont suffer much. It helps out the undertaker an then ther are to many fellers with flat wheels in this countrie any way.

I had a awful dream the other night an Im goin to hev som body right it out an send it to you. It was all abot a ant whot wriggled in to a naught whole an took a grain of korn an wriggled out agin. I bin skraching fer ants ever since an since I got a gruge on the Socialist I want to see if I can make them skrach a little on thear on hook.

Yours Truely,
J. J. DUNKLEMANN.

Dont forget thet I got to us in my name.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

The constitutional convention completed its work Thursday of this week. The adjournment of the convention was delayed in order to allow the committee on submission to prepare its address to the people.

The only changes made in the report of proposals heretofore submitted is the changes made in the I. & R. and Judicial Reform. The radical delegates, whilst unable to get the direct initiative form material approved the indirect by securing the 3 per cent initiative to petition for a bill then a requirement that another 3 per cent shall be required to put it up to a referendum vote in case the assembly refuses to pass it. This is so very much better than what the other was that the delegates are receiving congratulations from the I. & R. men all around the State.

On Judicial Reform the changes made adds one judge to the Supreme Court and the making of one of them a Chief Judge with supervision over all of the inferior courts.

The plans for submission as adopted by the convention provides that with the exception of the license proposal all of the proposals will be submitted on one ballot with a title and the number of article and section of constitution marked in regular form.

Labor men tried hard to secure an official slip at the top whereby the voters could vote for them all with one mark if he wanted to with request that if he wanted to vote against any of them he could go down the column and put his "X" wherever he did not want to vote for that one, but could only get about 30 votes to the plan.

The committee on submission has recommended that the pamphlet be prepared with the facts similar with the pledge on the other pages. The full page to contain the various ammendments with an explanatory statement added to each proposal so that the voter may be made acquainted with its contents. These pamphlets are to mailed to every voter in the state besides being given to organizations for distribution. The recommendation is subject to approval of the convention when they get together for work on Thursday and there is not much anticipation that there will be much opposition to it.

The State Federation Executive Board will meet in the near future to map out the campaign. In the meantime the Central bodies and unions will take up the recommendation made at the State conference May 19th, and commence to form County organization and get prepared to get out all the necessary propaganda needed to get the voter to the pools election day, which will be the day following labor day, Sept. 3rd. Also plan to have some one address them on the constitutional convention on labor day.

Yours truly,
HARRY D. THOMAS.

TO PROSECUTE VIGILANTES

San Diego, Cal.—It is understood that as a result of the investigation made by a representative of Governor Johnson in reference to distrubances in this city, that the governor will commence legal proceedings against the so-called vigilantes of this city. The report further states that the governor made the following statement: "If San Diego wishes the aid of the state in any just cause, most cheerfully will that aid, upon request, be accorded, but just as certainly will the aid of the state be extended to any man, however humble and feeble, whose lives are trampled upon in San Diego, and with exactly the same alacrity will the state endeavor to provide redress for those whose liberty has ben wantonly violated."

ENGLISH DOCK STRIKE

Washington.—From information just received from London, it is reported that there are practically 115,000 men who are idle along the Thames and Medway Rivers. This large number includes dockers, carmen, seamen, firemen and members of the building trades. It is also stated that there is a steady increase coming to the ranks of the strikers, with the Sailors and Firemen's Union actively engaged in augmenting the strike numbers by including members of the union, arriving on incoming steamers to join the strike. News of an authentic character as to the prospects of a settlement is lacking.

COURT DECISION MENACE TO RELIGIOUS ORDERS

Award of Dead Priest's Estate to His Relatives Is Appealed to Highest Tribunal.

Washington—To save religious orders, particularly of the Catholic church, from threatened disinegration, attorneys of the Order of St. Benedict, of New Jersey, today asked the Supreme Court of the United States to review the recent decision of the Eighth United States Circuit Court of Appeals that the agreement of a monk to convey all his property to his order was void, as against public policy.

The decision was made in the case of Father Augustin Wirth, for 50 years a member of the Benedictine Order.

The court held that his relatives, rather than the order to whom he had made vows of chastity, poverty and obedience, were entitled to the $5000 property in his name when he died.

SOCIALIST METHODS.

The Socialist movement is attracting a great deal of atention in the United States, and as it is part of a rapidly growing organization, worldwide in its scope, it should be carefully studied both as to its principles and methods, by all who would keep abreast of the times, and be fitted to weigh a nation's problems in intelligent citizenship.

Organization.

The executive of the World-movement for Socialism is the International Socialist Bureau located at Brussels, Belgium, with a permanent secretary and representatives drawn from the Socialist parties of the following countries: England, Germany, Bulgaria, Denmark, Spain, United States, Finland, France, Holland, Hungaria, Italy, Japan, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland and Servia.

The last session of the International Congress was held at Stuttgart, Germany, August, 1907, and the last meeting of the Bureau convened at Brussels, Belgium, November, 1909, when a program announced in advance was considered.

In the United States the Socialist Party has regular State and territorial organizations in forty-two (42) States and territories. A number of the organized States have State Secretaries who give their entire time to details of agitation and organization. Local organizations, reporting directly to the National Office, exist in all other States. In unorganized States wheg a sufficient number of Local organizations have been secured State organizations are established.

A STUDY OF SOCIALIST METHODS WILL SHOW SOMETHING DISTINCTIVELY ORIGINAL IN AMERICAN POLITICS.

To become a member of the Socialist Party and be entitled to participate in party government, one must sign an application form endorsing the constitution and platform of the party, and proclaim severance of all relations with any other political party.

If accepted by majority vote of the Local, the member is furnished a membership card which is arranged to have pasted to it monthly dues stamps—and these stamps attached to the members card are the sole basis of membership rights within the party. The dues system is a most simple and effective method of financing the organization, and reduces the labor of accounting to a minimum. The dues system makes the mass membership responsible for the party's financing and prevents individual members from desiring or assuming a right to special privileges, on the strength of being necessary to the party because of their ability to "foot the bills"—a condition recognized as a part of the "practical politics" of all other political organizations.

National Headquarters.

The National Secretary issues Dues Stamps at five (5) cents each to state organizations; they in turn issue the Dues Stamps to local organizations at a slightly increased price, and the local secretaries give them to members at a price fixed by the Local organization (usually at 25 cents each), as a receipt for monthly dues.

All transactions within the party being on a cash basis, the individual in paying dues is assured that each division of the party has received its proportion of his payment.

Initiative and Referendum.

The party membership in good standing decide by referendum vote on time and place of holding conventoins, and at all times have the power to initiate a vote to change the party law or remove party officials. Another democratic practice is that there is no such officer as permanent chairman or president, either of local, state national or international bodies. Whenever a body meets it votes for the selection of a presiding officer, and if more than one session is held a chairman is selected by vote at each session. This tends to prevent the abuse of power by the wielder of the gavel.

In nominating candidates for public offices the Socialist require the nominee to sign a resignation of the office with blank date which is placed in the hands of the local organization to be dated and presented to the proper officer in case the candidate be elected and fails to adhere to the platform, constitution or mandates of the membership.

Women are admitted to membership on the same basis as men, and participate as party officials and delegates, have their own National Committee and conduct the affairs of this organization as does the National Committee of the party.

Party Finances.

There is issued from the National Office a "Weekly Bulletin" giving a summary of the past week's activities. The National Secretary also publishes each month an "Official Bulletin" which goes to the membership through state and local secretaries. Monthly financial reports showing receipts and expenditures, also annual reports, the published in the bulletins. The report for the year 1909 (see January Bulletin 1910) shows total receipts through the National Office of $36,721.97.

The Socialist Press.

The growth and spread of the Socialist press within the last few years have been little short of marvelous, and the promise of substantial gains both in numbers and influence is significant of the awakening social conscience.

The American movement (January 1, 1910) supports nine daily papers, above forty weeklies and eleven monthly publications. Many of these are printed in languages other than English. If you speak a foreign tongue, a letter to the National Office stating your nationality will bring you information regarding Socialist papers or literature printed in your language.

Where Socialists Participate in Government.

The following table showing the number of Socialist representatives in the various National Parliaments and the party vote, tabulated from returns up to October, 1909, does not include results of elections held during the fall and winter 1909—1910, in which elections the Socialist representation was materially strengthened:

BERGER DISSECTS GOMPER'S POLITICS

It Means Selling Out to the Highest Bidder Declares Socialist Congressman

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington. — "The politics of Samuel Gompers is a continual trade of trades union men with politicians. It means selling out to the highest bidder. It leads to dishonesty and demoralization."

This is the reply of Socialist Representative Berger to an editorial in the June Federationist, bearing the signature of Samuel Gompers. This editorial sneers at the tactics and principles of the Socialist party and lauds in extravagant terms the so-called "union card" men in Congress.

"Gompers published that editorial in the desperate hope of keeping his followers from joining the advancing and invincible Socialist movement and instead to have them become the tail end of the Democratic party," declared Berger. "There have been so many desertions from his reactionary camp that he thought it would be wise to scop up a list of imaginary achievements by his impotent 'labor group.' Anybody in Washington who knows anything about Congress knows that the record he published of these labor politicians is pure fake.

"Outside of the A. F. of L. Office nobody knows that there is such a thing as a 'labor group' in Congress. The so-called 'card men' are neither fifteen nor a group. Never since I have been in Congress have the 'fifteen card men' taken an independent parliamentary position. They do not sit together nor do they stand together. They are scattered and act according to the dictates of the capitalist party to which they belong within and without the House. They have no representation on committees either as a party or as a group. They have no spokesman. They are simply in Congress and they want to be re-elected. And Gompers knows this. He helps them to get re-elected. They help him to fool gullible trade unionists."

Berger pointed out in his statement that no list of the so-called union card men and their union affiliations is printed in that editorial. He declares that with two or three exceptions who have been union officials these Congressmen have been lawyers, merchants and real estate men before they were elected to office. Some of them, he said, hold only honorary union cards such as have been presented to Theodore Roosevelt and President Taft. And even then Gompers could not count ten men, said Berger.

"To claim that these men, Republicans and Democrats, each obeying his respective bell-wether, should have accomplished that long list of legislation is ridiculous," continued Berger. "It is in itself the best proof that Gompers has issued a campaign statement for his own re-election as president of the American Federation of Labor. Judging from Gompers' pronunciamento one would think that all acts of Congress, passed by nearly five hundred members, have been passed because Sam had his fifteen 'trusties' on the job.

"Here are some of the things which Gompers arrogantly claims as being the legislative fruits of "my policy":

"The resolution for the election of Senators by the people.

"The law against the use of white phosphorous in the manufacture of matches.

"The law establishing the Children's Bureau.

"How ridiculous! The first measure certainly is a popular measure, advocated in this country by all classes of people for more than forty years. The "phossy jaw" law was furthered mainly by the American Association for Labor Legislation and the Diamond Match Company. The Children's Bureau law was passed by Congress only after it had been modified a great deal by the National Child Labor Committee, its sponsors.

"As to the eight-hour bill, no one will assert that this measure is something original or new. The present eight-hour measure is simply a revision of statutes existing since 1868. These needed correction because of frequent court dicisions. And a Democratic House and a Republican Senate passed the measure because it was neither new nor a radical request.

"It is interesting to not that most of the 'great achievements' consist simply of favorable reports by the Labor Committtee of the House. But is a far cry from a favorable report of an uninfluential committee to the placing of the Presidential signature on a new law."

Referring to Gompers' remarks regarding the passage of the Clayton anti-injunction bill by the House, Berger said:

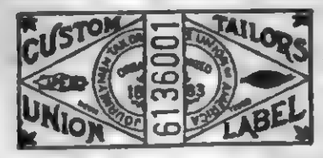
"The bill shows on its face that it is a campaign document. It was held back by the Democrats until the eleventh hour and then passed by all because they knew that it would never pass the Senate. The vote of 243 to 31 proves conclusively that Democrats and Republicans alike seized upon this measure as a means to corral labor votes. The Clayton bill was not satisfactory to Gompers. It will not remedy the injunction evil. And Gompers accepted it because it was all he could get.

"By the way, even a tyro in national politics knows that real labor measures will not and can not be passed by the present Congress. And Gompers is not a tyro in politics. He has been playing capitalist politics for years while to Socialism he yelled, 'No politics in the union.'

"His gratuitous remarks regarding 'political faddists and theorists' are easily unedrstood. Gompers knows and so does everybody else that these 'theorists' have to date prevented him from carrying out his desire to deliver the labor vote bodily to the capitalist politicians that dominate the Democratic party.

"This is the cold fact. And it also explains the following bit of advice of Gompers who would like to sell the working class for a mess of pottage:

"'Don't be deluded by fanciful political programs that assume to transport the labor movement to some Utopian land of promise. Strive for the better day today. Material and actual results constitute the ethics of trade unionists.'



"The material and actual results accomplished by Sam Gompers and his satellites are mere bombast. Courts still issue injunctions against organizations of the working class. Labor is still the helpless prey of the exploiters. Millions are still out of a job. And these conditions will continue so long as American workingmen will follow tactics which have been repudiated by the workers of all civilized nations simply to provide Sam Gompers with a job."

CONVENT EXPERIENCE OF GLADYS CRAWFORD

"Casey Jones" and four times for talking in the tunnel; that affiant had a letter from her mother torn up by Assistant Sister Superior before she got to read it but after read by said sister because she danced in the hall; that affiant was sick for four weeks during lent with rheumatism and she got no medical attention and was not permitted to write to her mother; that there were several letters her mother tells her she wrote she never got and several letters were only given her in parts and the other parts were kept from her; that in the laundry the girls heads were infected with vermin and that affiant tried to keep fine comb to prevent same getting in her hair and because she spent some time combing her hair the "Sister Barber" showed her a long pair of shears and told her if she did not quit spending so much time combing her hair she would get her pretty hair cut off; affiant said many of the girls have their hair cut off in chunks as punishment for violating some rule; that there are some fifty women in said convent above the age of forty years and some even as old as eighty years who have been there all their lives, there being no one to see to their release and they seem to know no difference; that affiant had to wear her underclothes from two to three weeks and that her bed was changed only once a month; that those who came to the "Big Class" from the "Infantile Department" told affiant that there were some two hundred children in that department from the age of two years old to the age of fifteen years working at various things, the smaller infants two and three years old doing regular tasks at crochetting, etc., while the older children were set at regular tasks sewing on the power machines making overalls and jackets who were compelled to work for ten hours per day and six days per week; that all the inmates had to take their turn at scrubbing in the laundry twice each week and in the sewing room once a week; that in one dormatory there were seventy-five girls all in one room with single cots with space of about two feet around each cot; that about twenty-five of the oldest women slept in another room and that there were one hundred girls in the room with affiant with cots located as in other rooms; that there was only one fire escape on the whole building of four stories; that the windows of the room in which affiant and the other ninety-nine slept were always closed and said windows were painted with white paint so no one could see out; that there was no ventilation; that said room was on the fourth floor of said building; that all of said sleeping rooms were on the fourth floor of said building; that none of said girls were allowed to talk and there was a sister in the sleeping room until the "Grand Silence Bell" would ring about nine o'clock p. m.; that affiant of her own accord took two baths one week and the sister made her go without a bath for two weeks to make up for it and in order to do so locked the bath room and all had to get key of her before they could take bath and that affiant asked for key each day but was refused; that after the first meal on the day when she arrived at said convent the meals consisted of the following: that for breakfast the menu was two slices of white bread-made black by use of salt petre (so stated by "Consecrated Virginia"), chickory as substitute for coffee, very bad quality of butterine (but few girls could eat it); that for dinner they had same kind of coffee, beef boiled in water and salt, no buter, two slices of same kind of bread; that for supper they had same kind of coffee, rice with salt, but no sugar or milk, two slices fos mae kind of bread; that on Thursday night and Sunday night they got hash instead of rice, otherwise the meals were the same on all days; that affiant and the others in her class got two and one-half hours each day for recreation, one-half hour at noon and two hours between 6:30 and 8:30 p. m. in the class room (not school room) in which the windows are painted and kept closed and during which time they are not permitted to talk of the past but only of the present and future; that Father Brickmeyer is the priest in charge of said institution; that affiant knew nothing of her release until the day she got out and not then, till 12:30 p. m. and was released at 2 o'clock to return to Columbus in charge of Mrs. Leanderw, of the Franklin County Juvenile Court, and landed in the Detention Home at 6:30 p. m. same day (May 4, 1912), and held prisoner till Sunday morning at 6:30 a. m., when she was released and put in charge of H. L. Richards, attorney, of Columbus, Ohio; that said H. L. Richards asked affiant about the convent rules and other particulars and she told him the same as herein stated except not so much in detail or extensive; affiant further states that within two weeks after she entered said convent she began to have a peculiar feeling and depression of mind and could not remember things, even forgetting her friends, parents and things of interest that had happened just before she was arrested; that she felt like one who was doped and that she firmly believes the food that she and the other girls ate was doped and that it tasted peculiar to her and that the salt petre said to be put in said bread was some sort of stuff intended to affect the minds of the inmates, and that further affiant saith not for want of time.

Signed,

GLADYS CRAWFORD.

Sworn to before me by said Gladys Crawford and by her subscribed in my presence this 25th day of May, 1912.

(Seal) R. B. McCRORY,
Notary Public, R. C. O.

Columbus, Ohio, May 29, 1912.
To Editor The Socialist.

Dear Comrade:—In connection with the arrest and incarceration of Gladys Crawford will say that soon after she was sentenced to the convent at Cincinnati, O., I was called upon in a professional way to look up the records of her arrest and trial and imprisonment and beg to submit the following facts taken from the records of the Juvenile Court, No. 50 East Mound Street, Columbus, O.:

November 18, 1911. Affidavit of Virginia M. Murray sworn to against Gladys Crawford.

November 21, 1911. Affidavit against Gladys Crawford filed.

November 21, 1911. Citation issued for minor and custodian and case set for hearing November 21, 1911, at 9 o'clock a. m.

November 21, 1911. Case continued to November 24, 1911, at 9 a. m. Held in custody.

November 24, 1911. Placed on probation.

December 19, 1911. Brought in by police for visiting wine room. Sentence dto Convent at Price Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio.

December 20, 1911. Warrant of removal issued by sheriff.

December 21, 1911. Warrant executed.

In connection with the court records but not of records we find on loose sheets what purports to be the doings of Virginia M. Murray, Chief Officer of the Juvenile Court, the following.

"Gladys Crawford.

December 18, 1911. Gladys and Bartlett were found in the toilet of a wine room by police officers about 10:15 p. m.

December 18, 1911. Police claim Marie has been visiting that neighborhood recently a good deal. Gladys recently got a job in Kresge's and when they were found a woman who clerks in Kresge's was with the girls. The judge said said their sentence to the convent should be enforced.

(Reader, do not fail to read the balance of this report.)

December 7, 1912. Visited Gladys. Had gone to hospital to see sick friend. Mother at home. Home poor though fairly comfortable. Have a boarder named Penn.

December 20, 1912. Mr. Crawford called at the office, said she had been married to Penn. Parents religion 'Baptist.'

(Physical condition good.)"

These statements as registered in the office of the Juvenile Court were intended as correct and true statements made in actual pursuance of the duties of the chief officer of said court. But when we see the date of "December 7, 1912," which has not yet arrived; when we see the date of "December 20, 1912," which has not arrived even yet, what is the natural conclusion that we come to. It is this that those records were not made up at the time. That there had been no investigation of the case of Gladys Crawford before she was sentenced to said convent and only after a howl had been made by the friends of the girl through "The Socialist" that the said "Virginia" got busy and tries to cover up the lack of duty on her part by making the record up after the dirt had been done. Along some time in the year 1913 she makes up this record after she had become accustomed to writing "1912" and so she wrote December 7, 1912, and December 20, 1912, and it is not only June, 1912, and December 7 and 20, 1912, is still af rinto the future. No wonder Miss Virginia was incensed at the release of Gladys Crawford and called the Rev. T. G. Eiswald, C. H. Huston, attorney, and others of Mansfield, Ohio, "trash" and like names.

Yours truly,
W. C. BATES, Atorney.

Exactly as Shown in Cut

An Offer that will appeal to Home Lovers

Of What the Set Consists

Four Pieces. Library Table, arm chair, arm rocker and reception chair. The rocker and arm chair are exceptionally large and comfortable, the reception chair, while smaller, is a necessary article in the den or library and the table which is fitted with a drawer, completes the outfit, and all are included at the price of $14.50

And one that further marks the house of May & Company as premier bargain givers. Read carefully the following paragraphs, as they give you an honest description of what we justly claim is the greatest bargain values ever offered the people of Columbus.

The Construction

Every detail in the construction of these sets has been carefully looked after. They are made by one of the foremost manufacturers in New York state, who employ only first-class mechanics and every piece reflects the high standard and character for which this concern is far famed. You may rest assured that these sets will give a lifetime of service.

The Finish

We can furnish this set in either the EARLY ENGLISH or FUMED Finish. These two finishes are most modern and absolutely correct for mission style furniture. Early English or Fumed are particularly well adapted to oak, and further, the work is done by skilled finishers, whose methods enable them to reproduce the old mission finishes in an authentic manner.

The Table

We wish to call your especial attention to the table which is thirty-six inches long and is made in reproduction of one of the highest-priced tables on the market. The top is covered with Spanish morocco-like leather, finished along the edge with leather-covered tacks. It has a broad lower shelf which will answer nicely for magazines and periodicals.

The Price $14.50

This price would be impossible were it not for the fact that we, in conjunction with our associate houses, contracted for nearly ten thousand of these sets. Merchandise purchased in these immense quantities carry great price concessions, as you will readily understand and these savings we pass on to you.

ATTENTION ASKED TO ATTESTED ALLEGATIONS

Some More Light Thrown Upon Apparent Connection Between Courts and Convent Sweat-Shops.

Is there no power over those brutal rich men in this country who either use their own money, or are willing stewards of the funds of certain so-called religious institutions founded on the principle of exploiting childhood, not only of the products of their toil, but of health, education, virtue and Christianity, for the pay such an unwholy alliance brings to them?

Is there no Hand that can stay the greed and avarice of public officials who are in league with certain institutions in this country which are reaching out with a thousand grasping hands, the youth of the land in its vulture like maw, matching your girl and other girls, unfortunates of the working class and without trial, formality or hearing of those timid, scared girls or their parents or friends, sentenced to imprisonment until released in these high-walled dungeons, controlled by the Pope of Rome, the Sisters of the Cloyster of France or some other foreign power or Potentate; there to work more hours per day than the State law warrants, under conditions of health and safety, which the law condemns and there to be housed in hot-beds of filth and virmin and fed on food beguiled or pilferred from the refuse of the market places and the already condemned food drugged with some sort of dope to destroy all sensibility of ambition, desire or incentive.

The capitalistic institutions known as the Gibson House, the Grand Hotel, Schueller's Cafe, the Country Club etc., of Cincinnati, Ohio, lend themselves as willing tools to help foster and perpetrate the sweat-shop laundry in Price Hill convent where 300 girls, snatched from the working class, are held and driven slave-like to do laundrying in competition with the women and girls outside who have families to support, and these 300 females from 14 to 80 years old, all sleeping on the fourth floor in three room with but one fire escape, where the exit to the fire escape is constantly locked to prevent these female prisoners from escaping.

The $150,000 capitalistic Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ohio, knowingly, willingly and gladly accepts the profits off of 68 power sewing machines in the convent at Broad and Sandusky streets, operated by girls under 16 years of age in open violation of the State law, right under the nose of the State Inspector of Workshops and Factories and within a stone's throw of the Attorney General of the State who happens not to be a protestant.

This institution is within five minutes' ride of the Governor of Ohio, who seeks the nomination for President of the United States at the hands of M. A. Daugherty of Lancaster, Ohio, who also is not a Protestant, but a Catholic, who says Socialism shall not be mentioned in Fairfield County, Ohio, nor have any standing in her Courts.

Who is responsible for this flagrant violation of all prison laws, to say nothing of the violation of the laws of God and common decency?

Has the Chief Inspector of Workshops and Factories no jurisdiction over these sweat-shops? Has the Catholic Attorney General no authority to order an inspection of these religious prisons of infantile producers of his personal Christian faith?

Does Governor Harmon so fear the loss of some Catholic votes, much needed to make a semblance of show for his candidacy that he dare not interest himself in humanity at this time?

Is there no way by which a drunken, brutal, corrupt official can be prevented from conspiring with renegade and degenerate detectives, who lie in wait to decoy, ensnare and entrap unsophisticated and unsuspecting minor females into wine rooms and houses of ill repute that they may be brought before the Court and sentenced without trial, hearing or formality to these disease-breeding convents, infested with filth, lice, bugs and brutal attendants called mothers and sisters, etc., who have no more the instincts of a mother or sister than a Hyena has of the instincts of a turtle dove.

What father, mother or sister even though raised in the Catholic faith would compel their sweet-faced baby girl to kiss a clean floor, much less a dirty laundry floor, for some trifling misdeed? By doing so, how much Catholic religion does that girl imbibe?

What father or mother (we mean real fathers and mothers) would work a child 10 to 12 hours each day, under the lash, and then feed them on half rotten food doped with salt petre and put them to sleep in beds infested with lice, bugs and cock roaches? And yet the above is only a feeble description of the Hell-Holes to which Judge Samuel L. Black is constantly sentencing sweet and, we believe, in most cases, innocent females to lives of toil and torture and all for what reason?

The following affidavit, covering several letters, the originals of which, together with other affidavits, names and addresses of willing witnesses, etc., are securely held by us against theft, will give the thousands of readers of this paper some idea of the cause of perverted human nature of a Judge of whom it should be said was a father to the orphan, and adviser to the widow and a counsellor to the erring.

Read this affidavit and these letters.

AFFIDAVIT

State of Ohio, Franklin County, SS.

Mrs. Dean (Rose) Penn, formerly Mrs. Rose Crawford of Columbus, Ohio, but now of Mansfield, Ohio, being first duly sworn says she moved from Columbus, Ohio, first to Alexandria, O., from there to Mansfield; that she is the mother of Gladys Crawford, who was sentenced to the Catholic Convent at Price Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio, on or about December 20th, 1911 by Judge Samuel L. Black of the Probate Court of Franklin County, Ohio, where she has since remained; until the 4th day of May, 1912, when she was released under the circumstances hereinafter set forth; that on or about the 22nd day of December 1911, this affiant called at the office of Richards and Richards and there held consultation with H. L. Richards, attorney, regarding the release and return of Gladys Crawford to Columbus from said Convent as to how soon it could be taken up and the costs of procuring her release in which conversation said Richards said, "I can get your daughter out of the convent in a short time but it will cost fifty dollars; affiant says she replied that $50.00 seemed like too much and was more than she was able to raise; that said Richards suggested she might get some friends to help her raise the money; that said Richards also replied, "Of course you know that Judge Black gets a pull out of this," and "I will have to work through another party"; that affiant was not able to raise all of said money at one time and had to wait till she could save up the amount necessary; that since the 22nd, day of December, aforesaid, she has had the following letters from said H. L. Richards and from said Richards and Richards, Attorneys:

March 6th, 1912,
Mr. Dean Penn:

Dear Sir—In regard to getting Mrs. Penn's daughter out of the convent will say that I told her that I could get her out, I thought, through some outside influence if she could raise $50.00. I am not at liberty to say just what was necessary. But I have investigated the matter and presented our proposition and after some trouble I have obtained results. Gladys can be gotten out at once if you will do as I advise. First—the money must be ready as soon as the papers are made out. Second—Mrs. Penn must go to Mansfield and get signed statements as to the character and general reputation of her sister to whom Gladys is to be sent. This form must be gone through with in order to show that she will be in good hands. Tell Mrs. Penn that she had better go to Mansfield at once and get statements from people who know her sister stating that she is of good character and a fit person to be intrusted with the care of a young girl. The more prominent people the better. Bring or send these to me and to have the money on hand as this is the prime factor to the people I am dealing with. Hoping to hear from you at once I remain,

Very Truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS,

March 7th, 1912,
Mrs. Dean Penn.

Madam—In reply to your letter will say that it probably will be sufficient if you get statements from four or five persons from your town. It would be better however, if they were from Mansfield. We do not want the matter to fail for any reason. Your sister could possibly get the statements and send them to me and save you a trip. However attend to the matter at once.

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS.

March 11th, 1912,
Mrs. Penn:

Madam—Your letter received and in reply will say that I am not dealing directly with Judge Black. In fact I am not supposed to say anything to him as it might queer the deal. I told the person I am dealing with that the $50.00 would be ready as soon as the papers are made out and it would not do to change it any. As soon as we get the order for her release that is all that we need. As to expenses I do not know whether you will have to pay any or not, but will find out. The rest is easy. All you need to do is to get the $50.00 and the letter of recommendation and I will attend to the rest. The sooner you can do this the better. Hoping to hear from you soon I remain,

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS,

March 12th, 1912.
Mrs. Dean Penn;
Alexandria, Ohio, Box 23.

Dear Madam—Your letters or recommendation received and the same seem to be satisfactory. The only thing necessary now for you to do is to arrange the money matters. It will not do for me to attempt to proceed until that is definitely settled. I explained my reasons in previous [illegible] must have no fear as to putting up any money, as I will see that nothing is paid over until the girl is delivered. Hoping that you will be able to get the money within a short time, we are,

Very truly yours,
RICHARDS & RICHARDS,
By H. L. RICHARDS.

(Envelope dated March 21st, 1912)
Mrs. Penn:

Dear Madam—Please advise me as to whether you are arranging for the release of Gladys. If you have decided to go ahead please let me know.

Respectfully,
H. L. RICHARDS.

March 25th, 1912,
Mrs. Dean Penn:

Madam—Your certificate of deposit received and will proceed at once to the matter in hand. I called up the party this morning and am informed that he will be on hand this time tomorrow morning. You can expect to hear from me in a short time. No money will be paid over until everything is closed.

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS.

March 27th, 1912,
Alexandria, O., Box 23:

Dear Madam—In regard to getting Gladys out of the convent at Cincinnati, will say, that Judge Black has consented to release her and they will bring her here to Columbus. He informs us, however, that it might be several days before this will be accomplished, as they do not want to make a special trip to Cincinnati on this account. There is only one way

BITTTER FOES OF LABOR ARE REPUBLICAN BOSSES

Some Men who Rule the Roost at Chicago Convention and Their Records in Congress.

BERGER FILES PETITIONS FOR THE WOMEN

Washington—The committee on Judiciary of the House of Representatives has decided that the subcommittee to investigate the charges made by Representative Berger against Federal Judge Hanford shall be composed of Representatives Graham, of Illinois; McCoy, of New Jersey, and Higgins, of Connecticut. The first two are Democrats and Higgins is a Republican. Graham, who is slated for the chairmanship of the subcommittee, conducted the recent investigation of the Controller Bay scandal.

The affidavit filed by Attorney John H. Perry, of Seattle, with the Committee of Judiciary, is said to be the most sensational that has ever been presented in any impeachment proceedings before Congress. In addition to the charges of business improprieties and illegitimate relations with corporate interests, Hanford is accused by Perry of being a libertine and a drunkard.

Berger Introduces Suffrage Petition.

Petitions from 109,297 persons and from organizations representing approximately 7,500 individuals—a total of 116,836—favoring a Constitutional amendment enabling women to vote on the same terms as men were presented to the House by Representative Victor L. Berger, of Wisconsin.

Every State in the Union including Alaska and Porto Rico are represented in the four big packages of petitions presented bp the Socialist Congressman. California, the latest woman suffrage State, leads with 13,883 signatures. New York comes second with 13,178 names. Pennsylvania is a close third and Illinois is the only other State about the 10,000 mark. The smallest list of signatures comes from Georgia.

The petitions have been circulated by the National Office of the Socialist Party under the immediate charge of the Socialist Women's National Committee. The petitioners are men and women in all walks of life and of different political shades and beliefs.

Labor Foes on Republican Committee

There as six avowed enemies of labor on the Republican National Committee, according to the official records of the United States Congress. They are:

BOISE PENROSE, United States Senator from Pennsylvania; W. MURRAY CRANE, United States Senator from Massachusetts; RICHARD BARTHOLDT, Representative from Missouri; NATHAN B. SCOTT former Senator from West Virginia; JAMES A. TAWNEY, former Representative from Minnesota; FRANK O. LOWDEN, former Representative from Illinois.

Penrose and Crane, who are probably the two strongest men on the Republican National Committee, have the two worst labor records in the reactionary United States Senate. On every labor question these Senators voted in the interest of the ruling and exploiting class. Penrose not only votes against labor legislation on the floor of the Senate, but for years has managed to kill such legislation in the committee room, he being a member of the Committee on Education and Labor. Penrose is the successor of the notorious Aldrich as the Republican leader of the Senate.

The third men on labor's political unfair list, Richard Bartholdt, also voted against the railroad men's sixteen hour bill. He voted on March 4, 1907 for one of the most notorious ship subsidy bills ever introduced in Congress.

One of the bitterest foes of labor who ever sat in Congress was James A. Tawney, of Minnesota. As chairman of the Committee on Appropriation he always "economized" at the expense of labor employed by the government. Tawney is the man who had the eight-hour law repealed on the Panama Canal. He also joined the reactionary Charles E. Littlefield in that infamous movement to repeal the law that compels ships entering American harbors to hire experienced pilots to steer them past dangerous shoals. Fortunately that attempt failed miserably.

When Nahtan B. Scott was a member of the United States Senate no friend of progressive legislation ever appealed to him to vote for such legislation. They know it would be useless. Scott was a standpatter of the worst sort. The records show that he voted against the sixteen-hour law and also against the 1908 employers' liability law. Scott supported two amendments which crippled the child labor law for the District of Columbia.

Bowdon was one of the most influential members of the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. But he never used his influence to behalf of the oppressed postal employes. In fact, he always fought labor bills before his committee. Lowden's record is similar to that of Tawney, but with this addition: He voted for the notorious Dick Military law which puts every American citizen in the United States army against his will.

SUBJECT: "SOCIALISM"

Every Citizen of Columbus should hear this eloquent Western Orator

THE BASIS OF OUR PARTY CONFIDENCE

By C. E. Ruthenberg, Socialist Candidate for Governor of Ohio.

There is one quality which Socialists manifest which would suffice to distinguish the Socialist Party from all other organizations, even though there were no other radical differences. Ask any Socialist who understands the principles of the party whether he believes in the ultimate victory of Socialism and he will unhesitatingly express his confidence that sooner or later Socialism will be established. Republicans, Democrats, reformers, non-partisans(?) and goo goos may work for the organization they are supporting and hope that their work will bring success; they may even sometimes be deluded into believing that they are working for a principle, but faith that their principle will triumph they have not. The Socialist, however, never doubts that his cause will triumph. He may set the date of the success of his party at an earlier or later date, but that the victory will be won is not a question open to argument.

This blind confidence of ours that we will win our goal is not mere blind faith. It is not the acceptance of the words of a prophet that we will win our way to the land of milk and honey. We are not taking on trust the promise of a better world to come. Our confidence (it is not faith because it has a material basis) is the result of our study of the development of the means of wealth production, and our belief that the human race has reached a stage of intellectual development which precludes the possibility of the continuance of slavery for the many for the benefit of the parasitic few.

The material basis of our confidence is the development of socialized industry. During the past century there has been a mighty force at work which has revolutionized the method of producing wealth.

This force has manifested itself in two ways,—in mechanical development and the organization of the productive forces of society.

Practically all the wonderful machinery of production which has made our productive powers from ten to a hundred, and in some cases many hundreds, times as great as they were previously, was developed during the Nineteenth Century, and a large part of it during the closing quarter of that century. In every shop, in every factory, in every manufacturing establishment, the industrial revolution has been going on. The labor power of skilled mechanics has been replaced by mechanical forces under the control of machine operators. Old machinery has been discarded for more efficient and productive machines.

From the days of the hand-loom to the gigantic and intricate power-loom turning out hundreds of yards of cloth to every one previously produced is not a long period of time, but the contrast is none the less great.

Measured in years the period between the printer setting type by hand and printing with a hand press and the type-setting machine and the press into which paper is fed from a roll on one end and the finished newspaper is produced at the other, is not great, but the gulf between the old and the new is none the less wide.

The multiplication of labor saving machinery during the past twenty-five years has been wonderful. Everywhere the old, primitive method of hand work has given way before the new, enormously enhanced productive force,the machine.

We Socialists often use the phrase "the coming social revolution." When we speak of the revolution to come we mean the adjustment of the other institutions of society to the industrial changes which have already taken place. We need no longer forecast the industrial revolution. The revolution in the economic basis of society —the industrial revolution—is already here.

The development of machine production has socialized the production of wealth. Whereas previously the individual worker produced a finished article, today the work is divided and sub-divided, and each worker does only a small part of the work of production. Machine production has also brought together many workers in single establishments. Where previously from ten to a hundred men worked together we find today from five hundred to ten thousand. The production of wealth is no longer the work of an individual. It is the work of many individuals co-operating. The product of these co-operating individuals is a social product.

As machine production developed, the machinery used became more intricate, increased in size and became more costly. The increased cost of machinery and the rapid improvement in machinery, which made necessary the frequent discarding of the old for the new, paved the way for larger and larger units of production. The organization having the largest amount of capital had the best chance to survive, because it was able to take advantage in the competitive struggle with its rivals. We have seen this force at work bringing into existence larger and larger manufacturing establishments.

The struggle for supremacy between the large units of production led to further concentration—to the trust stage of production. The elimination of competition, the carrying on of the work of production on a larger scale, means less waste, more efficiency and greater productive power. Trust production means, too, still more socialized production.

The above is a brief sketch of the industrial develpoment of this country, and every other capitalized country, during recent years.

During the same time that machine production has developed and the concentration of industry has taken place, the workers have become more and more dependent upon the class owning the machinery of production, for a livelihood. Divorced from the tools of production, they must sell their labor power to those who own the machinery, and therefore the opportunities to produce.

The concentration and consolidation of industry gives greater and greater power to a few individuals over the lives of the workers and in the mad greed for profits the exploitation and oppession of the workers becomes worse. The chasm between the producing class and the exploiting class widens and the struggle between them becomes fiercer.

For the workers there is only one way to secure relief from this situation. If they are not to submit to further enslavement, if they are not to become victims of an industrial plutocracy, they must organize industrially and politically and prepare to assert the power of their class and apply the only solution which will insure economic justice for them.

The concentration of industry will go on. The industrial power of the master class will increase. This concentration and increased industrial power is the logical and inevitable result of our industrial development.

And here is the basis of our confidence in the coming of Socialism:

The development of industry points to only one way in which industrial despotism can be avoided and all the benefits of trust production insured to the workers.

We cannot turn back the hand of time. We cannot go back to the days of hand production. To do so means to sacrifice the splendid achievements of the most wonderful era in the history of the world.

We must go forward.

The same process which has brought into existence the present situation has developed the intellectual powers of the working class. It has placed them in a position which makes furture progress and the birth of a new society based upon new ides of justice and equality depepdent upon them, and given them the knowledge how to use their power.

We Socialists have faith in the working class. We believe the workers have advanced too far to submit to industrial slavery, and therefore our confidence that they will assert their power to bring into existence the only alternative to capitalist despotism, which is the social ownership of the already socialized means of production.

The working class has the power, and to save itself must establish Socialism.

CAMPBELL WANTS TO KNOW

C. W. Campbell, who states that he owns 25 shares of the common stock of the Columbian Printing and Publishing company, has filed a petition in Common Pleas Court asking that the company be mandatorily enforced to permit him to examine its books. The Columbian Printing Co. publishes the Catholic Columbian, managed by James Carroll, Democratic candidate for legislature from Franklin County.

BRILLIANT THOUGHTS.

Workingmen, be on your guard. See to it that none but class conscious workingmen are put on guard if we are to have a peaceful social revolution. Remember the French Revolution. In the assemblies of 1789 and 1790 there was not a workinman, not a peasant, only bourgeoisie big and little, who worked for their interest and the interest of their class.

For the first time in all the ages are the proletariat demanding recognition of their claim to the full product of their toil, by the rulers of the world.

Seventy years or so before the Christian era Sparticus, the gladiator, led the slave rebellion against the Romans. After several victories he compelled the Roman generals that he had captured to fight in the areno for the amusement of the slave generals and their army. If the rebellion had been successful the results would have been the same as it was with his defeat—master and slave.

Capital is only dross in the absence of labor. It can afford no livelihood for the people, not even for the possessor of it, except in connection with labor. You may take a handful of gold out on the highway and you will find that it represents nothing more than a handful of pebbles until you come in contact with labor and its products. Therefore the first time your gold has the capacity of value.—Senator Heyborn, of Idaho, in United States Senate.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Every workingman should read "Les Miserables," Victor Hugo's greatest story and also the best book ever written. Now is the time to read it while the civilized world is seething with discontent.

Because you carry a red card, wear a red flag and say you are red does not make you a red. You must have Socialism in your head and heart.

The substitution of class for class is not Socialism.

"What universal suffrage has done in its freedom and its sovereignty cannot be undone by the street.

"A people cannot be suprised into a more rapid progress than it wills. Woe to him who attempts to force its hand! A people does not allow itself to be used."—Les Miserable's.

The time is fast approaching when the tares must be separated from the wheat that the bread may be nourishing to the people.

Tom—Say, John, they have stopped paving the road to hell.

John—No! You don't say?

Tom—You know that the old parties have been having their platform built on good intentions of helping the workingman for years.

John—Yes.

Tom—Well the devil always took their good intentions and paved the road to hell so they couldn't use them.

John—Yes; what about it?

Tom—Well the Socialists are putting all the good intentions into action and are paving the road to the industrial commonwealth.

John—Then we will have to stay on earth since the road to hell will be destroyed by the heat from the old parties' politicians passing over it.

Tom—That is the way I figure it out.

Who knows, but that your daughter or your daughter's daughter may have to work over some type machine, telegraph key, carry a tray in some restaurant or stand behind a counter in some store and receive in wages $6 to $7 per week, her home in some garret or hall bed room.

So, my dear capitalist, please consider well your answer before you refuse a raise in wage, try and look into the future and see the possibility, and then grant the pittance; it may prevent a misstep, it may save a daughter.

WHAT IS CAPITALISM?

Capitalism is a crime.

It is a relic of ancient barbarism tied to the car of Progress.

It is the despotism of the feudal age gilded with gold.

It is the cruelties of the Inquisition clothed in the respectability of the church and veneered with a false civilization.

Its enervating power has filled the graveyard of nations.

Its hands are reeking with the blood of billions whose lives have been sacrificed on the altar of its greed.

Its touch contaminates its victims with moral leprosy and the fumes or its breath are as deadly as the excretions that exude from the Upas tree.

It owns its judges and its courts are ante-rooms to hell.

It runs an army and navy to exploit helpless human beings in foreign lands.

It pays the salaries of professors in many of the universities and its pliable tools pervert the truth and teach false economy.

It owns the press and poisons the public mind.

It teaches a commercialism based upon the incentive to the hog.

It presents a glittering temptation to our young men, whom nature, education and taste have equipped for noble callings, to desert these callings and enter into the wild scramble for gold.

Because of the poverty it has produced it forces our women to labor in factories and sweatshops at starvation wages, and, when thrown out of employment, to accept the wages of sin rather than to starve.

It takes little children out of their homes and puts them in the department stores, the factories and mines where their physical and mental development is stunted, their moral natures perverted, their hopes blighted and their manhood destroyed.

Out of the tears, sufferings and anguish of oppressed and enslaved humanity it coins its golden profits.

It is heartless, soulless, remorseless and has nothing to arbitrate.

It owns kings, emperors and presidents and is the sole arbitrator between the people of all nations.

It controls the law-making bodies, tramples upon constitutions and controls the power to shape the destinies of nations.

Capitalism is not capital.

It is the hellish system that juggles with real capital—the land and the tools of production—and diverts it from its true purpose.

It defies the laws of God and man.

It feeds upon the blood of humanity.

In it is summed up all the crimes of all the world since the morning stars sang together.

It has filled the earth with desolation and horror.

It is a thousand times wickeder than the slave markets of the past.

It is the destroyer of civilization and the executioner of moral progress.

It is "death on a white horse and hell following after."

CHILD LABOR BODY STANDS BY BERGER

The National Child Labor Committee corroborates the statement of Representative Berger, that the Children's Bureau bill was not passed through the efforts of Sam Gompers' so-called "union card men" in Congress.

Berger has received the following letter from Owen R. Lovejoy, General Secretary of the National Child Labor Committee:

"I want to thank you personally and on behalf of the National Child Labor Committee for your reply to the editorial in the June "Federationist," in reference to the Federal Children's Bureau. I was amazed when the news-letter was published, claiming that 'Credit for the passing of this bill belongs almost entirely to the American Federation of Labor.' I wrote to Mr. Morrison, giving him the history of the organization of the measure and the part the National Child Labor Committee had played in it, supposing that the news-letter had been an oversight.

"His reply indicated that it was not an oversight, but that they considered this committee among many other organizations, to which they give credit for helping pass the bill, and placed us in the numerous other quarters for which the Federation has been truly considerate and thankful."

"Of course, we shall take no public notice of this effort to filch honors from an organization which spent so much time and money in publicity and lobbying to get that little bill through, but I want you to know that I appreciate your frank and fair statement."

It is apparent in Washington that the Gompers' politicians are trying to get their dupes in the labor unions to support the candidacy of Champ Clark. To that end, Gompers opened the campaign by printing a long article on the "achievements" of the mythical "labor group." It is their plan to put the Missourian politician on the "fair list."

Were it not for the Socialist Congressman and the publicity bureau in Washington, Gompers' wild claims regarding the "successes of the 'union card men' might have gone unchallenged. But as things are, several hundred Socialist and labor papers have already printed Berger's broadside against that lying editorial in the June Federationist.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP—AS PROPOSED BY TAFT

By Guy Williams.

Here it is at last. We have it from the learned cadi himself. The progressiveness of the Administration at Washington is established beyond the last lingering shadow of doubt.

"President Taft is bringing Socialism as fast as he can,' says a Republican editor. "Not long ago he proposed that the government take over the telegraphs and operate them in connection with the Post Office Department. And the other day he proposed that the government establish wireless telegraph stations in the Philippines. Socialists will have to suport him as the quckest way to get Socialism."

Truly this is the age of wonders. Not least in the list of wonders is the loudly trumpeted "government ownership" of President Taft. We wonder. Out on the straggling fringe of civiliation the president favors government ownership of wireless telegraphs. Out where no corporation could operate them at a profit. But here in the United States where they can be operated profitably he makes no such suggestion. In the remote Philippine Islands it would be a good thing for the government to establish wireless stations—to deliver messages and bring in business for the companies that operate here.

There is something peculiar and perhaps we should say pathetic, about the conversion of President Taft to the doctrine of public ownership. Everyone knows that the days of the wire telegraphs are numbered. Almost every week news despatches inform us that some railroad has substituted telephones for telegraphs, or of the decision of some company to use the longdistance phone. This on land. And at sea, who ever heard of telegraphing from one ship to another until wireless telegraphy was invented? The owners of wire telegraphs saw that the invention of wireless telegraphy was the swan song of the old method and that soon their property would become so much useless junk. What a kind providence it was that placed in power a friend who would buy this property, just on the eve of its becoming useless. Or was it their "generosity" in donating to his campaign fund that appealed to his gentle, sympathetic soul instead of providence?

We want the People to own the telegraphs. Not merely the wire telegraphs as the Administration proposes, but the wireless also.

What better luck could the opponents of Socialism want than to buy old style telegraphs and have them become worthless through the continued improvement of the wireless and telephone? The President does not propose Socialising the latter. The wireless telegraphs of the United States with large patronage would be pointed out as a glowing example of success due to "superior operation under incentive to gain." The government wireless telegraphs of the Philippines, with small patronage due to the uncivilized state of the mass of the people would be pointed out as a "terrible example" of "inefficiency," "shiftlessness," etc.

The demand for public ownership has become so strong that even its worst enemies dare not seek office while voicing their opposition. By trickery they hope to attain official position and make it a farce.

You would not have a surgical operation performed by a man who had opposed such operations all his life. No, indeed! You would feel shaky for fear his knife might slip. If you died his theory would be proved correct.

Doctor Taft has all his life been so opposed to surgical operations for the cure of trust dividenditis that we are afraid his knife may slip. Get a Socialist doctor.

A TALK FOR THE CHILDREN

Equal Chances for All.

One of the reasons why we are Socialists—perhaps the greatest reason of all—is that we want to make sure that every child born into this world shall have an equal chance of happiness and of doing good service to his or her fellow human beings. So long as some parents have many thousands of dollars to spend on their children every year, and so long as some parents have only a few dollars a week—some children will have all that they need to make them healthy, well educated, and happy men and women; and other children will have to go to school hungry, to wear bad boots and ragged clothes, and grow up weakly and without having had time to learn about the wonders of the world they live in.

Socialists do not want any children to have too much or too little to eat; but they want them all to have enough. They want them all to have warm, clean clothes, and plenty of house room and big playgrounds; and they want them all to stay at school and learn all they can and have a thoroughly jolly childhood—as richer children today. When they grow up, Socialists want them to lead useful lives with a fair amount of leisure and no fear of being out of work.

As things are today, a few people have a great deal of many and do not work at all, while the great majority of the people work very long hours for small pay, and are always in fear of losing that work; because, unless they work, they will have to starve. All these things happen, not because rich people are bad and poor people are good, but because people do not understand that the best way of managing a nation's wealth is to make sure that each person gets enough to live on.

Really all people, whether they are rich or poor, are pretty much of the same kind. They are all excellent in parts, just like all the children you play with.

Some of them are generous, and some of them are not, some are brave and some are cowards, and even those who are good today are very often bad tomorow. Sometimes people are careless and idle just because they have had far more than they ever needed. Other people are careless and idle just because they have never had any chances at all. Socialists want o prevent people from being careless and idle for either of these reasons. We want to get the best out of everybody and give the best to everybody.

Because a little boy's father is a casual laborer in the docks, who cannot earn more than an occasional $1.50 a day, is no reason why the little boy should catch cold because his boots are full of holes. That little boy needs whole boots just as much as the little girl whose father is able to get them for her.

So you ought to think about it, and decide whether Socialists are right in saying that each one of the children of the nation has the same right, and no greater right, to a fair chance in life.

When each has had a fair chance, we have to see to it that they are helped all round by the love and kindness of their fellow human beings to make the most of that chance.

And always you have to remember that we are all just struggling boys and girls and men and women, trying to do our best, but full of bothersome faults, and always likely to fail. Indeed, as we are always having to make the best of our own failures, so we ought always to be sufficiently ashamed of our own mistakes, not to make too much of the mistakes of others.

A CHAPTER OF MAGAZINE HISTORY.

The old Hampton's Magazine was in its day the most radical non-Socialist publication in the country. It was radical because of the convictions of the editor, and not for business office returns, and that constituted a great difference. Most of the other magazines played radicalism and still play it as a good dodge to get readers. Ben Hampton believed in radicalism because he sincerely believed in the cause of man.

The time came when the Interests concluded that they had stood long enough the fire of this publication and they had better put it out of business.

It had in type an article revealing the truth about Mr. Morgan's operations in and with the New Haven railroad. They were very hady operations.

An agent of the Interests called upon Mr. Hampton and told him not to publish that article. Mr. Hampton insisted upon the rights of a free press. The agent said that if that article were published the Interests would ruin the magazine. The article appeared and both the magazine and Mr. Hampton were ruined. Mr. Hampton lost everything he had in the world and is now working on a salary, and glad to get it.

But here come new and significant developments in this story.

The stockholders of the magazine had been drawn to it because of its radical utterances; they supported it as a matter of faith.

After it had gone into the hands of a receiver, Col. Bill Young, who had been Ben Hampton's chief assistant and is a mighty good radical himself, thought that the thing might be revived in the interest of radicalism, so he sent out a circular to the old stockholders telling of his project and asking them if they wished to come in with him.

Although they had lost all their stock when the Interests closed down on the old concern they, nevertheless, responded so liberally that Colonel Bill got $81,000 and with that he revived the magazine on radical lines.

The first issue seems to have been enough for the Interests.

The president of the new company was a graduate of Yale, who had been receiver of the old concern. Naturally, being a Yale man he had no time for radicalism.

There is in New York a member of an English titled family who is a prospective duke or count or something of that kind, and while he is waiting for his inheritance he supports himself by writing for the foolish American newspapers some daily drool about foreign nobility. You may have seen his stuff; it is printed under the name of the "Marquise of Fontenoy," which is as good a name for an' an other. Because of his nearness to a title this person is hot stuff in New York society and has what is called the "ontray," which seems to be a grand thing to have.

The "Marquise of Fontenoy," now produced a dream about the impending restoration of royalty in France, which, of course, was just in his line and like the reactionary dope that he feeds to the American press. He fixed up a deal with the president of the company, who seems to have ardent ambitions for some of the "ontray," and the president accepted it for publication without consulting Colonel Bill.

When Colonel Bill read it in proof he felt his republican soul rising in revolt and he let out a yell that re- The upshot was a row, in which the president of the company stood firm for the "ontray" and the dreams of prospective nobility, and Colonel Bill quit in disgust.

Whereupon the new magazine passed safely from the radical class to the list of periodicals that can be depended upon to support the existing order and serve Privilege with gladness.

All of which pleasantly supports our favorite thesis.

They get what they want; if they don't get it in one way they get it in another way; but they get it.

It was a "cinch" that when the magazines began to attack Privilege Privilege would get them, sooner or later. Having now swept the field, one may say that it has got them sooner. But if you want radicalism there are still two places where you can find it. In the dictionary and in the Socialist press.—N. Y. Call.

THE ACTS OF VIOLENCE.

Dispatch from Lawrence, representing "Socialist leaders" (unnamed), declares that if Ettor and Giovannittti are convicted, "bombs and bullets" will be let loose over the land and horrible scenes will follow.

Of course no Socialist leaders ever declared anything of the kind, and no one is better aware of that fact than the constitutional and congential liar that concocted the dispatch.

But for an entirely different reason the situation in this case is very grave and demands far more serious attention than it has received.

As a matter of fact, Ettor and Giovannitti are not on trial. What is on trial is, first, the right of free speech, and, second, the attempt of the American Woolen Trust, sore and angry at its defeat of last winter, to revenge itself upon the men that it holds responsible for its heavy losses.

Noboddy is likely to rise, riot, rave, roar, shoot or demand blood over this situation; but if the prosecution shall be able to carry out its purpose there will be inflicted upon this country an evil even greater than riots.

Once allow the principle to become established that no man may denounce unjust conditions lest some person or interest he injured and once make clear that for the purpose of the revenge of the powerful the courts can be manipulated and justice overridden, and you have performed the greatest and deadliest act of violence that the country has ever known, for you have overturned at once every foundation upon which a republic is supposed to rest.

No, it is not Ettor and Giovannitti that are being tried, but the right of the oppressed to protest against appression. And if we think that right is worth maintaining, we should understand clearly the extent to which it is involved here.

WHAT JOHN C. ALTGELD SAID.

My friends, let me cite you a parllell: George William Curtis and other writers of his day described the slave power back in the 50's.

They tell us that slavery sat in the White House and made laws in the capitol; that courts of justice were its ministers; that senators and legislators were its lackeys; that it controlled the professor in his lecture-room, the editor in his sanctum, the preacher in his pulpit; that it swaggered in the drawing-room; that it ruled at the clubs; that it dominated with iron hand all the affairs of society; that every year enlarged its power, every move increased its domain; that the men and the women who dared even question the divinity of that institution were ostracized, were persecuted, were vilified—aye, were hanged.

But the great clock in the chamber of the Omnipotent never stands still. It ticked away the years as it had once ticked away the centuries. Finally it struck the hour and the world heard the tread of a million armed men, and slavery vanished from America forever. Note the parallel. Today the syndicate rules the White House and makes laws at the capitol; courts of justice are its ministers; senators and legislators are its lackeys. It controls the preacher in his pulpit; professor in his lecture-room; it rules at the clubs; it dominates with a rod of iron the affairs of society. Every year enlarges its power; and the men and women who protest against the crimes that are being committed by organized greed in this country—who talk of protecting the American people—are ostracized, are vilified, are hounded and imprisoned. It seems madness to even question the divinity of the American syndicate. But, my friends, that great clock is still ticking—still ticking. Soon it will again strike the hour and the world will see not 1,000,000 but 10,000,000 free men rise up, armed not with muskets, but with free men's ballots, and the sway of the syndicate will vanish from America forever.

Labor union men, wake up! Do you know what the republican-democratic legislators at Washington have "GRANTED" YOU? Why, the 8-hour day on all GOVERNMENT work. Just think of it! To give you something that has already been upon the statute books of this nation for several generations during a PREESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN, had ought to land every one of your votes for one or the other, it don't matter which, of these parties.

But will you take notice that neither of them are willing to have the government do any other work than breaking strikes with the army and issuing injunctions against your fights for an 8 hour day in the privately owned industries where the most of you work?

KILL THE "RUSSIAN" ORDINANCE.

After a number of speeches had been made against the measure, and no one had appeared on its behalf, the ordinance requiring the securing of a permit from the director of safety for the moving of chattel property was disapproved unanimously by the council judiciary committee Friday night of last week.

At a meeting of council last Monday it was announced that another hearing would be held on the measure. The loan sharks and collecting agents are anxious to pass this ordinance as Socialist Councilman Zimpfer showed and the proposition should be killed. It is an effort to Russianize Columbus and the workers should swarm to the defense of their rights.

CAPITALISTIC CHARITY.

The Columbus Associated Charities has made its report for the past year. It shows that for every dollar applied directly to the relief of suffering and destitution, one dollar and twenty-six cents was paid for salaries of officers, rent postage, etc. This is a fair sample of capitalistic charity.

WHAT WE WANT.

The Columbus Socialist is anxious to have contributions to its columns from comrades. We must insist, however, that the comrades send in their articles in brief form and wirtten so plainly that the printer can read them. We have no time to copy manuscript that is illegible. We have no mind reader on our staff. All articles and announcements must be in early, not later than Tuesday, unless IMPORTANT.

Christianity in itself is good. It teaches justice; it teaches honesty; it teaches love; it teaches brotherhood; but when any sect upholds a system which keeps most men paupers while a few revel in luxury, a system which upholds houses of prostitution, a system which forces children into the workshops to grind out profits for their masters when they should be in school or in the play ground developing themselves mentally and physically, a system which reckons a man's success in life according to the amount of money he has accumulated, it is time for you TO USE the brain which God has given you TO USE.

SCABBING AS A PROFESSION.

The strike of the Boston elevated workers has resulted in the establishment in Philadelphia of a strike recruiting depot from which the owners of the Boston line claim they can draw all the men they need. They are experienced men, it is said, men who had training before and during the Philadelphia car strike. Whether or not they have been waiting all these months for another chance to help break a strike is not stated. But the fact that they are available is interesting.

As has been pointed out many times, the capitalist class is able to control through keeping the working class divided and through maintaining an enormous army of unemployed. The scab, like the union workingman, is always pursued by the specter of hunger. But instead of figliting the cause of hunger, he is willing at any time, driven by fear, as he is, to turn traitor to his class. Of such men there are hundreds of thousands, and capitalism is making the ranks greater and greater all the time.

There is nothing in the world more contemptible than a scab, whether the scab is the working strike-breaker or the private detective. Both of them have the same object in view, that of helping keep the working class in subjection.

UNMITIGATED MODESTY.

If most of the people of America were not so busy earning a living they would take a few moments off to laugh with unrestrained hilarity over the claims of Roosevelt as a savior of the republic and a friend of the people.

He has, from the beginning of his career, been the most deceptive person this country has ever known. He has had, down to a fine point, the ability to grab.

On the other hand, the American people have had the ability to have things taken away from them. They have been, politically and economically, one large, easy proposition.

Roosevelt has talked a lot. He hasn't said anything. He, the fearless patriot, has not lifted his raucous voice concerning the Judge Hanford matter. Not Theodore. He has said nothing about the various labor wars that were recently waged or that are still on. Not he. It might not be suspected, but he knows when to shut up. And he shuts up automatically when he might say something that would offend business, big or otherwise.

There is nothing he does not dare say on inconsequential subjjects. There is no length to which he will not go when the matter does not amount to a cuss. There is no book too big for him to fill. He has filled many of them. He has covered thousands of magazines and newspaper pages. Yet you can go through the whole of it and find no words of understanding with or sympathy for the working class.

Roosevelt sympathizes with himself, works for himself, believes in himself. That is the secret of his power. He is the supreme egotist, and for this various good Americans, whom he will cheerfully kick in the neck, applaud him.

If we must muzzle ourselves in order to prosper, then we do not want to prosper. But we are going to expose the rottenness of the capitalistic system regardless of where we find it.

Farm and Fireside says that 25,000 parasites in Chicago live off western grain, most of them conferring no useful service whatever.

Ten physicians of the Sewickley Valley Hospital, Pittsburg, have resigned because wealthy patients are much better cared for than the poor.

The Oklahoma legislature has passed a measure providing a lawyer or public defender in all cases where an accused person is unable to hire a lawyer.

Startling disclosures were made, concerning the meat industry in Philadelphia, by a famous government inspector, before the House been condemned by him, as diseased, were afterwards converted into sausage. The witness referred to "lard" as containing worms, sausag. The witness referred to "lard" as containing worms, "scrapple" made of bad meat, hog carcasses that emitted an awful stench and many other revolting facts. The products were placed on the market for sale and the working people of that city paid big prices for them. The meat owners are not in business for the health of the people, but for profits. Abolish the profit making system and then things will be made for use. The health of the people will be the chief concern under a Socialist regime.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

That this paper is making good was plainly mainifested at our meeting at Hilliards last Saturday evening. Every voter in Hilliards and every voter on the rural route between Columbus and Hilliards is on our subscription list, made possible through the money turned over by the German Glee Club.

The Comrades who held the meeting were extended every courtesy; one of the old party judges of the election personally getting a good substantial box and carrying it out in front of the hotel, where the meeting was held. He is a reader of the Columbus Socialist. As soon as the Comrades began speaking, the large and attentive crowd gathered and stood for one hour and a half, until the meeting was ended. As soon as the meeting was over signatures to a petition for a local was secured and will be forwarded to the State Office.

Thus you see, that this paper is delivering the goods and if you Comrades will only help we will put every voter in the county outside of the city on the subscription list. Many Comrades do not feel that they can get subscriptions through personal solicitation, although they would like to help the cause along, somehow. An elegant way is to save all nickles and dimes you possibly can and when you get a quarter or fifty cents, bring or send it in and we will use it to put names on the list, out in the county.

Now, Boosters, we simply must make that gain by July 1st. If each one of our loyal Boosters will pledge himself to one or more, by July 1st, we will have turned the trick.

Socialism is coming. It is in the very air, and if we confine ourselves to educating the people to the principles of our great cause, there is no doubt but that this proletarian revolution will be accomplished peaceably.

Everybody get subs!

Just to show what can be done, Comrade Gallentine of the Thirteenth Ward, brings in 14. Every Booster, can do likewise through systematic effort.

Comrade Weichers of the Fourteenth turns in four. Those North End boys are waking up, and are making thing hum.

"Enclosed find a list of four subs, for the best in the State for thinkers to read," writes Comrade Rutan. That's what they all say.

Boosters with one or more to their credit: Comrades Kinnear, Warren, Albright, Geo. Smith, Palmer, Kinsell, Green, Schumm, Townsley, Allis, Mooman, Berry, Bubb, Eby, G. H. Fries, Southard, Draper, Slack, Neimeister, Stocker, Farrell, Gardner, Neds, Reed, Hyland, Myers, Bates, Wright.

Balance to get last report	739
New subs put on	98
Balance to get July 1st	631

Go after 'em Comrades. Let's cut that down at least half next week. You can do it through concerted action.

Attention is called to the fact that Comrades who have no red tickets can get them at the Ward Branch or this office. Don't fail to use them at every opportunity. Before you make any purchase look through the paper, and purchase from our advertisers, don't give your hard earned money to the enemy. Use it to support your own movement and this is a most affective way to use it. Any firm refusing to advertise are enemies. Remember that.

Comrade Marquette of the Tenth "lines up" three to help along this week.

TO SOCIALIST LOCALS THROUGHOUT OHIO.

Comrades:—There is going out over the State now Referendum "B," 1912, in which somebody has made a very serious mistake. It may have been made by the recent State convention when, if it did, pass the following new section to "Old Article 1" of Proposed Amendments as contained in

"Sec. 2. The object of the Socialist Party of Ohio is to organize the working class for the purpose of overthrowing the present capitalist system and establishing an industrial democracy."

The writer of this was a delegate to said State convention and must say that he heard no such proposition discussed or offered in that form in said convention. The original draft of the proposition as the writer now remembers it was substantially as follows, viz.:

"The object of the Socialist Party is to organize all those opposed to the capitalist system into a political party for the purpose of using such political power in the interest of the working class."

This may not be the exact language of the original draft but is the close substance thereof (the original is in the hands of the State Secretary) and the writer read the same, which was written in ink over which was pasted a pink colored paper on which was written the "Sec. 2" above given but with more or less words erased therefrom in addition to the words composing "Sec. 2" above.

The writer was informed by Comrade Minturn, of the State Office, that the handwriting of the "New Section 2" is that of Comrade Josephine Bates and that said "Sec. 2" was by her offered before the convention as a substitute and was carried. If this is correct, and we have now no reason to doubt its correctness, then the State convention has, in our opinion, make a monumental mistake which should be corrected at once.

Neither the State Constitution of the State of Ohio nor the National Constitution has heretofore seen fit to adopt any such means to advise the Socialists what the party stands for. This section is uncalled for even in its original form.

Any one with sense enough to belong to the Socialist Party knows, that the Socialist Party stands for political action and any or all efforts on the part of the capitalistic class through its own efforts or the efforts of any antagonistic organization to discredit the party in the interest of some outside or independent clique should be voted down.

W. C. BATES.

After coming to the truth established beyond doubt that both Roosevelt and Taft are creatures of the Trusts, can any workingman vote for either of them?

DIRECTORS' NOTICE!

The Directors of The Socialist Publishing Company at their regular meeting held June 18, 1912, request all comrades who have subscribed for stock to make regular payments on same. Some comrades are several months in arrears. Just as soon as stock is paid for certificates will be issued.

THE LIBERTY

Local Party News

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin County. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

THE CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE

CITY HEADQUARTERS AT 3 35½ SOUTH HIGH STREET.

GOOD PROPAGANDA

The meeting held at the corner of West Broad and Sandusky streets on Thursday evening of last week was an effective one. Speeches were made by Comrades Charles E. Belcher and Marsh C. Green. There were several hundred attentive people present. Another good meeting was held Saturday evening near the corner of Broad and High streets. Comrade John Gayton was the speaker.

I. W. W. STREET MEETING.

Wm. Thurston Brown will speak next Tuesday evening at the corner of Broad and High under the auspices of the local Industrial Workers of the World.

ANOTHER SOCIALIST VOTER

Comrade Fred Diebert of East Gates street has been excused from active propaganda work for the past week. There is a new girl at his house. Everybody is doing nicely and the girl will vote some day.

OUR MYSTERIOUS SCHOOL BOARD

The School Board fraternity have again considered their own class interests by electing Dr. G. W. Willard to fill the unexpired term of Comrade June Purcell Guild. We realize that a Socialist could have little sympathy with the present School Board's causuc methods.

Organized labor was well aware of the interest taken by the this same Dr. G. W. Willard in the manual training department with the effect that not one instructor on the present staff is in sympathy with labor unions. There may be cause for this unfair advantage, yet the union men of this city have the satisfaction of knowing that their services in other cities are of value at better wages.

We hope some day that the personnel of the Columbus School Board will be so changed that the parents of the workers can represent their own true interests in the matters of education facilities. When this time arrives, building contracts will be let to the lowest bidder and local contractors instead of foreign, will be given the preference. While the present Board has the power to give contracts there is little use to plead with the workers to be patriotic to the interests of their home city. Our people need work; they are capable of giving the best service in the country to any firm that would pay a living wage. Apparently this is not an issue with the Columbus School Board. Their paramount issue appears to be the sole preservation of their political fences. Whence we have a right to give them the title of Our Mysterious School Board. J. H. H.

Capitalism is devouring her own children. Poverty and want are destroying the masses. Luxury and debauchery the masters.

MOON-FLY BIT T. R.

(Washington Cor. N. Y. World.)

Colonel James Edwards, for 33 years Democratic doorkeeper at the United States Senate, said today that Theodore Roosevelt is suffering from the effects of the bite of an African moon fly. The African moon fly, Mr. Edwards declares, either kills or drives the person mad it bites.

The Colonel was warned against the fly when he went to Africa, but defied it. Mr. Edwards thinks that the third-termer was bitten, but did not know it. Now, he says, at every change of the moon the Colonel goes mad. Mr. Edwards has kept tab and at every change of the moon Mr. Roosevelt does some unusual stunt. The moon was just about to change yesterday when Mr. Roosevelt started for Chicago.

"It's moon-fly time with Mr. Roosevelt," said Mr. Edwards.

THOUSANDS WORKERS GREET DEBS AND SEIDEL

Socialist Campaign at Chicago Opened by Party's National Candidates

By A. W. Simons, Editor Coming Nation.

Chicago, June 17.—Several hundred thousand cheering workers at Riverview, Sunday, testified to the fact that there is an awakened working class in Chicago.

Through the cheers that greeted almost every sentence of the speakers, whose voices, strong as they were and trained to penetrate to reach the largest crowds, there sounded a note of determination and defiance.

Here was something that the clubs of "Paddy" Lavin could not silence. Here was something that the hoarded millions of the prostitute press could not control. Here was the voice of a force before which all the powers that have long ruled and robbed Chicago is helpless.

Chicago's workers were there by thousands, by tens and even hundreds of thousands.

Cheer The Daily World.

When The Daily World was raised aloft by one of the speakers, when he told of the fight it was making, had made and would always continue to make for those to whom it belonged and whose voice it is, the answering wave of wild cheering told that the vast audience recognized that this paper was today the center around which the revolt of labor in Chicago is crystalizing.

There were those whose thoughts went back to the struggles that had led up to this day. Here and there little groups of veterans compared almost casual gatherings around national or union emblems with the "great" picnics of but a few years ago.

Audience Clinches Argument.

When Eugene V. Debs pleaded for greater solidarity in every field of labor, when he told the story of the way in which that solidarity had grown since the battle of '94, his words were illustrated and his conclusions clinched by the very fact of the audience in front of him.

When Emil Seidel told of the achievements of the Socialists and of the possibilities of a labor-ruled city, he spoke to an audience that felt that the control of this city was already within its grasp.

Crowds Cheer Speakers Advocating Workers' Cause.

The day was ideal and crowds began filing into the great amusement park as soon as the gates were thrown open.

Greatest Crowd at Riverview.

"It is not only the largest, but the most peaceable, crowd that I ever handled," said E. P. Fitzgerald. "Not a single regrettable incident has occurred that would mar the occasion. It is the greatest gathering of people that ever assembled in Riverview. The crowd was orderly and well behaved, everybody, it seemed had come to have a pleasant time and went about it in a manner characteristic of the Socialist crowds that have gathered every year at the press picnic."

When Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist candidate for President, arrived at 4:46 the crowd gave him an ovation that continued for several minutes. Men rose from their seats shouting: "Hurrah for Debs. Long live Socialism." Women waved their handkerchiefs and children clapped their hands in honor of the veteran of many campaigns in the interests of the working class.

Although more than fifty years of age, "Gene," as he is familiarly called by the workers, spoke with his usual vigor as he pointed to the great strides which Socialism is making in America at this time.

Applause for Seidel.

Emil Seidel, former mayor of Milwaukee, and now candidate for Vice President of the United States, was also given a volume of applause when he mounted the speakers' platform. In his opening remarks he expressed his pleasure at witnessing such a vast assemblage of working men and women. He said that the workers the world over are becoming conscious of their class interests, and that when they do they will take charge of the industries and the government and conduct it in the interests of all the people.

John C. Kennedy, Socialist candidate for Governor of Illinois, was the first speaker to address the vast multitude. He told his audience that the secret power over public opinion today is the press.

"With a powerful Socialist press," said Mr. Kennedy, "the city government of Chicago will be in the hands of the working class within a very few years. What we need is a tremendously powerful press. It is the greatest need of the working class in order to reach the masses of the people.

Contest of Brains.

"This is a contest between the brains of the working class and the brains of the capitalist lawyers, because it is the brains of the lawyers upon which the capitalist depends.

"Socialism is a constructive movement. Sometimes in order to construct a modern building it becomes necessary to tear down an old shack. It may become necessary to dispense with the present system of capitalism to establish a harmonious and efficient social system."

PROTEGE OF PRIEST CLARK CHARGED WITH STEALING.

Was Assistant Cashier In West Side Dime Savings Bank.

Charged with methodically embezzling funds of the bank with which he has been connected since he was 16 years old, Louis J. Murphy, assistant cashier of the West Side Dime Savings Bank, was placed under arrest Saturday evening on a warrant sworn out by Deputy Superintendent George Walters of the State Banking Department on the charge of "misappropriating" money.

The deputy says that the total amount may reach $10,000. The bank is fully protected in the case.

Murphy, who is the second protege of Rev. Father D. A. Clark, the priest, to go wrong in a West Side bank, has been a high roller lately, it is stated.

AN ERROR.

Attention is called to the fact that our advertising department last week made an error in the street number of The Walter H. Nieman Co. on East Main Street. The correct number is 389 East Main Street, as per their adv. this week.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

The ballots for Referendum B—the platform, constitution and resolutions adopted by the National convention—are being shipped to the State Secretaries. Any State Secretary not receiving the same in due time should notify the National Office.

State Secretary Schawe, of Ohio, reports as follows:

"This is to notify you that John Adams and Jacob McCoy were expelled from Local St. Marys for being traitors to their class.

"Also Thomas W. Rowe was expelled from Local Toledo for advocating the candidacy of a Republican."

The first announcement regarding the lyceum work for 1912-13, together with a very neat folder, has just been sent to Local Secretaries. Any Secretary who may not have received this letter will be sent full information by sending a post card request to the Lyceum Department, giving his name and address plainly written.

State Secretaries who have not recently sent the National Office a complete and corrected list of the names and addresses of the local and branch Secretaries are requested to do so at once, in order that the mailing list may be kept as nearly correct as possible. When the up-to-date address is not on the mailing list the Monthly Bulletins go to the wrong person and frequently never reach the members.

The Woman's National Committee desires to call attention to the fact that The Progressive Woman has arranged a complete and interesting program for the year. Articles by the best writers in the Socialist Party—Eugene V. Debs, Morris Hillquit, Joseph E. Cohen, May Wood-Simons, Lena Morrow Lewis, Theresa Malkiel, John Spargo and others. Pictures by good artists on timely topics. Book Review Department, by Floyd Dell, one of the leading literary critics of Chicago. He is a Socialist and gives the working class interpretation to his reviews. Woman's Trades Union Department, by Pauline M. Neuman, brilliant young organizer for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Entertainment Programs, by Caroline A. Lowe, General Correspondent Woman's National Committee. Organization matter of great value to Socialist women.

The Woman's National Committee asks the co-operation of the Socialist locals in making the Progressive Woman, the leading magazine in the United States for working class women.

So many orders have been received for the propaganda entertainments like that sent out by the Woman's National Committee on the White Slave Traffic, that the committee has decided to resume the publication of these programs in the Progressive Woman.

They consist of songs, recitations and readings and are prepared for the use of locals desiring to give a first-class entertainment that will be interesting and educational for both Socialists and non-Socialists. The songs are taken from Moyer's Songs of Socialism. This can be obtained from the National Office for twenty cents a copy.

The subject for the July program is Child Labor. Those desiring this program can receive it by sending five cents to the Woman's National Committee, 111 North Market Street, Chicago, or by sending for a year's subscription to the Progressive Woman.

There is a growing demand for Socialist plays. A most beautiful playlet, written by Kendrick P. Shedd, was published in the New York Call, May 19. It was given with great success by Local Rochester, N. Y. Over one hundred persons took part in the program, and it was played to a crowded house. It can be given effectually upon a smaller scale. Send to the New York Call, 400 Pearl Street, New York, for a copy of the May 19 edition.

The Socialist Party of West Virginia, at its recent successful State convention, nominated the following ticket:

For Governor—Harold W. Houston, Parkersburg, W. Va.
Secretary of State—W. C. Cartright, Fairmont, W. Va.
Superintendent of Schools—J. B. West, Mannington, W. Va.
Secretary of Agriculture—Morris Max, Logan, W. Va.
Congressman at Large—William A. Peters, Wheeling, W. Va.
State Treasurer—H. H. Guntner, Morgantown, W. Va.
Auditor—E. H. Mintzer, Clarksburg, W. Va.

Nominations for Attorney General and two Judges of the Supreme Court of Appeals were left to be filled by the State Committee.

Proposed Referendums.

"Poplar Bluff, Mo., June 19, 1912.

"The Socialist Local of Poplar Bluff, Mo., in special meeting assemble don June 11, 1912, adopted the following resolution: That we demand the recall of Comrade J. Mahlon Barnes as Campaign Manager and call for National Referendum of the membership of the Socialist Party.

"Thirty-two members in good standing on June 1, 1912.

"Portsmouth, O., June 10, 1912.

"Portsmouth Local of Socialist Party of Ohio, 100 members in good standing, requests seconds for the following motion: That we demand the resignation of Comrade J. M. Barnes as Campaign Manager of Socialist Party for 1912.

"Regular session held June 9, 1912."

Branon, Texas, Local No. 1093, moves that J. Mahlon Barnes be at once remoed as Chairman of the National Campaign Committee and that the National Campaign Committee be instructed to name his successor with the sanction of the presidential and vice presidential candidates.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

Jewish Socialists held a convention in New York City last week. They have 60 distinct branches with 3,000 dues-paying members, and plans were considered to push the work of organizing the sympathizers everywhere.

Chicago Socialists have pledged themselves to help raise money for Clarence Darrow to pay his expenses incurred in the trial in progress in Los Angeles. The unions of Chicago are also requested to assist in the matter.

It is probable that J. Keir Hardie, the Socialist leader in the British House of Parliament, will come to the United States in the near future to take a hand in the Presidential campaign. If Hardie comes over he will limit his speeches to the principal cities.

"The Modern Socialist" is the name of a new play that has been making quite a hit on the Pacific slope, having been seen by half a million during the past few months. It has been taken to Honolulu for a short engagement and will then tour the Eastern States.

Meagre information from Tampa, Fla., is to the effect that the Socialists increased their vote 300 per cent. in the city election last week and that the police resorted to the most brutal and coercive methods to prevent the people from voting the Socialist ticket.

Nashville politicians have gone to the limit of prohibiting the Socialists from holdng meetngs, fearful of the growng sentiment for the Reds. The latter went into court and secured an injunction to prohibit the politicians or their cops from interfering with their peaceful and lawful assemblages.

Rudolstadt, an independent State of Germany, well into the hands of the Socialists last year. The first thing they did when they took control of the reins was to lop off a lot of sinecures and declare their refusal to levy further taxes to pay Emperor William's huge salary and for military purposes. Then the imperial government set the machinery in motion and dissolved the Rudolstadt legislature and called for a new election, which has just been held and the Socialists again proved victorious. It is not revealed what the next move will be.

Socialism is going to be crushed by the righteous hand of bell wethers who see the spectre of working class control making ground for those lily fingered gentry to cultivate. Wouldn't it be an awful spectacle to see this "finer" clay of manhood to us the tools of production and do something useful for society?

You can scarcely find an intelligent man ready to take the platform and defend the iniquitous system of capitalism which is cursing the world today. Not one of them have a remedy to offer for the ills that beset society.

There is no independence possible within capitalism. Any revolt that don't go beyond the capitalistic horizon is no revolt. Its only a tea party It's only the fury of a dude.

A FORMIDABLE ARGUMENT.

By Ralph Korngold.

What is the most formidable argument in the whole range of Socialist philosophy?

There are many formidable arguments; but there is one which the opponent of Socialism can not even make a bluff at answering.

It is the argument about the inevitability of Socialism.

Most Socialists are acquainted with this argument.

Of course, every one knows that the workers produces a surplus over and above the amount of his wages.

With its wages the working class is therefore able to buy back only a part of its product.

The capitalist class, being a small class, can not possibly consume the remainder, or use it all up in riotous living, and must therefore find a foreign market for it.

Now the foreign markets of the world are limited; in fact have almost disappeared. Most other nations, instead of being markets, are themselves looking for markets, having conditions identical with those we have in the United States.

Japan, which used to be a very profitable market, has practically ceased to be one. China is being rapidly "modernized," and will soon supply its own wants, and perhaps be looking for a market itself.

Now, if every nation wants to sell and no nation wants to buy—because those who want to buy CAN NOT buy—there will be a universal stagnation of industry, that is STARVATION.

Whereupon the nations will be able to make their choice between STARVATION OR SOCIALIZATION, that is SOCIALISM.

This is the argument, concisely stated. There is no loophole in this argument. The opponent of Socialism can't get over it or around it. He must fact it. AND HE IS FACING A STONE WALL.

Herbert Spencer recognized the force of this argument, and declared Socialism to be inevitable.

John Stuart Mills recognized the force of this argument, and it made him a convert to Socialism.

AND AS LONG AS THE ARGUMENT REMAINS UNCHALLENGED SOCIALISM REMAINS UNCHALLENGED.

It is quite useless for an opponent of Socialism to try to "annihilate" Socialism by showing that it will destroy the home, the church, incentive or individuality, as long as he is unable to disprove the argument of the inevitability of Socialism.

For, if Socialism is inevitable, we may consider it a great pity if it will do any or all of these things. BUT IT DOES NOT BECOME ANY LESS INEVITABLE ON THAT ACCOUNT.

Supposing an astronomer were to prove with mathematic accuracy that San Francisco was going to have another earthquake, would you try to disprove his statement by demonstrating that an earthquake was impossible ,BECAUSE IT WOULD DESTROY THE HOMES AND CHURCHES IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Socialism will come because the human race may consent to starve for a while and to a certain degree. BUT IT WILL NOT CONSENT TO STARVE PERPETUALLY AND TO A DEGREE HITHERTO UNKNOWN.

If the coming of Socialism will destroy the home, the church, individuality and incentive, why, then so much the worse for the home, the church, individuality and incentive! BUT, OF COURSE, IT WILL DO NOTHING OF THE KIND. EVOLUTION DOES NOT WORK THAT WAY.

There are over eleven million idle workingmen in this country. And if these numbers are increased in the next year capitalism can well expect to find that anarchy will reign, for even though the workers are submissive to teh law, they will not see their loved ones starve while others are rioting in luxury and giving cat and dogdinners.

God's partners in the coal business are greatly offended because the miners won't accept the few crumbs they offer. Since God has ordained a few men to rule the mining business, the miners will be violating the ninth commandment if they object. But if the miners take a little to Socialism they will keep within the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount.

The Flour Trust believes it is entitled to more profits and is going to advance the price of this necessary commodity. You may kick but it will do no good.

BREWERY WORKERS' CONVENTION.

To the Members of Our International Organization.

Comrades:—In conformity with the decision of the eighteenth convention of our organization, a call is herewith issued to all local unions to elect delegates to represent them at the nineteenth convention of our International organization, to be held at Denver, Colo., in the East Denver Turner Hall, commencing Monday, September 9, 1912, this being the second Monday in September, at 10 a. m.

The local unions are requested to nominate Auditors out of the delegates elected and to notify Headquarters of the election of delegates and the nomination of their choice for Auditors, of whom there will be three elected through referendum vote. All nominations for Auditors must be made and reported July 1, 1912, and the election will take place July 10 to August 10, 1912.

Resolutions and propositions for consideration by the convention should also be forwarded to Headquarters, as the same will have to be printed in pamphlet form before going to Denver. These resolutions must bear the seal of the local union or the name of the delegate representing same.

During the convention Denver headquarters of our organization will be at the Adams Hotel, where prices for rooms, without meals, range from $1.00 to $2.50 per day; for other hotel accommodations delegate are requested to communicate with the chairman of the Convention Arrangement Committee, Brother William Koch, address 2223 West Twenty-seventh Avenue, Denver, Colo.

The local unions are all urged to participate in this convention, either by electing delegates or by giving proxy representation to delegates of other local unions. No delegate is entitled to more than three votes. Credentials for all delegates elected must be forwarded to Headquarters not later than September 1, 1912, inasmuch as the Auditors also act as Credential Committee.

By order of the International Executive Board.

Fraternally yours,

ADAM HUEBNER,
LOUIS KEMPER,
JOSEPH PROEBSTLE,
National Secretaries.

DAVID GOLDSTEIN

This is the way the Alarm, the Socialist daily of Belleville, Ill., welcomes David Goldstein, the renegade, to "kill Socialism" in its city:

David Goldstein, of Boston, Mass., is billed to lecture at the Lyric Theater on next Tuesday night. David will try to tell the people of Belleville what Socialism is not. Goldstein is one of the few who elbowed his way into the Socialist movement, thinking there was money in it for him. When he got in the inside, and after an inspection which lasted for a short time, he came to the conclusion that he was in the wrong crowd, and began to find fault with the movement. David then got out his field glass and spotted another bunch who were opposing Socialism. David then said to himself, "there is the gang who has got the dough, and I will work them to a frazzle." The scheme worked fine, and Goldstein has had easy sailing ever since. Goldstein on next Tuesday night will try to picture to the people of Belleville the great harmony which exists between Capital and Labor. Goldstein will come here to save Belleville from the clutches of the Socialist party. He will no doubt be surprised to learn that four aldermen have been elected into office on the strength of his last visit here. Go it, Goldie, old boy! The Socialists of Belleville welcome you!

SOCIALISTS NOT STRIKE BREAKERS.

In refutation to the charge that has gained some currency of late in Socialist circles to the effect that some members of the Harvard Socialist Club were said to have aided in trying to break the strike at Lawrence, the Intercollegiate Socialist Society takes pleasure in publishing the following statement from Samuel A. Eliot, Jr., President of the club: "No members of the Harvard Socialist Club helped to try to break the strike at Lawrence." Comrade Eliot further states that a number of the club's members endeavored to assist the strikers by contributions, and in other ways.

OHIO SOCIALIST PLATFORM AND RESOLUTIONS

PLATFORM

Adopted at the 12th Annual Convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, April 28th, 1912.

We, the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, reaffirm our allegiance to the national platform of the Socialist Party of America and the principles of International Socialism by demanding the collective and public ownership and the democratic management of all natural resources and the means of wealth production and distribution. We demand for the workers access to the machinery of wealth production and the land at all times and the full value of their toil.

We declare that all government, whether city, state or national, is controlled by and administered in the interest of the economically dominant class—the capitalist class. We emphasize the growing power of the capitalist class, making it more and more difficult for the workers to gain a livelihood, and the continuous struggle on the part of the workers, forcing from capitalism more and more of its labor product, and realizing that with the economic growth of industries into the mammoth trust stage, thereby being brought more and more into the control of a few men; the workers to further protect and prepare themselves for their historic mission, the emancipation from wage slavery, we, the Socialist Party, indorse and recommend to the workers the industrial form of organization as a means to protect their economic and political rights, and with their ballots elect representatives of their own class into public office. We maintain that political support of capitalist parties on the part of the workers, simply results in greater power for the capitalist class.

The Socialist Party is the party of the working class, able and competent to represent the interests of the producers on the political field. The resignation of each and every Socialist candidate on the Socialist ticket is in the hands of the Socialist organization, so that when elected to office, if he or she does not fulfill the pledges made previous to election, his or her resignation is demanded.

As measures that will strengthen the position of the workers in the struggle against capitalism, we demand:

First—Equal suffrage for men and women.

Second—The Initiative and Referendum, Proportional Representation and the Right of Recall.

Third—Compulsory Insurance against accident and death, the cost to be borne by the employers.

Fourth—That the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts be so corrected, modified and restricted that delinquent girls brought before such courts be humanely treated from a corrective and modern viewpoint, and that such delinquents be not condemned to practical and demoralizing imprisonment in sectarian institutions, wherein sweatshops, laundries and other industries are conducted for profit, and that the state immediately furnish modern and humane and industrial homes for the mental and moral education and the upliftment of such unfortunates.

Fifth—The abolishing of all exemptions from taxation of taxable property, including church property, convents, charity hospitals, etc., heretofore exempted from their just burden of taxation.

Sixth—We recognize that the question of race superiority injected into the minds of the white wage-worker against the negro and other races is only a tactical method used by the capitalist class to keep the workers divided on the economic field. We, therefore, call upon the negro workers and those of other races, to unite with the Socialist Party on the political field as the only avenue of abolishing wage slavery, and the only solution of the race question.

Seventh—Realizing that white slavery and prostitution is a direct result of economic exploitation of female labor, we insist that the women workers be protected by the state against low wages and long hours of labor.

Resolutions.

Resolved, That this convention instruct Victor L. Berger to introduce a bill into Congress to prevent the unnecessary loss of life on sea-going ships as was the case in the Titanic disaster.

Whereas, The splendid and victorious struggle of our 36,000 fellow-workers at Lawrence, Mass., has resulted not only in raising their own wages, but also those of 300,000 shamefully underpaid slaves in the textile industries; and,

Whereas, The brutal capitalist class of the State of Massachusetts determined at any cost and at all hazards to crush the rising revolt of the workers and has therefore, caused the indictment and arrest of our comrade, Wm. D. Haywood and other, notwithstanding the fact that directed by these leaders, the workers of Lawrence conducted themselves with great restraint and caution; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That we pledge ourselves to support the workers of Lawrence in their continued struggle and that we declare our confidence in Comrade William D. Haywood and heartily indorse his activity in behalf of the workers of Lawrence.

Whereas, The capitalist class of Lawrence, Mass., has broken its implied pledge to release Ettor and Giovanitti from jail and now propose to persecute these workers.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the delegates of Ohio, in convention assembled, do express our earnest protest against the unlawful and brutal imprisonment of those workers on the ridiculous charge of accessory before the fact of the murder of a comrade in the struggle for better conditions.

We demand for them a fair and immediate trial and pledge both moral and financial support in the efforts to gain their release.

Whereas, It is of great importance to the Socialist movement that the children of Socialist families be kept within the sphere of Socialist thought and influence, while being given opportunity for wholesome recreation and enjoyment; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the twelfth annual convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, That the organization of young people's Socialist leagues be approved and encouraged, and that the attention of the various locals of the State be drawn to this matter through the State Bulletin.

Whereas, The craft union movement has been largely rendered impotent because of its lack of solidity and its antiquated methods.

Whereas, Industrial progress has almost universally substituted large scale production for small scale production; and,

Whereas, The principles of industrial unionism are now made absolutely necessary for the protection and advancement of the working class;

Tehrefore, be it Resolved, by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That the membership of the party in this State be urged to recommend to the working class the principles of industrial unionism without the indorsement of any particular national organization.

RESOLUTIONS—G. A. Storck, Lorain; Josephine Bates, Toledo; E. E. Rimbach, Elyria; Geo. Bundy, Warren; E. B. Lewis, Columbus.

BOY SCOUTS—MILITARY?

By Terence Vincent.

The maze of assertions and denials regarding the Boy Scout movement has baffled some of us, and in order to get the matter cleared up we have gone to headquarters for "exact information."

Following are statements sent to the writer, evidently with a view to imparting information. If the reader can go through them and come out with the feeling that all is now clear and simple regarding this much-vexed question he will do well.

The following is from Baden Powell's office, London: "In reply to your letter, Sir Baden Powell asks me to say that we do not train scouts in any military duties, nor do we concern ourselves in any way with strikes."

Here again we have a statement from James M. West, executive secretary of the Boy Scouts of America:

1. The Boy Scouts of America is not a military organization.

2. The organization of Boy Scouts of America is only of value to the future U. S. army, in so far as the training which boys receive would prepare them to be strong, healthy men, who know how to take care of themselves under all circumstances.

3. The scouts have never been and never will be trained in the breaking of strikes. That is the business of the police and militia.

And this was prepared by the general staff and sent to me by Major General Wood, chief of staff, War Department, U. S. A.

"There is no doubt that a boy who makes a good scout will make a good soldier. There is no doubt, also, that were rifle practice added to the requirements the first-class scouts would have most of the training necessary for soldiers in the ranks; and, should they have absorbed thoroughly the ideals of honesty, courage, loyalty and patriotism, a company recruited from their ranks need fear comparison with no organization ever mustered into the service of the United States."

Comrade, is your boy going to be a bullet-stopper? It is a patriotic pleasure.

AT THE TOMB OF THE BANKER

I stood at the tomb of a banker, and, gazing at the marble shaft that marked his last resting place, I pondered on his greatness. I saw him when he left his birthplace in an Eastern village, eager to conquer. I could see him winning promotion after promotion in business life, because he never was particular about the "color" of the dollars he acquired. He accepted the widow's all as the rich man's mite, nor turned a hair when perchance it was the all of an orphan.

I saw him as a captain of industry, when he wrested wealth by taking unfair advantage of his employes by forcing them to work for starvation wages; through his ownership of the machine; his competitors were forced to the wall through his ability to control the market, and as I gazed at his tomb I could see the sunken eyes of the spirits of those he had wronged marshalled in solid phalanx, looking the look of the wronged. I could see the legislators he had bought, the law-makers he had corrupted, the fair womanhood he had debauched, through low wages.

I could see the tears of anguish shed by countless thousands of those he had injured by his business methods, and dry eyes of those he had caused to suffer beyond the point of tears. Looking through the green trees. I could see the spire of a church he had given his town, whose lofty spires were a constant reminder of his devotion to the life of the godly. I gazed upon the bronze tablet in his honor in the doorway of the church itself as a testimonial of his benefactions.

I thought of the workers in his employ; of their privations, of their struggles against want, of their humble houses of worship, of their unmarked graves when a premature death had called them—and I knew that I wouldn't have changed places with him in his marble tomb.

I would rather have been that humble toiler, sent to an untimely death by the carelessness of industry, lying in an unmarked grave, conscious that in my life I had injured none, knowing that though I died in poverty I had taken naught from another, than to have lain in that marble tomb with the reproaches of my victims ever with me; and I would rather be the widow of that poor worker, and had as his only heritage the knowledge that he had lived upright and honest, than to have been the million-endowed widow of the banker.

I would rather walk the streets a washerwoman and a cleaner of halls and offices, able to look anyone in the face, than to have the finger of reproach from one man or woman at my acquired wealth.

Socialism is not a far-off dream. It is the next step. This is demonstrated by the great and constant increase in the Socialist vote all over the civilized world.

SOCIALIST COUNCILMEN BLOCK BEXLEY DEAL

Aristocratic Suburb Foiled in Attempt to Hold Up City Some More

Councilman Griffin introduced an ordinance in council last Monday night to give the village of Bexley a twenty-year contract for the disposal of its sewage at 77½ per capita, with the privilege of serving residents adjoining the village. The measure was referred to committee despite the strenuous efforts of Pub-Soliciter Bolin in speeches made lic Service Director Kinnear and City in behalf of the Bexley boosters. Mr. E. N. Huggins was present in the lobby, but council voted 10 to 8 not to hear him. The Socialists, as usual asked a lot of "bonehead" questions. They can see no sense in furnishing the aristocrats of Bexley with service for 77½ cents per capita that costs the city $1.24. It is apparent that the Bexley bunch who get their wealth by exploiting the people of Columbus, want to make the city give up some more.

An ordinance amending the tenement code so that a business building have tenement quarters above can be built to cover the entire lot, propvided the upper stories cover but a portion of the first story and leave an open areaway for breathing room and roof playgrounds was passed with Socialists Bohnert, Wilson, Warren and Zimpfer opposing it. The plea made was that the change was that children could play on the roof of the first story. The Socialists ventilated this alleged argument. They showed that it only aided landlords in building tenements in the congested districts. To the statement that tenants did not have to live in such places the fact was emphasized that the working class had to live where they could easily get to work in the early morning hours. It was shown that professional and business men could live anywhere, however ristant from their places of business.

The ordinance providing for the annexation of the territory including Olentangy park was also defeated.

An ordinance prohibiting the display of firearms for sale or of placards advertising weapons for sale, was passed.

The ordinance providing for the $700,000 bond issue, approved by two-thirds of the voters April 21, for the elimination of grade crossings was passed.

An attempt to pass over the mayor's veto the ordinance reimbursing Harry Nichols and W. G. Shellenbarger for damages of $50 each, awarded against them in the Macklin saloon raid case, failed.

The Socialists voted against the reimbursement on the ground that the bonding companies should stand the damages and not the city.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL MEETING BECOMES A CONTINUOUS RIOT!!

The Republican National convention is in session at Chicago this week. The proceedings have been marked by scenes of tumult and riot from the first. Two thousand armed men are on duty to preserve order in a body of 1000 delegates and 10,000 spectators. Even the capitalistic papers denounce the affair as disgraceful. The Taft steam roller has been in working order and when this is written (Thursday) Theodore the Terror, has ordered his followers to bolt if they cannot have their way. Senator Root, Taft's heachman, was elected chairman in the midst of cheers, hisses and personal combats.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

An effort to have modified the order of State Factories and Workshops Inspector T. P. Kearns and the finding of Master Commissioner Robert W. McCoy in the suit to enjoin the erection of exterior fire escapes on many of the Columbus school buildings will be made by the building committee of the Board of Education according to the action of that body last Monday night.

After Dr. G. W. Willard resigned as member from old Subdistrict No. 5 he was elected member-at-large, to succeed Mrs. Ella June Purcell Guild, who resigned two weeks ago. Dr. Willard received the votes of eight of the nine members present. Member Draper, Socialist, did not vote.

The report of the enumeration of school children showed a total of 39,951, a number about 1000 less than last year. The board will lose several thousand dollars of money from the state on account of the decrease. There were 20,071 boys and 19,880 girls.

SWORN STATEMENT ABOUT THE GLADYS CRAWFORD CASE

we can hurry matters up, and that is by putting up enough money to send somebody down after her. As to how long it will be before they bring her here, that is problematical; it is hard to say just when they will be sending a man down there, it might be three days or it might be ten. You can rest assured, however, that she will be released in a very short time. No money will be turned over until she is here. If you feel that you would rather put up the money for expenses than to wait, and will let us know we will take the matter up at once. The matter is settled, however, as to her getting out. Hoping this is satisfactory, we are,

Yours very truly,
RICHARDS & RICHARDS,
By H. L. RICHARDS.

March 29th, 1912,
Mrs. Penn:

Madam—Your letter received and in reply will say that we did not mean to convey that it was necessary for you to pay the expenses of Gladys from Cincinnati, but if you did so it might get her here a day or so earlier. Everything is closed and I will do all I can to get her on the way at once. You must remember that you cannot hurry a Judge or Court unless they so desire and we cannot afford to get him mad just now as he has already granted what we ask. I will let you know when to come to Columbus. Hoping that this will be satisfactory, I remain,

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS.

April 4th, 1912,
Box 33, Alexandria, O.:

Rear Madam—Your letter received and in reply will say that any clothing to be sent your daughter can be sent to her at Cincinnati. As to when they will send for her it is absolutely impossible for me to say, and it is impossible for me to hurry things further. I find that we are very lucky in getting her out at all. If the proceeding should be stopped now there will be no chance whatever of getting her out within the next year and possibly two years. As I explained to you before, they will not make a special trip for her, but as soon as any one is to be sent down there, they will bring her back.

Mrs. Murray was much put out when she heard Judge Black had agreed to release her. You can go ahead and make arrangements for moving, etc., and as soon as Gladys is out she will be sent to your sister's at Mansfield, or you can arrange to meet her here in Columbus. I can assure you that everything has been done that is possible to be done. It is only a matter now of a few days one way of another.

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS.

April 13th, 1912,
Mrs. Dean Penn, Box 33, Alexandria, Ohio:

Dear Madam—I am in receipt of your letter of the 12th. inst. There is nothing new in regard to Gladys release, since I wrote you, as they have not sent any one down there yet. It will be but a short time, however, until they have occasion to go there and when they go, Gladys will be brought back with them. Kindly send the full address of your sister, Mrs. Foster, at Mansfield.

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS.

Columbus, O., April 26th, 1912,
Mrs. Dean Penn:

Dear Madam—Your letter received and will say that I was sorry that I could not talk to you yesterday. Everything is now all right, Gladys will be in Mansfield next week, I had a conference with Black and Miss Murray again this morning. She, Gladys, is to be delivered on one condition and that is that I will personally take her to Mansfield and deliver her at your sisters. I had to guarantee under oath almost to do this, Gladys' expenses will all be paid, but you will have to send my fare to Mansfield and return. The trouble has been that two different girls that have been released have turned out worse than ever and are now under the control of the Court. It was only by the strongest influence that we succeeded at all. I doubt very much whether it could be accomplished again even in this way. It will not be necessary and I do not think it advisable for any one to come down as under my promise to the Court I am bound to accompany Gladys to Mansfield and it will only make additional costs. You do not need to worry farther as the matter is settled. Hoping to hear from you at once, I remain.

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS,
Attorney.

P. S.—No money has as yet been paid in to the Court. Will look after this later.

May 1, 1912,
Mrs. Dean Penn:

Madam—In regard to Gladys, we will be in Mansfield next Saturday or Sunday, probably Saturday. They were delayed somewhat on account of a trial. I had quite a time in regard to expenses. It seems that the clerk misinformed me in regard to her fare. The Judge politely informed me that I must put up for her car fare and showed me that in several cases that where the parties were taken out on request the money was put up, and sometimes even paid the officers' way down and back. I did not argue any farther and left my personal check for $3.40. I did not feel that we had ought to let the matter fail for a few dollars, trusting to you to reimburse me. I will find out the earliest train we can take out, and let you know if possible. If not we will likely be able to find the address without much trouble. Hoping this will be satisfactory, I remain,

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS.

May 23rd, 1912,
Mrs. Dean Penn, 488 Bowman St.
Mansfield, O.:

Dear Madam—Your letter received and contents noted. In reply will say that I am surprised at the statements you make. I am quite sure you must be laboring under a false impression. The draft you refer to was payable to me, and of course I would be the one to sign it. In fact it was cashed as soon as I received it and placed with my account at the bank. As far as Judge Black getting any of the money I fail to see how you connect me with anything of the kind. The money you sent me was to secure other legal assistance, which was done as per our agreement, and I wish to add that I would not do the same work again for twice the amount. Your idea of what a favor is seems to be peculiar. I have spent my time and money to secure the release of your daughter, and after doing what I agreed to do, you want me to pay back money I have received to pay for other legal services. I never agreed or never said it was to be paid to Black, nor do I have any knowledge of his ever receiving any money in this matter. If you are trying to incriminate Judge Black, you are on the wrong track, as I never talked with him until everything was decided. As far as I know he is absolutely clear in the matter. This seems to be a case where an attorney has trusted a client to pay fees for work he has done, knowing the parties not to be financially responsible. I could have charged you $50.00 for my fees alone and not have charged too much. I had made up mind however, that if you paid me the $10 you owe me and what I actually paid out amounting to $6.00 I would let it go at that. I fully realize that your financial condition is such that I cannot get this money, unless you see fit to pay it. The work I have done should certainly be appreciated by yourself and Gladys enough to pay the small sum. If you do do not see fit to pay it, well and good, as I can get along without it. You must remember that I have not only been working for nothing, but have actually paid out money out of my pocket for persons in whom I am not interested, except in a legal way. If you care to send the balance due me amounting to $13.70 I shall be glad to receive it. Otherwise I do not care to discuss this matter further.

Very truly yours,
H. L. RICHARDS.
Attorney-at-Law.

This affiant says she has no comment to make on the above letters as they speak for themselves as to who constitute the connecting link between the Great Private corporations on the Industrial Feild, the Sweat-Shop which grinds up not only childhood, but infancy into dollars at the expense of Motherhood and against the opportunity of honest men to secure employment to provide for the wants of those same children and infants; that affiant firmly believes that if the citizenship of Ohio is aroused to the full extent of this system there is no power on earth which will stop them from wiping this blot on the fair face of Ohio off the map and further affiant saith not.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM IS SIMPLY SOPHISTRY

That Means Just Pure, Unadulterated Lying, Even if Offered by a Big Political Party

SOUTHERN DEMOCRATS ARE HYPOCRITES

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington—The new Republican platform is the finest piece of sophistry and unadulterated lying that has ever been offered as a political declaration by either of the two old parties.

Only the other day an aroused public, led by the Socialist press succeeded in blocking the passage of the infamous Root amendment which provided for the deportation of political refugies. Senator Root, the chairman of the Republican convention and the censor of the Republican platform, was the author of this amendment against the right of asylum. In the light of the foregoing, what do you think of this clause in the new Republican platform?

"The right of asylum is a precious possession of the people of the United States, and it is to be neither surrendered nor restricted."

A few months ago the country was stirred by the scandal in the Department of Agriculture which permitted greedy capitalists to poison the food of the people. Now, the Republican party declares in its platform that one of the accomplishments of this "Party of Lincoln" was "the vigorous administration of the laws relating to pure food and drugs." Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, who had to resign from his position as Chief of Bureau of Chemistry, will be greatly interested in this clause, no doubt.

Here is a spicy item: "We rejoice in the success of the distinctive Republican policy of the conservation of our natural resources for their use by the people without waste or monopoly. Ballinger and Guggenheim will undoubtedly lead in the rejoicings.

A noteworthy ommission in the latest Republican vote-catcher is that stereotyped promise of injunction legislation. Even the weak promise of the 1908 platform is left out. It must be said, however, that the Republican party knew that the injunction legislation desired by Samuel Gompers would not get it many votes. The Republican politicians have lost all fear of Gompers' threats of "punishing enemies" and they let him go to Baltimore where politicians are not so shrewd.

The 1912 platform of the Republican party also omits its famous declaration against Socialism, which graced the 1908 platform. That warning against Socialism resulted in a big gain for the Socialist party in 1908 and the framers of the 1912 platform did not want to take chances with another warning.

The following from the new Republican platform is the most important bid for working men's votes contained in that document:

"It will strive, not only in the nation, but in the several States, to enact the necessary legislation to safeguard the public health; to limit effectively the labor of women and children, to protect wage-earners engaged in dangerous occupations; to enact comprehensive and generous workman's compensation laws."

Innumerable bills covering these subjects have been successfully blocked and killed in committee rooms by the Cannons, Roots, Heyburns and other Republicans. The Republican party for the last decade has had control of the legislative machinery of the national government and most of the States. The problems of labor which are mentioned above have existed throughout that time. And still the Republican party is "striving."

It is striving for votes, that's all.

DRISCOLL EXPOSES DEMOCRATS.

The hypocrisy of the Southern Democrats who pose as "friends of labor" in the House of Representatives for political effect, but who do nothing in their own States to relieve the conditions of the workers, was bitterly arraigned by Representative Driscoll, of New York, a Republican, in a scorching speech in the House.

His denunciation was brought about by the brazen hypocrisy of Representative Heflin, of Alabama, in declaring that "there is no man in this House who will vote more readily for those who toil." The House had under consideration the naval appropriation bill, and Uncle Joe Cannon, the reactionary member from Illinois, offered an amendment that only coal mined under the eight hour work day be purchased. Apparently Cannon's move was to help the mine workers' but the real reason that the coal mined in Cannon's home district is already mined under the eight hour day, and he was merely serving the Illinois mine owners. Of course, most of the members did not see the point, and the sight of the reactionary Cannon posing as a "friend of labor" aroused the envy of all the other members and there was a general rush to praise the workers. Most of the hot air came from the Southern Democrats.

The declarations of the Southern Democrats were so obviously humbug that Driscoll arose and asked permission to insert in the Congressional Record certain extracts from the laws and constitutions of the Southern States where the so-called "friends of labor" hail from.

"There has been a good deal of buncombe here this afternoon," declared Driscoll, "more playing to the galleries and for home consumption than usual.

"The gentleman from Alabama—Mr. Heflin—grew so red in the face that I feared he might burst a blood vessel in avowing his sympathy for the down-trodden working man, and his desire to relieve him of it.

"There are several other able and influential members of this body, among them a prominent candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Let them return to their own States and repeal those outrageous statutes which are the relics of industrial slavery and peonage. Let them get in step with the march of progress in other parts of the country. Let them by their acts give evidence of their good faith and sincerity as friends of the plain people, and they will be listened to on that subject with attention and respect."

After a fight with the reactionary Southern members—the same members who form a majority on the Committee of the Judiciary, who reported and voted for the Clayton Anti-injunction bill and who have been loud mouthed in their protestations of love for the working people—Driscoll secured permissoin to insert in the Congressional Record extracts from many of the laws of the Southern States that show how these so-called "friends of labor" knife labor in the back in their own districts.

The extracts quoted by Driscoll show that in Alabama it is a crime punishable with a fine of not more than $100 and imprisonment in the County jail not more than three months to persuade a worker to leave his job; that boycotting or unfair lists are strictly forbidden. Similarly, in Texas, Georgia and in all of the Southern States, there are antiquated, outrageous and barbarous laws against labor.

And yet the Democratic Representatives who offer no protest against these conditions in their own States are constantly advertising themselves as "friends of labor" in the halls of the National Capitol.

A few days after Driscoll delivered his speech Representatives Bartlett, of Georgia, took the floor with considerable pride pointed out that Georgia has a law against the employment of children below the age of ten years. That children between the ages of ten and sixteen are enslaved in the factories and cotton mills of his State, he did not deny.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

Old Parties are Breaking Up and People Will Come Into Their Own

William H. Taft, of Ohio and James S. Sherman, of New York, were renominated for president and vice president of the United States by the National Convention of the Republican party at Chicago last Saturday evening. The platform adopted by the convention is a conglomeration of vote-catching phrases and will not fool anybody who does his own thinking.

The same evening the followers of Theodore Roosevelt named him as their candidate for president. His second fiddle will be selected later if the money can be found to finance the new so-called Progressive Party. The workingman with rent, food and clothing bills to pay has no interest in the game of the big men who manage the old party movements and their side shows. Amidst the wreck of elements and the crash of worlds the Socialist Party lifts the torch of Liberty and Enlightenment. What may be decreed by the Democratic clans in their orgy at Baltimore, as this is being written, counts for little to us. We have a world to gain, we can lose nothing but our chains. The beginning of the end has come. Old political creeds and organizations are breaking up.

The Working Class Must Emancipate Themselves

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

Under the Auspices of "The Columbus Socialist." Admission 25c, 50c and $1.00

The $1.00 admission ticket entitles the holder to an extra stick of dynamite per week for one year. This superb celebration will be held anywhere and everywhere in the United States and particularly in Columbus, Ohio. To celebrate, all that is necessary will be to discover some one who is not a subscriber to "The Columbus Socialist," and line him up for three months, six months, or one year. We guarantee everybody a good time. We expect to tie quite a number of giant fireworks to the tail of capitalism in the way of new subs.

If we don't put on at least one thousand new ones we will be badly disappointed. Office will be open all day to welcome you. Bring 'em in, boys and girls. Start out early and work late.

If you are out of town, you can help celebrate by putting Uncle Sam to work, and you will hear the echo of the explosion next November.

Let every reader of this paper throughout the state buy at least one admission ticket.

MONEY! MONEY! MONEY! WHO GOT THE BOODLE?

Unexplained Mystery as to Who Earned Ten Dollars "Remuneration" from George Harper. Rev. Lucien Clark Comes Clean.

The Columbus Socialist is very much interested in everything that concerns the citizens of Franklin County. Our motives have been impugned and all kinds of falsehoods uttered and published about us, but we still continue business at the old stand. We are very jealous about the purity of general and primary elections. There was, our readers know, a primary election held in this County on May 21. The Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties named tickets on that day. Each candidate was required by law to make a sworn statement personally and by any committee that represented him, of the money received and expended to promote his candidacy. One George M. Harper was an aspirant for the Republican nomination for sheriff. The manager of his campaign, a person known as "Doc" Waddell, filed a statement with the election board purporting to comply with the law in such cases made and provided. In the list of expenditures as set forth by Waddell is this item, "Remuneration to Rev. Clark, $10." In the interest of the common people this paper sent the following letter to the only two Reverends Clark named in the city directory: Rev. Lucien Clark of Neil Avenue and the Rev. "Father" D. A. Clark of West Broad Street:

Columbus, O., June 20, 1912.

Dear Sir—This paper in investigating the expense accounts of the various candidates at the recent primaries, find an item on the expense account of George Harper filed by "Doc" Waddell as follows. "Remuneration to Rev. Clark, $10.00." We are this day writing each Rev. by this name in the city, asking him to either deny or affirm that he is the party who received the money. In all fairness to yourself we would ask that you kindly write us stating whether you are the Rev. Clark or not. Thanking you to give the matter your prompt attention, we remain,

Sincerely yours,
The Socialist Publishing Co.

The answer made by Rev. Lucien Clark is exactly what the Socialist expected. He is not a Socialist, but we felt certain that he never had any dealings with politicians of the Harper stripe. Rev. Lucien Clark's reply is as follows:

Chevy Chase, Md., June 24, 1912.
The Socialist Publishing Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Sirs—I have your letter of 6-20, forwarded from Columbus to this place asking whether I received $10 from "Doc" Waddell on account of recent primary elections in Columbus. I hasten to say that I left Columbus last September, and have not seen the city since that time, that I never received any sum of money on account of primaries of anything else pertaining to politics in my life. I know nothing of the transaction referred to.

Very truly yours,
LUCIEN CLARK.

The Rev. "Father" D. A. Clark of West Broad Street has not yet replied. There are, as we stated, only two Reverends Clark in the Columbus directory. Where and who is the man who got $10 from George Harper?

PUBLIC HOSPITAL DEMANDED BY THE SOCIALIST COUNCILMEN

City Dads Hold Regular Highly Unimportant Session Last Monday Night

There was hardly anything of interest to the working class in the proceedings of city council last Monday night. The Socialist members, Bohnert, Warren, Wilson, and Zimpfer were on duty for their constituents but it is little they can do except to put the representatives of the capitalists on record just now. County Auditor Sayre sent a communication to council declaring if the city wished the budget commission to act, it must get it ready at the meeting.

Council did not act and the budget is still with the finance committee. The budget commission, composed of Mr. Sayre, Prosecuting Attorney Turner and Mayor Karb, probably will take up the entire budget and the city may get the short end of the deal, as the sinking fund and board of education budgets already are in.

Socialist member Wilson introduced the following:

Resolved, by the Council of the city of Columbus, Ohio, That the physicians employed by the city and on the city pay roll be required in the future to examine applicants for civil service positions free of charge.

This went to committee. Director of Safety, Barger filed notice that, by advice of City Solicitor Bolin, he would not attempt to enforce ordinance 26498, regulating the sale of firearms in this city.

Councilman Biederman introduced an ordinance to prohibit the wearing of hatpins that extended more than one-half inch from the crown of any hat. This is a measure of vital interest to the public and will undoubtedly re-elect Biederman.

An innocent looking ordinance to condemn property for an extension of the municipal stables was held up by a motion made by Socialist C. E. Warren and sent to committee.

The value of the land included in David T. Logan's proposal for a civic center is $1,370,529.75, according to his report to council. The tract lies along the east bank of the Scioto river from near Spring Street to Rich Street. The report was placed on file.

Socialist Councilman Bohnert would have a city hospital and a resolution prepared by him, asking Service Director Kinnear to prepare data for this, was referred to a special hospital committee. His plan is to have all charity and emergency cases treated in a municipal institution. At present such cases are taken to private hospitals. The last council passed an ordinance to divide between Protestant and St. Francis Hospitals $30,000, but the money is not available, because Mayor Karb omitted the item from the budget.

Traffic along Front, High, Third and Fourth Streets would have the right of way over teams from cross streets in an ordinance prepared by Safety Director Bargar.

When a person from a cross street turns into one of the preferred thoroughfares, he would have to signal the driver of the team back of him by holding an arm vertically in the air and designating with his hand the direction he intended to go. The ordinance also provides that pedestrians keep the right side of the sidewalk. It will be taken up in committee.

BACHMAN DELIVERS COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

Socialists Seem To Be No Longer Under the Ban.

Comrade J. L. Bachman delivered the annual address for the Boxwell commencement of Pleasant Township at Harrisburg on Thursday evening of last week. His topic was, "Uses of Education." Comrade Bachman gave a unique commencement speech and furnished considerable food for thought. Just think of it! Isn't it strange to think of the change since the early days of the soap-box to the time when a Socialist candidate for Congress is asked to give and address in a public school building?

We are becoming quite respectable, are we not?

PLEASE BE CAREFUL.

Attention is called to the fact that many comrades are turning in subs. without the street number of the subscriber.

It is very necessary and important that the street number should be turned in with the sub. in every instance.

Strict attention to this will aid us very materially at this end.

BUSINESS MANAGER.

YOU ARE UP AGAINST IT

By J. C. Bentall.

You found out that Bill was a Socialist, did you?

And you fired him and black-listed him?

Well, we just want to tell you that his name is no longer Bill. He is Jim now. He was smooth shaven when you fired him. He has a moustache now.

Your black-list card hasn't been revised yet, but Bill has.

And you have not moved. You are still at the same old stand. But Bill has moved. He went to a town where there wasn't a single Socialist.

He is making Socialists as fast as he is making fork handles.

Of course, it put our local on the bum for a few weeks after you fired Bill, because it was he who kept the fires of revolt burning within our breasts. We got discouraged and thought we would go all to pieces.

But the fellow you took in to fill Bill's place was also a Socialist. He was black-listed by the boss that fired him. He came from another town.

But, like Bill, he revised himself. He has a new name and a new location, but the same old spirit of revolt. He is firing us up now. We are glad he came. You didn't know that, did you?

You will discharge him, too? And you will black-list him?

Very well, he will grow chin whiskers and side burns and call himself Bob or John or Ed or some other common name.

He will go to a place also where there are no Socialist and, like Bill, he will make Socialists as fast as a convict makes broomsticks.

So you are firing all the Socialists in your shop? You say there are ten of them.

I see. And you are going to scatter them into ten other communities. They will get into fresh territory, eh?

All right.

Each of the ten will make ten new Socialists. That adds one hundred Socialists to the crowd that you have to draw from to work for you.

And these hundred will each make ten more new Socialists. That gives you one thousand that you have got to try to dodge.

The fact is that you have done this fool thing of firing and black-listing Socialists so long that now we have over a million of them in this country and close to fifty million throughout the world.

Just keep going. We don't mind. We will just move and revise our faces and our name and our location so fast that your black-list card will be several years behind.

We have no home. You have made us homeless by exploiting us to death.

We rent. It is always easy for a tenant to move. You get our rent in advance, so you need not worry.

You get to see that you are making us more eager for Socialism every time you fire us?

Exactly.

You are pushing us clear out into the sea of revolt. You are making us work harder for Socialism, for that is our only hope.

No, no. Don't try to change your tactics and treat us nice. Don't leave Bob and Jim at the jobs and think that you can soothe them. They will get the organization so strong in their town, in their city, in their county, state and nation that your whole working force will be Socialists and will elect mayor, governor, legislature, president and congress—all Socialists—and will turn your factories, your mills, your mines, your railroads over to the people for use by all and deprive you of the opportunity to exploit and black-list.

It wont work, boss.

If you fire us we scatter the fire of revolt, and if you leave us alone we organize and capture the industries for the people.

You are up against it and we'd like to know what you are going to do about it.

ARE YOU A CRIMINAL?

By John M. Work.

In George Cram Cook's novel, "The Chasm," a certain revolutionist reproaches the heroine with maintaining and profiting by the established order.

She protests that she does nothing to maintain the established order—and the apt reply comes back:

"To do nothing IS to maintain the established order."

Truer word was never spoken.

"To do nothing is to maintain the established order."

The active opponent of Socialism is not its only enemy.

He who believes in Socialism, but does no active work towards securing it, is also an enemy of Socialism.

By his indifference, he helps to maintain the existing order.

Poverty, destitution, overwork, lack of work, starvation, child labor, prostitution, strikes, lockouts, injunctions, military oppression, insanity, suicide, crime, drunkenness, graft, preventable accidents to life and limb, adulteration, disease, premature death, mental and moral stagnation—all these flourish because of his indifference.

He is a criminal, guilty of all these villainous crimes.

Are you a hustling Socialist?

Or, are you a criminal?

TAFT'S PLAY TO CATHOLICS

That President Taft is a favorite with the Catholic church leaders is pretty generally known. The following is an interesting Presidential document. It was addressed to Secretary of the Interior Fisher. And the purpose of the letter was to revoke an order of the Commissioner of Indian Schools Valentine against the wearing of religious apparel by the Catholics teaching Indians. You will note that Taft was afraid to take any definite action in the matter before the election. He did not want to lose the support of either Catholics or Protestants. So this matter is postponed—indefinitely. But here is the letter:

My Dear Mr. Secretary: It has been brought to my attention that an order has been issued by the Commissioner of Indian Schools. The order relates to the general matter which you and I have had under consideration and concerning which at your request the Commissioner was collecting detailed information for our advice. The Commissioner's order has been made without consultation with either you or with me.

It prohibits the use of distinctive religious insignia at school exercises, also the wearng of distinctive religious garb by school employes, and provides that if any school employe cannot conscientiously comply with the order, such employe will be given a reasonable time, not to extend, however, beyond the opening of the next school year, to make arrangements for employment elsewhere than in Federal Indian schools.

I fully believe in the principle of the separation of the church and state, on which our government is based, but the questions presented by the order are of great importance and delicacy. They arise out of the fact that the government has for a considerable period taken for use of the Indians certain schools theretofore belonging and conducted by distinctive religious societies of churches. As a part of the arrangement then made the school employes then employed, which were in many cases members of religious orders wearing the distinctive garb of these orders, were continued as teachers by the government, and by ruling of the Civil Service Commission or by Executive action they have been included in the classified service under the protection of the civil service law.

The Commissioner's order almost necessarily amounts to a discharge from the Federal service of those who have entered it. This should not be done without a careful consideration of all phases of the matter nor without giving the persons directly affected an opportunity to be heard. As the order would not in any event take effect until the beginning of the next school year, I direct that it be revoked and the action by the Commissioner of Indian affairs in respect thereto be suspended until such time as will permit a full hearing to be given to all parties in interest and a conclusion be reached in respect to the matter after full deliberation.

Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY NOTES

Local Lancaster, assisted by Columbus Comrades, has been able to place a Socialist speaker on the program of the Methodist camp meeting this year. The afternoon of August 17th is the date and it will be filled by Comrade F. G. Strickland. Last year the great Mr. Wesley Hill was to deliver an address on the "Evils of Socialism," on the same platform, but was "indisposed" and failed to show up.

These meetings are attended by thousands from all over the State and offer an ideal opportunity for spreading the truth of Socialism.

Programs and full information in regard to this matter will be mailed to all nearby locals in ample time.

A good hand press, installed in our hall, begins operation this week on a series of propaganda leaflets.

The windstorm last Sunday blew down the large sign in front of Socialist Hall and badly damaged one of the windows. Surely the wind bloweth alike upon the just and unjust.

Socialist meetings every Sunday 2 P. M., Socialist Hall, corner Wheeling Street and Washington Avenue. Everybody cordially invited.

There will be an increase in membership at our next meeting. Who's next? If your are a Socialist JOIN THE PARTY. Do it now!

THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM

(No. 6 on the Ballot.)

By Harry D. Thomas.

As there are several amendments dealing with Judicial reform which I will combine later on in one article we will pass to No. 6 on the ballot. Amending Section 1 of Article 2 so as to provide the people of Ohio with the initiative and referendum in the making of laws for the people of this state in the future.

The fact that a number of the members of both houses of the last legislature are now under indictment for agreeing to accept bribes to stifle progressive legislation and three of those already tried have been found guilty, is best evidence that in the years gone by our legislative bodies have long ceased to be representative of the people, and have been largely under the control of special interests. Real Representative Government can only be restored by the initiative and referendum which compels our legislatures to represent the wishes and interests of all the people instead of those of the privileged classes.

It will probably interest the members to know that each amendment before being finally adopted by the convention was voted for four times and on its 2nd and 3rd and 4th reading it required a majority of all delegates elected to vote for it to secure its adoption and on its 2nd and 3rd reading was subject to still further amendment, this explains the reasons for the success of the progressive delegates in getting the percentage reduced on this I. and R. amendment on its 3rd reading from 12 to 10 per cent for direct initiative for amending the constitution and from 8 to 3 per cent for the indirect initiative petition to the legislature for the enactment of laws.

The amendment as submitted is not all that those who have fought long and hard for years for direct legislation want as the ihitiative and referendum as we believe in the direct initiative for the making of laws and by amendments did all we could to add to the proposal as it now stand but 41 votes were the best we could muster for it. We also failed to get enough votes for our amendment striking out the taxation section forced in by the reactionaries scaring the farmer delegates into putting it there by making them believe that Bigelow was going to immediately force the single tax on them and that this section would prevent it.

Your Socialist delegate attempted to get all percentages reduced to 8 per cent as per Socialist program and succeeded in getting about one-third of the delegates to vote with him. One-third of the delegates also voted for my amendment to this article of the constitution abolishing the senate and providing for but one legislative body.

The people providing they vote this amendment into the constitution, as they undoubtedly will, reserve to themselves three distinct powers to be exercised by the petition method.

Upon petition of 10 per cent of the electors of the state an amendment to the constitution may be proposed which shall then be submitted for adoption or rejectoin at the next regular election. This is a direct initiative, but applies only to constitutional amendments.

Upon petition of 3 per cent of the state's electors any desired law may be proposed for action by the legislature. If the legislature fails to enact the measure, it goes to the people for action if 3 per cent ask for it by a new petition.

Upon petition of 6 per cent of the voters of Ohio any measure which has been passed by the legislature—barring emergency laws—shall be brought to the people for action at a regular election.

As the measure stands laws which come directly from the people shall go first to the elgislature. A copy of the proposed law and the petitions must be filed with the secretary of state, not less than ten days before the convening of the legislature. That official submits the measure and petition to the legislature, which then has four months to consider, amend, pass or decline to act on the proposal.

If no action is taken the proposed measure goes on the ballot at the next general election, provided it is demanded by an additional petition of 3 per cent of the voters in the state. If it is amended to the satisfaction of the proponents of the measure and they file no additional petition, it becomes a law after the time for referendum has passed.

All measures initiated by the people and passed by the legislature, or measures passed by the legislature without petition, are subject to a referendum when 6 per cent of the voters of the state so ask.

It is stipulated that the initiative and referendum shall never be used to secure classification of property for taxation or for the imposition of the single tax.

In submitting laws and amendments at elections permission is given the advocates and opponents of a measure to submit with the text statements for and against the measure. Pamphlets containing text and arguments are to be generally distributed.

When measures and amendments go to a referendum no special elections shall be held, all such voting being done at the regular elections.

The adoption of this amendment will practically prevent boodling in the future as no act of the legislature is final until the people have had an opportunity to pass upon it by referendum vote, and special privilege knows better than to pay for legislation that after being paid for can be defeated by the people.

This I. and R. amendment while not all that our program called for, is as it stands, one that as a Socialist we should heartily support as through it the whole of the people get an opportunity for real self-government and can improve through the 10 per their needs at any time.

SPENT FORTUNE TO EMBELLISH CHURCHES.

Poverty No Stay to Sumptuous Adornment of Catholic Edifices.

New York, June 19.—In the face of the poverty that stalks through society and which grips by the throat so many of their adherents, two Catholic churches of New York are in process of decoration and enrichment that will make them not only the finest examples of ecclesiastical art in the city, but notable among Catholic churches of the world. These are St. Ignatuis Loyola, Eighty-fourth Street and Park Avenue, which is in charge of the Jesuits, and St. Paul the Apostle, Sixtieth Street and Columbus Avenue, in charge of an American order, the Paulists.

In St. Ignatuis Church the enrichments will cost at least $300,000. Steps and floors of the vestibule are laid in Tennessee marble, with marbles brought from Italy for the panels on the side vestibule walls.

The ceiling of the church is highly decorated plaster work that is illuminated by the ceiling windows of stained glass. The three main doors of the church are double bronze highly ornamented. The electric fixtures throughout are hand beaten bronze.

All of the side walls of the church are in rich marbles of many colors. Inserted in these side walls will be precious mosaic stations of the cross, done by Salviti & Co., of Venice. These stations recently took the highest award in the Art Exposition in Paris.

In the sanctuary all is in marble of the richest variety. Back of the high altar are installed three great mosaic panels, picturing as many scenes in the life of St. Ignatuis. Opposite the beautiful baptistery, put in some years ago, will be a shrine with a highly wrought altar in marble and bronze.

What the decorations and enrichments of the Church of St. Paul the Apostle will cost or when they will be finished nobody pretends to say. William Laurel Harris, who is giving his life to the work of these embellishments, has just completed his fourteenth year there.

He is an American artist who studied seven years in Paris, spent other years in Rome and Palestine, and now has given fourteen years to this one church interior. With the backing of the Society of St. Paul, he is trying to do in art what the Paulists, directing themselves, and others, have already done in music. That is, they are restoring the old Roman art in its application to the ecclesiastical architecture.

It will be remembered, perhaps, that twenty-three great windows already in the church were by the late John La Farge, together with nine paintings. The high altar was designed by the late Stanford White. The task which Harris has set himself is a life work, and is said to be without parallel in the history of American mural decoration. The work just finished during the year has been that of wall preparation, and during the year now opening, as Harris said yesterday, more than can really be seen will be attempted. The last notable piece is the Crucifixion over the main vestibule, fifty-five feet long and twenty feet high, preparing for which Harris spent a year in the Holy Land. The artist does all of the manual labor himself, "believing," as he says, "that each new operation in the making of a design at a different scale presents the composition in some new apect."

A Socialist is a human being, with a vision and belief. He has faults and passions, just as you have; and he has virtues as well. He is not wanting to injure you or rule you, but to live in co-operation and comfort with you.

TWO "OBJECTIONS" TO SOCIALISM ANSWERED.

Answers to some objections to Socialism, by Allen L. Benson, in Pearson's for May.

It is an old saying that the tree that bears the best apples has the most clubs under it. Enough clubs are under the tree of Socialism to stock a woodyard. Some of the clubs bear the imprints of honest men. Some of the clubs do not. The great grafters of the present day are the most persistent foes of Socialism. The great grafters say, not only that Socialism is anti-religious, but that it would destroy the family. The grafters also say that Socialism stands for free love.

It may be amusing to hear a grafter oppose Socialism on the ground that it is against religion. It may be diverting to hear gentlemen with Reno reputations charge that Socialism would establish free love and thus destroy the family. But such charges cannot be dismissed by laughing at those who make them. Honest men and women want to know the truth.

The truth is that there is no truth in the charge that Socialism is against religion. Socialism is purely an economic matter. It has no more to do with religion than it has to do with astronomy. It is no more against religion than it is against astronomy. Men of all religious denomination are Social-Democrats, and men of no religious denomination are Social-Democrats. Nor is there any reason why this should not be so. The very pith and marrow of Socialism is the contention that the people, through the government, should own and operate, for their exclusive benefit, the great machinery of production and distribution that is now owned and operated by the trusts. Either this contention is sound or it is not. Whether it is sound or not, a man's religious beliefs cannot possibly have anything to do with what he thinks of it.

But while Socialism is in no sense anti-religious, it is in one sense pro-religious. So good an authority as the Encyclopedia Brittanica declares that "the ethics of Socialism and the ethics of Christianity are identical." One of the concerns of Christianity is to establish justice upon earth. The only concern of Socialism is to establish justice upon earth. Socialism seeks to establish justice by giving each human being an equal opportunity to labor, while depriving each human being of the power to appropriate any part of the product of another human being's labor.

Nor does the Socialist program contain a word of comfort for the Reno gentlemen. Socialists beg leave frankly to doubt the sincerity of certain wealthy men who profess to believe that Socialism would destroy the family by bringing about free love.

Addressing themselves to the members of the capitalist class, Socialists therefore speak as follows:

"If the preservation of the family depends upon you, God help the family. If the preservation of womanly women depends upon you, God help the women. You are not all bad, but you are all doing bad. Some of you are doing bad without knowing it, some of you are doing bad though knowing it. But, whether you know it or not, all of you are doing bad because your capitalist system is bad. Your system makes those of you who would do good do bad. It makes you fatten upon the labor of children, because your competitors are fattening upon the labor of children. It makes you fatten upon the labor of women, because your competitors are fattening upon the labor of women. It makes you fatten upon the labor of men because your competitors are fattening upon the labor of men. It makes you keep men, women and children poor, because in no other way could you become rich.

"And you are the ones who are so fearful lest Socialism shall destroy the home. Why do you not worry a little lest the poverty caused by capitalism shall destroy the home? Why are you so slightly stirred by the spectacle of little children torn from their firesides and their schools to work for starvation wages in factories and department stores? Why are you so well able to control your grief when the census reports tell you that more than 5,000,000 women and girls have been compelled to become wage earners because their husbands and fathers receive so little wages that they cannot support their families? Why are you so well able to bear up when the white slave merchant gets the little girl in the department store?

"None of these facts, nor all of these facts seems to suggest to you wealthy gentlemen who are opposing Socialism that the conditions under which you have become rich are doing anything to disrupt the family or to bring about free love. But you profess to be stunned to a stare when Socialism presents a program that is devoted to the single purpose of preventing you, who do no useful labor, from robbing those who do it all. If you have other grounds for opposing Socialism state them. But in the name of common decency, don't come forward as the protectors of women and children. Your hands are not clean."

Socialists contend that Socialism would do more to purify, glorify and vivify the family than capitalism has ever done or can do. Their reasoning takes this form:

Unless poverty is good for the family, capitalism is not good for the family, because capitalism means poverty or the fear of poverty for all but a few and can never mean anything else. Capitalism can never mean anything else, because when everybody receives the full value of his labor nothing will be left out of which to make capitalists.

If plenty for everybody, without too much or too little for anybody will purify, glorify and vivify the family. Socialism will purify, glorify and vivify it. Socialism will place all of the great machinery of modern production in the hands of the people, to be used fully and freely for nobody's advantage but their own.

Socialists know, only too well, that with the coming of Socialism, everybody will not suddenly want to be good. They expect to have to deal with the bad man and the bad woman. But they do not expect to have to deal with so many bad men and bad women as we now have to deal with. They do not expect to have to deal with any men or women who have been made bad by poverty or the fear of poverty. They do not expect to have to deal with women who have been forced into prostitution because there seemed to be no other way to keep soul and body together. Socialists say that if there are any prostitutes under Socialism they will be women who deliberately choose prostitution as a vocation. Perhaps women, better than men, can judge how many such women there are likely to be.

It is this picture of economically independent womanhood that is hailed by the wealthy detractors of Socialism as the sign that the Socialists plan to destroy the home and supplant it with free love. Socialists say that such conclusions can be based only upon these assumptions:

That nothing but poverty keeps women from being "free-lovers."

That if women were given the power to support themselves decently and comfortably outside of the home, they would at once desert their children, their husbands and "destroy the family."

Socialists believe women can safely be trusted with enough money to live on. Let the word "trust" as here used is not quite the word. Socialists do not believe it is within their province either to trust or to distrust women. Socialists believe economic independence is a right that women should demand and get, rather than a privilege that man should grant or deny, as he may see fit. If women do well with economic independence, well and good. If they do ill with it, still well and good. If they have not yet learned to use economic independence, they cannot begin learning too quickly, nor can they learn except by trying to use it.

Socialists believe that women today are being coerced. Coerced by poverty. Coerced by fear of poverty. Coerced by men who presume upon their own economic independence and the economic dependence of women. They cite, as proof of their beliefs, the growing number of divorces, together with the fact that women are the applicants for most of the divorces.

And the astonishing circumstance about all of it is that because Socialists hold these views, they are denounced by rich grafters and their retainers as "destroyers of the family," and "free-lovers."

The point is: Ought the world to ge rid of poverty if it can, and will Socialism do it? If Socialism will rid the world of poverty, ought we to retain poverty "to keep women good?" Who knows that economic independence would make women bad? The grafters intimate that they know. But who believes the grafters? The grafters say the present status of the family is so good that we should be content to remain poor in order to preserve it. Professor Peabody says the present status of the family is so bad that it is falling to pieces. The professor has proof of his statement in every divorce court. The grafters have proof of their statement in no court, nor anywhere else.

Besides, the testimony of the grafters is properly subject to suspicion. If Socialism would remove poverty it would also remove the grafters. If Socialism would not remove poverty or the grafters, but would bring about free love, do you believe the grafters would oppose it? It is not more likely that the grafters believe Socialism would remove both poverty and themselves and that they are trying to throw a scare into the people by howling about the threatened destruction of the family? If not, why do not the grafters themselves do something to stop their own destruction of the family?

"Ah," say the grafters, "but the lives of Socialists do not bear out their protestations of devotion to the family. Look at the 'affinities' that some of them have had."

"Quite true," say the Socialists, "but one affinity does not make a fire, nor do two make a forest. What if one or two Socialists of more or less prominence have been divorced? Are affinities and divorced unknown among Democrats and Republicans? Is the percentage of divorces greater in Socialist families than it is in Democratic or Republican families? Where is your proof?"

The foregong pretty well sums up the situation, so far as the free-love and destroying-the-family charges are concerned. There is nothing in them. Socialists are trying to eradicate poverty now. They have no other immediate concern. Their observation has taught them that poverty is always and everywhere a curse. They believe no other curse is nearly so great except the curse of excessive riches.

COURT DECISION VICTORY

St. Paul, Minn.—Some months ago the management of the Great Northern railroad, upon learning that the carmen in its employ had been successful in forming strong local organizations at its division points, as the result of the efforts of organizers representing the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, issued a notice to the effect that as a condition precedent to retaining their positions the members of the new organizations must renounce their affiliation with the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen. This act was in direct violation of the State law, and the railroad company was proceeded against and the case has run the gamut of the courts. The Supreme Court of the State has just handed down its decision in the case, which returns a victory for the union. In part the decision says: "Theoretically the employer and employe are on an equality, so that one is free to employ and the other to accept employment as he sees fit, but in practice it is to the employe very often a matter of compulsion and not of free choice. As a rule his daily wage is needed for the daily wants of himself and family and nothing is left for the morrow. To sustain life he must needs obtain or retain employment on whatever terms it may be offered. Under such conditions his necessities may be easily made use of as a means of coercion. If an employer who knows that his employe is in a position where he must retain the employment or starve, should then with threat of dismissal from service coerce him to leave an organization wherein the employe found help and support, and which was in no way inimical to the interest of the employer, we would all unhesitatingly condemn the conduct of the employer as a moral wrong. We fail to see wherein coercion under similar circumstances may not also be a legal wrong and a violation of section 5079 R. L. 1905."

UNITED BROTHERHOOD DOING THINGS

Indianapolis, Ind.—General Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters states that the following trade movements have just been reported to him as the result of trade demands during the past week: Mason City, Ia., secured an increase from 35 cents to 40 cents per hour and a reduction of hours from 10 to 9 per day. Port Colbourne, Canada, gained an increase from 30 cents to 35 cents per hour, effective July 1. Worcester, Mass., obtained Saturday half holiday six months in the year in shops and mills. Meadeville, Pa., got a reduction in hours from 9 to 8 per day and a minimum wage of 37½ cents per hour. Rome, N. Y., secured an increase in wages from $3.00 to $3.25 per day, Saturday half holiday after July 1. Muncie, Ind., got an increase in wages from 40 cents to 43 cents per hour. Kingston, Ont., Canada, got increase from 35½ cents to 37½ cents per hour. Pomeroy, Ohio, increased wages from $2.75 to $3.00 and reduced hours from 9 to 8. New Haven, Conn., signed a three-year agreement, including an increased wage of from 45 cents to 47½ cents per hour to May 1, 1913, and from 47½ cents to 50 cents per hour after that date to May 1, 1914. Salem, Ill., increased wages from 35 cents to 40 cents per hour. Lynn, Mass., increased wages from $3.63 to $4.00 per day. Fon du Lac, Wis., got increase from 35 cents to 38 cents per hour. Buffalo, N. Y., after being on strike for about a month outside men have been successful in securing a minimum wage scale of 50 cents an hour, this being a 5-cent increase. Louisville, Ky., gained an increase in wages from $2.50 to $2.60 per day.

DISTRIBUTORS OF CONVICT-MADE GOODS

Washington—Upon authority which has never been questioned, it is stated that the Sears-Roebuck company, the large Chicago mail order concern, is probably the largest distributor of prison-made goods in the country. The company absorbs a large portion of the output of the shirt factory at the West Virginia penitentiary at Moundsville, the contract being held by the Kraft Manufacturing company. The firm also handles the product of the shoe factory at the Connecticut penitentiary, operated by the Charter Oak Shoe company, as well as handling the product of the Reliance Manufacturing company, the American Fork and Hoe company and other convict contracting corporations.

METAL POLISHERS

Cincinnati—The Metal Polishers, Buffers, Platers, Brass and Silver Workers' Union of North America is meeting with excellent success in securing agreements with firms that manufacture band instruments. Since the first of the year the following firms have signed agreements and are using the union label: C. G. Con company, Emil Blessings Band Instrument company and Martin Band Instrument company, all of Elkhart, Ind.; J. W. York & Sons, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Harry B. Jay company and Frank Holten company, both of Chicago, Ill.

TOLEDO'S CONCILIATION BOARD

Toledo—The Central Labor Union of this city has issued a call to the unions to nominate candidates for the position of arbitrator and conciliator on the new municipal board which has been created at the suggestion of the city solicitor. The board is to consist of one member of organized labor and one employer, these two to agree upon the third. The board will have no arbitrary powers, but will extend its good offices as conciliator or act as an arbitrator at the request of both sides of any controversy arising.

AN HONEST CONFESSION.

The Columbus Citizen last Wednesday, under the caption "Ohio's Two Senators Traitors to the People" says:

"The State of Ohio certainly ought to be proud of Atlee E. Pomerene and Theodore Burton, the two men who are MISREPRESENTING it in the United States senate. At the Chicago Republican convention Burton sat in the Ohio delegation applauding every reactionary utterance and voting for every reactionary measure and candidate. To the full extent of his small abilities and narrow vision, he duplicated the performance of such brazen and unconscionable bosses as Barnes of New York, Penrose of Pennsylvania and Guggenheim of Colorado. Of course, unlike these men, he influenced no other votes, being kept very busy controlling his own. At the Baltimore Democratic convention Tuesday Pomerene voted for Wall street's candidate for temporary chairman and against the great commoner, William J. Bryan, who was making the fight of his life to purge the Democratic party of corrupt business domination.

"The Citizen, to the extent of its influence, helped to put both Burton and Pomerene in the senate of the United States. Confession is said to be good for the soul. If it is, we want to give our soul the benefit of confessing our terrible mistake."

The Socialist is glad to see The Citizen so penitent but is anxious to know just what advice The Citizen will give the dear people in this campaign. It has buncoed the public on Harmon, Burton, Pomerene and the Franklin county constitutional delegates Knight and Peters. Will The Citizen again act as a bell-wether to lead the lamb like voters to slaughter?

When the Columbus Rail Light, some weeks ago, complied with the terms of its franchise and one year late offered 8 tickets for a quarter, there was much credit given the R.-L. for its alleged generosity. As usual, however, workingmen and women have not been benefitted to any great extent. As soon as it was possible for them to get one more ticket for twenty five cents then the landlords, in the outlying districts reached by the street car lines, increased the rent of property fifteen to thirty per cent. The toilers always pay the tribute in come form to somebody and the burden never grows lighter.

The Ohio Journal of Commerce, the official paper of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, has entered the arena as a champion of the Catholic church and against Socialism. The Journal knows its friends and must stand by them. During the sessions of the constitutional convention and recent Ohio General assemblies, the O.-J.-C. has been a dignified but dangerous opponent of the people's interests. It is now showing the cloven foot plainly.

Theodore Roosevelt, in a frenzied speech at Chicago during the Republican National Convention, declared that he was "fighting the Lord's battle." Judging from the results, Teddy has been repudiated by the Lord.

BIG BUSINESS BARBER.

O. S. Barber, in Pearson's for July, clears up a wonderful amount of objections to government ownership of the railroads, in his article, "Our Panama Canal Opportunity."

Mr. Barber has been in big business all his life. He knows a lot about the exploiting game, although he is not letting it all out in this article. He shows how the Panama Canal can be made a great success, by having the United States Government control all the supply stores, coaling stations, etc., and the railroads of the country. He says; The Canal cannot be made self-supporting even if all freight "in sight" goes through at the proposed toll of $1.25 per ton. * * * * For instance, it has been estimated that the saving on oranges and lemons alone would be $10,000,000 a year. Just think that over.

Barber sees the beauty of co-operation, especially of the government owning the railroads and panama canal, and reducing freight rates to-such an extent that the consumer would be benefited. He does not hesitate in saying so.

If co-operation is good for one thing why not co-operate in the production and distributing of the world's goods?

Why not produce all things for use and not for profit?

Oh! That would be Socialism.

"THOU SHALT NOT STEAL."

For a political watchword, the new "Progressive party" now forming under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt has burglarized the Decalogue and appropriated the mandate, "Thou shalt not steal."

These stern moralists, however, have much more objection to being stolen from than they have to stealing in general. In that particular question most of them are, like their leader, "practical men."

Had they been able to steal the nomination that they declare was stolen from them, the cry of robbery would have arisen from the other side, and they would have paid no attention whatever to it.

As it is, however, their political ox that has been gored, the motto they have chosen to some extent expresses their particular grievance. It is a comparatively easy matter to assume that there is honor among thieves and secure an audience to listen to your tale of woe when the assumption proves to be unfounded.

A glance at some of these honest progressives who are now setting out to purify politics will at once demonstrate that Robin Hood's famous assemblage of outlaws had nothing on the gang that are now rallying around the politically outlawed Theodore.

Here, for instance, is little Tim Woodruff, veteran of the famous "Old Guard" of Albany in bygone days, notorious reactionist and intriguer, and such a doubtful asset generally that two years ago his present leader, Roosevelt, ousted him out of the position of State chairman of the New York Republican party.

Boss William Ward, State National Committeeman, member of the same delectable "Old Guard," all-round Albany corruptionist, kicked out for selling out to Roosevelt.

William Halpin, ex-president of the New York Republican County Committee. Henchman of the malodorous Odell, of Newburgh, veteran of the "Old Guard," and typical political "boss," with all the devious and shady characteristics implied by that word.

Yet another "boss"—Aldridge, of Rochester. Same class; same record. Veteran also of the infamous "Old Guard." So stenchful that Rochester turned him down when he sought the Congressional vacancy brought about by the death of Congressman Breck Perkins.

Boss No. 4—Flinn, of Pittsburg. Reactionary from head to heel. Soaked and saturated in the municipal corruption of that smoky Inferno. An expert in Tammany methods, who has completed his education.

Still another "boss"—Cecil Lyon, of Texas. Charged by the other side as a notorious corruptionist. Accused of systematically and continuously selling out the Texas vote to the highest bidder. Absolute reactionary.

Littauer, of Gloversville, N. Y. School children of Gloversville furnished with machines and material for glove making in the public schools by this philanthropist under cover of "manual training." Reactionary to the backbone. Mixed up in postoffice grafts of several years back.

George W. Perkins, of Morgan and the Steel Trust. Comment unnecessary.

McCormick, of Harvester Trust and Chicago Tribune. Reactionary to the heart's core. General exploiter and grabber of public school sites in Chicago.

They are but samples from a list of goods all guaranteed to be of the same quality. But they have all reformed and become honest and progressive.

Roosevelt used the same gang to elect Taft four years ago, and by the same methods which his protege has now employed against him, and against which he now protests.

And he will "appeal to all honest and progressive citizens, irrespective of their political affiliations."

Fortunately for him there is a sucker born every minute, and as most of them assume to be judges of what is "honest and progressive," without much inquiry into details, there is hope, as the advertising quack solemnly declares. As for those who do comprehend what progressiveness really means, and who have enough discernment to make the connection between capitalism and stealing, Theodore's appeal will fall upon deaf ears. Their votes will be found in the Socialist column on election day, as a protest, not against the stealing of a political nomination from a capitalist candidate, but against the stealing of the product of the workers which capitalism under every political label stands for.

And the reason that women shall not vote is because they are so flighty. Glory be, the men have 'em skinned seven different ways.

One of the funniest sights that ever came into our range of vision is an ass of a capitalist voter trying to convince his wife that one or the other candidates is a "good man" or something just as sensible. And she's got to pay the butcher and the grocer.

TO COMRADES AND WORKING PEOPLE:

Look over the advertising in your paper. Patronize those who patronize you. Remember those who refuse to advertise in a labor paper are unfair to labor and are not worthy of your patronage.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

Last week we called attention to the fact that the paper was making good out in the rural districts and that we wanted every Comrade that could possibly do so to contribute towards a fund to be used to put all the rural routes on the list until after election.

To date, the response has been very generous, twenty dollars and twenty-five cents having been contributed. This is an excellent plan and should meet with the hearty co-operation of all the Comrades.

You Boosters have begun to strike your gait and if you keep up at the rate you have been going the past week, we can very easily double our circulation in a very short time.

Nothing can stop us now. The old wagon is oiled up and is working slick and like greased lightning.

While it is true that we have not quite made the gain we so much desired, we came so blame near it, that with everything in full swing, as it now is, we can make it in a short time if you boys and girls will stay right on the job.

And don't forget that FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION!

We are going to keep the office open all day, to receive the reports from you Boosters in the city, while Uncle Sam will take care of you Boosters out in the State.

Everybody celebrate!

On with the revolution!

Comrade "Jake" Moninger, the old "war-horse" of the First Ward, is back on the job. He lines up seven this week which makes the "Old Man" smile.

That First Ward has sure a bunch of live ones. Comrade Hartman sends is four, which is ample proof that he is a good assessor.

Comrade Beery brings in his own and four other hopefuls with him. You can't keep him down.

Purchase from our advertisers and use the red ticket.

Fearing that the West Side would not be properly represented, Comrade A. Lewis hands us a bunch of five, each for 6 months. With work of this kind going on all over the country, the end of the capitalist system is in sight.

The North End seems anxious to break into the limelight, so Comrade Gallentine of the Thirteenth and Comrade Evans of the Fifteenth, each got four new ones.

In order to keep the grave-digger working over time, the following Comrades each hand in two: Southard, Hilltop Booster, Weichers, Skinner, Fries and Meier. Nice work, boys.

Comrades with one or more to their credit: Bates, Meyers, Miss Quinby, Wilson, Cochran, Rickey, Green, Van Schoyk, Marquette, Eby, Wright, Bogley, George Smith, Dennis, Clark, Brownfield, Mrs. Crossley, Sauer, Gorslene, Johnson, Price, Bailey, Douglass, Cross, Bezold, Metzer, McClain and Link.

Attention is called once more to the fact that in order to support the paper, that we must purchase from 15—SOCIALIST our advertisers at every opportunity, and use the red ticket.

Be sure in some manner to let the advertising department know that you patronized them because they advertised in the Socialist.

Do this and this office force will rise up and call you blessed.

RADICAL RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY COLUMBUS FEDERATION OF LABOR

The Columbus Federation of Labor in regular session last Monday evening passed the folowing resolutions, which are certainly plain enough to be understood:

Resolved, That the Columbus Federation of Labor condemns the action of the Court of the District of Columia for its action in sentencing the representatives of the A. F. of L., Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison to prison for exercising their constitutional right of free speech and action against the foes of organized labor, realizing that such miscarriages of justice is driving conservative union men to "direct action" the industrial court of last resort.

(Signed) LON ROWE,
ED WAKEFIELD,
S. H. BAGGS,
J. H. HENDERSON.

The Labor Day Committee was called to meet tomorrow at 9 a. m., in Federation Hall to arrange for speakers and place of celebration. Delegates were admitted from Steam Fitters, Printing Pressmen and Sheet Metal Workers.

It was voted that the Federation would assist the Labor Commission in the investigation of the employment of female workers in local shops.

Constitutional programs were distributed and all delegates urged to secure the adoption of the same.

The Bartenders reported the unfair attitude of some of the saloonkeepers against union members. A motion was adopted to appeal to the membership to refrain from patronizing unfair saloons.

SOCIALIST ACTIVITY IN CITY AND COUNTY

Meetings Held During Past Week Under Party Auspices.

The Socialist party campaign in Franklin County which includes the Twelfth Congressional District, has been opened. In fact it never closed. There will be, of course, a formal "opening," but our speakers are out in the highways and byways of the city and County preaching the gospel of the new commonwealth.

Comrades W. C. Bates, E. B. Eubanks, F. E. Johnston and Gus Tegenkamp spoke at Linworth last Saturday night and were well received. The same evening Comrades T. C. Southard, J. M. Suddick and E. B. Lewis held a meeting at Reynoldsburg. These Comrades constitute the second "team" that will tour the County. A local will be organized at the 'Burg.'

At High and Broad, Saturday night Comrade A. C. Eby held the fort and the crowd, while out at Mt. Vernon and Twentieth Comrade S. H. Cochrane had a good meeting with Comrade Schumm as chairman.

Comrade J. L. Bachman was the speaker at the Goodale park meeting Sunday afternoon. There were several hundred present despite the fact that the improvements being made at the park made it impossible to have suitable arrangements. He said:

"Republican bosses at Chicago nominated Taft merely as a tool for their purposes." He characterized the unsettled condition of American politics as an indication that the people want different governmental methods. These would be supplied by Socialism, he urged.

"All material resources of the country have no value except as they are used by men," he said. "Under the capitalistic system laboring men cannot get these. They must be slaves to capital and must get permission to labor. Socialism as a method of applying the collective energy of the people is the only solution to the present tangle in the social system."

William Thurston Brown spoke Monday night at High and Broad Streets.

HUMAN RIGHTS vs. PROPERTY RIGHTS

The second edition of Comrade F. A. Dean's book, "Human Rights, vs. Property Rights," has been issued and is now on sale. It has been put into better shape and has more matter than the first edition. It is an effective propaganda pamphlet, "compiled by a working man." Price 10 cents a copy, 15 copies for $1.00; 100 copies for $5.00. Address all orders to F. A. Dean, 108½ South High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Mr. J. A. Metcalf of the Capitol Clothing company has just returned from the East, where he has purchased an immense lot of merchandise at great sacrifices. The readers of this paper will have an opportunity to attend the largest and biggest money-saving sale ever held in this city, in a few weeks. Watch for the ad.

TO THE SOCIALIST LOCALS THROUGHOUT OHIO

In reply to an article appearing in Columbus Socialist, June 22, under caption of "To the Socialist Locals of Ohio," signed by W. C. Bates.

Warren, Ohio, June 22, 1912.

Jos. C. Schawe, State Secretary, S. P. of Ohio:

Dear Comrade—Your letter of June 22nd to C. E. Ruthenberg, and one of the same date to E. S. Smith are at hand. With regard to proposed changes in the State Constitution of the Socialist party of Ohio, we make the following statement:

Article 1, Section 3, as adopted by the State Socialist convention of 1912, is correctly printed in the Ohio Socialist Bulletin for May, 1912, as follows:

"Section 3. The object of the Socialist party of Ohio is to organize the working class for the purpose of overthrowing the present Capitalist system and establishing an Industrial Democracy."

This section was adopted by the convention on motion of Comrade Josephine Bates, of Toledo, as a substitute for the section recommended by the Committee on Constitution, as follows: (From Ohio State Bulletin) The object of the Socialist party of Ohio is to organize the working class and all those who acknowledge their belief in the principles of the Socialist party, as stated in its State and National platforms, into a political party for the purpose of securing the powers of government and using them solely in the interest of the working class. (Ohio State Bulletin, March, 1912, page 2.)

The section submitted by Comrade Bates was written with pen and ink, and after its adoption by the convention, the original slip was presented by Comrade Bates was pasted without alteration, of the draft of the constitution presented by the Committee on Constitution which after being edited by the Committee on Constitution in accordance with motion passed by the State Convention (See Ohio Socialist Bulletin, May 1912, page 3, first column, middle of column) was incorporated in the minutes of the convention, and left in the hands of the State Secretary at the State office.

The Committee on Constitution in the work of editing the constitution made no change whatever in the wording of Article 1, Section 3, as presented by Comrade Bates and adopted by the convention, since the section as adopted was correct in phraseology and grammatical con-

For corroboration of the foregoing statements, may be cited an article which appeared in the Columbus Evening Dispatch of April 27, 1912, as follows:

"The object of the Socialist party of Ohio is to be the 'overthrow of the capitalist system and the establish-This statement of principles was adopted by the Socialist State Convention at its second day's session, Saturday. The statement was drafted by a girl delegate, Josephine Bates, of Toledo, and the convention unanimously adopted it in lieu of the recommendation of the Constitutional Committee composed of men. Miss Bates held that the committee had failed to state the object of the party clearly and definitely. 'The Socialist party is a party of the working classes and the so-called other classes of vocations must join in our purpose if they are to be of us,' she said."

Finally, the section in question is correctly printed on the referendum ballots entitled "Referendum B, 1912" issued by the State office at Columbus, as is evidenced by the following clipping taken from one of the said ballots, selected at random from among the ballots sent to the secretary of Local Niles, Ohio: "Proposed amendments. To adopt make an X mark. Old article I, as amended.

Name.

Section 1. The name of this organization shall be the Socialist party of Ohio, and it shall be affiliated with the Socialist party of the Unted States of America.

New Section:

Sec. 3. The object of the Socialist party of Ohio is to organize the working class for the purpose of overthrowing the present capitalist system and establishing and Industrial Democracy.'

We, therefore, conclude that without question the proposed amendment to be known as Article 1, Section 3, is correctly printed on the referendum ballots, according to the decision of the State Convention of the party.

Trusting that this statement will be of service to you in correcting any misaprehension that may exist in the mind of any member of the party, we are fraternally,

C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Chairman Committee on Constitution.
EDWARD S. SMITH,
Secretary Committee on Constitution and Secretary of Convention.

CUDAHYS VIOLATE THE CIVIL MARRIAGE LAWS

Wealthy Kansas City couple Living Together Without Sanction of the Laws of the Nation.

It is sincerely to be hoped that the story that Edna Corwin, once the wife of John Cudahy, son of the millionaire pork packer, and her former husband are now living in lascivious cohabitation is not true. They were man and wife, but Mrs. Cudahy obtained a divorce, with the custody of their four children. The divorce was regular, recognized and legally binding. But they have seen fit to live together without being again married. Such an action cannot be recorded except with a burning blush of shame, but the demands of truth in the Socialist press are inexorable, and we must do it. The shame becomes all the deeper, and the wonder—if not the bewilderment—all the more intense, when it is remembered that both parties to this unseemly state of affairs are professed, fervent Catholics.

But facts are facts. Unless all the great capitalist news agencies have erred, unless such great papers as the World and the Times have been guilty of a horrible slander, these two people are violating the plain law of the country, a law that was devised to regulate marriage and safeguard the interests of posterity.

The attention of the Common Cause the Boston Pilot, the Gaelic American, the Irish World and other papers which are opposed to breaking up the family or which are so strenuous in support of the home and opposed to Socialism is directed to this incident and to the action of this couple.

If it is true, then, John Cudahy is twice a criminal. His former crime consisted of performing a surgical operation without being licensed. He mutilated, it is alleged, in a most horrible manner, Jere F. Lillis, whom he accused of intimacy with Mrs. Cudahy. In this operation he had the assistance of a doctor, disguised as a chaffeur. The operation is said to have been a complete success, for the unfortunate man shunk from public view, the Cudahys separated, Mrs. Cudahy obtained a divorce, after she had brought forth revoltingly damaging evidence, and the affair passed into history.

If Edna Corwin and John Cudahy are living together again, as reported, then there is no doubt as to their standing before the law.

What is given forth in extenuation is all the more repulsive. The Catholic Church claims to be the most law-abiding of institutions. Yet, it is explained because the Catholic

PLUTES AT SHELBY ARE BALKED IN THEIR GAME

Socialists Use Public Stand Erected at Expense of the People of the Town

Some few weeks ago Local Shelby billed Comrade Ben F. Wilson of Girard, Kas., to speak in the Public School Park from the Band Stand, Wednesday evening, June 19th. However, on Monday night before our meeting was to held the Board of Education through the alleged connivance of one of its members (an attorney and a leading Democrat representing the Plunderbund of Shelby) passed a resolution prohibiting public speaking from the Band Stand—the president of board was not present at this meeting and knew nothing of this conspiracy.

On Tuesday evening the "Daily Globe" (organ of the Plunderbund and antagonistic to all good movements, having fought the churches last winter when they were engaged in a great revival here and called the ministers all kinds of improper names) came out with a screaming headline declaring what action the Board of Education had taken and that the Socialists would not be permitted to hold their meeting in the Band Stand. However, this conspiracy and discrimination aroused the latent powers in the Comrades, as when the Band Stand was built about two years ago it was built for the purpose of holding band concerts and for public speakers and public gatherings, part of the money used in construction was raised by the Shelby Band by individual subscription and the balance, about two-thirds of the ampunt was donated by the City Council, using the tax-payers' money.

Wednesday evening the "Daily Globe" came out stating that the Socialists were going to use the stand notwithstanding the resolution passed by the Board of Education and that it remained to be seen whether the Board would enforce this resolution. The central light (electric light) in the stand which is allowed to burn night and day the year round was taken off about 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon, evidently by the Board's employees who also put a padlock on the electric switch, so when evening came on the stand was enveloped in darkness, but this did not dampen the ardor of the Comrades who promptly secured a gasoline lamp and hastened to proceed with the meeting, despite the fact that there was a great throng of the citizens on the streets awaiting to see the outcome of teh fray. A messenger was sent to the hotel to notify Comrade Wilson that the meeting was ready to begin and in a short time Ben arrived and Comrade Max E. Dickerson, candidate for State Senator, made a few explanatory remarks. Comrade Daniel Howe, candidate for County Commissioner, acted as chairman of the meeting and after a few well chosen remarks introduced Comrade Wilson, who gave the audience a strong and powerful lecture on Socialism; time and time again he was greeted with prolonged applause, showing the sentiment of the people and the ability of the speaker as a great exponent of Socialism. It is estimated there was a crowd of from 1000 to 1500 people listening to the address. It shows the old party politicians are grasping at their last straw of political life—the boycott.

Also seated on the stand with Comrade Wilson and others named above were Comrade Charles Nichols, candidate for Probate Judge, Comrade A. R. Rice, candidate for County Surveyor and Comrade Foster Willhide, candidate for County Auditor; who were all willing, if need be to accompany Comrade Wilson to jail for the Crime (?) of standing for free speech. The Comrades however, are pleased there is one paper in Shelby (The Shelby Citizen) which gives them a square deal and is a good clean paper. At last election for Mayor, Comrade Dickerson ran only about four behind the Republican candidate, and about 30 behind the Democratic candidate, and at the next election we expect to make a clean sweep of the city.

SINGERS WANTED

An effort is being made to organize one or more quartets to warble songs at Socialist meetings during this campaign. Those willing to volunteer will please see Comrade O. G. Van Schoyck, Southwest corner High and Rich Streets.

MEANING OF SABOTAGE.

The Appeal to Reason has the following explanation of the word, sabotage:

Sabotage comes from the root word, "sabot," a woden shoe worn by poor people in France and elsewhere. Under a slight variation the word signifies "trampling under." The literal significance of the word seems to be a revolt of the "wooden shoes" and a "trampling under" of privilege and of class rule by them. As practiced in European countries sabotage consists in destruction of property of the masters during a strike or labor controversy. In this country the idea is sometimes expressed by the words, "direct action." It has come to mean the use of violence in place of and in preference to political action.

The derivation is correct, but there is no warrant for the "trampling under" interpretation. It should not be forgotten that the word, sabotage, is as least a half-century old. In Balzac's time it meant shirking on one's job. Shirking was held by the bourgeoisie to be the common practice of the workers, or the wearers of wooden shoes, and hence the name. The word has only recently come to its present significance. Syndicalism, or "revolutionary trade unionism" is responsible for the meaning that now obtains.

CLEVELAND CITIZEN—Hot denunciations were hurled at the International Socialist Review by Cleveland readers receiving their copies of that magazine this month. It was the general opinion that the person who wrote up the Indianapolis convention, and who was too cowardly to sign his or her name, is either an anarchist or a capitalistic crook attempting to arouse fastional hatred and division by phrase-mongering. It has been noticed for a year or two that The Review has steadily drifted toward anarchistic propaganda, and every opportunity to attack well-grounded Socialistic principles and policies and the pioneers who have sacrificed to build up the movement has been eagerly embraced. The Review is even advocating that the provision in the constitution prohibiting members from preaching or practicing sabotage be stricken out, and probably in the near future will be printing articles from Bakunin or Herr Most and Emma Goldman to show the futility of political action. The Review was built up by the Socialists of the country, and not by Charles H. Kerr, and it can be smashed again if necessary.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

National Headquarters,
Socialist Party.
Chicago, Ill. June 22, 1913.

The National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party met in Chicago June 15, 16 and 17. Part of the time the Campaign Committee and the candidates for President met in joint session with the Executive Committee. The minutes of the meeting are being mailed to all Socialist papers and will appear in the Monthly Bulletin for July.

The new edition of "How To Conduct A Local or Branch" is ready for delivery. Price, the same as before, five dollars per thousand; same rate in any quantity, less or more. Address, National Office, Socialist Party, 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

State Secretary Bostrom, of Washington, reports twenty-one locals organized during the month of May.

During the recent national convention of the Socialist Party, those present who belonged to the legal profession formed themselves into an organization for the purpose of giving assistance in the legal struggles in behalf of labor which are constantly occurring. They expect to furnish legal advice by mail to locals and state organizations, free of charge, upon request. Also to assist in the preparation of briefs in the great legal battles which arise in the labor movement from time to time.

The Secretary is Filton L. Clawson, 714 Odd Fellows Building, Indianapolis, Ind.

It is suggested that the state secretres, if agreeable to them, send to him the names of Socialist attorneys who could do good service in this organization.

The state convention of the Socialist Party of Georgia will be held at Macon, July 4 and 5.

The Socialist Party of Alabama will meet in state convention at Birmingham, July 4.

The National Executive Committee has decided that the Lyceum lectures shall begin January 12th, and has approved a list of lectures.

PROPOSED REFERENDUMS.

"Local Olivia, County McHenry, N. Dakota.

"Whereas former National Secretary J. Mahlon Barnes was suspended from the office of National Secretary for immorality. Hereby initiate a referendum to annul his appointment as National Campaign Manager.

Members in good standing twenty six."

The following motion by Local New Orleans, La., is submitted to the National Secretary of the Socialist Party for referendum vote:.

"Resolved, That the National Socialist Party hereby recalls the action of the National Socialist convention in appointing Comrade J. Mahlon Barnes campaign chairman, and instructs the National Committee to appoint some other comrade with a better record to the place.

"It is the sense of Local New Orleans that the reason which compelled Comrade J. Mahlon Barnes to resign as National Secretary during 1911 are of themselves sufficient to disapprove of the action of the convention in giving him any place within the affairs of the National party, without such an important position as was given him in the closing hours of the convention without full discussion."

Warren, Ohio, June 13, 1913.

"Local Warren moves the following motion, and asks that it be printed in the Bulletin and asks for seconds.

"That we protest against the election of J. Mahlon Barnes as Campaign Manager, and ask for his immediate recall."

Wagoner, Okla., June 17, 1913.

"Moved that the N. S. C. recall J. Mahlon Barnes from the office of Campaign Manager"

COMMENT: "No complaint is made as to the abilities of Mr. Barnes. It is, however, the opinion of Wagoner Local that men of better moral character can be found to fill all offices satisfactorily."

"Lockland, Ohio, June 13, 1913.

"Whereas the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party was lately compelled to accept the resignation of J. Mahlon Barnes from the office of National Secretary, as a convicted adulterer, and

"Whereas the National Convention of the Socialist Party assembled at Indianapolis, Ind., in May 1912, elected said J. Mahlon Barnes as Campaign Manager and

"Whereas we consider this action a deep disgrace to the Socialist Party and an offense to the rank and file who stand for honor and decency,

"Local Lockland, Ohio, in regular session June 14, 1913, with eighteen members in good standing moves that we isue a call for a National Referendum demanding the immediate recall of J. Mahlon Barnes from the office of National Campaign Manager."

VIOLENCE SPREADING.

San Diego, June 17, 1913.

The lying report has been published broadcast, that the fight for free speeech has been abandoned in San Diego, that street speaking has again been permitted. The fight has just begun. It will continue until it is settled and settled right. The Socialists of San Diego have no intention of submitting to the intolerable conditions which would be the price of peace.

Speaking in San Francisco Leroy Wright, attorney for the vigilantes, said: "I have advised taking people out of town. And I stand as a whole for what has been done." Wright amply explained his boldness and much of the "courage" of the vigilantes. "WE HAVE THE POLICE AND THE COURTS," he boasted. And the situation in San Diego today amply justified him.

The court has refused to dismiss the present grand jury, members of whom are charged with being vigilantes and the criminal element of the city constituting the police and the vigilantes feel secure from indictment, and are again in control of the city.

The Assistant Attorney General has gone north to return on the twentieth of the month. All street meetings are broken up. The infamous "move-on" ordinance is rigidly enforced, and for the last week a system of police intimidation, aimed in particular at Socialists, has been in effect. Socialist headquarters have been in a state of siege and the attempt has been made to terrify members from attending meetings.

In fact the police emboldened by the continuance of the present grand jury in office are again following the same tactics against the Socialist Party that were employed against the Industrial Workers of the World as an organization. Such in brief is the situation in San Diego today.

The Socialist and Appeal to Reason, BOTH ONE year for $1.00. This is the best newspaper offer ever made.

ITEMS FROM STEEL.

The Congressional Convention of the 16th District will be held in Bridgeport, Ohio, June 29th at 2 P. M. for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress and also Presidential Elector. In the evening Kirkwood local will give a Red Social for the entertainment of the Delegates.

Locals all over the country are making preparations to attend the Picnic at Barnesville July 4th. Quite a number have arranged to attend in a body.

The Saturday evening street meetings started in Bellaire some time ago are proving very successful, and they expect to continue through the summer.

Local Martins Ferry held a well attended meeting last Sunday at which the various referendums before the membership were discussed.

SOCIALISM IN MAGAZINES

The Metropolitan Magazine for July, just issued, contains, among other things, the first of a series of articles by Comrade Hillquit on Socialism. Comrade William Mailly has a regular department, "Tidings of the Times." The magazines are awakening to the importance of Socialism.

COMRADE WARREN'S OPINION

J. Mahlon Barnes' suggestion to pay Comrades for distributing some 27,000,000 pieces of literature would result in a gang of grafters. Anyone familiar with the spirit which animates the Comrades would know that they can and will distribute without compensation, all the literature the campaign fund may supply.

The National Executive Committee should replace Barnes with someone who has not been forced to resign from an important office in the party.

Should the committee advertise free literature, the demand would be greater than the supply. We are buying thousands of special editions to the extent of our pocketbooks and still have not enough to go around. If they have literature, let us have it. We need it.

C. E. WARREN,
Socialist Councilman Thirteenth Ward.

COMRADE BUBB ACTIVE IN VINTON COUNTY

Comrade C. A. Bubb, of Dundas, Vinton County, writes that lots of voters in that section are coming over to Socialism. Comrade Bubb is pushing the circulation of the Columbus Socialist and that accounts for it.

NOTICE TO THE LOCALS OF OHIO.

The Columbus Socialist requests each Socialist Local in Ohio to send to us as often as convenient brief reports of its work, prospects and other items of interest to the party. These reports will be published in our "Socialists in Action "Department." Address all communication to Editor Socialist, 103½ South High street, Columbus, Ohio.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Did you witness or read of the Capitalist Republican Convention just held at Chicago, Ill.?

The participants were the office holders of the Administrative Executive and Judicial parts of our Dear nation. The lobbyists for the Captains of Industries, Captilaist—or the owners of the means of Production and Distribution.

These are the ones who claim that they have been intrusted with the Earth and the fullness thereof to see that the workingman and women do not have time to become shiftless and spend their wages in riotous living.

These are the men that give the command to the police and militia to fire upon men, women and children who demand of them a standard of living that will permit them to live as human beings.

These are the safe and sane guardians of the people, these are the same that are mistreating the Workers at San Diego.

These are the ones that teach morals, and talk about the good times the Workers will have when they pass to the Great Beyond if thay are Humble, Faithful and Obedient to their command.

Is it any wonder that Mr. Workingman that you get a crack over your head, a bayonet stab in your breast, a term of months and years in prison for the least infraction of your masters laws.

Such masters are so self possessed, they can judge fairly, deal kindly and temper their judgment with mercy. Think yes so Mr. Workingman; are you going to trust them again?

You must become Class Conscious through the pathway of your senses, Feeling, Hearing, Seeing, Smelling, Tasting.

Feeling the oppression of the System, Hearing the hopeless cry of its victims, Seeing the hollow eyes, gaunt faces and misshapen bodies, Smelling the odors from their worse than prisons, where they have to pass their lives, and Tasting of the bitter cup of servitude without just compensation. When you have accumulated this experience you are eligible to the ranks of the army of Class Conscious Workingmen and will have all the intellectual qualification needed to guide you to the Industrial Common Wealth.

DUNK HAS ANOTHER BRAIN STORM. MAYBE HE HAD ANOTHER WINE SUPPER.

Mr. Editer:—I bin reedin the platt foarm ov your partie an I want to say if you fellers think you are goin to git your propigander in the daylie papers you got a think comin. I rekon the people whot owners them thear papers has got a way of fixen thet.

Its a shame the way the Socialist papers are exposin the nice people ov this here town. Dont you no thet sosiety wood be better off if they didnt no ov the sins ov them there fellers? Let the people try to forgit such things. Dont you no thet the court is a place where they deal out punishment, an if a younguin goes wrong the thing to do is hand it to em as good an hard thet theyl never forgit it. This guvinial kourt down hear hant no korekshionail institushion, never was an never will be as long as us kapitalist are runnin things. Get this in your mind, its a penal institushion. A place where they deal out punishment.

Whots it the buzines of the people how they treat prisiners in these hear places? You fellers ought to quit sterbin all the tradishional elemeants ov sosiaty. If you fellers keep on the way you are going you sure will brake up the home. Rite hear in Columbus, out ov twentie one thousand homes thear are only fortie four hundred ov em owned thet are free ov morgage. Cant you see where you are goin?

The laberin man hant worried bout his kondishion, an if he dont see any ov the things you fellers put in your papers, he never will no the differance. Whot he dont no wont hirt him. Hes lived so long this way thet he thinks it human nature, an you surely hant goin to say thet he hant a naturial produkt an thet it hant ment thet he should be jist as he is fer the benefit of the people whot own the earth? Just muzzil the press a little an it al be much better fer the publik institushions in jinerel an the laberin man in partikuliar.

If thear must be meatins held, let em be behind klosed doars so thet the publik cant git in to no whots goin on. If you are goin to run a politikul partie you better patern after the old parties a little an dont let the dear publik git wise to every thing you do. Whot hes the publik got to do with it any way? Let em set back an keep mum like som of the delergates did at Chicago.

Yours trulie,
J. H. DUNKLEMANN.

ETTOR AND GIOVANNITTI DEFENSE FUND GROWING

Lawrence.—The Breen dynamite planting case has taken another sensational turn. Two civil suits for $5,000 each have been filed against the school committeeman, whose three attempts to aid the police authorities to "get" Joseph J. Ettor and Arthuro Giovannitti during the recent strike failed miserably. Breen was subsequently arrested, convicted and fined $500, which he paid without protest or appeal. A movement for his recall followed. Now comes the two civil suits as the latest incident in his nefarious attempts to "get" two innocent men into the clutches of the law, in the interests of the big mill corporations located here. The cases will be tried in August, or about the same time the Ettor-Giovannitti case will be tried.

Breen planted dynamite at 78 Lawrence St., in a shoe shop next to Colomob's printing shop, where Ettor made his headquarters. He misplaced the explosive and the scheme consequently miscarried. Another lot was placed in a cemetery on the outskirts of the city. A third lot, the first to be found, was deposited in a house on Oak St., wherein lived Faras Marad and Mrs. Mary Skirik, the plaintiffs in the civil suits now pending against Breen. Both were arrested and exonerated; hence the suits.

Breen tipped off the police in all the finds. He gave the information that led to the discovery of the dynamite in all three places. He knew where to find the "dope," because he had placed it there for a specific purpose, as already indicated. There was enough dynamite planted by Breen, in pursuit of his diabolical plan to blow up the city. An accidental explosion would have followed by awful results. Forutnately, for all concerned, it did not occur.

The movement to recall Breen is practically at a standstill; the pulpits were ominously silent about it Sunday. Breen is defiant and will not resign. With clubs addressed by leading mill managers refusing to indorse the recall movement, he can afford to snap his fingers at the Ministerial Association and the C. L. U., Such backing is more powerful that is the opposition.

The same issues of the local press that contained the announcement of the filing of the two civil suits against Breen also reported the interest displayed in the Ettor-Giovannitti case in Europe. The latter fact was announced in big headlines and attracted considerable attention. It was read, in conjunction with the latest Breen incident, with a great deal of eagerness. English labor papers, giving detailed accounts of the protest meetings held in Great Britain, have been received here, and are circulated among the English-speaking textile workers, by whom they are eagerly read.

This week, the United Hebrew Societies gave a classical concert in behalf of the Ettor-Giovannitti defence fund. The affair was a success; the attendance was large and representative of all the races, with the Jewish people in the majority.

Other plans for local, State and national activity in behalf of Ettor and Giovannitti are well under way and will be reported more fully in a subsequent letter. The defense movement is growing.

OHIO SOCIALIST PLATFORM AND RESOLUTIONS

PLATFORM

Adopted at the 12th Annual Convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, April 26th, 1912.

We, the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, reaffirm our allegiance to the national platform of the Socialist Party of America and the principles of International Socialism by demanding the collective and public ownership and the democratic management of all natural resources and the means of wealth production and distribution. We demand for the workers access to the machinery of wealth production and the land at all times and the full value of their toil.

We declare that all government, whether city, state or national, is controlled by and administered in the interest of the economically dominant class—the capitalist class. We emphasize the growing power of the capitalist class, making it more and more difficult for the workers to gain a livelihood, and the continuous struggle on the part of the workers, forcing from capitalism more and more of its labor product, and realizing that with the economic growth of industries into the mammoth trust stage, thereby being brought more and more into the control of a few men; the workers to further protect and prepare themselves for their historic mission, the emancipation from wage slavery, we, the Socialist Party, indorse and recommend to the workers the industrial form of organization as a means to protect their economic and political rights, and with their ballots elect representatives of their own class into public office. We maintain that political support of capitalist parties on the part of the workers, simply results in greater power for the capitalist class.

The Socialist Party is the party of the working class, able and competent to represent the interests of the producers on the political field. The resignation of each and every Socialist candidate on the Socialist ticket is in the hands of the Socialist organization, so that when elected to office, if he or she does not fulfill the pledges made previous to election, his or her resignation is demanded.

As measures that will strengthen the position of the workers in the struggle against capitalism, we demand:

First—Equal suffrage for men and women.

Second—The Initiative and Referendum, Proportional Representation and the Right of Recall.

Third—Compulsory Insurance against accident and death, the cost to be borne by the employers.

Fourth—That the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts be so corrected, modified and restricted, that delinquent girls brought before such courts be humanely treated from a corrective and modern viewpoint, and that such delinquents be not condemned to practical and demoralizing imprisonment in sectarian institutions, wherein sweatshops, laundries and other industries are conducted for profit, and that the state immediately furnish modern and humane and industrial homes for the mental and moral education and the upliftment of such unfortunates.

Fifth—The abolishing of all exemptions from taxation of taxable property, including church property, convents, charity hospitals, etc., heretofore exempted from their just burden of taxation.

Sixth—We recognize that the question of race superiority injected into the minds of the white wage-worker against the negro and other races is only a tactical method used by the capitalist class to keep the workers divided on the economic field. We, therefore, call upon the negro workers and those of other races, to unite with the Socialist Party on the political field as the only avenue of abolishing wage slavery, and the only solution of the race question.

Seventh—Realizing that white slavery and prostitution is a direct result of economic exploitation of female labor, we insist that the women workers be protected by the state against low wages and long hours of labor.

Resolutions.

Resolved, That this convention instruct Victor L. Berger to introduce a bill into Congress to prevent the unnecessary loss of life on sea-going ships as was the case in the Titanic disaster.

Whereas, The splendid and victorious struggle of our 25,000 fellow-workers at Lawrence, Mass., has resulted not only in raising their own wages, but also those of 200,000 shamefully underpaid slaves in the textile industries; and,

Whereas, The brutal capitalist class of the State of Massachusetts determined at any cost and at all hazards to crush the rising revolt of the workers and has therefore, caused the indictment and arrest of, our comrade, Wm. D. Haywood and other, notwithstanding the fact that directed by these leaders, the workers of Lawrence conducted themselves with great restraint and caution; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That we pledge ourselves to support the workers of Lawrence in their continued struggle and that we declare our confidence in Comrade William D. Haywood and heartily indorse his activity in behalf of the workers of Lawrence.

Whereas, The capitalist class of Lawrence, Mass., has broken its implied pledge to release Ettor and Giovanitti from jail and now propose to persecute these workers.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the delegates of Ohio, in convention assembled, do express our earnest protest against the unlawful and brutal imprisonment of those workers on the ridiculous charge of accessory before the fact of the murder of a comrade in the struggle for better conditions.

We demand for them a fair and immediate trial and pledge both moral and financial support in the efforts to gain their release.

Whereas, It is of great importance to the Socialist movement that the children of Socialist families be kept within the sphere of Socialist thought and influence, while being given opportunity for wholesome recreation and enjoyment; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the twelfth annual convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, That the organization of young people's Socialist leagues be approved and encouraged, and that the attention of the various locals of the State be drawn to this matter through the State Bulletin.

Whereas, The craft union movement has been largely rendered impotent because of its lack of solidity and its antiquated methods.

Whereas, Industrial progress has almost universally substituted large scale production for small scale production; and,

Whereas, The principles of industrial unionism are now made absolutely necessary for the protection and advancement of the working class;

Tehrefore, be it Resolved, by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That the membership of the party in this State be urged to recommend to the working class the principles of industrial unionism without the indorsement of any particular national organization.

RESOLUTIONS—G. A. Storck, Lorain; Josephine Bates, Toledo; E. E. Rimbach, Elyria; Geo. Bundy, Warren; E. B. Lewis, Columbus.

GOVERNMENT LIST OF INDUSTRIAL POISONS

The Department of Commerce and Labor is distributing a bulletin giving for the first time the English translation of the list of industrial poisonings which the International Association for Labor Legislation through its various national organizations has been revising and completing since 1906. Professor Samuel McCune Lindsey, President of the New York Association for Labor Legislation, gives it as his opinion that the list will be a very valuable guide to the better recognition of obscure occupational diseases as well as a help to the prevention of the most obvious risks to health to which many workers are now daily and unnecessarily exposed. In four parallel columns the industrial poisons and other harmful substances found in industrial processes are set out with the branches of industriy in which poisoning occurs, the mode of entrance of the poison into the body, and the symptoms of poisoning. So far as possible there is also indicated those measures of relief which are to be employed at the first manifestation of poisoning.

Commissioner Charles P. Neil, commenting upon the need for the work which his department has just completed, writes, "In 1910 at the time of the publication by the Bureau of Labor of the earlier list of industrial poisons little accurate information was available concerning the prevalence of cases of industrial poisoning in American factories. No State had made any legal requirement for the reporting of cases of industrial poisoning, and in the absence of such definite basis for statistical information a general impression had prevailed that American employees were largely exempt from the dangers from which industrial workers in other countries suffered."

Special investigation in the white phosphorus match industry, the inquiries of the Illinois State Commission on Occupational Diseases, and a study of the white lead and lead oxide industries disclosing 388 specific cases of lead poisoning in 18 months, and an investigation of 60 deaths from lead poisoning occuring in New York in 1909 and 1910, all served to direct public attention to the need for legislative regulation. As a result of the disclosures of these investigations, and because of a realization of the importance of full and accurate knowledge concerning the existence of dangers from industrial poisons, laws were enacted during 1911 and 1912 in eight States—California, Connecticut, Illinois, Michigan, New York, Wisconsin, Maryland and New Jersey, requiring reports by physicians of all cases of certain occupational diseases occurring in their practice.

Evidence of the interest which is being evinced at last in America in this field, which in Europe has been carefully investigated and often regulated, was shown by the recent national conference on industrial disease held at Atlantic City. It is expected that as a direct outcome of this conference the American Medical Association, working in conjunction with the Association for Labor Legislation will begin a nation-wide effort to stamp out the use of processes which foreign experience has shown to be as dangerous as they are unnecessary.

A TOAST FOR THE COMMON PEOPLE.

Here is to this great country of ours,
Home of the graft and monied powers
Then let them say whatever they may,
What office they want to make it pay.
For many a robbery we stand the blunt,
If caught, it is done by some common runt.
Will this country be a one man's control,
Not with his brains, but with his bank roll.
There are men today that are so bold
To think alone they are able to hold
The highest office of this great land,
When there are millions will take a hand,
With their votes will have something to say,
In November, on election day.
Let not some grafter lead you astray,
Elect an honest man that will stay
To his sworn duties all the time,
And not use his trust as a gold mine.
Such a man will be hard to elect
For the Wall Street trusts will object.

OATH AS TAKEN BY THE THOUSANDS

It is Fierce but it Means More than You Have an Idea, You Common Dubs

"I, ..., now in the presence of Almighty God, the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Blessed St. John the Baptist, the Holy Apostles of St. Peter and St. Paul, and all the Saints, Sacred Hosts of Heaven, and to you, my Ghostly Father, the Superior General of the Society of Jesus, founded by St. Ignatius Loyola, in the Pontification of Paul the Third, and continued to the present, do by the womb of the Virgin, the Matrix of God and the rod of Jesus Christ, declare and swear, that his Holiness the Pope, is Christ's Vice Regent, and is the true and only head of the Catholic or Universal church throughout the earth; and that by the virtue of the keys of binding and loosing given his Holiness by my Savior, Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose heretical Kings, Princes, States, Commonwealths, and Governments, and they may be safely destroyed.

"Therefore, to the utmost of my power, I will defend this doctrine and his Holiness: Right and custom against all usurpers of the heretical or protest and authority whatever, especially the Lutheran church of Germany, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, and the now pretended authority and churches of England and Scotland, and the branches of same now established in Ireland, and on the continent of America and elsewhere and all adherents in regard that they may be usurped and heretical, opposing the Sacred Mother church of Rome."

"I do now denounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical King, Prince or State, named Protestant or Liberals, or obedience to any of their laws, magistrates or officers."

"I do further declare that the doctrine of the churches of England and Scotland, of the Calvinists, Hugenots, and others of the name of Protestants or Masons, to be damnable and they themselves to be damned who will not forsake same.

"I do further declare that I will help, assist and advise all or any of His Holiness agents, in any place where I should be, in Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Ireland or America, or in any other kingdom or territory I shall come to, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant or Masonic doctrines, and to destroy all their pretended powers, legal or otherwise.

"I do further promise and declare that, notwithstanding I am dispensed with to assume any religion heretical for the propagation of the Mother Church's interest; to keep secret and private all her agents, counsels, from time to time, as they entrust me, and not divulge directly or indirectly, by word, writing or circumstances whatever, but to execute that which should be proposed, given in charge, or discovered unto me, by you, my Ghostly Father, or any of this Sacred Order.

"I do further promise and declare that I will have no opinion or will of my own or any mental reservation whatever, even as a corpse or cavader (perinde ac cavader) but will unhesitatingly obey each and every command that I may receive from my superiors in the militia of the Pope and of Jesus Christ.

"That I will go to any port of the world whithersoever I may be sent, to the frozen regions of the North, to the burning sands of the desert of Africa, or the jungles of India, to the centers of civilization of Europe, or to the wild haunts of the barbarous savages of America, without murmuring or repining, and will be submissive in all things whatsoever is communicated unto me.

"In confirmation of which I hereby dedicate my life, soul and all corporal powers, and with the dagger I now receive I will subscribe my name, written in my blood, in testimony thereof; and should I prove false or weaken in my determination, may my brethern and fellow soldiers of the militia of the Pope cut off my hands and feet and my throat from ear to ear, my belly opened and sulphur burned therein with all the punishment that can be inflicted upon me on earth and my soul shall be tortured by demons in eternal hell forever.

"That I will always vote for a K. of C. in preference to a Protestant, especially a Mason, and that I will leave my party to do so; that if two Catholics are on the same ticket, I will satisfy myself which is the better supporter of the Mother Church and vote accordingly.

"That I will not deal with or employ a Protestant if it is in my power to deal with or employ a Catholic. That I will place Catholic girls in Protestant families that a weekly report may be made of the inner movements of the heretics.

"That I will provide myself with arms and ammunition that I may be in readiness when the word is passed, or I am commanded to defend the church either as an individual or with the militia of the Pope.

"All of which I, ..., do swear by the blessed Trinity and the blessed S—Socialist Sacrament which I am now to receive, to perform and on my part to keep this my oath.

"In testimony whereof, I take this most holy and blessed Sacrament of the Encharist, and witness the same further, with my name written with the point of this dagger, dipped in my own blood, and seal, in the face of this Holy Sacrament.

"127—St. Louis."

WORKING MEN AND WOMEN

By Mary E. Marcy,
(Associate Editor International Socialist Review.)

We are only working mules, my friend. All over the whole world we are toiling and sweating to make the wheels go round.

We build mansions and palaces and we live in garrets and basements. We sow the fields and reap the harvests—for somebody else to enjoy. We feed the world; we clothe the world; we house the world—and if we are out of a job for one week we are broke, we are hunting for another master—another boss again.

When we grow so weak and tired and desperate with struggling continually that we are impelled to throw down the whole burden of our lives and pull society about our ears, the Reformers, with loud voices appear.

These Reformers promise us many things. Sometimes the come beneath a Republican banner and again in the Democratic band wagon. The flag of any movement or organization, dear to you and me, they will float in order to get us to join their ranks.

O yes, they promise many things. Some of these they do not iptend to give us; and all they may grant will only render them more secure in their position upon our backs.

Do you remember our philanthropic friend, the New York millionaire, who bought up the land immediately adjoining a great factory and built model tenements for us? Do you remember the rents he charged us were only half as high as the rents we had been paying?

And you remember what happened then? The men who had been laid off offered to take our jobs at lower wages BECAUSE THEY KNEW THEY COULD LIVE ON LESS, since the RENTS had been reduced. And the boss told us if we refused to accept a reduction in wages, he would have to give our jobs to these [illegible]

So the cheap rents did not help us at all. But they DID HELP the BOSS who was able to cut wages because the cost of living had been lowered.

That is the way reforms turn out. They look like something good for the workers but they always end by benefiting the capitalists.

Low rents, cheap food, 3-cent car fares—all these the Reformers offer us. But when WE GET them, the COMPETITION for JOBS between the wage-workers themselves brings wages down low enough to take away all we think we have gained—and the BOSS GETS CHEAP MEN in the FACTORY.

Low rents and cheap living means that wages will go down; the price of wage slaves is lowered and the BOSS GETS THE BENEFIT.

There is only one thing that is starving, sweating and killing you and me. That thing is wage-slavery. Do not waste an ounce of energy making a fat job for the other fellow. Nothing can help you and me permanently as long as a few men own the factories, the mills and the mines.

We MAKE ALL the great and beautiful things in the world and the boss says these things are HIS. He pays us only enough to feed ourselves, to get us a few cheap hand-me-downs and a shelter in some cheap lodging house.

But supposing we continued to MAKE all the useful and beautiful things we make now and KEPT THEM ourselves or received equal value for them! The only reason you and I work for the boss is because the BOSS owns the MILL. Suppose WE OWNED THE MILL—you and I and thousands of our fellow workers. Suppose we COLLECTIVELY owned the factories and the mines. You know we would never dig up all the things we made and the value we created to hand over to somebody who didn't work.

Socialism means the collective ownership by the WORKERS of the MINES, the MILLS, the FACTORIES and the LAND, to be used for the benefit of the WORKERS.

Think this over. Socialism means the value of the things made in the factory for the MEN who work in the factory. It means nothing left for the old boss unless he takes a job beside you and PRODUCES something.

Join the Socialist party—the international organization of the working class for the abolition of capitalism. There are ten of us workers to one boss. If we unite, we can own the whole world. Division alone can defeat us.

Think it over. Study up on the subject. You CAN'T lose by becoming a Socialist unless you are a capitalist—and the Socialists propose to give the capitalists JOBS—so even HE will GAIN SOMETHING.

Unite with your fellow-workers into one great organization of the workers. Alone we can accomplish nothing; united the world is ours!

CUDAHYS VIOLATE THE CIVIL MARRIAGE LAWS

Church does not "recognize" divorce, it has all along considered this couple married even after the State said the marriage was at an end. Therefore, when they made up their differences, all they had to do was to go and live together again. Adultery and lascivious cohabitation are legal transgressions. The law says that this couple is not married. If they are living together, then they are guilty of one or the other.

Surely the Catholic Church is not superior to the law. And what has it to say or what can it say, and how does it presume to interfere in any way with the worshipings of the law of this country, and how does it presume to define or interpret those laws?

It may be admitted that the laws relative to marriage, divorce and sexual relations are terribly defective. But they are civil laws, and any one who transgresses them is first of all amenable to the civil authorities. Further, there is a well defined procedure in the matter of marriage that must be followed.

But churches have persistently presumed to interfere in the matter of marriage, with the result that great and grievous scandal has resulted. It has fed the sensational press, inflamed passion, destroyed homes, caused misery and suicide, and been the source of debasement for many.

The civil authorities, cowed by the threatening attitude of non-civil bodies, have backed and filled and exhibited the most pathetic weakness. The time is come when this must be ended.

Such an unholy, nauseating, hypocritical, cowardly and evasive affair as the Cudahy reunion should set the forces of law and order in operation. Marriage is and should be first of all a civil contract. Divorce is and should be binding. No organization can be permitted to interfere with either. If the reports in the Cudahy reunion are correct, then the whole matter is not only indecent, but it is a menace to the home, a violation of the sacity of the fireside, an assault upon the marriage relation and a most insidious form of free love, but it is also a menacing attack upon the laws of this country and should be rigorously dealt with.

We cannot but hope that the Common Cause will do it, that those who have so attacked the Socialists will attend to this matter. We further hope that the anti-Socialist crusaders, such as the escaped Socialist, Dave Goldstein, will make it part of his next lecture and show how a church has sought to steal one of the functions of the State and, as a more than Supreme Court, has overridden the law of the land.

HIERARCHY STRIKES BACK AT 'COLUMBUS SOCIALIST

Time Has Come for Our Readers to Draw the Line Against Foes of Working Class

THE CHURCH LEADERS TRY A NEW PLAN

THE TOCSIN CALL IS HEREBY SOUNDED TO THE TWELVE THOUSAND SOCIALIST VOTERS IN THIS CITY AND COUNTY WHO READ THE COLUMBUS SOCIALIST EVERY WEEK.

This paper has been telling the pure and unadulterated truth about the capitalistic system and its tools, the old party politicians, the Roman Catholic Church, the Ohio Manufacturers' Association and the Chamber of Commerce.

With religion of any kind we have no quarrel. But, when any organization is used to defeat the interests of the working class, we cannot be silent.

On the Sunday before the election last November, the Rev. Father D. A. Clark, pastor of the Church of the Holy Family, on West Broad Street, preached a sermon accusing Socialists of being Anarchists and seeking to break up the home. Later the Catholic Federation of Franklin County brought David Goldstein to this city. This person, in the coarsest terms vilified, slandered and stigmatized all Socialists as free-lovers and traitors. A falsehood is a lie, whether uttered by a priest, clad in the robes of his supposedly sacred office or by a renegade Jew. Anyone with red blood in their veins would resent such attacks. There has poured into this office, since last fall, such a flood of evidence against these conspirators in the Catholic church, old party councils and certain judicial courts, that we have been compelled to publish them. There has been no denial or refutation of the statements made in The Columbus Socialist. There will be none.

The hierarchy of Rome is cunning, however, and always strikes back. It has struck at The Columbus Socialist. Scores of business men, who have advertised in The Socialist have been notified that they must not patronize this paper. Among this number is one concern whose manager admitted that his store received better direct results from advertising in this paper than from any other source. The pressure of Rome was stronger than business judgment and the firm discontinued their ad.

THE LINE HAS BEEN DRAWN BY THE CATHOLIC CHURCH. THE ONLY COURSE OPEN IS FOR OUR TWELVE THOUSAND SUPPORTERS TO PATRONIZE ONLY THOSE MERCHANTS WHO ADVERTISE IN THE SOCIALIST.

If you have to go half a mile to get a can of beans go to some store that advertises in The Socialist. "He that is not with us is against us."

DRAW THE LINE.

THE LAW'S DELAY

The case of Walcutt vs. the City of Columbus and the litigation connected therewith supplies a brilliant example of the law's delays. In 1891-92 J Macy Walcutt constructed a West Side sewer. The city contested payment therefor. Mr. Walcutt sued for something like $26,000. The case was tried and appealed in Common Pleas, Circuit and Supreme courts and finally in July, 1911, was awarded $30,500, which sum included interest to that date. Did Walcutt get the money which the courts had said was due him? "Nay, nay, Pauline." No sooner was the judgment affirmed than Cyrus Huling, F. A. Davis and Gilbert Stewart put in a claim for $16,000 as attorneys' fees and enjoined the payment of the $30,500 to Walcutt. After many delays the new case was again set for trial before Judge Dillon on Friday of last week. Walcutt demanded a jury, but Judge Dillon denied this. In the course of his remarks from the bench he said:

"Of course, I admit there is some doubt about it; but these parties seem to prefer to litigate and have a good time over it, and we might as well let them have all they want. I will refer this case to George B. Okey, master commissioner, and have him report in ten days."

Walcutt can still whistle for his money. This litigation bids fair to become as famous as the case of Jarndyce vs Jarndyce, immortalized by Dickens. Our sacred judicial system is wonderful, indeed.

In nine cases out of ten Socialism will remove the evils it is accused of producing. Capitalism, being an old and experienced sinner, is well versed in the ways of the pickpocket and the sneak-thief. We are not surprised then to find it hiding the stolen goods and taking a conspicuous stand on the street corner shouting, "Stop, thief!" with a great deal of vehemence and indignation, and pointing at Socialism, which it would like to see playing Oliver Twist to its Artful Dodger. Invariably capitalism is the cause of crimes.

COUNCIL IGNORES MATRON AND WORKERS AT BASTILE

Raise Salary of Clerk Fifty Per Cent —Budget Passed at Last Moment.

The city council last Monday evening passed the city budget, after a long play of politics between Mayor Karb and certain Republican members. It amounts to $1,642,315, and is $127,305.42 more than the 1912 budget.

The items of the budget are: Safety fund, $456,377; service, $29,600; police pension, $15,450; firemen's pension, $11,180; interest on city's bonded indebtedness, $361,780; sinking fnud $436,643. The firemen do not get any increase under this buget and Karb will have to explain to the boys all about it.

The ordinance authorizing the issue of $35,000 bonds to be used in providing two electrical substations, installing mose than 400 arc lights, making necessary connections with municipal light plant and making possible a rearrangement of wires, was passed. Councilman Connolley said he wished the ordinance to say the money should be spent for these purposes specifically, as a former issue of $75,000 had miscarried.

The salary of Thomas H. Guthrie, Secretary to Chief Carter, was raised from $1000 to $15000. He will be custodian of exhibits in criminal cases and of the city prison. He, the matrons, engineers and janitor were granted two days' vacation each month, the same as given policemen under a recent ordinance. Socialist member Bohnert tried to have the pay of the matron, janitor and engineers increased in the same ratio as Guthrie's salary, but the Republicans and Democrats gave Bohnert and the other Socialists the ha-ha. The gang doesn't seem to care a darn for women or working men.

JOINT SESSION OF LOCAL COLUMBUS

Local Columbus, Socialist party will meet in joint session tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon at Red Lion Hall, 285½ South High Street. Every party member should be present.

RAISING THE DEAD

Several weeks ago we called for contributions to be used in placing on our subscription list, names of residents in the rural sections of Franklin County. The response has been generous to date, but we want to place every voter on our sub. list. To do this will require about $1500. If you Comrades knew of the vital importance of this move, there could be no question but that you would bend every effort, and raise the money at once. We wish to state, we are receiving, most encouraging reports from all sections of the County which we have been able to reach through this means. One man writes: "Someone has been good enough to send me your valuable paper, I have been a farmer and Republican all my life, but you have converted me. Please herewith enclose $1.00 to be used in sending the paper to others who are yet in the dark."

Now, Comrades, get busy on this proposition, slip out the coupon and mail or bring it in with your remittance. It makes no difference if it is only five cents, or five dollars, send it in today and start the work right.

Date.....

The Socialist, 108½ South High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Dear Comrades—Enclosed please find $.....Cents....., which you are authorized to use in placing names of rural residents in the Twelfth Congressional district on the subscription list of "The Socialist" until after election. It is distinctly understood that this money is to be used only in the Twelfth Congressional district.

RICH THIEF LEAVES PEN IN FINE PHYSICAL SHAPE

Cleveland Broker Gets Off Easy for Stealing $100,000.

"Looking the picture of health, dressed in a natty summer suit and bidding smiling farewells to prison officials, guards and fellow-prisoners, Harry E. Hayes, of Cleveland, the wealthiest prisoner in the penitentiary, stepped out of the State institution at 10:30 Monday morning, a free man. Two suit cases contained all that he had brought with him to the prison, February 3, last year, and they were carried to the train by his son Harry, jr., when they both made an early departure for Cleveland. He was a Cleveland broker and banker, and was committed for the embezzlement of $180,000 from the funds of the Cincinnati, Bluffton and Chicago railway, although the specific discrepancy in his accounts on which he was sentenced amounted to but $60,000. If served out, full time, his sentence would have extended to June 1, 1914."

The foregoing from a local paper shows how lightly the terror of the law falls upon the rich malefactor. Had Hayes been a "common" thief, he would have served his full time and then slunk away followed by the watchful eyes of detectives and other guardians of the rights of property. The penniless convict is never a "picture of health when he emerges from the grim portals of the pen. There's a difference, you know.

POLITICAL NEWS UNIMPORTANT TO THE WORKING CLASS

Democrats and Republicans Still Going Throughout the Motions.

Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey and Thomas Marshall, of Indiana, were nominated by the national convention of the Democratic party at Baltimore last Tuesday for President and Vice President of the United States. The candidates and their platform stand for the present profit system and no self-respecting workingman can vote for them.

Judge E. B. Dillon was nominated for Governor by the Republicans of Ohio last Tuesday to lead the forlorn hope of the G. O. P. in the Buckeye State. Dillon's record during the street car strike in Columbus endears him to the hearts of all workmen (like Kelley did) and he will get his reward, no doubt.

Workers of the world, there is nothing for us to do but to vote the straight Socialist ticket.

SPECIAL NOTICE

The Central Committee of the Socialist party of Franklin County is arranging for a general distribution of a special campaign paper on Sunday, July 14. The workers in the Wards and Locals should be ready to get their quota next Saturday, July 13, at 108½ South High Street, Room 9.

MEANING OF LIFE UNDER THE PRESENT SYSTEM

Some Pertinent Questions Raised for Toilers to Think About Just Now

"The meaning of life is to barter and buy and the strongest and shrewdest are masters of time."—John Boyle O'Reilly.

Is this true, will anyone deny it? Have we, as a nation, any ideals? Do we seek anything but money? When a nations sinks to such a level it has certainly gone almost to the bad. Pick up almost any old paper, except a Socialist paper, and you will read such headlines as: "How to Be Successful"; "How to Get Rich"; "Man of Brains Wanted to Make Millions." Depraved humanity has gone money mad. They think not of each other, but simply of self, in other words, let me get mine and to h——ll with the other fellow.

It is ever going to be thus, has it always been thus? If it is, then the game's not worth the candle.

We see in our everyday walks, on every hand, master and slave. Master who feeds on porterhouse, the slave who feeds on lives; the master who wears broadcloth, the slave who wears rags; the master who lives in a mansion, the slave who lives in a hovel; the master who rides in a fine auto, the slave who trudges along on dusty roads. Why?

Can't you see it, you ignorant, thick headed mutts? Don't you realize that it is mostly your fault? Don't you realize that every time you step up to the ballot box and vote for one of those plutocratic tools like Taft, Bryan, Roosevelt, La Follette, Wilson and Harmon, that you are helping to weld more tightly the chains that bind you? These men have their class interests to serve and they will serve them. Their class has lied to you, stolen from you, murdered you and yours by inches and now they will have the monumental gall to ask you to vote for them again. If you do, you are a fool. And you don't deserve any better treatment.

Now I have called you names, I have non-pc-ed you, but there no I am just one of those revolutionary Socialists and maybe I am sorry for you. At any rate, I was once a mutt just like you, and I at least think I now have my eyes open. I don't kick any dogs around, except the System. It is a dog-gone poor system that forces men to commit crime to get enough to eat.

That forces virtue to hide its cheek behind the gaudy walls of shame.

That unarms the Davids of the common people and places the police and soldiers in the hands of men like E. K. Stewart.

That creates mercenary mobs like the Chamber of Commerce and Citizen Alliance.

That allows profits to strangle the cries of justice; that talks of the dignity of labor, making tyrants laugh and angels weep.

That makes the worker beg for a paltry pittance to postpone a lingering death.

That give our industrial despots power over government and men.

That wrecks men on the unfeeling breakers of remorseless capitalism.

That allows our Supreme Courts to sit in our temples of "Justice" and dagger laws to death.

That prates of equal rights with men begging for a job to get enough to eat.

That place right upon a cross and wrong upon a trone.

That perpetuates a system that breeds millionaries and tramps as it dries up the best in man.

Is this not all true? Is there one who dare deny it, if not then why go on. The history of the world has been a history, not of wars as the historians try to tells you, but of class struggles.

The working class is now preparing itself for its historic mission, and that mission is to do away with classes. On one hand we have the craft union which has done much for labor, but which now are obsolete and practically useless.

Capitalism is organized by industries. The workers must also follow suit and industrial organization is the next step—one big union. The Socialist party on the political field with the industrial organization on the industrial field can accomplish the deed. We can free suffering humanity and for once they can hear the call of nature to the fields, the play grounds, the schools, and under a co-operative commonwealth this country will be filled with sculptures, musicians, poets, orators and scientists. We will collect the glories of the past. Bands of shining angels will sing the glories of our triumph, and the smiles and laughter of our emancipated people will lighten up this country from the frozen banks of the Arctic ocean to the Golden sands of the Gulf of Mexico.

DUNKLEMANN GIVES FEW VIEWS ABOUT OUR PLATFORM

Distinguished Gentleman Uses Keen Logic but Poor Spelling

Mr. Editor:

Say, old man, I bin lookin at your platfoarm agin an I want to tell you thet if eny bodie hes got a brain storm round hear it hant me but its the fellers whot rote thet plattfoarm. I sea by the first an sekond outbarstes in industries demands thet thet you fellers are trin to cut down the time a feller is sposed to work.

If thear is a new labor savin device made I spose yoe wood hev a feller throw away all hes made by puttin it on the markit in cuttin down the time thet a feller works. Old man do you think thet thear is eny one livin thet will be so dum nise thet they will give a feller as much fer workin 8 hours as fer workin 10 or twelve? Dont you no thet thet little bunch of skin an bone an muscle an nerves an brains an hair or hair brains, thet wobbles round on this foot stool, in the shape of the humin bodie hant so konstituted thet its direly void ov selffish [illegible] else it, an must be a selffish nature. You no its a fact cuze if it hant so you wodent be hear. You wod a bin dead long ago.

The idee ov a feller gittin a day an a haf rest every week hant so bad fer the kapitalist. You sea thet if the people are workin al the time they wont hev time to spend there monie. Just try to think what a awful thing it wod be if such a thing happened. You feller dont hev to worrie bout the laborin man gittin plentie ov rest. When hes turned out enof stuf we will give him a rest all rite.

Nother thing I want to say is thet it wod be better fer the workin man if he had to work a little longer. How is he goin to put in his spare time? If he hes to much time off hes liable to get in trouble. He goes out an spends his monie for something thet he did not want at all. I was talkin to one the other night an he was complainin sumthin awfull. He did not seam to no how in the world to spend his time an monie. I am sorry thet he hant a kapitalist as he sure hes got the sistum down to a purtie fine point. He says thet the onlie salvashun for the laborin man is to give him all the work he can stand an if you cannot give enof work or if he was onlie able to work haf a da he says the boss should cut down his wages. Thet is some wisdom. Its a shame thet his grate grandfather wassent a millunaire.

Mr. Editor, I want to say thet these hear hornie handed sons of toil with brows respendent with kristle drops of labors dues, thet sparkil like the flowers in the avenew ov prosperitie, kissed by the mornin son hant goin to be bunkoed into kutten dow nthere workday.

On lection day they will be found lined up votin the same old tickets, so thet they can roll up there sleve and bear their manlie breast an git out and work there 66 hours a week fer the sake ov the full dinner pail or some bodies houndog. You wait an sea.

Yours trulie,

J. J. DUNKLEMAN.

SOCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL JUSTICE.

By C. E. Ruthenberg, Socialist Candidate for Governor.

"But if, having this in view, those fervent in the great fight for the rule of the people and for social and industrial justice, which has now become a clear-cut fight for honesty against dishonesty, fraud and theft, desire me to lead the fight, I will do so."

Thus did Theodore Roosevelt address the delegates at the Chicago Republican convention after it became clear that he was beaten in his attempt to again secure the nomination for the president from the party which had previously elected him.

A third party may or may not be organized. Roosevelt may or may not be the candidate for this third party. This party may or may not adopt the red bandanna with its mottling of dirty gray or yellow as its emblem. These matters are not yet settled. But this is certain: The new party will not stand for social and industrial justice.

There is just one central injustice in our present industrial system. In every city of the land there are shops and great manufacturing establishments. In these establishments there are thousands of men engaged in the production of wealth. From the man who does the dirty work at $1.50 per day to the superintendent in charge they are paid wages for the work which they perform. The wealth which they produce does not belong to them. They receive for their services wages which, on the average, only enable them to buy food, clothing and shelter for themselves and to reproduce the race of workers.

On the other hand, there are men and women, sometimes children, in various parts of the country who own these plants. They may never have seen them. They know nothing about the work of production carried on in these establishments. They may never have done an hour's productive work in their entire lives. But they have, through the chicanery and robbery of the capitalist system, secured a legal title of ownership of these plants. These legal titles enable them to take in the form of interest and dividends the lion's share of the product of the worker.

This is the great injustice of the capitalist system. The workers are robbed of what they produce and the wealth taken from them is turned over to an idle, parasitic class. All the other evils of the capitalist system are the result of this primary injustice. Starvation wages, long hours of work, women and children in our factories, unemployment, hunger and starvation are all the logical outcome of our system of exploitation. Unsanitary, health destroying, crippling and maiming factories, in which the workers are employed are the natural result of this system. These things exist because the profit system leads to constant attempts by the owners of industry to increase their profits by taking more from the workers and forcing them into deeper degradation and to labor under worse conditions.

This exploitation of the working class will never be touched by the Republican or Democratic party, nor by any new party which Mr. Roosevelt and his friends may organize. Both old parties and the men who may organize the new party are believers in and upholders of the profit system and the social and industrial injustice existing today cannot be done away with so long as the profit system continues in existence.

Roosevelt's new party, if it ever comes into existence, will merely be an attempt to turn the workers' attention from the real point of attack by leading them away from it by cries about "restoring the rule of the people." The rule of the people—the rule of the workers, who are a majority of the people—can have only one object and that is to abolish the profit system. Any other use of their power cannot bring them social and industrial justice.

The one party which is directing its attack against exploitation and the profit system is the party whose emblem is the red flag—the Socialist Party—not the party of the red bandanna with gray and yellow streaks, and it is through the triumph of this party alone that the workers will secure social and industrial justice.

WIMMIN AIN'T GOT NO KICK.

By Kate Richards O'Hare.

I spoke one night not long ago in a typical country town of two thousand, a town just like thousands of other towns, and after I had finished a man came up and spoke to me, a typical man, just like millions of other men. He said he liked my speech and thought most of it was true, but that my husband was evidently a poor specimen to allow me to gad about the country, and that I would better be home caring for the babies and, as a last crushing blow to my presumption, he declared: "Well, no matter how bad things are, wimmin ain't got no kick."

As I looked at the man's rugged, honest face, saw the frankness with which his frank eyes looked into mine, my mind went back over all the days I had been studying the problems of the working woman and her sister, the fallen woman, and I thought "How long, O Lord, how long" will men insist on being so abjectly ignorant?

"Wimmin ain't got no kick." No, we women should not object that capitalism, the machine age, makes machines of us all. Three-fold machines; first machines for child bearing, machines to keep always the supply of child workers for the factory replenished. We should bow our heads in submission when Teddy the Terrible, he of the big stick and the big teeth, charges up and down the earth attending to everyone's business but his own, reviled us and called us all manner of vile names because we did not produce babies fast enough to suit his masters. We should have been duly grateful when priest and minister, college professor and sycophant of every kind, parrot-like, mouthed his vile cant phrases. What did God make women for but to bear children when the sateless maw of the factory yawns and the machines cry out for cheap workers to make wealth for its masters?

Capitalism honors us most highly; not only are we to be the child-bearing machines of the race, but wealth-making machines as well. Here in the United States there are six million women who have been forced out of the home, denied the God-given right to wife and motherhood and forced to be wealth-making machines in the industries of our nation.

Capitalism and its upholders are chivalrous also; they freely admit it themselves, good Democrats and Republicans place woman on a pedestal, exalt motherhood and praise virtue; but, nevertheless, they demand woman to become the machine to gratify their beastly passions and provide the machine of prostitution. In the United States we have seven hundred and twenty thousand known prostitutes to fill our brothels and add the crowning glory to our civilization.

Not that alone, but the life of a prostitute is so terrible, so unnatural, that the average life is less than five years. Every year out from the brothels and dives of our nation are carried one hundred and thirty thousand women to fill unknown graves in the potter's field and one hundred and thirty-five thousand young girls must walk that slippery, rock-strewn, blood-stained, briar-encompassed path that leads to the brothel. Walk always down the path of destruction, pushed onward by the hand of want and poverty, dragged down by the hand of shame or snared by the white-slaver.

Nor is this all: the most pitiful, most revolting and soul-sickening feature of the debasement of womanhood by capitalism is never discussed, never understood, and always kept in the background.

The pulpit, the press and the platform have for the last year been full of discussions of "the fallen woman"; we have ranted and canted over her, shed crocodile tears and wept in maudlin sympathy, but we have overlooked one fact. There are seven hundred and twenty thousand prostitutes, but they are prostitutes simply because they have been forced to work at wages that will not support them, and they must either sell their bodies or starve. Adding insult to injury in our attitude on this question, we have overlooked the fact that it takes twenty men to support one fallen woman and the parasites who prey on her, and there are just about twenty times as many fallen men as fallen women.

Who are the twenty times seven hundred and twenty thousand fallen men? Your sons, your nephews, your neighbor's sons, for the most part. Our ignorant boys, through whose veins the blood of youth flows warm, who know and harken to the age-long call of race preservation, but who know little or nothing of the black plague of the brothel.

Our sons go down to the brothel, and there in their warm, fresh youth contract the germs of the vilest disease known to medical science, the one insurable disease. The disease that strikes down not alone its own generation, but lies in wait for generations yet unborn. That loathsome, nameless horror that has killed more men than war, ruined more women's lives and blasted more babies than all other diseases combined.

Back to the palace, the cottage and the hovel comes this nameless horror, the fruit of prostitution; back to our innocent daughters, back to our unborn, back to curse and maim and slay, and we women it is who suffer most must fill the brothel and feel the curse at home.

As a result of these things, medical statistics tell us that one child in twenty is born into the world cursed before ever it sees the light of day, that one wife in fifteen must go on the surgeon's table or under the doctor's care, paying the penalty of the husband's transgression.

If all the voters had one pair of eyes and one pair of ears and I could force them to go with me as I have gone to the blind schools, where blind eyes will never see and hands grope in everlasting darkness; to the deaf and dumb institute, where deaf ears will never hear and dumb tongues never speak; the imbecile asylum, where the idiot and the imbecile mutter and mumble in their degradation; to the insane ward where the insane shriek and tear their hair or stare out of vacant eyes into a vacant world.

"Wimmin ain't got no kick!" No, not if we are dolls stuffed with sawdust, satisfied with fine phrases, content with false chivalry, willing to be fed on flattery; we have not. We women who happen to have been lucky enough to have annexed a biped without feathers who can supply a meal ticket and a certain amount of hobble skirts and jute puffs, "we ain't got no kick."

But we happen to be women with brains and hearts and souls, women who have developed enough backbone not to be compelled to do the clinging vine act, women who are womanly enough to feel for all womankind, motherly enough to mother all childhood, we certainly feel that we have a right to protest against the abhorrent demands of capitalism.

Not to protest alone, but to use all the brains with which we are endowed, all the power of our womanhood and the compelling force of our motherhoodto relegate capitalism to the dim limbo of the past and make sure and safe the birth of the new social order.—Chicago Daily Socialist.

JEAN JAURES ON COST OF LIVING.

Famous French Socialist Gives His Views Regarding Increase in Price of Necessities.

Jean Jaures, leader of the French Socialists, gives the following reasons for the high cost of living and tells what must be done to relieve the situation:

"What can be the organic crime of a country whose natural resources are the richest, but whose bread is the dearest?

"France should have a national organization to buy up her wheat and similar food products. Then the cost of living could not be raised as it is now. Such a national organization would give us efficacious stability of the prices of food stuffs. If we can organize the country for national defense, why cannot the nation give us an organization which will end Starvation prices forever?

"Already the more far-seeing nations are organizing certain branches of production on a national basis. Sweden is organizing her state mines so as to preserve their coveted minerals; German is creating a national potash industry.

"The high cost of living has made life intolerable. The state must step in and save the citizens.

"The thing most striking in the present condition of the economic world is the sharp disproportion which exists between agricultural products and industrial products on this planet.

"Why is this? Because capitalism, searching huge dividends, turns more and more toward industrial products. Here it gets rapid returns.

"On the other hand agriculture does not admit of rapid financial movements and bewildering financial surprises.

"Time baits in the world of agriculture, but not in that of industry. In the latter, man can communicate the impetus of his own impatience to the wheel of production. But in agricultural production man must work in league with slow nature, with the movement of the seasons and their inevitable cycle.

"But the most crushing cause of the high cost of living is the tremendous outlay of resources to maintain an armed peace.

"This strikes directly at agricultural production. In France 4,000,000 of young men are withdrawn from productive labor; $1,600,000,000 are taken yearly by armed peace from agricultural and industrial development.

"The more a nation prepares for war, the more energy and capital does it take from agriculture.

"I say that to discuss the question of tariff versus free trade is only tinkering at the question of the high cost of living. The nations must take their breadstuffs in hand. If this crisis in the high cost of living continues in France such a national organization as I propose must be formed and France will blaze the world's way as usual."

PIN THIS ON YOUR GROCERY BILL

It appears from government investigation that J. P. Morgan, the Deutscher Bank of Germany and the Rothschilds have cornered ahe world's coffee supply, and are now engaged in raking off an almost fabulous profit from their monopoly.

One of their achievements in these operations was to diminish enormously the supply of coffee in order to raise the price. The government has seized 950,000 bags of coffee that the combination had secreted in New York, while literally millions of bags have been destroyed in Brazil.

The earth produces what we need to live. The ruling powers of the world reach out and grab that produce and then levy tribute upon us for it that they may pile up the fortunes already colossal.

That is the exact situation today.

How do you like it?

Think it over the next time you pay your grocery bill. The prices of almost everything on that bill have been increased for you in the same way and for the same purpose.

That's what we call exploitation. Had about enough of it? We have. It isn't necessary, for one thing. We are not obliged to be skinned all the time if we don't really enjoy the process.

ONE INDUSTRY; ONE UNION.' INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM.

Many leaders in trades unions have been proclaiming issues in the past year by which to lead their followers to victory and control of the organizations in which they hold membership, but few, if any, to date have made industrial unionism the issue.

The United Mine Workers of America, a year or so ago, had as its issue the Civic Federation, and took action against John Mitchell for his membership therein, and he resigned from the federation. The International Association of Machinists made a like issue in the campaign against President O'Connell, and defeated him for re-election after many years of faithful service.

The so-called progressive element in the International Typographical Union made the "Wahneta," or alleged secret organization within the organization, an issue against James M. Lynch in the recent election, and he won by only a few thousand votes.

Pressmen in different localities have petty grievances of their own arising from lockouts, strikes and wage disputes, and these members are making these grievances cause for action against President George Berry of that organization with an eye single to his defeat.

In other organizations the members are becoming restless. They seek through utterance in one way or another to express dissatisfaction with the administrations of their unions' affairs.

And the trades unions throughout the country are asking one another: "Why is Sam Gompers?" The trades unionists are asking one another what is the matter. They expect some initiatory step to be made by the head of the American Federation of Labor that will relieve the situation or put the different organizations into position whereby they will be able to fight a winning fight against the combined capitalists of the different industries. There is at present much dissatisfaction with the head of the A. F. of L. It is believed and argued that a younger and more progressive man should fill the office of president of that organization.

No organized progressive movement has as yet taken as its issue in election campaigns Industrial Unionism.

The Western Federation of Miners, under that old and progressive leader, Charles H. Moyer, is probably further advanced in Industrial Unionism than any other labor organization in the United States today This organization requires that any person who works around or in a metalliferous mine must be a member of the Western Federation of Miners, be he miner, machinist, carpenter or laborer. This action on the part of the federation has been fought by the different international unions of the trades concerned, but the miners have won their contention.

.....

The Brewery Workers come next in Industrial Unionism. The International Association of Brewery Workers require, also, that all employes in or around the plants where their members are employed shall be members of their organization; but they have only partially been successful in this demand. The engineers have a separate organization from the Brewery Workers, but they have an agreement between their internationals whereby they sign scales of wages jointly.

The two organizations named above were the pioneers in the Industrial Unionism movement; but numerous and disastrous reverses have taught the different trades that Industrial Unionism is an absolute necessity, and out of this necessity has arisen the Federation of Shop Employes on the Harriman system. This federation was plunged into a life and death struggle early last fall with the railroad captains. The managers of the different roads that go to make up the system realized that to recognize the federation would be to put a tremendous weapon into the hands of the railroad men, and they decided to fight to the death. With the aid of all other railroads in the country this battle still goes forward.

But the end is not yet in this controversy. Representatives from every road west of the Mississippi that goes to make up a system federation of shop employes met in Kansas City recently, and a federation of federations was formed. This consolidation was made necessary by the refusal of the Harriman system to recognize the system federation, and unless a speedy settlement is made the government will be forced to step in and act as mediator in the premises.

"Industrial Unionism," with the exception of political action, is the only live issue before the trade uninist today. In the printing trades the condition in this respect are deplorable. There was a time when all the printing trades belonged to the International Typographical Union, but one at a time the different branches of the trade, seceded until there remains but the "commercial" printer and the "newspaper" printer, consisting of linotype operators, ad. men, makeups, proof readers, and the linotype machinists in the newspapers, and those employed in doing job work in the commercial plants. The Mailers still belong to the International Typographical Union, although they have separate locals and sign separate scales of wages.

The International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America is a separate international, and in Denver maintains four separate locals, the Web Pressmen (newspaper), the Printing Pressmen (cylinder pressmen in job offices), Press Assistants (feeders on cylinder presses), and Job Pressmen (those who run platten presses in job offices).

The Stereotypers' and Electrotypers' Union is a separate organization. This organization maintains but one local in Denver, although it is closely allied in everything but trade relations with the Photo-Engravers, which organization also has a separate international union.

Then we have the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, which last week held its international convention in Detroit, Mich. This organization has two local unions in Denver—the Bookbinders and the Bindery Women.

These five international unions representing ten locals in Denver, are associated together in the International Allied Printing Trades Association for the control of the Allied Printing Trades label. The association concerns itself about little else that is of benefit to the trade.

The ten local unions are associated together in the Denver Allied Printing Trades Council and have no other authority than the control of the Allied Printing Trades label.

Outside of the five international unions named, there is the Lithographers' International Union, not affiliated with the International Allied Printing Trades Association, and the International Union of Lithographic Artists. The latter organization also has no affiliation with any of the printing trades although it is seeking recognition by the Lithographers. The Artists are one of the most skilled, and therefore one of the most independent, branches of the printing trades.

Think of it! Seven international unions and twelve local unions in the printing trades!

There is little cause for worry on the part of the bosses with this condition of affairs staring them in the face. What is needed is an organizer with the brain and stick-to-itiveness to bring this disastrous secession movement together in one Industrial Union. This action is demanded by the rank and file in the printing trades, and their demand will not be denied. This is the one issue in the printing trades as well as in all other industries of the country.

The leader who recognizes this issue will remain a leader; and he who stands pat on his record and allows the trade union movement to jolt along in the gutter is doomed to defeat and will soon be forgotten.

Last week two international unions of the printing trades found utterance through resolutions at their international conventions—the Stereotypers and Electrotypers and the Bookbinders. The Bookbinders passed the following resolution:

"Be it Resolved, By the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, in convention assembled, that we go on record as favoring the idea of one union of all the printing trades crafts; that all of the present organizations in the industry should be amalgamated into one industrial union; and be it further

"Resolved, That our president be and is hereby instructed to present this resolution at the next meeting of the Board of Governors of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, to the end that a plan may be devised by said Board of Governors for such reorganization of the present printing trades unions into one industrial union, Such plan to be submitted by the Board of Governors to the membership of the various unions affiliated with the International Printing Trades Association for vote on its adoption or rejection; and be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the convention of the I. P. P. & A. U., who will be in session at Hale Springs, Tennessee, next week."

Fearing that action might be too long delayed in having the above proposition accepted by the other four international unions, the Bookbinders' convention also adopted the following resolution, introduced by Delegates Harrison and Francke, of Denver:

"Whereas, The International B. of B. does believe in the advancement of our craft to the highest standard in conditions and wages;

"Therefore, be it Resolved, By this, the thirteenth biennial convention in session assembled, that we instruct our incoming officers to use all powers at their command to bring about a uniform scale of wages in all states of the United States and Canada, and instruct all local unions in each state to use all means in their power to bring the scale in each respective state to the highest wage scale in said states, and in case of local unions wishing to improve conditions that all locals in same state shall act in conjunction each with the other to secure the same."

At San Francisco last week the Stereotypers and Electrotypers took similar action to the above resolution. It is believed that the Pressmen will take like action at their convention, now in session; and the Photo-Engravers promise to consider similar action at their forthcoming gathering.

All the "black sheep" that strayed from the parent organization are asking if they can come home. These organizations at one time were a part of the Typographical Union, and that the weaker should first feel the result of economic conditions is but natural.

And when the great Typographical Union meets at Cleveland, Ohio, in August, what will it do? The subject will be brought up in different forms; the Chicago and Denver situations will be pointed to with disgust and misgivings for the future welfare of the printing trades organizations, and the convention will vote its future. It is believed that the delegates to the Cleveland convention will not be found wanting, and that James M. Lynch will be found among the progressives that desire to progress toward closer affiliation, joint scale agreements and eventually Industrial Unionism.

Every move that is made in the industrial field today has a tendency to affiliation and consolidation. The Western Federation, organized industrially, have formed a mining department in the A. F. of L. with the United Mine Workers of America; the shopmen of the railroads are federating; the printing trades, after leading for years and then falling to the rear, are talking closer affiliation; dual building trades organizations are endeavoring to get together; the Street Railway Employes are claiming jurisdiction over all employes that operate trains over their tracks as well as all employes in the shops of the companies with which they have agreements; the workers in every calling are uniting for action on the industrial field.

There is no middle ground in this matter. The heads of organizations must progress with the demands of the times and of the rank and file, or they must pass into obscurity. The men and women in the trade union movement today will no longer allow leaders to stand in the way of advancement. Industrial Unionism is bound to come, and with it will come united political action among the workers of the world—Denver Labor World.

THE POOR MAN'S CHANCE.

Any poor man who believes he has been unjustly imprisoned has as good a chance to fight his case as Harry K. Thaw, provided he can raise as much money as Thaw. What the young murderer has spent in trying to get out of the asylum for the criminal insane is estimated at from one-half to a full million of dollars. But that is easy for him. Out in Pittsburg and elsewhere thousands of men are toiling, sweating and dying in order that the superior brains of the young millionaire may receive either the reward of abstinence or the compensation of great directive ability.

Thaw's crime was one that came naturally in the course of his life—a sordid, miserable existence in which he never did a tap of work, never accomplished anything, but wallowed in bestiality that finally culminated in a gross murder.

Since he has been in the asylum he has fought constantly to get out. It has cost the State an enormous sum of money to keep him there. Two hundred thousand dollars is probably not too high a figure at which to set it, and even now the State is not certain it can keep him.

If he had been wronged in any way, if he had been unjustly restrained, cost does not matter in the work of freeing him. But the facts are known and speak for themselves. But Thaw has money, and it has a voice in the matter.

At the same time one cannot but reflect on certain things. During this summer season charitable organizations are begging for money with which to give poor children and mothers an outing. If all of them combined raise $50,000 they are doing well. But the all-wise State gives nothing. Still it has money to squander on a case like this, to fritter away on a young mad man, instead of spending even a cent to keep poor children and poor mothers from going mad in the heat and stench of the cities.—New York Call.

DID YOU GET YOURS?

Last week about $360,000,000 in dividends and interest was paid out by New York institutions. This represents the accumulated earnings of the past six months. The number of persons to whom it will be paid is not given, but it will be relatively few, for most New Yorkers do not live on rent, interest or dividends. They merely do part of the work whereby these little comforts of the rich are produced.

In all the disputes concerning the proportions received by "capital" and the proportion received by "labor" sight is usually lost of the multitudinous ways capitalists have of getting their grip on wealth. They pay themselves big salaries as managers. They receive other returns as directors. They get interest on their investments and rent on their real estate. Then, through their control of governmental powers, through their control of banks and through their handling of the financial affairs of cities, States and the nation, they have for various longer or shorter periods the free use of money. One and the same capitalist may receive returns from a hundred different institutions and yet he will be listed by most of the statisticans as 100 different persons, and great is the rejoicing over the vast number of persons who profit by our benevolent institutions.

While the last week day of June is the great cleaning up day, and while New York is by far the biggest distributing center, there are other periods in the first six months when dividends are distributed and there are other cities that do the distributing.

But every penny of it is wrung from the working class. The mere fact that some few persons who receive a few miserable dollars are productive workers does not change the essential facts. The semi-annual and quarterly disbursements are a parade of the vast piles of wealth torn from the working class.

Of course the $360,000,000 is a per capita of less than $3 for the 90,000,000 inhabitants of this country. But it is safe to say that 9,000,000 did not participate in it, and that if 900,000 did, then even at that, probably less than 90,000 got the lions share, and probably 9,000 or even 900 scooped in most of it.

C. H. Corey, son of the former superintendent of the C. H. & D. railroad, of Lima, O., recently killed himself in a hotel in Los Angeles because a young lady whom he admired would not marry him. Corey was already married and his wife was in the next room in the hotel when he killed himself. Corey was not a Socialist nor was Socialism responsible for the breaking up of this home.

In a New York flat the other day neighbors heard the cry of a baby. The cry lasted all day, and at last the door of the flat was broken open, and they found a woman lying on the floor dead. Clinging to her was a baby but a few months old. The woman had taken poison, and had been dead for several hours. Her husband was a successful pharmacist, and until a few months ago was prosperous. Then his health failed, and he was compelled to give up his work. His entire savings were exhausted in keeping him in a hospital. Broken in health, and penniless, he sought a job, but found none. His wife was discouraged with the battle against poverty, and took cyanide of mercury. This is capitalism.

A woman and five little children were found out in the open sleeping on the sand of the beach at Coney Island, New York, the other day by a policeman. The woman told a pitiful tale. Her husband had deserted her three weeks previously, and she had been thrown out of her flat because of nonpayment of rent. With her five children she was cast out on the street without a cent. She was given a bed in the matron's room at a police station. The children were sent to the Children's Society. Does this look like breaking up the home?

The United States Navy must have more recruits at once or its activities will be hampered. Secretary Meyer, of the Navy Department, is alarmed at the growing indifference of th young men of the nation to life in the navy. In spite of the big posters that tell of the easy life and fine conditions of Uncle Sam's men-o'-war, few recruits join the navy. The young men of the nation are to be congratulated for refraining from going on the monster murder machines. Every year the ruling class attempts to increase the size of the navy and add to its fighting strength. The people of the nation have to pay for the millions of dollars that are expended for their murder boxes.

One of the tricks of the capitalist legislatures is to pass laws that look good to the people, and then have the courts declare them unconstitutional. The legislators think they can go before the people and say they passed the law, but blame the court for having killed it. As the judges are frequently appointed instead of elected, there is no way of putting them out of office for thwarting the will of the people. In Massachusetts the legislature passed a law forbidding employers from fining their employes. The Supreme Court of the State recently upheld the act of the Lancaster Mills in fining its operatives, declaring that there had been no violation of the law. The decision kills the law enacted in 1911.

PREACH THE TRUTH ONLY.

We would suggest that our Socialist friends do a little censoring of the speakers who come to Columbus to advocate their cause. We know that some of these alleged orators misrepresent the cause of Socialism and disgust people of common sense. There was one the other night, who glorified the McNamara brothers, justified the blowing up of The Times Building at Los Angeles, and the killing of a score of people, defended the destruction of property to the very verge of the destruction of life; declared that a working man was not bound by any contract he made, and such miserable and incendiary stuff that no true Socialist would think for a moment of standing for. And yet this man expounded it as Socialism.

If the Socialistic party is to get a standing in a community, it should see to it that its advocates are men of known character and intelligence and that they preach the doctrine of truth, so far as their faith goes. We hate to see any cause, even though we may not indorse it, misrepresented.—Editorial in Ohio State Joural.

The anxiety of the Journal that the Socialist cause shall not be misrepresented or the party's good name tarnished is certainly refreshing and should be duly appreciated. We hasten to inform the editor of the Journal that the remarks to which he takes exception were not made at a meeting under the auspices of the Socialist party, but by William Thurston Brown, who was speaking for the Industrial Workers of the World, which includes in those eligible to membership, according to the statements of its organizers, Socialists, Republicans, Democrats and Anarchists. The Socialist party disclaims any responsibility for what I. W. W. organizers and orators may say.

NOTICE TO WORKERS.

We have compiled the names and addresses of another complete Rural Route, north of the city. We want to put every one of them on the sub list. Every dollar that can be raised will be used in this manner. Send in the dollars comrades for this purpose, and we will soon wake them up on that route.

PLEASE BE CAREFUL.

Attention is called to the fact that many comrades are turning in subs. without the street number of the subscriber.

It is very necessary and important that the street number should be turned in with the sub. in every instance.

Strict attention to this will aid us very materially at this end.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

Most any coward can tell a lie, but it takes a brave man to tell the truth, and so it is with newspapers. The Columbus Socialist, the little 8-page weekly sheet, that is hated and feared by the capitalists and their bunch of pot-bellied politicians, is the only paper in the city of Columbus that DARES TO PRINT THE TRUTH.

Have you noticed anything lately in the daily papers about the sweat-shop on West Broad Street or the inferno at Cincinnati? No! Not a word and furthermore you never will until you begin to show your power.

Sit down tonight and address a short letter to the editor of the daily paper that is delivered to your door and ask him why his paper refuses to publish these things.

Let every one who reads these lines address a letter as suggested above and if that don't get results there is no law that compels you to take the sheet.

There is more real news in the Columbus Socialist, even if it is published once a week, than there is in all the other daily papers put together.

Every Comrade and sympathier ought to help speed the day when we can have a daily of our own. This can be very easily accomplished if every one of you will bend all your efforts towards putting on new subscribers. Push the circulation, boys and girls. Determine that you will get, at least, one subscriber per week from now until after election.

Remember, Comrades, a Socialist newspaper can exist only by rising circulation. Make next week a hummer.

Lawrence, Mass.

Dear Comrade — Enclosed find money for subscription to your paper to be sent to Jos. J. Ettor, Essex County Jail, Lawrence, Mass.

The paper goes forward this week and we know that it will help to cheer Comrade Ettor in his prison cell.

Findlay, Ohio.

Dear Comrades—Find a check enclosed to renew my subscription to The Socialist, a paper which is not afraid of the Pope and is without a muzzle.

FROM A COMRADE.

Don't forget, Comrades, that there is a fight on and that great pressure is being brought to bear upon our advertisers to persuade them to withdraw their patronage. This is a game at which more than one can play and we, for our own protection, must purchase from those merchants who advertise with us.

Let every sympathizer and every Comrade take this matter to heart.

Let every one of you 12,000 class-conscious working men, who vote the Socialist ticket in this city, see to it that your purchasing power is used as it should be by purchasing from our advertisers.

You are 1-8 of the population of Columbus and if you are going to allow an organization that can't control over 4000 votes to dictate to you, you don't deserve a paper of your own.

If you want red tickets and can't get them, drop us a card and they will come to you by return mail.

USE YOUR POWER!

Comrade Southard is waking them up. He puts on five new ones.

Comrade Frank, of the First Ward rushes into the office all out of breath. After cooling down, he slips us four yearlies.

The following each buy two sticks of dynamite apiece: Bates, Lyda, Meier, Wood, Morse, Freeman, Ryder.

DAGOES, POLACKS AND [illegible]

By John C. Kennedy.

Workers from all the nations of the globe are making their home in America. Capitalists recognize this fact, and are not slow to take advantage of it. They want to get workers as cheap as possible, and they do not care a rap about their race, creed or color.

Nevertheless, the capitalists do not hesitate to play upon racial prejudices in order to keep the working class in subjection. The call the Italians, "Dagoes," the Poles "Polacks," the Hungarians "Hunkies," the Jews "Sheenees" and the Irish "Micks," and then try to get these various nationalities to call each other similar names. In this way they hope to prevent any organization of the workers into one great union.

Now, fellow workers, it ought not to be necessary to point out that we have nothing to gain by calling each other names. On the contrary, we have everything to gain by respecting each other and uniting to further our common interests.

Instead of calling each other "Dagoes," "Polacks," "Sheenees," etc., us lay aside all racial prejudices and recognize in each other brothers and comrades.

The first "Dago" immigrant to America, by the way, was Christopher Columbus. If it hadn't been for this fearless navigator perhaps some of us 'real Americans' wouldn't be here at the present time.

One of the greatest fighters for freedom in the Revolutionary War was a "Polack," Count Pulaski, and many of us would be glad to pay our hard earned money to hear the music of another great "Polack," Paderewski.

The greatest working class thinker of the nineteenth century was a "Sheenee," Karl Marx. It was this "Sheenee," by the way, who gave the workers of the world the great slogan: "Workers of the world unite; you have nothing to lose but your chains, and the world to gain."

As a matter of fact, the so-called "foreigners" are standing more firmly for the best American traditions of freedom and justice today than the so-called "best Americans."

Senator Root, for example, one of our "great Republican patriots," has recently distinguished himself by trying to pass a law which would exclude from America any individual who fought against the ruling class in his home country. This would turn over to the tender mercies of the Czar every man or woman who tries to establish a democratic government in Russia.

America is truly the great melting pot of the races, but we have no fears for the future. Our free institutions may be overthrown by the Roots, and "the Sons of the Revolution," but not by the immigrants. These despised workers, who the capitalists are trying to array against each other, will here unite in a common brotherhood and establish the greatest industrial democracy the world has ever seen.

The Steel Trust will assist the Terrible Teddy to the focus attention on individual things to distract their minds from the causes of prevailing ills. And Teddy will be well paid for his acrobatic stunts.

GOOD MEETING

C. E. Ruthenberg, of Cleveland, Socialist candidate for Governor of Ohio, spoke to a large crowd on the Diamond, Tuesday evening. The audience was very attentive and applauded the telling points made against the present system, and the remedy for them.

A shyster politician, by the name of Crawford, who says he is from Iowa, butted into the meeting and was allowed to take the platform after the meeting was closed. He spoke for a few minutes trying to refute the arguments of Socialism, saying that the high cost of living was because we did not raise enough hogs. To reduce the cost of living we must raise more hogs. Further that Socialism could not be worked because the business men did not want it and that it took business men to run the country.

It was an effort to keep the crowd from mobbing him. The workers in the audience knew where they were robbed, and questions were popped at him from all sections. He evaded all questions.

Crawford was answered by Comrade Ruthenberg who combed him down in five minutes. The crowd was enthusiastic.—Youngstown Socialist Press.

WOMAN'S DIRECTORY

The Woman's Local Committee meets every Wednesday evening at 15½ East Gay Street. Every woman invited to come.

SINGERS WANTED

An effort is being made to organize one or more quartets to warble songs at Socialist meetings during this campaign. Those willing to volunteer will please see Comrade O. G. Van Schoyck, Southwest corner High and Rich Streets.

Mr. A. A. Anspach, of the Anspach Department Store, 971 West Broad Street, is in Europe making purchases of immense stocks of fall and Christmas merchandise to supply his several stores.

CAPITAL TAVERN

The Capital Tavern on West Broad Street, "just 17 seconds off of High Street," is now under the management of Jack T. Carding, that prince of good fellows, who believes that "a man's a man for a' o' that." The Tavern is a stag hotel with a fine cafe in connection. Jack Carding is known throughout Ohio, and the fraternal land, good service and a square deal await all who enter the portals of his hostelry.

SOCIALIST ACTIVITIES

Comrade J. L. Bachman spoke at Centerburg last Saturday night under the auspices of Comrade H. W. Sauer, whose summer home is there. The meeting was a good one, some of the audience coming from Mt. Vernon. At Grove City, Saturday evening, E. B. Eubanks, W. C. Bates, F. E. Johnston, and Gus Tegenkamp, held a rally that was a corker. At Westerville, Comrade T. C. Southard, J. M. Suddick and E. B. Lewis, held forth. At High and Broad Streets, Comrade S. H. Cochran, spoke, while at Mt. Vernon and Seventeenth Comrade A. C. Eby was the orator.

At Glenwood Park, on the Hilltop, Sunday afternoon the speakers were D. J. Farrell, Gus Tegenkamp, W. C. Bates, E. B. Eubanks and Mrs. Vaughn. Mrs. Vaughn made her first public address and aroused a high pitch of enthusiasm.

The First Ward held a lawn fete at Parsons and Jenkins on Thursday evening of last week and simply added to their laurels as a hard working, efficient set of protetarian workers. Comrades J. L. Bachman and A. C. Eby spoke and the Socialist Band supplied music. The crowd, during the evening was something immense from start to finish.

The Capitol Clothing Company, located at Russell and High Streets, is conducting one of the biggest money-saving sales ever pulled off in Columbus. Mr. Metcalf, the President, has purchased an immense lot of merchandise for spot cash, and is giving the people of the city the advantage of this saving. Mr. Metcalf is proud of the fact that he has given the city the LARGEST WORKINGMEN'S STORE IN OHIO, as he states it was the workingmen who stood by him in his early struggles for an existence and that they will always have a front seat, in his store.

COMRADE BLOOR IN OHIO

Comrade Ella Reene Bloor has returned from her European tour and commenced campaigning in Ohio last Monday at Warren, for the Equal Suffrage proposition of the new Ohio constitution.

UNION SCABS—AND OTHERS

By Oscar Ameringer.

There are three kinds of scabs—the professional, the amateur and union scab.

The professional scab is usually a high-paid, high-skilled worker in the employ of strike breaking and detective agencies. His position is that of a special officer's in the regular scab army.

The amateur scab brigade is composed of riff-raff, slum dwellers, rubes, imbeciles, college students, and other undesirable citizens.

Professional scabs are few and efficient. Amateur scabs are plentiful and deficient, and union scabs both numerous and capable.

The amateur scab, posing as a free born American citizen, who scorns to be fettered by union rules and regulations, gets much glory (?), little pay, and when the strike is over he is given an honorable discharge, in the region where Darwin searched for the mising link.

The union scab receives less pay than the professional scab, works better than the amateur scab and don't know that he is a scab.

He will take a pattern from a scab pattern maker, cast it in a union mold, hand the casting to as lousy a scab as ever walked in shoe leather and then proudly produce a paid-up union card in testimony of his unionism.

Way down in his heart he seems to have a lurking suspicion that there is something not altogether right in his actions, and it is characteristic of the union man who co-operates with scabs that he is never ready to flash a union card in the face of innocent bystanders.

He don't know that a rose under any other name is just as fragrant; he don't know that calling a cat a canary won't make the feline sing, and he don't know that helping to run a shop while other workers bend all their energies in the opposite direc is scabbing. He relies on the name and seeks refuge behind a little pasteboard card.

When a strike is declared it becomes the chief duty of the organization to effect a complete shutdown of the plant. For that purpose warnings aremailed, or wired, to other places, to prevent workingmen from moving to the afflicted city.

Pickets are stationed around the plant or factory, or harbor, to keep workers from taking the places of strikers. Amateur scabs are coaxed, persuaded, or bullied away from the seat of the strike. Persuasion having no effect on the professional strike-breaker, he is sometimes treated with a brickbat shower. Shut down that plant; shut it down, completely, is the watchword of the striker.

Now, while all these things are going on and men are stopped in ones and twos, a steady stream of dinner pail parades pours through the factory gate. Why are they not molested? Oh, they're union men, belonging to a different craft than the one on strike. Instead of brickbats and insults it's "Hello, John; Hello, Jim; howdy, Jack;" and other expressions of good fellowship.

The "57 Varieties."

You see, this is a carriage factory, and it is only the Amalgamated Association of Brimstone and Emery Polishers, that are striking. The Brotherhood of Oil Rag Wipers, the Fraternal Society of White Lead Daubers, the Undivided Sons of Compilation of Wood Work Gluers, the Iron Benders' Sick and Death Benefit Union, the Oakdale Lodge of Coal Shovelers, the Martha Washington Lodge of Ash Wheelers, the Amalgamated Brotherhood of Oilers, the Engineers' Protective Lodge, the Stationery Firemen, the F. O. O. L, the A. S. S. E. S. Societies have nothing to do with the Amalgamated Association of Brimstone and Emery Polishers.

At the next regular meeting of those societies, ringing resolutions endorsing the strike of the Amalgamated Association of Brimstone and Emery Polishers will be passed. Moral support is pledged and five dollars' worth of tickets are purchased for the dance given by the Ladies' Volunteer and Auxiliary Corps for the benefit of the Amalgamated Association of Brimstone and Emery Polishers.

The whole thing is like beating a man's brains out and then handing him a headache tablet.

During a very bitterly fought molders' strike in a northern city the writer noticed one of the prettiest illustrations of the workings of plain scabbing and union scabbing.

A dense mass of strikers and sympathizers had assembled in front of the factory waiting the exit of the strike breakers.

On they came and "scabs and unionists in one dark mass. Stones, rotten eggs and other missiles began to fly, when one of the strike-breakers leaped on a store box and shouted frantically, "Stop it, stop it; for ————'s sake stop it, you are hitting more unionists than scabs; you can't tell the difference."

That's it. Whenever scabs and union men work harmoniously in the strike-breaking industry all hell can't tell the difference.

To the murky conception of a union scab, scabbing is only wrong when practiced by a non-union man. To him the union card is a kind of a scab permit that guarantees him immunity from insults, brickbats and rotten eggs.

After having instructed a green bunch of amateur scabs in the art of brimstone and emery polishing all day, he meets a striking brother in the evening and forthwith demonstrates his unionism by setting up the drinks for the latter.

Union scabbing is the legitimate offspring of craft organization. It is begotten by iguorance, born of imbecility and nourished by infamy.

My dear brother, I am sorry to be under contract to hang you, but I know it will please you to hear that the scaffold is built by union carpenters, the rope bears the label and here is my card.

This is union scabbery.

BROTHERHOOD OF CARPENTERS

Indianapolis—Since the last issue of the news letter, Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters reports the following trade movements: The carpenters at Norwich, N. Y., have secured an increase in wages from $2.70 to $3.15 per day. At South Farmington, Mass., an increase has been given from 45 cents to 50 cents per hour, the eight hour day prevailing. At Penn Yan, N. Y., wages have been advanced from $2.50 to $2.75 per day. The carpenters at Cannonsburg, Pa., have been advanced from $3.00 to $2.25 per day. All of these increases have been secured without strike.

The Republican platform contains a plank of limited suffrage for the women workers under the protection of a tariff. That is quite a feat and should appeal to the fool voters.

PROTEST STIRS PROSECUTION

Lawrence, June 28.

It is becoming evident that the prosecution in the Ettor-Giovannitti case is feeling the effects of the protests against the continued imprisonment of the two men that are pouring in on all sides. The local press prints a Salem dispatch that was evidently inspired by District Attorney Atwill, if not actually written by him; that refers to labor's protest and seeks to throw the blame for the imprisonment of the two men on the defence. This dispatch states positively that the trial will not take place in July, as it was postponed until the September term at the earnest desire of the counsel for the defence. No such desire was expressed; nor was there any agreement to that effect. The trial was continued until such time as the defence was ready to go ahead. The defence is now ready; not only is it ready, but eager for the trial; it will make a strenuous effort to have the same take place in July. The defence is naturally opposed to having its clients in prison during the hot spell, that District Attorney Atwill may spend a vacation at some summer resort or in some cool country nook. The defence is confident of the issue. Both the evidence and the law are on its side. According to ex-Judge O. N. Hilton, who is a recognized authority on criminal law, the outcome is wholly dependent on the composition of the jury; with a fair and impartial jury to consider the case, victory is certain.

Other symptoms showing the effects of the protest are in evidence here. Coumissioner of Public Safety Lynch refuses the use of the Common for local protest purposes. The refusal has created a great deal of ill-feeling. The present sentiment is in favor of holding the meetings in spite of Lynch.

Interest in the case continues to grow. The legal status of the imprisoned men is being eagerly discussed. It is held that should their trials not take place in July, they could swear out a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that they are being "detained an undue length of time." It is also pointed out that while Section 1, Chapter 191, Laws of Massachusetts, denies the right of habeas corpus to persons indicted for felony, Article IV, U. S. Constitution provides for a speedy trial of the accused in all criminal prosecutions. The defence will demand a speedy trial.

The legal fraternity is beginning to take a lively interest in the case because of the important legal principles involved. Requests are coming in for information bearing on the case. Miss Jessie Ashley, a prominent lawyer of New York City, visited Lawrence yesterday, in order to personally delve into the legal aspect. She intends to prepare some articles bearing on them.

More important still is the spread of working class interest. As shown in the obviously inspired dispatch from Salem, referred to above, the protest movement is beginning to make itself felt. Put more steam into it! Chicago reports the formation of a protest conference. Electrical Workers, 134 has elected Paul Roe, D. F. Cleary and John Kuhlmeyer as delegates to the Ettor-Giovannitti protest conference. Greater New York reports the formation of two Jewish protest conferences. The local protest conference is getting under way. Grand Rapids, Mich.; Detroit, Mich.; Patterson, N. J.; Schenactady, N. Y.; all report of conferences and joint protest meetings. Patterson conference has issued a statement of the case in English, German, Italian and Jewish.

Many cities report deep interest. The secretary of the Pittsburg protest conference writes: "The Ettor-Giovannitti affair is gripping the minds of the workers in a way and manner as no other development could."

The treasurer of the Ettor-Giovannitti protest meeting, held at Eldora Park, writes from Monesaen, Pa.: "Enclosed find check for $34.09. We must free our comrades. We must not let innocent men be judicially murdered. We must abolish the capitalist system. We must free our class from wage slavery."

And then there are the Italians, whom City Marshal Sullivan would fain have others believe, are not contributing to the Ettor-Giovannitti defence fund. The Italian Socialist Federation has just sent in $500.00 from New York City; and several Italian benefit societies contribute their "mite" in addition. The Italian press is generally interested in the case, especially in view of its international phases. The Skiddoo Miners Union No. 311, Western Federation of Miners of Skidoo, California, sends in $5.00, saying, "We have a very small local here, but we cannot see our friends murdered judicially for want of financial assistance."

That sentiment is growing. So is the sentiment of protest! Send more resolutions to Atwill and more funds to the Ettor-Giovannitti defence committee, William Yates, Treasurer, Central Building, Lawrence, Mass.

STEEL CORPORATION IS WORRIED

Washington—The following item, written by a Wall Street financial correspondent, appeared recently in one of the leading dailies: "One new cloud, no larger than a man's hand perhaps, but still a cloud, which may give concern, was noted during the week by the leading authorities on the Iron and Steel industry. This is the possibilities of labor troubles in that quarter. The Iron Age, in its review of the week's developments, devotes considerable space to the increasing tension of the labor situation at practically all iron and steel works. The drifting of workmen from one operation to another goes on steadily, it says, and many plant managers are finding it difficult in holding their forces. With all the restlessness, however, this authority notes that there are comparatively few strikes, but the demand for higher wages is insistent and the entire tendency throughout the industry is toward higher labor cost."

Sam Gompers still believes in the slogan of the American Federation of Labor to "reward your friends and punish your enemies." In carrying out that commandment he appeared before the Republican National convention seeking an endorsement of labor's cause, and last week he was doing the same stunt before the Democratic convention at Baltimore. And this in face of the fact that both of the old parties have refused to give a hearing to labor's cry, but have persisted in rendering the greatest service to the capitalists. And with such baby-like tactics Gompers expects to get results. It is an old saying that men become weak in intellect by association with the enemy, and the anachronism is proven in Gompers' appeal to the parties that stand for a system that believes in big profits for the shirkers and a bare means of subsistence for the workers. No wonder the federation is making no progress. It is time the workers awoke and put Gompers on the bench.

The Beef Trust boosted the price of meat a cent and a half per pound the first part of last week and now it has jacked it up again a half cent. This latter raise means $30,000 per day taken out of the pockets of the people of New York City alone. The trust says it is handing the money over to the cattle raisers, but has its fingers crossed when it makes the statement. Hold your fingers the same way when you promise to vote for the old parties that permit the burglary.

We can see trouble in store good and plenty for the "heathen Chinee." The financial pirates, otherwise known as bankers, are after the poor Chink, and they're going to get him, too. "The reorganization of China has been made possible by an agreement reached recently by the bankers of the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia and Japan," says a refreshingly candid report from Paris. "The hand that holds the dough-bag rules the world." Would those bankers come across with the long green if there was any possibility of a real republic in China?

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS

The Socialist party of China is now a permanent organization, the final steps having been taken recently to combine the various local bodies into a national movement.

The Journal-Press, a Brainerd, Minn., daily, has flopped, shouting: "Hurrah for Debs and Seidel, too! They are our candidates for President and Vice President. Debs has runf of the office just as many times as Bryan and he (Debs) will have to run just once more after this time to be elected."

The Los Angeles Citizen, the well-knowns union-Socialistic paper on the Western coast, says that the New Zealand state-owned railroads carry school children 120 miles for from 3 to 6 cents when they attend high schools. And at that the railways more than pay expenses. But that is because there are no parasitical coupon-clippers over there to stifle education by charging outrageous railway rates.

Official returns of the recent general elections in Belguim show the following results for members of the Chamber of Deputies: Clericals 101, Liberals 44, Socialists 39, Christian Democrats 3. The Clericals lost one seat and won 14, the Liberals lost 5 and won 5, the Socialists lost one and gained 4. The representation was increased from 185 to 186 seats. In the election for members of the Senate the Clericals secured 54, Liberals 28, and Socialists 13, with 27 seats to be filled.

In the first annual conference of the British Socialist party, held in Manchester two weeks ago, it was shown that there are already 40,000 members enrolled and widespread interest is being displayed in the new organization. Among the well known labor men connected with the Socialist party are Will Thorne, James O'Grady and Harry Quelch. Action was taken to prosecute the work of organization into every section of the United Kingdom and to strive in every election to win public power.

James Connolly, formerly editor of the Harp, New York, writes from Ireland, where he went two years ago: "I have succeeded in doing what I returned to Ireland to do, viz: to unite the Socialists of the north and south, Protestant and Catholic into one Irish organization. Henceforth we will have only one Socialist party in Ireland. There were two, the Independent Labor party, a branch of the English organization, in the north and the Socialist party of Ireland in Dublin and the south. We have now amalgamated under the title of Independent party of Ireland. Connolly is a delegate in the Irish Trades Congress and adds: "Our union is the fighting union of Ireland, industrialist in structure, and thoroughly Socialistic in its policy and aims. We have conducted some great fights, such as the Wexford lockout, where 700 men were locked out in a small town for 25 weeks."

THE INDIANA MOVEMENT

James O'Neal, State Secretary, Terre Haute, Ind.

The Socialists at Cloverdale in Putnam county organized a local with seven members and made application for a charter. The local expects to nominate a county ticket and wage a vigorous campaign this summer.

Down in Pike County near Petersburg, Socialists to the number of seven make application for a charter which is sent this week. This makes two locals in the county, and the Comrades at Winslow are getting very active, and will no doubt soon have a working local there.

Down at Milan in Ripley County a new local starts with six members, which makes a total of three locals in the county. This is becoming one of the promising agricultural counties in the State.

Word comes from the Comrades at Hillsburg in Clinton County that they are organizing a local there, and that they expect to arrange a big meeting for Comrade Coado on July 13th.

At Vicksburg in Greene County the Comrades are at work organizing a local, and Comrade Saladin writes that he expects to have 25 or 30 names on the application for a charter.

Word comes from Angola in Steuben County that many people are disgusted with the old parties and are now talking Socialism. A few speakers up that way will help to confirm this sentiment.

Local Richmond held a picnic at Jackson Park on the 23rd and had an immence crowd. Speeches were made by C. F. Ohara and R. F. Van Voris, the congressional candidate, and O. Branstetter, the speaker of the day.

Ernest Malott of Marion has been nominated for Congress, and will make a campaign of the entire district, and is already on the job securing information for that purpose.

Owing to the limited number of dates that Comrade Reynolds can give to his campaign for the governorship, he will be placed only in the larger towns and cities, and readers of this notice in near-by towns should co-operate in making his meetings big demonstrations.

SOCIALIST COUNTY CONVENTION

The interest and enthusiasm displayed at the Lorain Socialist County Convention, held at Elyria, is bona fide evidence that the "Reds" in this neck of the wood are very much alive,—and we venture the prediction that they will give the old party politicians a warm reception at the polls this coming election.

The Convention elected C. E. Carlstrom as chairman, and Anna K. Strock as secretary after which the following nominations were made for the county ticket:

Representative to general assembly —A. A. Wadsworth.

Judge of Probate Court—G. E. Culver of Wellington nominated by acclamation, there being " others mentioned.

Clerk of Court of Common Pleas—Frank Pribods, of Lorain.

Prosecuting Attorney — Edward Plumley, of Lorain.

County Sheriff—Dan Wells of Elyria nominated on third ballot.

County Auditor — F. W. Goll of Lorain.

County Treasurer—C. A. Faxon, of Wellington.

Three County Commissioners—Fred Meyers, C. W. Stout and W. F. Peterson declared nominated.

County Surveyor—G. Evans nominated on second ballot.

Coroner—C. Delaney of Lorain nominated.

The next matter to come before the convention was the election of a new County Committee. After a heated discussion it was decided, almost unanimously that the present committee act until the next committee is elected by the various locals, on the followng basis of representation: One member from each local having a membership ranging from five to fifty, and one for each additional fifty members or major fraction thereof.

FOR MARITIME CONFERENCE

Washington — The house has adopted the Senate amendments to the House joint resolution authorising the President to appoint commissioners to represent the United States in an international maritime conference to consider ocean safety regulations. This has been brought about by the Titanic disaster.

DARE THEY STEAL OUR THUNDER

A great many well-meaning people imagine that we are going to get Socialism through the old parties.

"The old parties," they say, "will adopt one plank after another from your platform, and thus kill the Socialist party."

Now, consider: Why would the old parties adopt planks from the Socialist platform?

Because they like the planks?

If they liked the planks, they could have adopted them long ago, or they can adopt them now altogether.

They do not like the planks. If they adopt any of them, it will be because of their fear of the growth of the Socialist party. The bigger the Socialist party grows, the greater will be that fear, and the more planks they will adopt.

If the Socialist party ever were to die, their fear would die, and they would immediately drop any planks they might have adopted.

So you see that even if we could get Socialism through the old parties, we could not get it by allowing the Socialist party to die as soon as the old parties adopt some planks from the Socialist platform, but by making the Socialist party bigger and stronger.

But the old parties will not give us Socialism.

To establish Socialism would mean to abolish capitalism. To abolish capitalism would mean to abolish the capitalist AS A CAPITALIST; and as the capitalists control both old parties, they certainly are not going to use them to abolish themselves.

They may adopt all of the IMMEDIATE DEMAND planks from the Socialist platform, but that would not give us Socialism.

They may even give us GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP by exchanging their watered stocks and their bonds for gilt-edged government security, but that, too, would not be Socialism; that would be a swindle.

The people would keep on working for low wages and paying high prices to pay the dividends on the government securities, and the capitalists, being in possession of the government through the old parties, would pay these dividends in perpetuity.

Now to be exploited by a government controlled by the capitalists is not so much better than to be exploited by the capitalists themselves.

Socialism means the abolition of ALL exploitation, and the Democratic management of the industries by the workers.

The Socialist party is the only political party controlled, managed and financed by the workers themselves; it is, therefore, the only party which can be depended on to abolish capitalism and establish Socialism.

ASPHALT COMPANY SETTLES.

Washington.—It is reported by Organizer Frayne, of New York, that the Barber Asphalt Company at Perth Amboy, N. J., has yielded to the demands of its employes, who have been on strike, and that work has been resumed. While numerous individuals were helpful in bringing about a settlement it is stated that Organizer Arthur Quinn, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, whose home is at Perth Amboy, gave valuable assistance toward securing the settlement of the difficulty. Work was also resumed in the plant of the Standard Underground Cable Company as a result of a settlement. The strikers at the Perth Amboy Cigar Company, the Rosenthal Company, manufacturers of handkerchiefs, The Federal Terra Cotta Company, the Vuncan Detinning Company and the C. Pardee Works continue without change. Efforts are being continued to secure concessions. There is also a strike at Hastings, N. Y., where there are 1,300 employes of the National Conduit and Cable Company out. This company, so it is rumored, is a branch of the company located at Perth Amboy with which an agreement has bee reached, and it is apprehended that a settlement will be secured with this company in the near future.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SOCIALIST SOCIETY.

That the number of study chapters of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society in American colleges and among college alumni has passed the half-hundred mark; that the society has assumed international proportions, and that it has finally secured a foothold in the South, as a result of its activity during the college year just closing, are among the interesting statements contained in the report recently compiled by Harry W. Laidler, the society's organizer.

The undergraduate chapters of the I. S. S. now number 49, an increase of 20 over the beginning of the year, the report states, and the graduate chapters, 5. The principal gain in membership is seen in the Middle Atlantic States and the Middle West, 7 chapters having been established in each section, while the New England states secured 4 new chapters, the South 1, and Canada 1. The largest growth of any single state was evidenced in New York, where groups were organized at New York University, C. C. N. Y. (evening), Colgate, Union and the New York Medical Colleges. In New Jersey a strong chapter was formed in Princeton, and in Pennsylvania at Swarthmore.

Ohio captured the majority of new groups formed in the Middle West, chapters having been organized at Ohio State, Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio Northern and Oberlin. Other western groups were established this year at the University of Missouri, De Pauw University and Bennett College, the latter, the medical department at Loyola University, a Catholic institution. In the New England states, Amherst, Wesleyan, Williams and Massachusetts Agricultural College came into line this season; in the South, Richmond College, and in Canada, Alberta University. The formation of a chapter at the last named school has placed the society in the ranks of international organizations.

Not only was the year remarkable for the increase in a number of new chapters, but for the greater activities on the part of the old ones.

The Harvard chapter, led by Samuel A. Eliot, Jr., grandson of Harvard's ex-president, issued its first Harvard Socialist Trace—a reply to Ex-President Eliot's lecture on "Socialism and Private Property." The Princeton chapter, of which John Temple Graves, Jr., is secretary, has arranged to publish an I. S. S. monthly, beginning next fall. The chapter of the New York Dental Colleges has already issued its sixth monthly.

Meetings which taxed to their capacity the largest halls on the campus were held under the auspices of the chapters at Yale, Cornell, Michigan and other universities. In fact, hundreds of lectures on Socialism and allied subjects were arranged by I. S. S. chapters throughout the year, among the lecturers being:

Congressman Victor L. Berger, Morris Hillquit, Mrs. Florence Kelley, Mayor George R. Lunn, Representatives James Maurer, Charles Edward Russell, Prof. Vida D. Scudder, Emil Seidel, J. G. Phelps Stokes, Mayor J. Stitt Wilson, Dr. Richard S. Cabot, Abraham Cahin, Rev. R. J. Campbell, James F. Carey, Dr. Stanton Coit, Rev. Algernon S. Crapsey, Dr. W. E. B. De Bois, Jessica G. Finch, Frederic C. Howe, Ellis O. Jones, Rabbi Charles Fleischer, Dr. Jessie W. Hughan, Alexander Irvine, Harry W. Laidler, Owen R. Lovejoy, Miss Caroline Lowe, James Mackaye, John Macy, Benjamin C. Marsh, Mila Tupper Maynard, Rev. J. Howard Melish, Elsie Cole Phillips, A. W. Ricker, Gilbert E. Roe, S. Richards, Miss Mary R. Sanford, May Wood Simons, Upton Sinclair, John Spargo, Seymour Stedman, Lincoln Steffens, Miss Helen Phelps Stokes, John Moody, William English Walling, Bouch White, J. L. Bachman, Frederick Sumner Boyd, Prof. William M. Coleman, Rev. P. M. Dawson, Mack Eastman, Louis C. Farind, Sol Fieldman, Rev. Mr. Greenman, Rene E. Hoguet, Dr. I A. Honrwich, Walter Lippmann, Dr. William J. Robinson, James Oneal, a large number of members of the college faculties and others.

SECRETARY MEYER REPLIES

Washington—A resolution introduced by Senator Heyburn of Iowa and passed by the Senate, calling upon the Secretary of the Navy for information as to whether any flag, emblem or banner is ever displayed above the stars and stripes in the navy, has been answered by Secretary Meyer, who states that the church pennant is hoisted above the United States flag while religious services are being held aboard a naval vessel. "This provision," says the Secretary, "has been contained in each succeeding edition of the signal code, the last edition published in 1908 containing the following: 'The church pennant is to be hoisted above the ensign during the performance of divine services on board vessels of the navy.'"

OHIO SOCIALIST PLATFORM AND RESOLUTIONS

PLATFORM

Adopted at the 19th Annual Convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, April 26th, 1912.

We, the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, reaffirm our allegiance to the national platform of the Socialist Party of America and the principles of International Socialism by demanding the collective and public ownership and the democratic management of all natural resources and the means of wealth production and distribution. We demand for the workers access to the machinery of wealth production and the land at all times and the full value of their toil.

We declare that all government, whether city, state or national, is controlled by and administered in the interest of the economically dominant class—the capitalist class. We emphasize the growing power of the capitalist class, making it more and more difficult for the workers to gain a livelihood, and the continuous struggle on the part of the workers, forcing from capitalism more and more of its labor product, and realizing that with the economic growth of industries into the mammoth trust stage, thereby being brought more and more into the control of a few men; the workers to further protect and prepare themselves for their historic mission, the emancipation from wage slavery, we, the Socialist Party, indorse and recommend to the workers the industrial form of organization as a means to protect their economic and political rights, and with their ballots elect representatives of their own class into public office. We maintain that political support of capitalist parties on the part of the workers, simply results in greater power for the capitalist class.

The Socialist Party is the party of the working class, able and competent to represent the interests of the producers on the political field. The resignation of each and every Socialist candidate on the Socialist ticket is in the hands of the Socialist organization, so that when elected to office, if he or she does not fulfill the pledges made previous to election, his or her resignation is demanded.

As measures that will strengthen the position of the workers in the struggle against capitalism, we demand:

First—Equal suffrage for men and women.

Second—The Initiative and Referendum, Proportional Representation and the Right of Recall.

Third—Compulsory Insurance against accident and death, the cost to be borne by the employers.

Fourth—That the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts be so corrected, modified and restricted that delinquent girls brought before such courts be humanely treated from a corrective and modern viewpoint, and that such delinquents be not condemned to practical and demoralizing imprisonment in sectarian institutions, wherein sweatshops, laundries and other industries are conducted for profit, and that the state immediately furnish modern and humane and industrial homes for the mental and moral education and the upliftment of such unfortunates.

Fifth—The abolishing of all exemptions from taxation of taxable property, including church property, convents, charity hospitals, etc., heretofore exempted from their just burden of taxation.

Sixth—We recognize that the question of race superiority injected into the minds of the white wage-worker against the negro and other races is only a tactical method used by the capitalist class to keep the workers divided on the economic field. We, therefore, call upon the negro workers and those of other races, to unite with the Socialist Party on the political field as the only avenue of abolishing wage slavery, and the only solution of the race question.

Seventh—Realizing that white slavery and prostitution is a direct result of economic exploitation of female labor, we insist that the women workers be protected by the state against low wages and long hours of labor.

A. B. B. HOLLENBAUGH.

Resolutions.

Resolved, That this convention instruct Victor L. Berger to introduce a bill into Congress to prevent the unnecessary loss of life on sea-going ships as was the case in the Titanic disaster.

Whereas, The splendid and victorious struggle of our 25,000 fellow-workers at Lawrence, Mass., has resulted not only in raising their own wages, but also those of 200,000 shamefully underpaid slaves in the textile industries; and,

Whereas, The brutal capitalist class of the State of Massachusetts determined at any cost and at all hazards to crush the rising revolt of the workers and has therefore, caused the indictment and arrest of our comrade, Wm. D. Haywood and other, notwithstanding the fact that directed by these leaders, the workers of Lawrence conducted themselves with great restraint and caution; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That we pledge ourselves to support the workers of Lawrence in their continued struggle and that we declare our confidence in Comrade William D. Haywood and heartily indorse his activity in behalf of the workers of Lawrence.

Whereas, The capitalist class of Lawrence, Mass., has broken its implied pledge to release Ettor and Giovanitti from jail and now propose to persecute these workers.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the delegates of Ohio, in convention assembled, do express our earnest protest against the unlawful and brutal imprisonment of those workers on the ridiculous charge of accessory before the fact of the murder of a comrade in the struggle for better conditions.

We demand for them a fair and immediate trial and pledge both moral and financial support in the efforts to gain their release.

Whereas, It is of great importance to the Socialist movement that the children of Socialist families be kept within the sphere of Socialist thought and influence, while being given opportunity for wholesome recreation and enjoyment; therefore,

Be it Resolved by the twelfth annual convention of the Socialist Party of Ohio, That the organization of young people's Socialist leagues be approved and encouraged, and that the attention of the various locals of the State be drawn to this matter through the State Bulletin.

Whereas, The craft union movement has been largely rendered impotent because of its lack of solidity and its antiquated methods.

Whereas, Industrial progress has almost universally substituted large scale production for small scale production; and,

Whereas, The principles of industrial unionism are now made absolutely necessary for the protection and advancement of the working class;

Tehrefore, be it Resolved, by the Socialist Party of Ohio in convention assembled, That the membership of the party in this State be urged to recommend to the working class the principles of industrial unionism without the indorsement of any particular national organization.

RESOLUTIONS—G. A. Storck, Lorain; Josephine Bates, Toledo; E. E. Rimbach, Elyria; Geo. Bundy, Warren; E. B. Lewis, Columbus.

THE SOCIALISTS AND THE SWORD.

A sword is a 5-foot razor with with which the working class obligingly and stupidly cuts its own throat in war.

War is a fool's festival in which the working class crucifies itself in the service of capitalism in the name of patriotism.

Patriotism is perfect and glorious in proportion as the starved slave is willing to fight for a fat master.

Patriotism (of this sort) is a brainless, blinding fever that employers and bankers, bishops and politicians eloquently recommend for others, but cunningly never catch themselves—at present under capitalism.

Capitalism, strutting and staggering under the insane burdens of militarism—capitalism, the present industrial despotism, is motived by robbery, dreads discussion, seduces culture, flatters the foolish, needs the sword, glorifies force, sneers at tears, pretends peace, fattens on war and teaches patriotism to slaves.

For half a hundred centuries this hate-laden madness called patriotism has paralyzed and blinded each new generation of the working class, rendering them the easy self-slaughtering dupes of a crafty ruling class.

Thus have the workers been duped and stung till now.

Till now.

Light breaks—now. This is the sun-flooded morning of a new era—for the working class.

Slaves see—now. And, therefore, this mocking farce, this hideous tragedy, called war, grows clear in the brain of the working class.

The slave is studying capitalism, and therefore he sees the meaning of capitalist patriotism, and as the slave understands capitalism and its necessary patriotism, he understands war.

And as the wage slave understands war he understands that

Capitalists want wars,
Politicians declare wars, and
Workingmen fight the wars.

In all parts of the world the working class are accepting the Socialists' definition of war:

War is wholesale, scientific suicide for the working class in the defense of the economic interests of the ruling class.

The Socialist party is of the working class, for the working class and by the working class—and, therefore, the Socialist Party in every country the sun shines on is opposed to wholesale throat-cutting contests between deluded and betrayed groups of the working class for the amusement and profit of the fat-pursed social parasites of capitalism. Socialists strive to socialize society, and have faith in peace as a condition of rapid social progress; and, therefore, they are consistently and persistently against war. "No men to be murdered and no money to be wasted in war" is their slogan all around the world.

The Socialist Party lives and strives to free the working class—lives and strives, nationally and internationally, to place the feet of all the people firmly upon the industrial foundations of society; strives to connect every life with the source of life, by making every member of society a joint owner of the industrial foundations of society; that is, a joint owner of the dominant means of production.

This will close the vast struggle and will thus remove the prime cause of war and will free the workers from robbery in the fields of industry, and also free the workers from slaughter on the fields of war.

MAINTENANCE OF WAY EMPLOYES

Washington — President A. B. Lowe of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes reports that several committees of the organization on different railroads having requested conferences with the managing officials for a revision of schedules, have been successful in every instance, even though the points where conference were asked are at points widely separated. Reports from conference committees on the Boston and Maine, Boston and Albany, Vancouver Island, and Minneapolis and St. Paul, the Nickle Plate, the Coal and Coke, the Virginian, the Seaboard Air Line and the Canadian Northern, are to the effect that on all of these roads there has been secured a revision of the schedule with substantial improvements in rules and rates on new contracts. Another important matter will be concluded shortly when are arbitration award will be handed down at Asheville, N. C., in a wage controversy with the Southern Railway, in which an offer of a considerable increase by the company not being considered sufficient by the committee, arbitration was proposed and accepted.

THOSE WEARY "FEW YEARS."

"The union (of the workers) is helped on by the means of communication that are created by modern industry, and that place the workers in contact with one another. It was just this contact that was needed. . . . Every class struggle is a political struggle. And that union, to attain which the burghers of the middle ages, with their miserable highways, required centuries, the modern proletarians, thanks to railways, achieve in a few years."

So wrote Marx and Engels some sixty years ago in the famous "Communist Manifesto," and while the statement is no doubt true if sufficient time is conceded, it must be admitted that those "few years" spoken of have dragged out to a most painful length, and the evolutionary process which forces the proletariat to recognise every class struggle as a political struggle seems to act much slower than the writers of the above quotation seemingly expected.

It may be true also that the movement in this direction can never proceed rapidly enough to satisfy the convinced Socialist, but in certain respects it seems intolerably tedious and, if we were not assured of final victory, somewhat disheartening.

Here in this land we have more of those railways, for which Marx declared the proletariat should be thankful, than all the rest of the world combined—some 250,000 miles or so. And we assuredly have a much larger floating contingent of the proletariat than any other country, perhaps, again, than all countries combined. And this proletariat certainly come "in contact with one another" to a greater extent that Marx and Engels ever conceived of. And, once more, certainly it can be maintained that "modern industry" has fully kept pace with these tremendous means of communication. All the factors spoken of are here to a degree that would be impossible of conception in 1847, but—

Is it not true, that not only is the class struggle not generally recognized as a political struggle by the vast majority of the proletariat, but that even the class struggle itself is not actually recognized? Much more than a "few years" have passed since the conditions for this recognition were perfected. The workers, millions of them, have not only come in contact with one another, but have also come in contact with their teacher, capitalism and the capitalist system. They are no doubt learning, but there is also no doubt that they are slow learners.

Take up the journals of the day. Cast your eye over their columns for the news of this contact. Men shot, murdered, clubbed, smashed and jailed in Perth Amboy; in Hastings-on-the-Hudson; in Paterson, Passaic and Lawrence; in Los Angeles and San Diego; in New York City; in Washington and California, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania; North and South, East and West, from the Atlantic to the Pacific; from Canada to the Gulf, at a thousand points, this contact is being daily made. Everywhere the shooting, murdering, smashing, clubbing and jailing are going on, until keeping count of these contacts becomes impossible. Capital and labor in conflict; proletariat and bourgeoisie in death grips, with the former providing 99 per cent. of the funerals. Multitudes of armed police, regiments of militia, clouds of pestiferous thugs, detectives, deputy sheriffs, scabs and strikebreakers everywhere active. Union smashing projects everywhere planning and strikes threatening; hunger riots appearing in great cities and industrial centers. Unrest and ferment on all hands, and on every hand capitalism shooting and murdering, clubbing, beating and smashing its slaves into submission.

And while all this is going on, capitalism, calmly calculating on the improbability, not to say the impossibility of a "come-back," utterly oblivious of the class struggle being recognized as a political struggle, goes ahead with its two national conventions, where its brazen-faced henchmen publicly declare their undying love and friendship for labor in oratorical generalities, and proceed to select candidates, absolutely known to be the servants and lick-splittles of the ruling class, the trusts, corporations and gigantic combinations of capital, including those very railways which are to be thanked for bringing the proletariat together. Gompers, alleged representative of organized labor, hangs around the convention hall at Chicago. He doesn't even get a look-in; is taken not the slightest notice of, and hies him "back, back, back to Baltimore" to repeat the same useless performance with the Ryanized Democrats. And all this is featured in page after page of the public press for the delectation of the aforesaid proletariat. Nothing is really concealed. They are told openly that the Republican party has again been grabbed by the "interests," and that the same is to happen with the Democrats. The class character of these assemblages is not concealed, not perhaps deemed necessary to conceal. While the proletarian is being slaughtered, clubbed and jailed, they can safely tell him in as many words that they are fixing up two political machines for the purpose of continuing the robbery and maintaining the power to kill, club or jail him should he object.

More than that, they expect him to vote for one or the other. Will he do it?

He will. He always has. He has never failed them yet. Millions and millions of him will return to power with their votes, the very elements which smash, club, jail, torture and murder them year in and year out, at innumerable points of contact throughout this broad land. Millions and millions of him, who have not only not yet learned that every class struggle is a political struggle, but who haven't even learned that there is a class struggle at all.

The one hopeful spot in the whole wretched outlook is that there is at least one million—maybe more—that have learned it and will vote accordingly—vote the Socialist ticket. And there is the added consolation that they are always growing, and that though the time be long, yet victory in the end is certain.

No, not in a "few years," Marx to the contrary notwithstanding. Perhaps not even "not yet, but soon." But, some day, some day!

What is to be done?

Nothing more than to keep on working, agitating, organizing and educating. Spreading on every hand and by every means and with ever increasing power the message of Socialism.

The "few years" do not matter, nor a few dozen, nor a few score, nor even a few hundred. Capitalism must be destroyed, and it will be.

Work! Work for Socialism. That's all.

$50,000 WORTH OF READY-TO-WEAR CLOTHING

For Men, Women, and Children to Be Sold By The Capitol Clothing Co. at a Great Sacrifice

We will not use a lot of circus talk or high-sounding adjectives to describe this big sale, but will confine ourselves to the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. A few months ago we moved from our old building, corner High and Russell Streets, across the street into our new building. Our new store has over twice the amount of floor space the old store had, consequently we doubled our stock of merchandise. Think what this means! 4000 Men's Suits instead of 2000, 10,000 pairs of Dutchess Trousers instead of 5000, and so on throughout the big store, and besides we added $20,000 worth o Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Garments this spring. We make the frank statement to you that we did not double our business in every department. The long, cold spring and the general depression of presidential year all over this country has brought us face to face with what? A failure?—No! No! No! The Capitol Clothing Co. knows no such word as fail. We have sold two million dollars worth of clothing on the North Side at a profit and we have simply got the nerve to slaughter this $50,000 worth of summer merchandise, no matter what it cost. So beginning Saturday and for 30 days, we say come and get it. 4000 Men's Suits have been reduced and placed on tables for your quick selection.

MEN'S FURNISHINGS

We have made up our minds to take a big loss on all thin Summer Underwear and Men's Fine Furnishing Goods. For instance—160 dozen Men's Fine Nainsook Athletic, knee and ankle length Union Suits. Had the weather conditions been favorable every garment would have been sold for $1.00, but now you take your choice for 69c

You know that when we say 69c for Nainsook and Porosknit Union Suits, strictly first quality (no seconds) we are actually taking a loss.

All $1.00 Dress Shirts including the famous E. & W. Brand, will be sacrificed for [all sizes] 69c

BERGER FORECASTS FUTURE CONDITIONS IN THE POLITICAL FIELD

He Expects to See Two Million Socialist Votes Polled at National Election This Fall.

SHOWS UP THE OLD PARTY CANDIDATES.

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington—"There is treachery, hypocrisy and confusion in every division of capitalist politics. The old parties are weaker this year than in any time of our history. Their disintegration and deterioration will of necessity help the Socialist party, the political expression of the working class."

This summary of the political situation has been made by Victor L. Berger, the Socialist member of Congress, in a statement just issued to the press. The statement follows:

By Victor L. Berger.

Not since 1860 have the two old parties of our country been so totally disabled and disorganized. The convention at Chicago has proved that the Republican party is hopelessly split. The convention at Baltimore has demonstrated that the Democratic party is torn in twain.

The old parties are breaking up because while there is little or no difference between them—there's deep dissension within each of them.

There will now come a new realignment of the political forces that stand for the present order. Out of the wrecks of the old parties will be born a conservative organization and a so-called progressive organization. They will differ in methods as to the administration of government but will, of course, resist with equal ardor any attempt of the working class to emancipate itself.

Because, no matter which politician won in Baltimore or in Chicago the working class lost. Wilson may use all the phrases of a Democratic progressive. On the question of social reforms of any kind he is a reactionary. Taft may stand for what he calls a Constitutional government. But on the question of giving an old age pension to the invalids and veterans of industry he is a reactionary. And this rule holds good for all candidates of non-proletarian parties as far as proletarian issues are concerned.

The platforms of both old parties are the weakest documents of that kind ever issued. No wonder both platforms like both candidates have the indorsement of plutocracy. Both treat only of issues that concern the big or little exploiters. To the underpaid and overworked toiler the old parties offer only platitudes. They are even shy on the promises this year.

There is no practical difference between the Republican and Democratic platforms this time. The main thing then to be considered is the personnell of the candidates.

We all know who Taft is and where he stands. He is a well meaning conservative gentleman of considerable judicial temperament and little executive ability. He was selected by Roosevelt, as the "heir of my policies" when there was no other policy left to inherit than the continuous ass of a base-drum. And Roosevelt took that drum to Africa and left Taft only with a whistle.

Taft, conservative by birth, bringing-up and convictions, it is simply natural for a man of that type to be closely allied with men like Root, Crane and Hammond, and to disregard the economic changes of our times. The Republican party was always the favorite organization of capitalism and Taft simply wants it to continue in that mission.

The opposition in the Republican party is represented by the ex-President, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. Where Roosevelt stands on all the great questions of the day nobody seems to know. I doubt whether Roosevelt himself knows, because with his brilliant, but very erratic mind, he may revise and change all of his principles and convictions by tomorrow afternoon.

At the same time it does not appear that he will play much of a part if he does run, unless he is satisfied to be the pathfinder of a new organization which is on its way to nowhere in particular.

The nominee of the Democratic party is Woodrow Wilson—for the first time in the history of this country a school-master has been nominated for the Presidency. I shall ignore the way he was nominated after William Jennings Bryan in a rather dictatorial fashion had made impossible the nomination of either Clark or Underwood.

Wilson, at first glance, looks like a strong man, but he will have hard sledding at the next election.

It is true that the country is restive and eager for a change. The average voter foolishly believes that it is within the power of an administration to make good times or bad times at will. And almost everybody is dissatisfied.

The evils and shortcomings of the social fabric and of the present economic system are laid at the doors of the administration that happens to be in power. And this ardent desire of the average citizen for a change will act in favor of Wilson.

On the other hand, Wilson will be very much handicapped by his past. Wilson has written many books. And being a recent convert to the cause of Progressivism, his works stand out against him.

Wilson has not only attacked the South-European, Jewish and Slavonic immigration, but he has also denounced organized labor in a most vicious manner.

He once declared that he preferred a Chinese coolie to the American trade union men, because the former were more law-abiding and more industrious, and worked cheaper—or words to that effect. Wilson may have changed his mind, but he will have to explain, and the candidate this must explain is in a very poor position.

Wilson has also said things aginst the Roman Catholic Church and has written letters in favor of Prohibition that will require explanation. So will his behavior during the late strikes in New Jersey.

It will also be pointed out that while Wilson is posing as a progressive, Boss Murphy of Tammany, voted for him. It was really Boss Sullivan, of Illinois, and Boss Taggart, of Indiana, that made his nomination possible. And Wilson's election the perpetuating of the power of these bosses and their machine.

Wilson's first step, after his nomination, was to get on friendly terms with all these corrupt leaders. And it is significant in connection with this that the Washington Post and the Cincinnati Enquirer (John R. McLean's properties) and other papers of this kind warmly indorsed his nomination. They all hail him as a second "Grover Cleveland." The working class of this country is not very anxious to have another Grover Cleveland.

There is treachery, hypocrisy and confusion in every division of capitalistic politics. The old parties are weaker this year than in any time of our history. Their disintegration and deterioration will of necessity help the Socialist party, the political expression of the working class. The Socialist party is the only political organization that has a positive goal. It is the only party that is in accord with the economic trend of the times. It is the only party that attracts not only the intelligent and class-conscious working men, but also the student of political and economic conditions of all walks in life.

At best, the so-called reformers and progressives may claim that some of their planks are socialistic. Every voter who prefers the genuine to the imitation, the real to the pretense, the future to the past, will vote the Socialist ticket. Under such circumstances there is nothing that makes me revise my figure that we shall poll no less than two million votes at the coming national election.

Remember the Appeal and this paper both for one year for $1.00. Absolutely the best combination ever offered.

RAISING THE DEAD

Several weeks ago we called for contributions to be used in placing on our subscription list, names of residents in the rural sections of Franklin County. The response has been generous to date, but we want to place every voter on our sub. list. To do this will require about $1500. If you Comrades knew of the vital importance of this move, there can be no question but that you would bend every effort and raise this money at once. We wish to state, we are receiving most encouraging reports from all sections of the County which we have been able to reach through this means. One man writes: "Someone has been good enough to send me your valuable paper, I have been a farmer and Republican all my life, but you have converted me, and I herewith enclose $1.00 to be used in sending the paper to others, who are yet in the dark."

Now, Comrades, get busy on this proposition, clip out the coupon and mail or bring it in with your remittance. It makes no difference if it is only five cents, or five dollars, send it in today and start the work right.

BERGER OFFERS SOLUTION OF IDLE PROBLEM

Socialist Congressman Presents Importment Measure for Workers' Benefit

Washington, July 10.—A special money fund for "Willing Workers" to be loaned to states, counties and cities for public improvements is the solution of the idle labor problem suggested in a bill introduced in the House today by Victor L. Berger, the Wisconsin Socialist. The bill urged that the government loan money—of special issue—for extensive improvements and thereby give work to the unemployed.

"How soon an industrial crisis will come, I do not know," said Berger, in supporting his bill. "We all know the government helped the rich men's panic in 1907 by loaning $40,000,000 to J. Pierpont Morgan, which he loaned out at 6 per cent, utilizing the people's money and the needs of the hours to increase his own wealth.

"There are always two millions unemployed and in hard times twice that number. My bill would give employment to thousands and later millions, providing an 'elastic' currency better than that of the Aldrich currency plan.

"If the government can help the bankers and Wall Street brokers, let it help the unemployed. But, of course, the bankers will oppose my currency and fight the plan."

The Socialist and Appeal to Reason, BOTH ONE year for $1.00. This is the best newspaper offer ever made.

COUNCIL AGAINST NOISE BUT UNDERVALUES LIVES.

Socialist Member's Ordinance Sidestepped by City Dads.

The City Council last Monday night was very strenuous in demanding the enforcement of the ordinance to compel automobiles and motorcycles to make less noise on city streets but were not so vigorous when it came to saving human beings from the criminal recklessness of auto and motor speeders.

An ordinance is pending in Council's traffic laws so that all vehicles will be compelled to stop before passing a street car taking on discharging passengers. The legality of such a law is questioned by Councilman Sherman, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and it will be considered further before the summer recess. Mr. Sherman said passage of such an ordinance would congest traffic in High Street. This ordinance was introduced by Socialist Councilman Zimsler and this fact may account for the quibbles raised against the measure. Before this is read Council may have taken some action upon this question. Several lives have been lost at street corners.

Don't Fail to Read Page 3 Entitled, "He Strikes From the Shoulder."

Under capitalism the harder a man's work the smaller is his salary. The idle class lives in luxury. Under Socialism this would be entirely changed, and the harder the work, whether mental or manual, the greater would be the income. How about this, you who work! Would Socialism do you any harm?

MAJOR BUSH ARDENT APOSTLE OF THE STATE MILITIA PATRIOTISM

Seeks to Arouse the Country Lads But Meets with but Very Little Success

THE BOYS ARE GETTING TO BE TOO WISE

That mighty military hero, Major H. M. Bush, whose deeds of valor in Death Valley, during the Columbus street car strike place him in the same class with Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon, is again seeking the limelight. He has blossomed out as a platform orator and has been going out into the rural regions and in churches, halls and school houses, expounding the gospel of murder. In other words he is trying to induce the country boys to join the Ohio National Guard. He talks much about what he calls patriotism. He has supplemented his lectures by sending letters to young men whose names he can secure. In this letter he glorifies the work of the great soldiers of history. The closing paragraphs of his effusion are as follows:

"The Guardsman, whatever his motives for enlisting, soon learns to love the service he is performing for his country and, if he be of the right sort, strives earnestly to so perfect his knowledge of his duties that he will not be a burden in time of trouble; but an active part of the Army of Defense.

"The National Guard is striving to educate the young Americans how to handle themselves and the weapons issued to our soldiers so that a force may be created that will cause any foreign power to pause before they take issues with the United States or seek to tear down the stars and stripes from any place where they have been put over the dead bodies of American soldiers.

"We want you to join with us in the patriotic work.

"Yours in our country's service,

"H. M. BUSH,
"Major 1st O. F. A."

Of course the brave and Knightly Major does not, in this or in his speeches, tell his hearers that the soldier boys who enlist will be expected to shoot down innocent bystanders, enter homes to club peaceful citizens and insult women whenever the Rail-Light or some other corporation demands it. The story of the cowardly work of Major Bush's swash bucklers two years ago has not been forgotten in this city or county. It can be said to the credit of the good sense of the people that the Major is meeting with but little success either through his "lectures" or by his circulars. The country boys are getting wise to Bush's game. They will be obliged to come to the city to get jobs but they have no liking for such work as the "Hero of Death Valley" wants them to do.

It is well.

SICKENING DETAILS OF LAWRENCE STRIKE

National Commissioner of Labor Files Report of Conditions as He Found Them

Washington—That the Lawrence strike, which was the subject of a hearing before the House Committee on Rules, amounted to a "social revolution," is the opinion expressed by Commissioner of Labor Charles P. Neill, in a report to the Senate in pursuance of a resolution introduced some weeks ago by Senator Poindexter, of Washington.

The report shows that the highest wages paid the ordinary operatives when the mills run at full time seldom go over $12 a week, while one family of a father, mother and three children were forced to live on the father's earnings alone, which were $5.10 a week.

The average wages are given for a week late in 1911, when the mills were running "full time," as $8.76 per family. The figures given by Commissioner Neill are based on a study of the pay rolls for 21,933 operatives.

The facts he discloses tell their own story of how mothers have to farm their children out during the day in order that husband and wife may earn enough to keep the family in the bare necessaries of life. The children usually start to work at 14 years of age. Of the employees studied 55.4 per cent were males and 44.6 per cent were females, showing the high percentage of women.

Strikers Were Foreigners.

Most of the strikers, the report points out, were non-English speaking who have been without any method of dealing with their employers. The unskilled laborers were unorganized, and had no way to voice their protests.

"It naturally followed," writes Commissioner Neill, "that when they broke out in a hastily planned and more or less violent protest against a reduction of their wages, they were ready to follow the leadership that gave them efficient direction and furnished them financial resources for the struggle."

Commissioner Neill and his assistants found that one-half the population of Lawrence, 14 years old and over, were employed in the mills or dependent upon them. Lawrence has a population of 85,892 and there are 60,0000 persons dependent upon the mills.

Continuing, the report says: "The actual economic condition of the families of the workers of the textile mills of Lawrence cannot easily be pictured by a mere statement of individual earnings. From a study of the table showing earnings it is very apparent that in many occupations that if the father's family has not at least one child old enough to work it becomes necessary for the wife to enter the mill to supplement the earnings of the husband in order to maintain the family.

Wives Must Enter Mills.

"Necessity forces a large number of wives with small children to enter the mills, and in these cases the children are left in the care of other families, in which the mother or some female member of the family looks after those left in her charge.

"With the compactly built squares, the large percentage of wooden structures, the crowding within apartments in the central section of Lawrence, and in many tenements, poorly lighted stairways, the fire risk both to life and property is very great."

Among 188 households there were 20 families where the husband was the sole wage earner and where there were no lodgers or boarders. The lowest earnings for these 20 families was $5.10 per full week and the family consisted of a husband, wife and three children.

"The average rate of wages for the 2-,933 textile mill employes was 16 cents per hour. Approximately one fourth of the total number earned less than 18 cents an hour, and about one fifth earned 20 cents an hour and over. The average amount actually received by the 21,933 employees during a week late in 1911, in which the mills were running full time, was $8.76. Almost one third of the total number received less than $7 during the week, and approximately one half as many received $12 and over during the week.

KARB SPLITS DIFFERENCE WITH FRANKLIN COUNTY.

Franklin County was the gainer, evidently, when George J. Karb was elected Mayor of Columbus.

Mayor Karb has handed Prosecutor Turner a check for $436.27. The amount is a part of excessive fees collected by Mr. Karb while he was Sheriff. The total charged against him by the State Bureau of Accounting in its second report was about $1100.

The amount represented by the check is a compromise on claims aggregating about $670. There still remains a balance against the Mayor of $234.90.

HALF A MILLION FOR SOCIALIST CAMPAIGN FUND

By O. E. Branstetter.

The gigantic plans of the National Socialist Campaign Committee are under way. The general plans, broad and comprehensive in outline, have been greatly strengthened by the painstaking manner in which the minutest details are being worked out, insuring their successful operation and promising a fulfillment of the big hopes and expectations of the committee and of the membership.

The general plans were outlined by the National Executive Committee, the National Campaign Committee and the Presidential candidates in a joint meeting on June 15-16 and elaborated in a meeting of the candidates and the Campaign Committee on the following day.

It was at this meeting that Comrade Debs, fired with enthusiasm over the wonderful sentiment and the great opportunities before us in this campaign, said: "We need a campaign fund of five hundred thousand dollars and with such a fund we can paint this nation red all over."

The committee agreed with him and set itself the task to raising half a million dollars to finance the greatest campaign ever undertaken by the Socialist party.

It is a big undertaking, but it can be done. The party raised nearly a hundred thousand dollars in 1908 with only one-fifth of our present membership and without the spur and enthusiasm of the great opportunity now before us. We can certainly do as well this year in proportion to our membership as we did in 1908.

All that is required is for every member, new and old, to raise as much as the average member raised in 1908—and the thing is done. It can be done and will be done.

As an illustration of the manner in which the committee plans to do big things in a big way, it is proposed to raise the bulk of this amount in a single day. The details as worked out by Comrade Barnes provide for a

ONE DAY WAGE FUND

To Be Collected July 30th.

Every member of the party has been made a member of the National Socialist Finance Committee whose duty it is to finance this campaign. An official Collector's Card has been prepared for the use of the members in soliciting contributions to the One Day Wage Fund. Everyone of the 5000 Local Secretaries has been sent one of these cards for each member of his Local.

On the face of the card appears an excellent likeness of Comrade Debs and Seidel, with the name of the collector and his authority to solicit funds for the organization. Around the edge of the card, as on a meal ticket, are figures: 10, 25, 50 and 1.00, which are to punched out with a pin or a nail by each contributor, to an amount equal to his contribution.

Each card has figures representing a total of ten dollars which is not so large but that the vast majority of the comrades can, by energetic hustling, secure contributions sufficient to punch out every figure in the margin.

The name of the fund, the One Day Wage Fund, indicates the intention to secure contributions from each and every Socialist in the country equal to his wages for one day. This is considered the most fair and democratic apportionment as each member thereby contributes the same proportionate amount of his income.

While the one day's wages is to be made the special feature, contributions of any amount from 10 cents up will be accepted and every collector is expected to keep hustling among his friends, his neighbors and his shop mates until his card is full. Every likely and unlikely contributor will be approached for contributions, large or small, and every possible effort will be made by a hundred and fifty thousand comrades, acting in unison from coast to coast, to raise the bulk of this money in a single day.

Thirty per cent of the money thus raised will be retained by the Local, twenty per cent will be sent to the state organization and fifty per cent goes to the National Campaign fund.

With its portion the National Campaign Committee proposes to print twenty-five million sixteen page pamphlets, to be delivered free to every voter in the nation. Still more millions of leaflets and pamphlets will probably be printed later as it is the intention of the committee to make this pre-eminently a literature campaign, and to furnish the party workers in each and every state with all the free literature which they can use to advantage.

Next in importance to the free literature is the plan of concentration in favorable Congressional Districts. There are fifteen or twenty districts in which the Socialists have a fighting chance to win, and with the special attention and assistance which the committee plans to give such districts we should be able to carry at least ten or twelve of them.

The special assistance rendered favorable Congressional Districts does not mean that any portion of the country is to be neglected. On the contrary, the plan is for a nation-wide campaign, a National Campaign in every meaning of the word.

Both of our presidential candidates will speak one or more times in every State in the union with only a few exceptions, and one or the other of them will be sent into every state.

The National Office through its regular organization department now has two organizers working in Alaska. A special campaign has just been started to reach the seven hundred thousand French speaking people in the New England States. A special organizer with four speakers under his direction has been assigned to the extreme southern states for the remainder of the year. Through the woman's department, special work will be done in the six equal suffrage states and in the six states where woman suffrage is to be voted upon this year.

All of these special efforts will be followed up and supplemented by the National Campaign Committee, in harmonious co-operation with the regular departments, wherever necessary and to as great an extent as the funds of the committee will permit.

The success of the entire plan for a nation-wide campaign of education with free literature, of concentration in favorable districts, of special work in all sections of the country in accordance with the special needs and particular conditins existing in each section, the whole national campaign, hinges largely upon the success of the One Day Wage Fund.

Its failure means failure clear down the line.

Its success means twenty-five million pieces of free literature, and more to follow.

It means a dozen men in Congress to hold up Berger's hands.

It means Socialist Representatives in twenty state legislatures.

It means two millions votes and an impregnable position in the political arena from which we can never be stampeded or dislodged.

It means a tremendous movement of resistless force and volume which can neither be side-tracked or destroyed.

It meahs the triumphant march of a united working class to complete and final victory.

The active work and support of every party member is required. Every man is needed—YOU are needed—put your shoulder to the wheel and PUSH.

Do not postpone or neglect until it is too late. Do not regret in the future that you were not one of the great army of a hundred and fifty thousand working men and women who raised in a single day the money to finance the local, the state and the national organizations in the most momentous campaign in the history of the Socialist party.

It all hinges on the One Day Wage Fund, to be collected on July 30th. "On this day, the Socialist party expects every man to do his duty."

CAPITALIST PROSPERITY

By C. E. Ruthenberg.

(Socialist Candidate for Governor.)

There seems to be at the present time a clearly defined effort on the part of capitalist interests to create the impression that the country is enjoying extraordinary prosperity. In traveling about the state I have come across newspaper articles and editorials in various places describing this general prosperity and dwelling on the scarcity of labor. In Cleveland, in Youngstown and other places the workers are being assured that there is work for all who wish employment.

These stories of general prosperity are no doubt being spread broadcast in order to allay the discontent which exists in this country today. We are on the eve of a presidential election, and the time has arrived when the workers' eyes must be closed to the insecurity and general wretchedness of their existence, and, therefore, the cry is raised of prosperity and general good times.

But suppose we accept these stories of general good times at their face value. Suppose we acknowledge that at the present time our industries are more generally in operation and there is a little less unemployment than usually. What does this signify to the workers? How does this prosperity affect those who are dependent for their living upon the wages they receive for their labor?

The capitalist papers themselves answer these questions. The same newspaper which told of exceptional prosperity and labor conditions told in the same issue that in the market districts of the Metropolis of Ohio, children had been found eating the refuse which had been thrown in the garbage cans! The boasted prosperity now existing had not given the parents of these children wages enough to enable them to buy food for their children. Hunger drove these children to feed upon spoiled and rotting food condemned by market inspectors.

Another interesting commentary on the stories of good times is in the fact, that while prosperity is so general, more than five thousand workers in the Cleveland garment making industry are preparing in strike for better wages and working conditions. Prosperity wages and working conditions are such for these workers that they have become unbearable, and they are preparing to appeal to the last resort of the working class to force concessions from their masters.

In the city of Youngstown I passed through the back alleys in which lived some of the workers of that city. There I found what prosperity means to these workers. Rickety, dilapidated old buildings,—crowded closely together,—without light, air or sunshine,—squalor, unsanitary surroundings and foul odors,—with the smoke and dealy gases from the steel mills constantly blowing through the doors and windows, such were the homes of these workers in these days of prosperity.

In another part of the same city I found beautiful homes, surrounded by broad green lawns and great trees whose wide spreading branches offered cool and comfortable retreats. The air was sweet with the fragrance of flowers. Here prosperity was writ large on everything. Here was the only prosperity which capitalism has to offer.

Prosperity under the capitalist system means prosperity for the capitalist class. It means that the workers are forced to work with more feverish haste after probably months of idleness, so that there may be more profits for their masters.

Capitalism produces only when it can make profits, and because it robs and exploits the workers it must periodically put the breaks on the work of production so that the surplus products which the workers cannot buy may be used up.

Consider, in the face of the present prosperity cry, the conditions which existed in every city of the nation during the last long, hard winter. At that time there was piled high on the shelves of factories, warehouses and storerooms all the things necessary to supply the wants of all. At the same time there was thousands, yes, tens of thousands of workers out of employment. They went from factory door to factory door, from shop to shop, from store to store, begging for the opportunity to work. They were ready and willing to use their brain and muscle to carry on the work of production, but capitalism could not produce profitably and therefore capitalism denied these workers the right to work. And while they went from place to place seeking work, at home were wives and children, cold and hungry, who grew paler and more emaciated from day to day, as husbands and fathers pursued their fruitless search for employment.

On the one side were all the necessities of life, all the machinery of production; on the other, women and children suffering hunger and privations, and men eager and willing to work. But capitalism has erected a great wall between the two,—a great wall, which prevented the workers from consuming what they had produced and from using the machinery of production which they had brought into existence. This great wall is the profit system and the private ownership of the means of production. It is this great wall which the workers must batter down through their organized industrial and political power before they can hope that prosperity will mean prosperity for the working class.

ROMAN CATHOLIC INFLUENCE

We have spoken several times of the organization known as the "Guardians of Liberty." It is a patriotic society formed, as its title suggests, to provide safeguards for the liberties enjoyed in America. Gen. Nelson A. Miles and Ex-Congressman Chas. D. Haines have been holding public meetings in our larger cities recently for the purpose of making public statement of its principles. On May 24 such a gathering was dated for St. Louis, Mo. The Second Baptist church was first secured. Pressure brought to bear on Dr. Bitting, the pastor, served to frustrate this arrangement. The Odeon theater was then engaged. This auditorium is next door to St. Alfonso Catholic church, and its fire-escapes overhang the grounds of the church. At the last moment, when no change could be announced in time, the Odeon managers were notified by the authorities of St. Alfonso that if the meeting was held the fire-escapes would have to come down. The bluff worked and the engagement was canceled.

Now comes the sly touch of the Jesuit. Archbishop John Glennon, superior to all other Catholic dignitaries in St. Louis, is interviewed. He expresses surprise that the priest should have so acted. He does not see that Catholics have anything to lose by such meetings. Thus, when an underling administers a dose that gags the public, his superior immediately rebukes him and pacifies the dear public. Such a step was not taken without conference with the archbishop, nor without his consent and approval, and Glennon winked at the priest before he went into print. Let no American be deceived. Rome acts as a unit. Lying is part—and a great part—of the system.

But incidentally the Guardians of Liberty and their cause are winners. Such advertising would come high if paid for at regular rates. Another meeting will be arranged, or maybe a score of them, and the crowds will come. Assume to an American that he "shan't" and he will very soon show you that he "shan." We shall watch the results and keep our readers posted.—The Christian Standard.

HE STRIKES FROM THE SHOULDER

(From Miners' Magazine.)

W. J. Ghent, contributing editor of The National Socialist, published at Washington, D. C., in an editorial on "The Convention," delivers a few solar plexus blows to an aggregation of fanatics, who, wearing the mask of industrial unionism and making the pretense of a belief in the doctrines of Socialism, have been able to command some little attention from men and women of the working class who have not as yet diagnosed the malady of victims of I. W. W.ism.

Ghent, in dealing with this element, uses no gloves, but hits straight from the shoulder with bare knuckles, and it is only a question of time when other writers and editors of the Socialist and labor press will follow in the footsteps of Ghent and make it impossible for workless parasites to graze on the pasture of the labor movement.

(The National Socialist editorial is here quoted in full.)

The above editorial from the pen of W. J. Ghent, of The National Socialist, is logical and comes at a time when genuine Socialists and real union men and women cannot afford to permit themselves to be swept off their feet by the verbal hysteria or maniacal howls of mouth revolutionists.

The Western Federation of Miners was to some extent responsible for the launching of the I. W. W., but when the observing membership of the Federation discovered that the I. W. W. scoffed at by-laws and sneered at the principles of a constitution, that were presumed to govern the organization and which were adopted by a referendum vote, the Western Federation of Miners reached the conclusion that there was no democracy in such an organization, and by a referendum vote the I. W. W. was repudiated and labeled as unworthy of being recognized as a bona-fide labor organization. After being overwhelmingly repudiated by a referendum vote of the Western Federation of Miners, the wind-warriors, who prate about "industrial unionism," "one big union," and for "the solidarity of labor," split in two factions and each faction is now claiming to be the genuine brand of unionism that is ultimately destined to shatter empires, scatter kingdoms, strangle economic slavery to death, and raise the standard of industrial liberty over the soil of every nation on earth.

The prophecies and predictions made by the professional propagandists and freak revolutionists are of such bombastic character that men and women of fragile intellect are duped and become victims of the lunacy expounded by the advocates of "hunger strikes" to wrest a world from the ravenous maw of the profit system.

Tireless jaw-smiths whose only asset is wind have licensed themselves to come with slander and abuse everything and everybody who refuse to accept their campaign of vilification and detraction, and when these perpetual dispensers of verbal garbage are notified that they will not be permitted to empty their swill-barrels on the citizens of a community they immediately raise the alarm that "free speech" is being throttled, and then every labor organization in America which they have branded as allies of capitalism are stamped as scab organizations, are flooded with circulars appealing for funds to support and prolong the reign of spouting hoodlums, who have gloried in spewing their malignity against the very organizations to which they appeal for financial assistance.

The editorial written by Ghent should receive serious consideration, and this element that breeds dissension and disruption should be given to understand that the labor movement has some dignity that cannot be insulted with impunity.

WHEN THE SOCIALIST LION ROARS

By Clarence C. Edwards, Orland, O.

When the Socialist lion begins to roar,
The Elephant's back will hit the floor;
The Braying donk will tumble o'er;
The progressive owl will hoot no more.
Hurrah, for Debs!

The plutes down on Fifth avenue
Will get into an awful stew,
They'll cuss until the air is blue
And wonder what on earth to do.
Hurrah, for Debs!

They'll put their factories into sacks
And pile their railroads up in stacks
They'll load this plunder on their backs,
And then for Europe make swift tracks.
Hurrah, for Debs!

The Socialists then will all declare:
The flag of red shall float in air
They'll run the nation on the square,
And end all grafting then and there.
Hurrah, for Debs!

Co-operation will be the scheme;
Competion will float down stream,
Justice to all will be the theme,
Righteousness will reign supreme.
Hurrah, for Debs!

SOCIALISTS HIT BY LAW

The Socialists of Sacramento, Cal., have been made amenable to the postal laws, by having helped in the distribution of postal cards bearing an attack upon the Great Western Power Company.

The local Socialists co-operated with the Consumers' League of the city in an attempt to force the electric company to reduce its alleged extortionate rates. Post cards were distributed among the citizens of the city, to be filled out and mailed to the power company, asking it to reduce rates. The post-office held that the language of the post cards was "Libelous, scurrilous and defamatory." The penalty for breaking this section of the postal laws is a fine of $5,000.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

ABOLISHING OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

By Harry D. Thomas.

Article 1, Section 8.
No. 2 on the Official Ballot.

Article 1, Section 10.

Deposition by State and Comment on Failure to Testify in Criminal cases.

No. 3 on the Ballot.

This amendment amends section 9 of article one of the Bill of Rights by adding thereto the following:

"Until Otherwise Provided by Law Persons Convicted of Crimes Hereto Before Punishable by Death Shall Be Punished In the Penitentiary During Life."

The Socialist and every other political reform movement from time immemorial both industrially and politically have made as a part of their declaration of principles the abolishment of capital punishment. It is admitted that this is a matter that the legislature has the authority to enact as a law, but the facts remain that the Ohio legislature for many years gone by have been urged both by the State Federation and other reform organizations to pass laws of this character and to date have never seen proper to do so.

Asking that it be made a part of the constitution puts the question up to the people for their approval or rejection by referendum vote and will give the opportunity to determine whether on this subject the legislature has been representing the people or simply the personal prejudices of the members elected to that body. Personally I have looked upon the death penalty for many years as a relic of the dark ages. The old slaves in the time of Christ were nailed to the cross for going on strike or doing any other form of a crime against the dictates of the Masters of those days.

In late centuries religious persecution burned people at the stake and it is not so many years ago that it was common practice to hang people for sheep stealing and the regular practice in our Western civilization for horse stealing in very recent years. And while possibly there might have been some reason for it in that Western civilization because of the lack of means to mete out punishment for crimes in any other way, there certainly cannot be any reason for it in a civilized country in this 20th century.

In the discussion of this matter before the convention two of the minister delegates voted against this proposal and one of them talked against it and it is somewhat surprising that quite a number of our professional people oppose its adoption at the present time, while the working class have always stood for it.

This amendment if adopted will substitute life imprisonment for the death penalty, and as it is both legally and morally wrong to commit murder, the killing of persons as a punishment for crime by the State must be equally wrong, and every Comrade in Ohio should vote for this amendment.

ARTICLE 1, SECTION 10

Depositions by State and Comment on Failure of Accused to Testify In Criminal Cases.

No. 3 on Official Ballot.

This amendment proposes: First, that the number of persons to constitute a grand jury and the number necessary to concur in finding an indictment shall be determined by law. At present a grand jury is composed of fifteen persons, at least twelve of whom are necessary to concur in finding an indictment.

Second: Provision may be made for the taking by the accused and also by the state of the deposition of any witness whose attendance cannot be had at the trial. It is also provided in the amendment that if such depositions are taken the means and opportunity must always be secured to accused to be present in person and with counsel at such taking and to examine the witness, whose deposition is so being taken, in the same manner as if present in court.

Third: This amendment further provides that if the accused fails to testify such failures may be considered by the court and jury and may be made the subject of comment by counsel, none of which may be done at present.

Your Socialist delegate voted against this amendment, because it gives the prosecutor an undue advantage over the poorer of those who may be charged with crime, while the criminal with unlimited funds, would be given a still greater opportunity of getting scot free.

THE REAL THIRD PARTY

Editor The Socialist:

One of the essentials of a successful free government is an able, patriotic and efficient opposition.

The thoughtful and really progressive voter by a careful study of the Republican and Democratic platforms will find that neither shows the slightest understanding of the social and industrial movement which is under way in this country.

The English papers discuss with much clearness the results of the recent conventions. They are full of adverse criticism. In regard to a Third party, they say, they have been useful in the past and will doubtless rise up to perform beneficial service in the future. While unsuccessful themselves, they may determine the result between the two parties, TO THE BENEFIT OF THE NATION and if a THIRD PARTY has a real mission to perform, if it is expressive of principles and policies, close to the hearts of the American people, it will in the course of time supplant one or the other of the great parties. Do all intelligent citizens realize we have already a third party, well organized and advancing with rapid strides towards a successful and useful career in the future welfare of our nation. Read the platform of the Socialist party. Can we trust the old party organizations to relieve us of oppression? What is the chief cause of the high cost of living?—class legislation; unjust and unfair monetary laws and tariff schedules for the benefit of the few, rather than the many.

Popular government in this country has been thwarted. The Socialist party fills a gap that neither of the old parties intended to fill.

Socialism is here to stay and not even repressive measures can successfully combat the party that has made it a political issue.

Socialism is a theory or policy that aims to secure the reconstruction of society, increase of wealth and a more equal distribution of the products of labor through the public (collective) management of all industries.

Its motto is, every one according to his deeds.—Standard Dictionary.

The signs of the times point away from the purely political and towards the moral issues of life.

Socialists may not be individually any more honest than other men, but this much remains undeniable, they are striving for a system that makes it impossible for one man to exploit another.

Socialism has for its plan to maintain equal opportunities for all, each and every citizen—according to Lincoln's interpretation.

UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL.

Vote for freedom.

Truly yours,
F. V. TOWNSEND,

Columbus, Ohio, July 4, 1912.

RUSSELL FOR GOVERNOR

Charles Edwards Russell has been selected for the second time as the standard bearer for the Socialist party of New York. He was nominated at the State convention of the party, held at Auburn, N. Y., last week. The complete State ticket is as follows:

For Governor—Charles Edward Russell, of New York.

For Lieutenant Governor—Gustave A. Strebel, of Onondaga.

for Secretary of State—Carrie W. Allen, of Onondaga.

For Comptroller — Olin Hoxie Smith, of Schenectady.

For State Treasurer—Frank Ehrenfried, of Erie.

For Attorney General—Henry L. Slobodin, of New York.

For State Engineer and Surveyor—Dr. Charles H. Furman, of Kings.

The State convention this year was the most successful ever held. It was attended by hundreds of delegates and spectators from every part of the State. The platform is a ringing affirmation of the principles of the International Socialist movement.

The increase in the party membership of the State, and the growth of the organization means a campaign unrivaled in intesity and spirit.

Last week The Socialist recorded the exit of Harry Hayes, a Cleveland broker, who stole $180,000 in bonds, from the Ohio Penitentiary. Since then it has been recalled that another Harry Hayes entered the same week that Brokr Harry went in. The other Harry was a common dub and was sent to the bolt shop. He is in the Pen yet. The class lines are drawn even in the penal institutions of Ohio.

THE SAME OLD GAG.

Sea Girt, N. J., July 6.—That the tariff is the one issue that will overshadow all others in the coming campaign was the positive declaration made by Governor Wilson, the Democratic nominee for President.

"Undoubtedly the tariff is the chief object of interest to the people of the United States," said the Democratic presidential candidate. "It is interlaced with every other issue. In fact, it is at the very heart of every other question. A great many, in fact nearly all of the trust questions, have their origin in the tariff. Just as sure as you start from the center of the tariff question you arrive at the trusts."

The same old gag is to be worked off upon the American voters to keep their minds away from other important matters. The Democratic slangwhangers ignore the fact that England, the greatest free-trade nation in the world, faces industrial crises more serious even than the United States, because England has been in business longer than the United States has and tariff or free trade has nothing to do with the great question affecting the working class. Wilson is undoubtedly a back number.

It cost a good many thousands of dollars for Lorimer to get into the United States Senate. It is costing a good many more thousands of dollars to find out whether or not he should stay there. The items in both cases should be put down to the increasing cost of crime.

UNCLE CYRUS IS ALL RIGHT.

The American farmer has furnished many a professional jokester and paragrapher with money for buckwheat and coffee or beef and [illegible]. The farmer is always the "rube," "the tight wad," the fellow who blows out the gas or buys the bold brick, or does some similar stunt. He has been the source of endless superior laughter to the high-collared fraternity who have come to look upon farming as one of those debasing occupations utterly unsuited to any one who can get $18 per for a daily grind in an office or for working in a store. Sometimes the farmer would be the object of wrath, for $18 per, or a little less or even a little more, will not go very far in buying the things the farmers raise. So the jokesters gibed and jeered him, while the paragraphers, editorial and special writers scolded him. They warned him with all the seriousness of the English journalists who are accustomed to begin their "A Word to the Sultan," or some other orinery potentate with the expression, "Again we warn the Sultan that the people of England are at last aroused and will not much longer endure," etc. The farmer has been warned that he's got to stop sending the price of living upward. As he hasn't anything to do with it, and as he has been caught himself in the same machine, instead of jeering at some one else, or warning somebody not responsible, he has begun to do a little thinking.

But he is still a good subject for alleged witticisms as the following brilliant bit from the Chicago Tribune shows:

Campaigner—Uncle Cyrus, what is the feeling up in your part of Michigan?

Uncle Cyrus—Well sir, the peach crop's gone to thunder, an' some of us, begosh, are goin' to vote for Debs!

Good for Uncle Cy, even though he put the matter on a personal instead of a party basis. There are thousands of him who are going to vote for Socialism this year and there are other thousands who are steadily forging ahead to the point where they will be up with the army of emancipation.

One of the most significant things at the present time is the Tenant Farmers' movement that is bringing so many Texas farmers and others into the ranks. In New York Algernon Crapsey, who has been on tour for the Socialist party in the farming districts, finds the farmers more responsive even than the factory workers, and far more responsive than most of the clerical workers.

The utter viciousness of capitalism could not be better shown than by the fact that many of the people who raise foods are often confronted with hunger just the same as the mine, factory and mercantile establishment workers. The hope in the situation is that the enlightened farmers are making common cause with the enlightened town and city workers and are joining with them in the movement that will help both—the Socialist party.

Uncle Cy, and the ruined peach crop that leads him to vote for Debs, is not a guy, though the writer of the joke may be and probably is one.

"COULDN'T SEE THE SIGNALS."

Some forty-odd persons were killed and sixty more injured the other day on the Lackawanna Railroad because the engineer of the express train which dashed into the other "couldn't see the signals, the morning being foggy." This is the explanation given, and it is probably correct.

We shall not, according to the usual custom, waste any space in denouncing the railroad, or deploring the fearful loss of life involved. Let that be taken for granted and considered to have been said. We have done that stunt so often that it is getting somewhat wearisome, anyhow, and the railroads don't care a darn, scarcely, indeed, as much as the public seemingly does.

But the explanation of the engineer not being able to see the signals on account of fog strikes us as being particularly significant in its application to social conditions at present existing. There are other engineers in much more important positions who are heading straight for an infinitely greater catastrophe on account of not being able to see the signals.

Here is what is called the whole "civilized world" rushing headlong toward the social revolution, and though the signals are displayed on both sides of the track, as well as ahead, the engineers are not able to see them and will not hear of slowing down or making the approach cautiously.

Social discontent everywhere, Socialism growing and spreading throughout the world, the cost of living rising until millions of people are becoming desperate through hunger or fear of hunger, strikes and strikebreaking, lockouts, class conflicts, collisions between labor and capital, repression and suppression of the workers on every hand and in every manner, from literal butchery by the armed forces of the nations involved, to exile, imprisonment and legal and illegal punishments of all kinds, class bitterness continually increasing, political swindling of the workers, legislation in their interest killed, atultified or set aside, crime, prostitution and insanity ever increasing, war, militarism and taxation that threatens bankruptcy, chronic famine and physical deterioration of untold millions, these and a thousand other signals of similar import are being displayed increasingly along the track, but the engineers can't see them on account of alleged fog, or if they do see them regard them as meaningless, and with their hands on the levers of the political machinery the engineers of the national locomotives open up to the last notch and fly along the track regardless of the red flags of warning that are arising on all sides. They can't see the signals, or won't see them, can't or won't slacken speed. They persuade themselves and others that the track ahead is clear. It is a race, and the race is to the swiftest. It is a commercial paradise that lies ahead, not social revolution, and the race is to decide who gets there first and crowds the laggards out. To the victor belongs the spoils of "commercial supremacy." But they can't see the signals. There are no signals, and if there were the fog prevents them being seen, and even if it didn't, what do signals matter, anyhow?

The Lackawanna collision is an almost perfect analogy in miniature of the mad rush of capitalism to its final goal.

Almost, but not quite. The railroad engineer couldn't see the signals for the fog. Had he been able to see them he would have slowed down. And whatever else he may have to stand responsible for, he was not responsible for the fog. He couldn't create it.

Not so with the national engineers of world capitalism, rushing with express speed to its final goal. They, to a large extent, they and the class they represent, are responsible for the fog in which they have enshrouded the track. So far as possible they have deliberately created it, and they persistently discredit and suppress all those who dispel it and reveal the danger ahead. The Socialist with his red flag, warning of danger, and the necessity of putting on the brakes is ignored, run over or contemptuously tossed aside for his temerity, or if more notice is taken he is actually accused of desiring to bring about a horrible and destructive collision.

Our national engineers "can't see the signals on account of fog." Or they may see them when too late to learn wisdom after the event has taken place. History repeats itself, and perhaps its most costly repetition is comprised in the recurring blindness of each successive ruling class.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

As has been repeatedly stated, no Socialist paper can long exist without a rising subscription list. We have a certain fixed expense that must be met each week and if our subscription list goes backward in place of forward, it immediately puts us in a tight hole. We are continually borrowing from the future, as it were, depending upon the solidarity of you comrades to keep things going.

The past week has been decidedly calm as far as new subscribers are concerned. Remember, that the paper is the most important end of our propaganda. Keep it uppermost in your minds at all times. Don't let a few internal eruptions ruffle your equilibrium and take your mind offf the paper as that is just what the enemies of our movement want.

Roll up your sleeves next week, wade in, go after that neighbor of yours, get his subscription. Be determined that you, dear reader, will do your share if it is only one 25 cent subscription.

If the financial worry was taken off our shoulders, it would leave us free at this end to confine our efforts towards a better paper. One subscription a week from each comrade will solve the financial end. Will you do it? The paper is yours. It is absolutely in your hands. Let's make this working-class paper the biggest thing in this State.

On with the Revolution!

Franklin Township Local sends in eight new ones. Watch the smoke in November.

Comrade E. Wood went out on the 4th, asked four men to subscribe and landed two out of the four. This ratio could be held up all over the city through systematic work.

Don't forget to purchase from our advertisers and use the red ticket.

Comrade Wilson tied three sticks of dynamite to the tail of capitalism last 4th. Fine work.

Comrade Beery of the First Ward; Comrade McCoy, of Milo, and Comrade Lewis, of the Tenth Ward, each hand two scalps on their belt.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Society is composed of two great classes: Those who have more dinners than appetites, and those who have more appetites than dinners.—Chamfort.

"The law condemns the man or woman who steals the goose from off the common, but lets the greater felon lose, who steals the common from the goose."

The farmer's wife singes the chickens. The Socialist Party singes the eagle and rooster with the arm and torch; the eagle is ready for the garbage can and the rooster will be served with O'Bryan-Murphies.

Kicking in the presence of the faithful is like the talk the preacher gives to the congregation on Sunday morning about the non-attendance. The ones that need the scolding don't get it and it discourages the faithful.

Capitalism is the shell in which Socialism is developing and the proletariat must break the shell the same as the chick before they will gain their liberty.

POLITICAL CHAOS.

By Morris Kaplan.

At last, the turning point has been reached. For the first time in the political history of the United States—since it has to become the home of—Trustified Capitalism—people are starting to ask themselves, "Where are we at?" A few years ago it was the New York World that called for definitions as to "What is a Democrat?" Now, Republican and Democratic publications of every shade and variety are asking themselves and their readers, "What is Democracy, What is Republicanism, Who is a Republican, and Who is a Democrat?" Staid rock ribbed tradition bound newspaper editors and laymen are all up in the air.

The Minneapolis Tribune breaking away from its former Republican moorings, states very pertinently that "It matters not whether the invariable other candidate be labeled regular or bolter, the fetich of party regularity is worn out and the binding tie of party names is broken. Men and women are going to vote and act this year, not as Republicans or Democrats, but as citizens."

To the Socialist movement in general and to the Class-Conscious Workers in particular, it is gratifying to at last look our non-socialist neighbors squarely in the eye and say "I told you so, but you were scary and skeptical, or perhaps in hope that the party of Jefferson, or the party of Lincoln would come your way." Now Roosevelt and Bryan have both practically demonstrated the "Rule of Gold" to be decidedly in evidence and in full control of both the Republican and Democratic Parties. To Socialists who have been preaching that every political party is dominated by the Economic interests that pay its bills and nominate its candidates, this is nothing new. But how about the large mass of the rank and file voters, wage-workers, and farmers, who have been led to believe that political parties can and do represent the welfare of all the people? For any person to assume in these days, that a political party under capitalism can or will represent the economic interests of all the inhabitants of the Nation, puts him in the position of being either knave or fool.

The Socialist Party is also a Class Party—and it frankly says so. We have no desire to hoodwink people into voting for any of our candidates because of any "middle ground" theory. We make no attempt to sail under false colors. We do not cater to prejudices, nor do we solicit votes based upon protest against nominations made by other political parties. We have just one mission to perform and that mission implies the Emancipation of the Working Class of the Nation.

The Wage-Worker, the tennant farmer, the homesteader all are equally members of the Working Class and all will be mutually benefited through the installation of a Co-operative, (co-partnership) system in the realms of wealth production, distribution and regulation.

NOTICE TO THE LOCALS OF OHIO.

The Columbus Socialist requests each Socialist Local in Ohio to send to us as often as convenient brief reports of its work, prospects and other items of interest to the party. These reports will be published in our "Socialists in Action Department." Address all communication to Editor Socialist, 108½ South High street, Columbus, Ohio.

Farmers Becoming Landless.

Census figures, just out, prove conclusively the assertion made by Socialists that the American farmer is gradually becoming landless and merely an interest ad a rent paying slave of capitalism.

According to an advance copy of the census table on the ownership of farms and farm homes just received by your correspondent, there has been in the last ten years a steady decline in the number of farms and farm homes owned free and a corresponding increase in the number of those mortgaged.

These figures are the best answer to the cries of "prosperity" heard on all sides. At every election we hear old party politicians "pointing with pride" to the "prosperous American farmer." For years the country has been entertained by lengthy interviews by James Wilson, Secretary of the Department of Agriculture. Only recently the Common Cause, the Catholic anti-Socialist magazine, printed so-called statistics showing that farmers are accumulating property.

Now the Bureau of the census officially reports that the per centage of morgaged farms and farm homes in 1880 was 28.9 per cent; in 1900, 31.1 per cent, and in 1910, 32.. per cent. There were 884,987 mortgaged homes and farms in 1890; 1,187,866 in 1900, and 1,337,649 in 1910.

These figures will of course receive little prominence and space in the capitalist press. But that will soon be writing learned dissertations on the unreliability of statistics may be expected by all. There will be a lot of explaining but no disproving.

Local Party News

Under this head will be published the news concerning the activities of the Ward Branches of the Socialist Party in Columbus and from Locals in Franklin County. All news and announcements should be sent in not later than Wednesday morning.

WOMAN'S DIRECTORY

The Woman's Local Committee meets every Wednesday evening at 15½ East Gay Street. Every woman invited to come.

The motion of Local Portsmouth to recall J. Mahlon Barnes as National Campaign Manager, was endorsed by Local Columbus. The resignation of Comrade Albright, as City Organizer was accepted and Comrade W. E. Bues chosen in his stead.

On Monday evening the City Central Committee requested Comrade Bachman, member of the State Committee, to call upon the State Committee to repudiate the action of the Socialist State Executive Committee Sunday in barring from the speakers' platform A. C. Eby, of Columbus; Walter Millard, of Cincinnati, Ella Reeve Bloor and others, because of their alleged conservatism in not supporting direct action.

If the action is not repudiated, Columbus Socialists may initiate a referendum to recall the entire membership of the State Executive Committee.

USE THE RED TICKET.

The Socialist has distributed thousands of red tickets to our readers and has more to be given out. When you buy anything from a dealer who advertises in this paper, hand him the red ticket. He will understand it. The time has come when the purchasing power of the working class must be used to boost its own paper. Get busy with the red tickets.

SOCIALIST ACTIVITIES.

While some members of the Socialist Party are bending all their efforts to disrupt the organization the "Flying Squadrons" are sweeping through the city and country arousing public sentiment. Last Saturday night six propaganda meetings were held as announced in the last issue of The Socialist as follows: Alton, Edgar Wood, E. B. Eubanks, W. C. Bates and Mrs. Vaughn; Hilliards, T. C. Southard, J. M. Suddick and E. A. Remaly; Reynoldsburg, O. G. Van Schoyck, J. L. Bachman and D. J. Farrell; Worthington, J. M. Freeman, C. H. DeLong, F. E. Johnston. In the city William Phelps, Gus Tegenkamp and C. E. Warren held forth at Mt. Vernon and Twentieth, while Niemeister, Cochrun and Lewis were at Broad and High. Good audiences attended at each point and great interest is being taken by the listeners.

NORTH SIDE LAWN FETE.

The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Wards branches, Thursday evening of last week, made a success of their lawn fete despite the fact that the 4th of July holiday took so many away from home. Comrades A. C. and Mrs. Eby spoke and recited.

SINGERS WANTED

An effort is being made to organize one or more quartets to warble songs at Socialist meetings during this campaign. Those willing to volunteer will please see Comrade O. G. Van Schoyck, Southwest corner High and Rich Streets.

HILLTOP PICNIC.

The Hilltop Business Men's and Improvement Association will picnic at Buckeye Lake Park, Wednesday, July 24. All stores west of State Hospital will be closed. Get tickets from merchants. Adults 50 cents, children 25 cents. Everybody invited. Cars leave Hague Avenue and West Broad Street at 8:00 a. m.

SOCIALISTS NOMINATE WOMAN

Mrs. Marie MacDonald, wife of the editor of the New York Call, was nominated for Congress by the Socialists of the Fourteenth District in New York City. Mrs. MacDonald is the daughter of one of the exiles from Germany, following the Anti-Socialist laws. She has been active in the Socialist movement since her girlhood.

FEDERATION OF LABOR.

The Columbus Federation of Labor had one of the best attended sessions of the past two years last Monday night. Among other things it took action against the proposition to work convicts on the streets of this city. The resolution reads:

Resolved, That the Columbus Federation of Labor does emphatically protest against the employment of convict labor on our public streets, believing that such practice would tend to humiliate by publicly advertising the unfortunate prisoners and thereby prevent them from obtaining an honest living at the expiration of their sentence.

The labor unions of Franklin County, in accord with a State-wide movement, soon will commence a campaign in the interest of the majority of constitutional amendment proposals and especially in favor of those termed "labor amendments," such as the initiative and referendum and judicial reform. A meeting of delegates from locals in the county will devise definite plans Sunday morning. The conference will be held at Federation Hall, 131½ East Town Street.

The Federation agreed to co-operate with the Consumers' League, of which there is a local in Columbus. Death to sweatshops is the object of the organization.

A communication was received by the Federation asking that representatives of the Ohio Woman Suffrage Association be permitted to participate in the Labor Day parade. The request was referred to committee.

The Labor Day committee will hold a meeting Sunday morning to arrange details for a celebration which, it is thought, will eclipse any ever held in Columbus.

James Henderson, President of the Federation, has been selected to preside over the celebration, and a speaker for constitutional amendments will be assigned to this meeting by the State Federation. Another speaker will probably talk on woman suffrage.

NOTICE TO WORKERS.

We have compiled the names and addresses of another complete Rural Route, north of the city. We want to put every one of them on the sub list. Every dollar that can be raised will be used in this manner. Send in the dollars comrades for this purpose, and we will soon wake them up on that route.

PLEASE BE CAREFUL.

Attention is called to the fact that many comrades are turning in subs. without the street number of the subscriber.

It is very necessary and important that the street number should be turned in with the sub. in every instance.

Strict attention to this will aid us very materially at this end.

PLAIN FACTS FOR THE INFORMATION OF SOCIALISTS

Attempt to Disrupt Party Will Fail—Loyal Class-Conscious Comrades Should Stand Firm.

The Socialist Party has evidently attained the rank and "dignity" of the old political parties, for according to the local daily papers the State Executive Committee of our party in regular session took action against what they are pleased to call the "yellow" element. Here is the way the Citizen dishes up the story:

"Among those taken off the list of speakers by the Executive Committee Sunday were Alvah C. Eby, Socialist candidate for Mayor last fall, who polled nearly 11,000 votes; Walter Millard, of Cincinnati, who led the campaign in Columbus two years ago which netted 11,000 votes for J. L. Bachman for Congress; R. H. Gwinner, of Ashland, and A. B. Shinn, of Washington C. H., and J. F. Allen, of Lima. The State Committee also turned down W. C. Bates and F. E. Johnson, of Columbus, recommended for State speakers because of their opposition to the Industrial Workers of the World and the direct actionists.

"Although the referendum vote of the party for seven members of the State Executive Committee is not completed indications are that the committee will be controlled, as it is now, by the 'reds.' Only four were elected on the first referendum ballot, Margaret Prevey, of Akron; Josephine Bates, of Toledo; C. E. Ruthenberg, of Cleveland, and F. G. Strickland, of Dayton. They were all re-elected. Strickland is the only one not classed with the radicals. Another ballot will be taken and these men will be candidates: E. E. Rimbach, of Elyria; Peter Kinnear, Columbus; L. A. Zitt, Cincinnati; H. A. Mesnard, Cincinnati, and A. B. Hollenbaugh, Fostoria. There are three to be elected yet.

"Joseph C. Schawe, of Columbus, was re-elected Secretary by an overwhelming majority. While Schawe is one of the radicals, his big vote was said to be in recognition of his excellent services as State Secretary."

In the main the above seems to be practically correct. The Socialist has been unable to secure access to the official minutes of the State Executive Committee. Under instructions from the City Central Committee of Local Columbus, Local Secretary Van Schoyck visited State headquarters last Tuesday and from a member of the Executive Committee obtained the following information as to the decapitation of certain State speakers:

Comrade A. C. Eby was striken from the list because it was alleged that he opposed the A. F. of L., Industrial Unionism and talked against the church. Comrade W. L. Millard was removed because he wrote to the State office asking that he be routed for continuous dates when in Ohio. Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor was removed because she had gone on the platform for the equal suffrage section of the new Ohio constitution. Walter Bagby, of Portsmouth, was removed for reasons unassigned. Comrade W. C. Bates, of Columbus, was not approved because, it was alleged, he had asked a local comrade as to what books he should read on Socialism. Comrade F. E. Johnston was turned down because, it was alleged, he had spoken in Ohio without authority from the State office.

COMMENT.

The foregoing summary of the recent action of the State Executive Committee of the Socialist Party is plain enough to indicate that there is "something rotten in Denmark." The Socialist is fully cognizant of the ability of some of the speakers stricken from the list by the S. E. C. Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor needs no commendation. In speaking for equal suffrage she is supporting a Socialist principle. Comrade Walter J. Milliard is a tried, true and effective speaker who is in demand everywhere. Comrade A. C. Eby has been heard by thousands in Columbus and other places in Ohio. We have never heard his addresses objected to. He always "delivers the goods," at least to the satisfaction of the rank and file of the party. Of the allegation concerning Comrade Bates it can be said that the comrade quoted by the S. E. C. member denies that he ever said what is charged. As to Comrade F. E. Johnston speaking in Ohio, the fact is that he never made but one speech outside of Franklin County and that was last Fall. This meeting was approved and Comrade Johnston paid by the State office. The gist of the whole matter is that an element, evidently in the hire of the capitalists, is trying to disrupt the Socialist Party in Ohio. The attempt will fail. It is the same spirit that rent the French revolution into factions and made the streets of Paris run red with blood. The cloven foot is becoming more apparent every day. Let all loyal comrades keep cool, stand firmly for class conscious Socialism and all will be well.

The allegations against the State speakers we have named are too flimsy to be seriously considered. The membership in this district and through the State is becoming aroused and something will drop before long.

Action of Local Columbus.

Local Columbus in joint session last Sunday endorsed a resolution protesting against the speeches made by Wm. Thurston Brown. The resolution was ordered sent to the State office and the National Secretary.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS.

The national Executive Committee is voting on a motion by Hillquit that the action of the committee in disapproving of Mary O'Reilly as a speaker on the lyceum lecture course be reconsidered and that her name be placed on the the list of approved speakers for that course.

The committee is also voting on motions by Irvine that the National Secretary call the attention of the locals to the fact that for the next few months Everybody's Magazine will publish a debate on Socialism between representatives of the Roman Catholic Church and the Socialist party; also that the Metropolitan Magazine beginning with the July number takes a decided stand on the side of Socialism.

Local County Cook, Illinois, has ordered ten thousand copies of The Growing Grocery Bill.

In the month of June, 1911, the National Office received $516.75 for literature. In the same month in 1912, it received $838.86.

During the first six months of 1911, the receipts for literature were $3,-359.64. During the same period in 1912, the amount received was $6,-838.45.

The amount received at the National Office for dues during the month of June was $5,067.15. The average membership for the first six months of 1912, as evidenced by the dues received, is 118,350.

State Secretary Schawe, of Ohio, reports as follows, "J. D. Snyder, of Osnaburg, has been expelled from the local for violating laws of the organization and using the duties of his office as councilman partially."

Also, we are informed by Local Hamilton that Ben C. Noble has been expelled from their local for voting one of the old party tickets at the last primary election held May 31, 1913."

As previously reported, there was a long delay in the secretary's revised minutes of the national convention reaching the National Office, and therefore the ballot for referendum B was made up from the stenographic report. It now appears that the stenographic report and the secretary's minutes differ in one particular: In Article X, Section 9, the last line the stenographic report has the expression "one year". The secretary's minutes have it "two years".

Unless objection is made by as many locals as are required to initiate a referendum, the vote on this section will be interpreted as being for or against two years.

The Jewish comrades of Chicago, after publishing the Jewish Labor World for four years, have decided to make it a daily paper as soon as enough money is raised. All the Jewish trade unions and progressive organizations of Chicago have pledged support. The paper covers the whole western and mid-western territory and an appeal will be made for support through such territory.

GENERAL SOCIALIST NEWS.

In the election for members of the State Legislature in Tasmania, Australia, the Labor party came close to defeating the old party combination. In the previous Legislature the Liberal-Conservative combine controlled 19 seats and the Labor party 11. The campaign was bitterly contested, the fusionists charging that the Labor party stood for socialism, confiscation, free love, smashing of the church and home, etc., etc. But after the votes were counted it was found that the Laborites had secured 14 seats, the Lib.-Confusionists 14, with two independents holding the balance of power. The latter are expected to join the fusion combine and keep the old crowd in control of the government of Tasmania. But the Laborites are perfectly satisfied. They say about one more such "victory" for the combined old parties and they will be completely out of business. Labor never controlled the State Legislature of Tasmania.

In the state election in Queensland the old party Liberal-conservative fusion also retained control, but it was accomplished only by resorting to the well-known trick of gerrymandering the districts, so that it required about 3,000 workers to elect a Labor representative against 2,000 for the Lib.-Con. fusionists. Under a fair apportionment the labor party would have had at least 36 seats instead of 25, while the Lib.-Con. number would have been 33 rather than 47. Furthermore the Laborites probably would have captured three additional seats and obtained a majority of the members, as in two districts they lost by 2 votes and in one district by 3 votes. As in Tasmania, so in Queensland, the fused Lib.-Con. party is riding to its doom, and another state election will quite likely but the binger on the old gang for keeps.

Union people in Indianapolis are saying that the international organizations with headquarters in that city have about $1,000,000 constantly in deposit in the local banks, and that this money is borrowed by capitalists and actually used against the workers during periods of strikes. There is an agitation on that the internationals start their own bank and in a measure keep their own money from being used against labor when trouble is on.

Socialist local at Brazil, Ind., is the only one of the 180 locals in that state that has gone on record as advocating the striking out of Section 6, the sabotage clause, of the national constitution. The local also had the nerve to claim that, in the absence of instructions, the Indiana delegates in the national convention misrepresented the membership. James O-neal and other delegates have issued statements in which they fairly blister the Brazilians, showing that the latter don't know what they are talking about.

The action of George Lansbury, a Socialist member, in denouncing Premier Asquith and the government in such vitrelis terms last week that he was ordered to leave the House by the Speaker who threatened to have him ejected unless he went voluntarily, has created widespread discussion in Great Britain. Lansbury in condemning Asquith for permitting the mistreatment of imprisoned women suffragists, shook his fist in the Prime Minister's face and fairly trembled with rage as he called Asquith a Russian despot. Lansbury is being deluged with telegrams and letters praising him for his attack upon the Liberal leader and declares he has no apologies to offer for his conduct.

In the New York World, in a lengthy article discussing the subject of socialism in the colleges, Secretary Harry Laidler, of the Intercollegiate Socialist Society, is quoted as predicting that "the students of today will, in a few years, find themselves dealing with the Socialist movement; and, whether they are sympathetic or antagonistic toward the movement, they will not be able to escape either its presence or its pressure." Laidler says the interest in socialism among the educated people is growing at a tremendous rate as evidenced by the large increase of inquiries and reports received at his office. The World gives a description of the society's office and says that it is operated under a system that could hardly be improved upon.

Pablo Iglesias, the only Socialist member of the Parliament in Spain, reports that despite the oppression aimed against the workers by a reactionary government good progress is being made. The Socialist party now has 800 branches, a member of Parliament, two Provincial deputies and over 100 City Councilmen. There are more than 80,000 enrolled Socialist party members in Lisbon alone. There are 10 newspapers printed by the S. P. and 12 co-operative societies are controlled by the Socialists, as well as 12 labor temples. The Socialists also organized about 180,-000 workers into trade unions, nearly all of which are officered by party members. At the present time the Socialists are working wit the Republicans to overthrow the monarchy.

ELEVENTH DISTRICT CONVENTION

The Congressional Convention of the Socialist party of the Eleventh Congressional District of Ohio was called to order at one o'clock P. M. in Eishtenkemper Hall, Glouster. Wm. Jansen of Jacksonville, was made temporary chairman. Dan W. Wallace of Hollister was made temporary secretary. The call was announced by the chairman, stating that to facilitate the work of the convention, while waiting upon the arrival of Comrade F. G. Werner of Crooksville, who is the committeeman from this Congressional District, it would be well to ascertain the number of delegates present and the Locals represented. The roll call of Locals showed the following named delegates who were legally qualified to represent their respective Locals of the Socialist party in the convention herein named:

Athens County—W. W. Greek, Nelsonville; D. W. Wallace, Local Gloucter; Donald Henderson, Jacksonville; Albert Pierce, Buchtel; Joseph Evans, The Plains; Herman Langafeldt, Hollister.

Perry County — Adolph Globiz, Corning; R. R. Deaver, Dixie.

Hocking County—E. H. Rhoades, Monday.

Ross County—J. B. Kenney, Chillicothe.

Comrade Joseph Evans of The Plains was elected permanent chairman, and Comrade Dan W. Wallace of Hollister was made permanent secretary.

A motion by Comrade Rhoades of Monday, seconded by Comrade Deaver of Dixie, that we proceed to elect a Committee on Credentials.

On motion to amend, by Comrade Wallace of Hollister, seconded by Comrade Green of Langafeldt, that the delegates whose names have been presented as qualified delegates be seated as delegates to this convention and that we proceed to the business of the convention.

The names of Comrades Albert Pierce of Buchtel, Wm. Jansen of Jacksonville, and Albert Smith of Crooksville were presnted to the convention as candidates for members of Congress.

The chairman declared Comrade Albert Smith of Crooksville, Ohio, the nominee of the Socialist party of the Eleventh Congressional District of Ohio to serve in the Congress of the United States.

Comrade Wm. Jansen was the nominee of the convention for the Presidential elector in the Eleventh Congressional District of Ohio.

The Congressional Committee selected by the convention were:

Athens County—W. W. Green, Nelsonville; M. B. Truker, Chauncey.

Ross County—Ed Jones, Chillicothe; J. B. Kenney, Frankfort.

Perry County — Joseph Siemer, Corning; R. R. Deaver, Dixie.

Meigs County—L. H. Scholl, Pomeroy; C. W. Smith, Middleport.

Hocking County—B. F. Davis, Monday; J. B. Rhoades, Monday.

Vinton County—A. E. Tedroe, McArthur; C. A. Bubb, Dundas.

The secretary of the convention was authorized to communicate with State Secretary Schawe in regard to Senatorial and Judicial organizations.

Motion carried, that the proceedings of this convention be given to the Columbus Socialist and other periodicals and a copy be forwarded to the State Secretary.

Adjourned sine die.

JOSEPH EVANS,
Chairman.
DAN W. WALLACE,
Secretary.

SOCIALISM AT NEW CASTLE

By Ira G. Tilton.

New Castle, Pa., is a city of about 40,000 inhabitants, and like other cities that have succeeded in electing a Socialist mayor, is of peculiar interest to students of municipal government.

I recently delivered a series of lectures in New Castle which gave me an opportunity to observe the situation and I have this to say: If anyone is inclined to make unfavorable criticism of the Socialists in that place it is because he desires to injure the Socialist movement or else he speaks without knowledge of the facts.

A harder proposition than New Castle for a Socialist administration would be hard to find. The city hall is the best index to the condition of affairs in any city, and while Mayor Tyler has succeeded in making his own office presentable, the building itself bears all the evidence of years of indifference and neglect. The stench from years of sewage leakage in the basement and poor janitor service throughout makes it an unsanitary place and through the efforts of Tyler since his election it has been officially so declared.

A weaker and less determined person than Tyler would give up in despair, but fortunately for the movement and for the people of New Castle, he is a strong character, has plenty of good red corpuscles in his arteries and is an earnest wide-awake Socialist. The same may be said of other Socialists in New Castle who are deserving of great credit for their tireless endeavor, but it is especially trying on the mayor because the Socialists are in the minority in both the common and select councils.

The mayor fully appreciates the importance of his position and is not discouraged by difficulties or enemies and he has plenty of both. He goes straight about his business and has his work so systematized and simplified that he can readily account for the minutest detail.

Very little can be determined from the brief and unintelligible records of his predecessors. Collections of licenses, fees, etc. may have gone into the officials' pocket. There is no lack of circumstantial evidence of neglect of duty and petty graft. In fact the greater part of their records are stored away in the hay loft of the fire department and Tyler is less concerned about them than he is about the immediate things to be done.

One of his first important moves to benefit the people was to compel the water company to repair their filterers and take steps to give the people pure water. He found by chemical analysis that the water was not only impure, but dangerous and that it was responsible for most of the disease and death in the city.

This has been followed by many other commendable deeds and his kindly demeanor and constant effort to elevate the moral and economic standard of the city and serve the working class is so manifest that he has won the confidence of all observing honest people.

It was evident, however that he had struck the vital spot of the enemy when he refused to approve a street car franchise ordinance which had passed the council. That it called for a forty year contract with every advantage in favor of the company over the city and that the city was to receive nothing for it; also, that it smelled fearfully of the same company that already has a franchise and has unmercifully robbed the city and which, for all he knew, was the real seeker of the new franchise—were his reasons for refusing to approve the ordinance.

The financiers discovered, then, that the people of New Castle had a mayor and they began at once to discredit him in every way possible in order to get the ordinance passed over his head. They have resorted to all the methods of cunning, knavery, and deception common to their class. They even succeeded in getting a few Socialists to make fools of themselves by denouncing the mayor. One of these was a member of the select council too, but the mayor stood pat. The organization promptly expelled the traitor from the party and while he still holds his office he is in disgrace and is not even respected now by those who used him.

There are three tried and true Socialists on the select council which makes it impossible for them to get the necessary two-thirds vote to carry it over the mayor's head in that body.

They are fighting back now, by refusing to confirm the mayor's appointments. It was my pleasure to be in the mayor's office when one of the tools of the Interests entered and asked the mayor for his ultimatum as to whether or not he would allow them to dictate whom he should appoint. The ultimatum was delivered promptly in the following words: "My appointments will remain as made unless I am shown that for incompetency or other good cause they should be changed."

The electric light company's franchise expires this fall and the Socialists, and apparently a large majority of the people, are trying to secure an ordinance that will enable the city to furnish its own light, but the proposition has already been voted down in the common council and will be voted down again. The mayor declares, however, that he will put the city in darkness rather than allow the company to renew its franchise without compensating the city, and everybody that knows him knows he means what he says.

The Socialists of New Castle deserve much credit. Difficulties that looked insurmountable are now overcome and I was told by an intelligent non-Socialist who lives there and understands the situation, that if the old party members of the council continue their present tactics until next election that New Castle will out-do Milwaukee. It will not only drive the two old parties together but will cover them over with ignominy and defeat.

ILLITERACY ON DECREASE

Washington—According to a statement just issued by the census bureau it is averred that despite the heavy immigration to this country during the ten years, 1900 to 1910, the proportion of illiterates for continental United States was less in all of the nine geographic divisions and in all states, except New York and Connecticut. In these states, in which the proportion of illiterates was about the same, the actual number of illiterates was much larger because of the heavy influx of foreign born whites. Owing to the same cause the number of illiterates has increased in many other states, though the proportion, with regard to the entire population is each state, has diminished materially.

ERIE CARPENTERS GET INCREASE

Erie, Pa.—One of the largest contracting firms in this city has just announced its compliance with the scale of wages agreed upon last spring between the employers and the carpenters' union, in that they have received notice in their pay envelopes that the increase to 40 cents per hour would be paid thereafter. It is expected that other contracting firms will immediately follow.

BREWERY STRIKE SETTLED

Washington—It is reported from Milwaukee that the strike of the building trades unions at the breweries of that city had ended in securing a satisfactory agreement. The settlement carries with it an increase in wages approximating 2½ cents per hour to most of the trades involved, while some organizations receive a greater advance. The strike was inaugurated May 21 and involved about twelve organizatoins.

PRESSMEN'S CONVENTION NOTES

Washington—At the recent convention of the International Printing Pressmen's union at Hale Springs, Tenn., an assessment of 25 cents per member per month was levied, to continue until September, to prosecute the fight for the universal eight-hour day. The question of increasing the international per capita tax is to be submitted to a referendum vote. It was decided to make an additional expenditure of $60,000 for improvements and additions to the Pressmen's home. In addition a referendum vote will be taken on a proposition to levy a 5 per cent assessment to carry on the fight that was recently inauguradted in Chicago.

ENGINEMEN AND FIREMEN

London—Officials of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants have just secured a favorable decision under the new conciliation scheme. The result of the award is that better conditions have been obtained for the Great Western railway enginemen and firemen. They are now to have a week's wage guaranteed and will be paid time and a quarter for overtime. The Sunday duty will be separate from the ordinary week's work, and each man will be promoted to second class scale wages five years earlier. It is also provided that an increase allowance will be made for preparation of engines, and other improved conditions. The new scale gives advances from 7 shillings to 7 shillings and 6d in four years instead of five years, and 2,100 firemen will receive and advance of one shilling 6d per week.

BUILDING TRADES VICTORIOUS

Wheeling, W. Va. — One of the greatest victories ever gained by union labor in the Ohio Valley has just been won. The largest carpenter contractors of this city, who have been fighting the combined building crafts, signed an agreement with the representatives of the Ohio Valley District Council of Carpenters and the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Assembly. The contest which has been conducted by the building trades was against a strong combination of "open shop" advocates. The result of securing the agreement will be beneficial to all of the organizations in this valley.

CARPENTER MOVEMENTS.

Indianapolis, Ind.—General Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, reports the following successful trade movements for the past week: At Rutland, Vt., a reduction in hours from 9 to 8 per day has been secured after a brief strike. At DeKalb, Ill., an increase in wages has been secured from $3.40 to $3.80 per day. At Michigan City, Ind., an increase in wages of 5c per hour has been granted, the minimum wage being 45c per hour, and a reduction in hours from 9 to 8 per day. At Corpus Christi, Texas, an increase in wages has been secured from $3.20 to $3.60 per day. At Peckville, Va., an increase in wages has been secured from $2.80 to $3.00 per day. New local unions were organized in the following cities during the month of June: Providence, R. I. (bridge carpenters); Transcona, Canada; Smithtown, N. Y.; Reading, Mass.; Sebastian, Fla.; Grand Forks, N. D.; Iron River, Mich.; Higbee, Mo.; Indianapolis, Ind. (parquet floor layers).

INSIST ON UNION LABEL.

Washington—The North Dakota Advocate, published at Fargo, N. D., prints the following: "Word comes from Grand Fork that a number of the county officers from various parts of the state are demanding the union label on their blank books, and they are being readily supplied. When it is considered that outside of the large cities of the state the average person rarely comes in contact with trade unionism, this is indeed a tribute to trade unionism. The knowledge of the public in an agricultural state, such a North Dakota, is confined principally to reading high colored stories in the daily press about a strike in some part of the country, which is intendede to prejudice the mind of the reader."

ATTEMPTED TO CRUSH UNIONS.

Washington—The manner in which the coal operators and the state of Pennsylvania co-operated during the coal strike in Westmoreland county to crush out labor unions and to defeat the purpose of the strike is shown in an exhaustive report of an investigation into conditions there made by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and recently transmitted to congress in response to a resolution introduced by Congressman Gregg of Pennsylvania. Much of the matter included in the reports will be published and given wide publicity for the puryoes of showing the extreme methods resorted to in the effort made by the coal operators to crush out the miners' unions.

BERGER AND LEGIEN

(From the Masses.)

Speaking of Sabotage, Victor L. Berger says:

"The time has come when the two opposite factions that we have in the Socialist party must take sides; the parting of the ways has come.

"There is no bridge between Socialism and Anarchism. There was no bridge in the time of Karl Marx and Bakunin. There is no such bridge today.

"Those who stand for Socialist political action stand against the bomb, the dagger and every other form of violence. The trouble is that many who have allied themselves with the party claim to be in favor of political action when they are not. There are a number of men who use our political organization as a cloak for what they call 'direct action.' I. W. W.ism' and for 'sabotage.'

"Anarchy may be a beautiful philosophy. I do not blame anybody for proclaiming himself an anarchist. That is his privilege. But he ought not to foist himself upon the Socialist party.

"I knew John Most personally. I knew him well. When nobody dared to preside at one of his meetings in Milwaukee in 1888 after the hanging of the anarchists in Chicago he asked me to preside, and I did so. I said to the audience that though nobody else dared to introduce him, I would do so, because I believed in free speech. But I gave John Most credit for this—that he did not try to fasten himself upon the Socialist party. He started a group of his own. And I maintain that those who believe at John Most did should forfeit their right to the word Socialism and join the anarchists.

"I believe that the articles in the Industrial Worker of Spokane (the official organ of the I. W. W.) are on a par with the things that John Most wrote. I say to you that I for one do not believe in murder as a means of propaganda; I do not believe in theft, as an act of individual expropriation, I do not believe in a continuous riot as 'free speech agitation.' No Socialist believes in any of that. We have always fought it. Those who believe that we should substitute 'Hallelujah, I'm a bum!' for the 'Marseillaise' and for the 'International,' should start a 'bum' organization of their own.

"I have gone through a number of fights in this country. It was, however, not a fight against anarchism in the past. But it is now. I can see anarchism eating away at the vitals of our party. We of Milwaukee appeal to the Socialists all over the country to cut this cancer out of our organization. Syndicalist agitation leads to anarchism, and anarchism leads to disaster for the workers. In 1886 in Chicago it led to the Haymarket riots. In 1886 in Paris it led to Ravachol heading a band of robbers in the name of the proletariat. And where did it lead to this year in London and in Paris? It led to individual brigandage in the name of anarchism. I am not willing to have our party stand godfather for any business of that kind. Whatever sabotage or anarchism maintains or does—whether it is justified or not—in no way concerns us. It is not and never can be allied with the propaganda of the Socialist party!

"Some people have said that sabotage is a matter for the industrial organizations to decide, and that they may have to practice it because their union urges them to do so. I say, then, if any member of this party is willing to do those acts for his industrial organization, let him quit our party. I would rather have him belong to the Knights of Columbus or to the Militia of Christ, to which the McNamaras belonged. I would rather have him show membership in those orders than to show the red card."

When we asked Comrade Legien to give us his views on the labor union question, we did not expect a decision against syndicalism; but we did not know that the German Socialist movement had dealt so thoroughly with this question as he shows in the following statement:

"We German Socialists are closely and with much interest watching the Socialist movement in the United States. We believe that as a result of the rapid concentration and growth of capitalism and the privileges and possibilities that are open to the workers of the country, the United States may possibly be or become the first nation to practice Socialism. We also believe that the labor movement of the new world, to some extent at least, depends on the development of the European movement. Not merely on account of modern means of communication, but chiefly because the Socialist movement is international and its final aims can only be realized on an international basis.

"Judging from reports in the American labor press and from discussions I had with prominent members of the Socialist party, the Socialists in the United States will have to decide in the near future upon some most delicate and important questions—problems which for years have taken up all our time in the German movement.

"You will be called upon, for instance, to find a solution with respect to the relations which should exist between the party and the trades union movement. These relations of course must be in accordance with the actual economic conditions.

"In Germany we have solved this all-important question not only to the benefit of our own movement, but also the benefit of the entire labor movement. I care not to give you my opinion as to what should be done in the United States. All I can do is to give you an idea of what we did in Germany under similar circumstances.

"Some trade unions had been in existence in Germany before we had any Socialist movement at all, while others were established at the same time as the political parties. Many of these unions started through the direct influence of members of the Socialist party, while many others again were established by the neutral non-political element.

"But none of these organizations was under the direct influence of the party. As trade unions they kept aloof from party politics, believing that they should unite the working class of all shades and faiths in opposition to modern capitalism, which has no regard for political parties or religious beliefs.

"This principle was indorsed at the trade union congress in 1872, and also at the joint conference of both wings of the trade unions which was held in 1875 immediately after both Social-Democratic parties had been merged.

"After that the movement made rapid progress, in spite of the fact that they were brutally suppressed in 1878 by means of the infamous anti-Socialist law.

"During the twelve years of the regime of this anti-Socialist law the unions were the only public representatives of the German working class. The Socialist party itself was upheld by an absolutely secret organization only. The growth of the Social-Democratic movement was very satisfactory. It was unexpectedly so after the first year of the recall of the anti-Socialist law.

"At the general election of that year we elected a number of members of Parliament. This rapid development accounts for the false hope of many of our Comrades of that time that the downfall of the present state of society and the establishment of Socialism was near at hand.

"As a result of all this we find that early in the nineties the trade union movement was considered to be of very little importance. Finally, however, it was generally recognized that the working class must be trained in industrial warfare for better conditions.

"From then on, all possible attention was given to the trade union movement, and the party itself has done everything within its power to assist the trades unions in the struggle. We find that special resolutions were adopted at the various conventions of the German Social-Democratic party soliciting the active support of the party in the trade union movement. I should not omit to mention the fact that the party has never claimed that the unions should assume a political character, or that they should become part and parcel of the party itself.

"Our Comrade Bebel has repeatedly emphasized the necessity of a politically neutral trade union movement in order to be able to organize the workers of all shades and faiths.

"This same view has at various times been expressed by the executive coucil of the party. It has been left to the unions to manage their own affairs and to choose whatever tactics they consider best for the work. For a certain time after the recall of the anti-Socialist law we had a number of unions that called themselves Socialist unions, adopting the Socialist program. However, they have never been thoroughly recognized by the Socialist party. Their syndicalist tendencies became clear about ten years ago, and the Mannheim convention of 1906 decided that these unions should have nothing to do with the party, and their followers should even be expelled from the party if they would refuse to join the neutral and centralized trade unions. In fact, they were expelled afterwards. That was the last of the so-called socialist trade unions.

"It would be doing them too much credit to say that there are perhaps 4,000 or 5,000 throughout entire Germany. This does not amount to much in comparison with the two and a half million paying members affiliated with our centralized unions. In our German movement we have no room for sabotage and similar syndicalist tendencies. That is water for the capitalist mill.

THE DEMOCRATS' CANDIDATE

Workers may possibly forgive Woodrow Wilson and forget his manners in the Harvey episode, but they have not forgotten his utterances on organized labor or on immigration, and there is no reason why they should forgive them. They have not forgotten, and will not forget, the disgraceful repression that has accompanied the late strike in New Jersey, nor will they forgive the fact that, as chief executive, he did not see that the town and city officials where there were strikes kept within the law. But during the strikes they were the law, and violence, bloodshed and murder resulted. All this time Wilson was a receptive candidate for the nomination, and, fearing to offend, he permitted widespread disorder on the part of municipal authorities. Perth Amboy, the latest place where a strike occurred, has a long list of working class dead and wounded to its discredit. And the Governor did nothing to put an end to that disorder and violence.

While he was still head of Princeton and was preparing to become a scholar in politics, he denounced organized labor in a most vicious manner. Later, when he became a candidate for Governor, he tried to back and fill on this, but without success. With plenty of opportunities to show he had changed his recorded opinion, he has done nothing. Even in the matter of so-called progressive measures he has done nothing. He has been among the leaders of the mossbacked standpatters, and the working class are to him always to be frowned upon and to be treated coldly as inferiors. Even his desertion of and insults to Harvey, of Harper Bros. (a minor Morgan property), were not due to any dislike for an alliance with great wealth, but to the fact that he saw the alliance was hurting him individually, and he deliberately threw his friend down. Yet the fact remains that Harvey, a Morgan spokesman, made Wilson, and Wilson would have remained unmade if he had not been recognized by the interests as a safe and useful man, one who could always be depended on to side against the working class and to uphold property as against humanity.

It is a good old Democratic doctrine, for the dollar has always been more sacred than life.

His views on immigration, on the "inferior races" from the south of Europe, are well known. That he is an anti-immigrationist is beyond doubt. No one from the south of Europe, no one who comes from a Slavic country, whether Jew or Gentile, can do otherwise than oppose Wilson. Those obnoxious anti-immigration bills which are coming up with such regularity, and which are so cunningly worded that they can be used to stop almost all immigration, under such a man as this would have an excellent chance of being passed. Those who have fought for the Russian refugees should remember what Wilson's views on immigration are.

He is, of course, no worse and no better than Taft. He may possibly be more crafty, and he may be more outspoken in his opposition to organized labor. But the indifference and lack of understanding on the part of Taft about balance the brutal opposition manifested by Wilson.

He has been hailed a man of the "Cleveland type."

That is enough for any worker to remember, for no true worker who has the welfare of the working class at heart can ever forget Chicago and the sending of federal troops to that city.

Greater things are coming in the workday world than happened then. There are the awakening of the working class, the encouaging growth and strengthening of the trade union movement and the increase of the proletarian fighting spirit. Perhaps it is in anticipation of what is to come that we have as candidates of the two dominant parties such men as William H. Taft and Woodrow Wilson. The workers can expect no mercy from them.—New York Call.

Really, I can hardly sympathize with a man who goes to the polls and votes himself into misery for all this poverty and misery only serves him right. But I do sympathize with his wife and babies, against whom he scabs at the ballot box. Now don't squeal under the lash. You voted for it.—Detroit Emancipator.

WOODROW WILSON

Democrats Choose as Their Standard Bearer an Avowed Friend of the Established Interests, an Outspoken Foe of Organized Labor, and a Hidebound Scholastic and Political Conservative.

The Democratic convention at Baltimore has nominated Woodrow Wilson as its Presidential candidate in the present campaign.

They could not have named a more safe, sane and conservative standard bearer. There is not an established interest that has anything to fear from him. Against them he has never uttered a single word of radical criticism, and by every act of his scholastic and political career he has proven himself to be their most dependable ally. And they rewarded him.

"We shall not act justly or wisely if we attack established interests," said Wilson shortly after he was nominated as the Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey. And that the established interests have not forgotten this utterance has been demonstrated by the Democratic convention at Baltimore.

To the working class of this country Wilson does not bring even the remotest ray of hope. He is not and never has been their friend, and that he has no sympathy with nor understanding of their efforts to win for themselves a little more of the product of which they are robbed, but which they alone produce, is eloquently evidenced in the following statement made by him in a lecture delivered before the People's Forum, New Rochelle, N. Y., February 26, 1908:

"The labor unions reward the shiftless and incompetent at the expense of the able and industrious."

The Democratic candidate for the Presidency of the United States, in which there are almost 3,000,000 organized workingmen, has never disavowed this statement so illuminating of what they may expect from him in their behalf. He has been confronted with it again and again, but he has never disproved it. He cannot and his subsequent acts only tend to conform this sentiment.

Before Woodrow Wilson stepped into political life, he was the president of the most conservative, exclusive and snobbish of American universities. Although he has written voluminously on American and other history, in all the pages he has penned one looks in vain for a worker, although the pages yield abundant evidence of the contempt in which this candidate to the Presidency of this country holds them.

Born and bred in a hidebound conservative environment, Wilson has always been the associate of the "upper classes," whose truckling admirer and subservient eulogist he was and is.

It was as a lawyer that Woodrow Wilson made his first bow to the world, and as president of Princeton he became more widely known, but it was as a "reformer" that he achieved the limelight, and it was "reform" that landed him in the New Jersey Governor's chair.

Born in Staunton, Va., December 28, 1856, he was christened Thomas Woodrow Wilson, but in his youth he cut off the Thomas because, as he said, he wanted to use only one name and Thomas W. Wilson would have been "too commonplace." Graduating from Princeton in 1879, he practiced law for two years in Atlanta, Ga., before he became an educator. He taught history and political economy for three years in Bryn Mawr College, and was instructor in the same branches for two years in Wesleyan University before he was engaged as a teacher of jurisprudence and politics in Princeton, his alma mater. He became president of Princeton August 1, 1902, and held that position until October, 1910, when he resigned to become Governor. In 1885 he married Miss Helen Louise Axson, of Atlanta, Ga. Governor Wilson holds A. B., LL. D., Ph. D. and other degrees from Princeton, University of Virginia, Johns Hopkins, Brown, Harvard, Williams, Dartmouth and Yale universities.

It was as a writer that Woodrow Wilson first got before the people as a politician. He wrote voluminously of the evils of bossism, the corruption of politics and the like, and quite naturally glided from the pen to the platform and banquet table, being asked to speak for various meetings and dinners in all the large cities.

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," and through his writings and after-dinner speeches Woodrow Wilson was being talked about as a reformer long before the people of New Jersey considered him seriously.

As far back as 1904 people in the West were "talking about" Wilson as a Presidential possibility, but New Jersey knew nothing of him or about it, and again at Denver, in 1908, he was "spoken of." But it was not until 1910 that the people of the doctor's adopted State "discovered" him. Then the Democratic bosses of the corporation ridden State decided that it was time to elect a governor. They had not had one since the days of Cleveland, and it was decided that "reform" was a good platform. Considering "reformers," they picked on Wilson as a "man of the hour," and ran him. Wilson was elected, but the bosses soon were led to believe that they had "picked a lemon," for no sooner did "Prexy" have his long lean legs firmly entwined about the Governor's chair rungs than he began loudly to "defy." He "defied" the bosses, he "defied" the corporations, he "defied" everybody while the "defying" was good, and he made a "noise" that was heard throughout the country.

One of the incidents of Wilson's campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination was his embroglio with Col. George Harvey, editor of Harper's Weekly, and Col. Henry Waterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, over the support accorded Wilson's boom by Harper's Weekly, said to be owned by J. P. Morgan. For months the publication boosted Wilson in every issue, and then came the story in a Charlotte, N. C. newspaper that Governor Wilson had broken with Colonel Harvey and requested him to discontinue his support of Wilson. Harper's Weekly came out with an explanation that dropped Wilson at his request. Then Colonel Watterson got into the game by telling of the meeting in New York of Colonel Harvey, Governor Wilson and himself at which Wilson quarreled with Colonel Harvey and Colonel Watterson because they had enlisted in his behalf Thomas Fortune Ryan, millionaire traction and tobacco magnate. Colonel Watterson maintained that at first Wilson took kindly to the Ryan proposition. The thing ended with Colonel Watterson's proposal that the controversy be referred to an old fashioned court of honor. An incident of the affair was the publication of a letter that Governor Wilson was said to have written to Adrian H. Joline, attacking William Jennings Bryan and hoping that he could be "knocked into a cocked hat."

ANOTHER CAPITALIST LIE NAILED BY MARTINS FERRY

Falsehood in Daily Papers Disproved by Socialist Mayor of Ohio River Town—Come Again.

In the Ohio State Journal and other capitalistic papers, last week, there appeared a report from Martins Ferry, Ohio, to the effect that the Socialist administration in that town was involved in trouble with the labor unions and had demoralized the municipal light plant. The letter given below shows that the old parties' press will lie like pirates just to knock the Socialists:

Martins Ferry, O., July 15, 1912.

Editor Columbus Socialist:

Your letter of the 11th received, and will say that there is no truth in the statement clipped from a Columbus paper enclosed in your communication to me. The facts of the matter are as follows:

The city electric plant has been a losing venture ever since it was installed, some 13 or 15 years ago, and it has been the endeavor of the Socialist administration to learn the cause of it, and a committee was appointed to investigate as to how it has been managed and the reason of the monthly deficit. This committee learned from the records of the plant that sufficient current is being used by the citizens of the city to leave a good surplus every month were it paid for as it should be. It has always been the custom to charge a flat rate to the patrons of the plant. This custom has been greatly abused and as a result only about two-thirds of the current is being paid for. We are now contemplating putting all patrons of the plant on the meter system in order to collect what the city is entitled to for the current used.

A chief engineer has been in charge of the plant, but his duties has been confined to the inside work at the plant, and to get better results it has been decided to change the title to superintendent and place the entire system in his charge. To effect this change it was necessary to change the title by ordinance. As a result of this change the Engineers' union surmised that the administration was trying to remove the control which they exercised over the chief engineer, and presented to Council a new scale for that position, requiring an increase in salary from $100 pe rmonth to $35 per week. This was not objected to by the committee if the Union would permit the chief engineer to act also as superintendent. In fact, the chief engineer, although not a Socialist, is a very capable man and well worth the increased compensation, and more too, if he can demonstrate his ability to show how the plant can be made to pay, and it is believed by all that he can do this.

A conference was held between a committee of the Engineers' union and an administration committee last Sunday, and the whole matter is in a fair way to be settled. The present chief engineer, Mr. J. W. Tush, will likely continue in that position and also be made superintendent. The administration has no desire to take away any control the Engineers' Union has over him at present. In fact, his connection with a labor organization is an aid to the administration, and it is the opinion of all the Socialists in the City Council that the ordinance should a sthere is no doubt but that a satisand superintendent," instead of simply "superintendent." In this way it is almost certain an agreement can be effected.

There is absolutely no truth in the statement sent out from this city, and it has only been done to hurt the Socialist movement at large. However, it will not have the effect desired, as there is no doubt but that a satisfactory settlement will be effected during the present week.

The administration is composed nearly entirely of members of labor organizations, and they are too wise to let themselves fall into traps set by capitalist politicians and become embroiled in labor troubles. No person knows what organized labor has done for the working class better than the Socialists, and all the tricks the capitalist papers may resort to will not separate the one from the other if the Socialist can prevent it.

Thanking you for the interest shown in our administration, I am

Yours for Industrial Freedom,

NEWTON WYCKOFF,

Mayor, Martins Ferry, O.

RAISING THE DEAD

Several weeks ago we called for contributions to be used in placing on our subscription list, names of residents in the rural sections of Franklin County. The response has been generous to date, but we want to place every voter on our sub. list. To do this will require about $1500. If you Comrades knew of the vital importance of this move, there can be no question but that you would bend every effort, and raise this money at once. We wish to state, we are receiving, most encouraging reports from all sections of the County, which we have been able to reach through this means. One man writes: "Someone has been good enough to send me your valuable paper, I have been a farmer and Republican all my life, but you have converted me, and I herewith enclose $1.00 to be used in sending the paper to others, who are yet in the dark."

Now, Comrades, get busy on this proposition, clip out the coupon and mail or bring it in with your remittance. It makes no difference if it is only five cents, or five dollars, send it in today and start the work right.

BERGER DEMANDS RELEASE AT ONCE OF RUSSIAN VICTIM

(By National Socialist Press.)

Washington—Victor L. Berger, the Socialist Representative from Wisconsin, called on President Taft at the White House and officially laid before him the case of Stefan Dabrowski, an American citizen, who was condemned to serve a life sentence in the desolate wastes of Siberia, imposed by the Russian Government.

The letter which Berger received from Dabrowski, while not written in grammatical English, shows that he is a man of education and refinement. The letter contains as follows:

"My name is Stefan Dabrowski. I am a naturalized citizen of the United States, and I was convicted to a deportation for life to Sibera by the Warsaw Chamber of Justice on Nov. 24, 1910.

"My crime was 'that of being a member of the Polish Socialist Party.' After my arrest I had to await the trial during about twenty months (April 2, 1909 to Nov. 24, 1910), and even after being convicted to deportation, I had to spend about seven months in jail.

"The United States Consul at Warsaw, Mr. Thomas E. Heenan, visited me several times in prison and promised me his aid and protection, yet he evidently considered that he is not obliged to keep his word, as four days before the trial he notified my lawyer, that he shall withdraw from the affair and abandon my case.

"I arrived here on July 1st, 1911. I am forced to live in a little village over 100 miles from the nearest railway station, postoffice and physician. It is almost impossibue to earn one's living here, only during four months can one obtain some manual work, ill-paid and scarce at that; severe Siberian winter lasts eight months.

"I tried to write to some Polish newspapers, my manuscripts are looked through by the authorities. I am not allowed to leave the village, nor even to have a hunting gun, although the forests all around are full of game, and one could earn a living by hunting.

"In such conditions it is natural that one thinks of an escape, lately however, the surveillance upon the deported is closer than ever, and when a fugitive is captured he has to serve from three to four years at hard labor, and then he is deported again.

"Can you do anything for me? I do not ask for financial aid, as I am able to work and support myself.

"At the same time, I think, that the Government has not right to keep a free American citizen in an exile for life, especially as my crime was that of belonging to an organization, which by peaceful legal means tries to change the present terrible conditions of life in the Russian Empire, and to replace the absolute rule by the government of the people, by the people and for the people. It repudiates all terroristic acts.

"Over three years elapsed since I was arrested, yet I am as far from being free as ever.

"The United States Consul at Warsaw, after promising me his aid during over a year and a half has unworthily abandoned my case. I have no doubt that you, the first Socialist Representative in the United States Congress shall do all in your power to help a fellow-citizen and a Socialist.

"The well-known case of an English subject, Miss Kate Maleckа, is a proof that there is at least one government which really protects its citizens against the so-called "justice" of the Russian courts, shall not my American citizenship entitle me to an equal protection?

"Nearer informations concerning my case can be obtained from Socialist deputies to the Austrian Parliament Ignace Daszynski or Sigismond Marek (Cracrow, Austrian Poland) or from Comrade M. A Bielecki, Chicago, Illinois, care of Dziennik, Ludowy. (The Polish Socialist Daily).

"This letter shall be mailed at Cracow, Austria.

"Please register your letter.

"I remain, very truly yours,

"STEFAN DABROWSKI."

MORE PLAIN FACTS FOR SOCIALISTS TO CONSIDER

Political Action vs. Direct Action or "Yellow" Against "Red"—Which Are You?

Since the action of the Socialist Party Hierarchy in disqualifying certains speakers, all of whom were political actionists, we have been flooded with inquiries as to the meaning of the terms, "red" and "yellow", "direct action", etc. We have also been flooded with inquiries as to whether the Socialist Party of Franklin County stands for political action or direct action.

Answering the last question first, we desire to state that the Socialists of Franklin County in mass meeting on the first Sunday in June, decided almost unanimously that this paper should stand for political action, only.

In the past, we have been somewhat delinquent in this respect but from now on this paper will not only advocate political action but we will tear the mask off the face of a capitalistic organization calling themselves I. W. W., claiming to be industrial unionists, who are organized for the express purpose of creating dissension and, if possible, disrupting the Socialist Party.

A "Red" self named is one claiming to believe in the principles of Socialism and at the same time advocates force, violence, general strike or any other weapon that they think will gain their end. That this is true we quote from the pamphlet by Vincent St. John on "I. W. W. tactics and methods."

"Industrial Workers of the World aim to use any and all tactics that will get the results sought with the least expenditure of time and energy. The tatics used are determined solely by the power of the organization to make good in their use. The question of right and wrong does not concern us."

It can readily be seen that this organization will sanction murder, crime or any other form of violence that their leaders may advocate.

It is true the majority of the working class that belongs to this organization, have been dupes for the industrial parasites who have led them astray, but since they see the cloven hoof so plainly, they are beginning to desert in droves.

For the benefit of any comrade who might as yet have some slight doubts as to the truth of our assertion that this organization's only purpose is, if possible, to disrupt the Socialist Party, we quote the following taken from the Editorial page of the official paper of the I. W. W.—"Solidarity," New Castle, Pa.

"Editors of I. W. W. official papers are justly rebuked by the membership. When they say 'Independent papers are covering the field of activity more fully,' it is true. I carry in my pocket two three-months' sub cards which I am unable to sell, owing to the activity of the Socialist Party in this little burg.

When I ask men to subscribe they say: 'What is the use? I read the Appeal, the Chicago Evening World, the Coming Nation, the Buzz Saw, the Leader, Social Democrat, etc.'

The I. W. W. and the Socialist Party have nothing in common. The former is an industrial union. The latter a political party, whose structure is not revolutionary, but is identical with present capitalist society, hence a pseudo organization. It is like putting a new suit of clothes on a corpse and labeling it revolutionary. It has the workers hypnotized, and has sold out or prostituted itself, not for working class emancipation, but only for votes, votes, to put the politicians into office.

Again the Socialist Party is wise. It keeps the idea of government, national, state and city before the workers. On the other hand, they say the I. W. W. is a labor union and hasn't the slightest semblance of any kind of government to put the social revolution into effect; and, furthermore, that the S. P. will continue an orderly government, national, state and city under present political charters during and after transition till all industries are organized under a stable industrial government. Their theory of a 'stable industrial government' is as an unknown quantity or a profound mystery.

Finally let me suggest by the way of a remedy in order to arouse a keen appetite for I. W. W. papers and our pamphlets and leaflets: It is true in order to revolutionize the nation or nations, industrial charters or, in other words, political governments must be abolished.

Advertise the structure of the I. W. W. according to its constitution, showing how industries are to be federated, city and national. Also pointing to the workers the correct form of industrial government.

If you can do that, your success is assured. You will have created a demand for our papers. There will be wholesale secessions from the S. P. to the I. W. W., and our rival will be on the run looking for a hiding place.

A "Yellow" is a Socialist, who is working day and night for the abolition of the profit system and, thereby, the emancipation of the human family. He has read and understands history. History has proven to him that revolution by force is a failure. He does not believe in murder as a means of propaganda. He does not believe in the dagger, the bomb, or the assassins knife. He has a constructive program. He knows full well that the working class, all through the centuries, have been struggling onward and upward. He knows that millions of lives have been sacrificed in the past to secure for the working class, the ballot and now that we have got it, he purposes to educate his fellow-workers to the correct use of that ballot, knowing full well that when he has educated fifty-one per cent of the citizens of this country to the principles of Socialism, that that means they want Socialism and they'll have it. And that neither the powers of Heaven or Hell can prevail against them.

The Socialist Party is the only party on earth that is opposed to war, force or violence of any sort. We are the party of peace. We bring to the earth glad tidings.

We wish to state if you Comrades throughout the State want to keep posted upon the doings of your State Office and how they are attempting to strangle political action, each Local throughout the State should order the Columbus Socialist, as we intend to tell the Comrades throughout the State the existing conditions in the State Office.

Arouse yourselves, men and women of this working class in Ohio. Cut out this cancer, that is eating at the vitals of our organization. Accept no speaker from the State Office, who does not advocate POLITICAL ACTION. Remember that practically every speaker that is being routed by the State Office is a direct actionist. The money of our organization is being used not to push the principles of Socialism, but to further the cause of Anarchy.

VACANT LOT OWNERS MUST CUT WEEDS

Automobile and Motorcycle Fiends are Now Liable to Punishment.

An ordinance, passed in the dim long ago, which requires the cutting of all weeds within the city, was resurrected last Monday by Socialist Councilman Zimpfer, and Council adopted a resolution asking the Board of Health to enforce it strictly. The measure was enacted July 22, 1889. Under this law the owners of some of the vacant lots throughout the city will be compelled to clean up their premises.

Under the act, when property owners are notified to cut weeds on their premises and neglect to do so, the Board of Health may proceed with the cleanup and tax the costs against the property.

Councilmen contended the law has been sustained by the Supreme Court, and they will use all diligence possible to see it properly administered since its recall from the city's legal tomb. Present officers of the Board of Health did not know of the ordinance and have been telling complainants with the department they were helpless.

Socialist Councilman Zimpfer offered a resolution asking the city to purchase six acres of ground at Wood and Parsons Avenues to be used for a recreation center, to be designated as Lincoln Park. The property now belongs to the J. J. Moeller estate.

The vehicle ordinance, requiring all automobiles, motorcycles and other conveyances, whether horse-drawn or motor-driven, to stop before passing a street car which is taking on or discharging passengers, was passed Monday night. It was amended so as to be effective everywhere within the city limits, instead of only in congested districts, as originally drafted by the Socialists. The passage of this ordinance is directly due to the efforts of the Socialists aided by the indignation aroused by reckless autoists who seem to have no regard for human life.

CONVENT RECRUITING STATION CLOSED.

No Money for Judge Black or the Probation Officer.

Much ado is being made over the fact that there is no money to keep up the Juvenile Court.

Late Monday afternoon Prosecutor Turner notified Judge Black, of the Juvenile Court that there was no more money in the Juvenile Court fund, and would not be until after the present collection of taxes is distributed about September 1st.

The home was closed and a card reading: "Closed for want of funds," was placed on the door. The County Commissioners and Prosecutor are blamed by Juvenile Court officials for cutting the budget in 1911 from $13,000 to $8000. The taxing officials reply that this was necessary to keep the levy of the Juvenile Court within the provisions of the Smith one per cent. law.

The County Commissioners say they are not to blame, inasmuch as Juvenile Court officials knew of the cut in the levy and should have economized. Juvenile Court officials reply that the strictest economy has been used.

There are many families drawing through this court, but a large part money from husbands and fathers of its work has been to get recruits for Catholic convent, sweat shops and give somebody a chance to hold up parents for $10 "fees" to get their daughters out of these earthly hells.

THE WATER WAGON PARTY.

The Prohibition National Convention concluded its labors at Atlantic City with the nomination of the party standard bearers of four years ago—Eugene W. Chafin, of Arizona, for President, and Aaron S. Watkins, of Ohio for Vice President. In each case the nomination was made by acclamation after a single ballot had indicated the preference of the delegates. The convention was in session nearly a week and was given large space in the daily papers of this and other cities. The Prohibs cast about one-third the vote polled by the Socialists but the press give but scant attention to the doings of our National convention held at Indianapolis.

"Rome," the official organ of the Pope at Rome, has decided not to fight against Socialism, but to get busy and give the people the same thing the Socialists are trying to get. Very well, we will appreciate the full value of our toil, no matter who gets it for us.—Pittsburg Justice.

THE THRILLING STORY OF THE ANT THAT WRIGGLED IN AND OUT

By EDGAR WOOD

Once upon a time, many years ago there lived a great king. He was a proud man and had a very beautiful daughter. Now he was very anxious that his daughter should marry a man who was without fear and at the same time intelligent. After having thought of this thing for a long time he decided that he would select a husband for his daughter by allowing all the men of the kingdom to compete for her hand. So in order that all should have an equal opportunity of becoming his successor, for be it known he had no sons, he caused an edict to be read in all the towns of his kingdom, stating that who so ever would relate unto the king, a story that would be pleasing to him, should have his daughter in marriage. Also, that if any man should undertake to please the king and failed he would be beheaded.

When this edict was read, there was a great uproar from certain classes in all parts of the kingdom. They argued, if all the men of the kingdom were given an equal opportunity, might it not be that some one of the lower classes of their existing society might become their ruler? Could it be that their great king had thought of such a dire calamity? After much discussion among themselves, they decided to go in a body to their king and lay their cause for complaint before him. Although the king saw the great danger threatened, he being a man of his word and having great confidence in the superior ability of the princes of the land, told them that since his word had gone out the proclamation would have to stand and that the princes would have to take their chances along with the rest of the people.

He told them of his confidence in the princes of the land to compete with any in his kingdom and further promised them he would prove his confidence in them by allowing anyone who appeared on the day set aside for the contest, who was not a member of the nobility, to relate their story first. It would not only prove his confidence in the princes of the nation, but it would also eliminate a few undesirable people.

Finally on the day set by his majesty for the contest to take place, many of the princes from all parts of the kingdom came to tell their stories. The prise offered by this great king you will remember was a most beautiful daughter and a kingdom unsurpassed in glory by any the woird had ever known. Also there came three men who were not of the nobility. These three men were of a dissatisfied class who believed that the system under which they were living was not a just system. In short, they represented that very class of people of whom the princes of the land were in so much fear. The king noted the fact, with much disappointment, that there were only three of them. He called one of their number before him and asked for his story, and the man spoke as follows:

"Most gracious majesty, knowing of the edict which you have caused to be read in all the parts of your kingdom, I make bold to venture a story which I believe will be of interest to you. Oh king, many years ago, there lived in one of the cities of this kingdom a man who was an excellent shoemaker, and he established his business of that city and made shoes for many of the people of that part of the kingdom. He made excellent shoes and his business was so good that another shoemaker, taking note of his great prosperity, moved into the city and established himself near to this man's place. Now as time went on, the people having read the proclamations of the newcomer and have inquired at his place of business, learned they could get a pair of shoes that was equally as good for less money, and, as a consequence, they purchased their shoes of the new shoemaker. When the first shoemaker learned of the cut in prices the newcomer had made, he decided, in order to hold his trade, to do likewise. And so ensued competition. After a time the price of shoes had gone down until there was scarcely any money to be made at the trade. And, Oh king, these shoemakers, seeing where competition was leading them to, done the only thing that was left for them to do and formed a partnership. After this they cut off the expense of advertising and the expense of keeping two shops, for not having any use for two places they closed one of them up, and raised the price of shoes. And, Oh king, since there was no more competition their prosperity was greater than ever before. However this did not last long, as other shoemakers noting the wonderful business decided to locate in that city." Now the king having read a little on competition and its effect on the industries, perceived the meaning of this story and was very much displeased, and ordered the first man out on the block and had his head choped off.

After this the king called upon the second of these men to stand before him and relate his story, and he, fearing not the fate of the first man, told the king the following:

"Most gracious majesty, there was living in this great kingdom, at one time a certain man who was very popular. We was a great rider and a mighty hunter. He traveled to the corners of the earth in search of the beast of the field. He was a great talker and everywhere he went great crowds of the people gathered to hear the words of wisdom that he, in his great love of the poorer class of people, showered upon them. This great man was opposed to great combinations of people coming together and working as one to the detriment of the small dealers who attended to the wants of the populace at that time, and during a time when he was adjusting this thing he showed his great wisdom, not by crushing these combinations, but by bringing them together so they could be more easily handled. As I stated, Oh king, this man a great talker. It is said that he has been known to talk continuously for thirty-two hours, twenty-seven minutes and thirty-six seconds. It was claimed by some people that if Sampson had possessed his jawbone in his battle with the Phillistians he would have slew ten times as many. However this is only an estimate, for if it could be put to an actual test it might greatly exceed that number.

"Now this, great man, Oh king after he had investigated every thing on earth and held all the highest offices in the gift of the people and having through his individual effort set every thing right, paid a visit to Heaven. When he arrived at the entrance he noted with great satisfaction, the magnificient splendor of the outside. Oh king, he had never dreamed that any place could be put into such perfect order without his assistance. Not finding anything on the outside to correct, he approached the great doors. The doors of Heaven are provided with a large golden knocker and knocking being in this man's line, he, with resounding whacks made it known that someone wished admittance.

"When St. Peter heard the loud knocks from the doors, he not being accustomed to having people knock so hard, was very much afraid, and after listening for some time, he being afraid that the great noise might disturb the tranquility of some of the more timid angels, ventured to the doors and inquired, through the peek hole, who might the stranger be who clamored so loudly for admittance to the kingdom of Heaven?

"The stranger replied, be not afraid, it is I, the great and only equestrian. The world's mightiest nimrod and the guardian and chief advisor of the great American people for lo! these many years.

"St. Peter was very much relieved when he heard these words for he had not doubted that he would have met all the imps of Hades should he have opened the doors, if he was to judge by the noise made by the knocking thereon. Being thus reassured he opened wide the gates of Heaven, and the famous one, on being invited to enter in, stepped across the threshold, say that he was D-E-L-I-G-H-T-E-D. This man, Oh king, was of a very restless disposition and in order for him to be contented he must be doing something at all times. He did not wait for St. Peter to make reply but questioned him immediately. What is there that I can do in this place, I have always been doing something and it is necessary for me to keep on going in order to maintain my peace of mind. You must find something for me to do. Do you have any daily papers in Heaven? Are there any wild horses to ride? Do they have an Ananias Club that I may send some of the Angels hither? Are there any politicians in Heaven? I simply must be doing something. What is the chief business of Heaven? St. Peter was dazed, such arrogance he had never witnessed before. The great one, seeing the puzzled look on St. Peter's face, paused for an instant. St. Peter seeing his chance to speak, ventured to make reply, and told this world's moderator that the only business transacted in Heaven was the Hallalulah Chorus. The great one hesitated not, but quickly replied, good, I will direct the chorus for you. Show me to it. How many people sing in it?"

REPORT BAD CONDITIONS IN THE FACTORIES

Woman Inspector Says Wages Pitifully Low.

TELLS WHY GIRLS FALL

State to Act For Better Conditions, Is the Latest Word.

Mrs. Bertha Voss, after spending three months inspecting social conditions in Columbus factories under the direction of State Labor Commissioner Fred Lange, Saturday reported that the conditions under which most factory girls were compelled to work are terrible.

"It is no wonder to me that girls stray from the straight and narrow path," said Mrs. Voss. "The wages paid girls in Columbus factories are pitifully low," averaging $5 per week."

Why Girls Fall.

Here are the three reasons for the fall of young girls given by Mrs. Voss:

Starvation wages.

Yearning for better clothes and finery.

Unhappy home life.

Hears Horrible Tale.

"I came across one case in a shoe factory where a girl of 18 told a horrible tale," said Mrs. Voss. "She said that, besides working nine hours a day her drunken father made her entertain his drunken friends at night."

Lange said he intended to report this case to Juvenile Judge Black.

Mrs. Voss pointed to a North Front Street box factory as one of the worst places she visted.

No Dressing Rooms.

"There are no dressing rooms there," said Mrs. Voss. "The girls are compelled to change their clothes before open windows. Colored men working in a candy factory across the street look down upon them and cause embarrassment.

"The girls have no place to eat, but are compelled to spread out their lunches on tablels covered with paste pots and flies. I asked one of the managers to better conditions and he said he had had a lunchroom and the girls wouldn't use it."

Helps 300 Girls.

Through Mrs. Voss' efforts 300 girls will be benefited at the plant of the Federal Glass Company. The managers have promised to provide lunch and restrooms. The intense heat causes many girls to faint there.

Kearns to Act.

"Our department merely suggests better conditions," said Lange. "If our suggestions are not complied with we turn the matter over to State Factory Inspector Kearns, who has power to make employers better conditions."

State Factory Inspector Kearns, upon receiving Lange's report, Saturday, detailed Inspector Stygler to reinspect the ground covered by Mrs. Voss and issue orders to the employers immediately.—Columbus Citizen.

PARABLE OF THE CONFIDENCE MAN

And the people were sick even unto death with confidence men like Hearst, in politics.

The people had been betrayed by the National Republican administration beyond the shadow of a doubt.

In local government they had also been sold out to the interests for profit, beyond the shadow of a doubt.

The Columbus Citizen told the public they needed a responsible government—the initiative, referendum and recall, in all their strength.

Forsooth! the Citizen was the people's champion, and advocated these principles for the people, beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Bryan came to town and endorsed all these principles, likewise and the Citizen on March 18, in this present year of our Lord, proclaimed broadcast its hearty belief in Bryan's honesty, beyond the shadow of a doubt, also

The Columbus Citizen did this in the storied days of the Constitutional Convention.

Time flies and changes belief, and straightway the Columbus Citizen gets itself renovated.

Last week the Columbus Citizen published the principles endorsed by the Democratic convention—the Democratic platform.

Bryan and O'Gorman wrote the platform.

The Columbus Citizen endorsed those principles.

What are those principles? What has become of the Initiative?—some doubter is waiting to know.

It is fully covered in the platform by the mysterious shadow of a doubt.

Where does the convention endorse the Referendum?

Oh! doubting reader, find it if you can. And straightway the shadow of a doubt enveloped in a cloud of suspicion.

Do the Democrats prepare for the quick enactment of the Recall-

Echo answers where! where! where! and then stillness and mystery. How lonesome dear good people—the silence is so strange.

And the people were sick even unto death with confidence men.

But the people still read the Columbus Citizen and frankly acknowledge it their champion.

But the people did not know the Columbus Citizen was playing another Hearst confidence game.

A RESULT OF IGNORANCE

By John M. Work.

Anyone who sees an old tumbledown shanty, or a filthy congested tenement, guiltless of every convenience, can tell at once that it is occupied by the working people.

No need to exhibit the inmates.

No need of making an affidavit to it.

Nobody ever heard of a hovel or a tenement being occupied by anyone but workingmen and their families. It would be nonsense to go out of one's way to prove it.

Why is it that all the inferior dwelling places are occupied by workingmen?

Because the workingmen, by their votes, permit the capitalists to own the exploiting industries. This enables the capitalists to compel the workers to yield up to them the lion's share of their earnings in return for the opportunity to earn a bare living.

The only way the working men can release themselves from this situation is by voting the Socialist ticket and making these industries collective property, so that the workers will receive teh full value of their labor.

A SERMON FOR PREACHERS

By John M. Work.

Some of our clerical brethren say that the object of the earth is to prepare men for heaven.

As a means of preparing men for heaven, the earth is not now a howling success.

In fact, it is at present much better adapted to prepare men for hell.

The thing of prime importance at the present time is to create a decent environment on earth.

Blessed are they who hustle for Socialism, for they shall capture the earth.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

OHIO'S NEW CONSTITUTION

By Harry D. Thomas.

111—Suits Against the State—Damages for Death—Investigations—Governor's Veto.

Suits against the State, No. 4 on the Official Ballot.

This amends Section 16 of the Bill of Rights by adding thereto the following:

"Suits may be brought against the States in such courts and in such manner as may be provided by law."

Under our present system of procedure persons having disputed claims against the State, must either have their claims allowed by the General Assembly, or must secure permission by special law to bring suits in court.

This applies equally to workmen who may be injured or killed while in the State's employ as to any other kind of a claim, and it has been permitted to remain as a part of our laws because of the old fossilized idea that the people could not sue themselves.

There can certainly be no valid reason why the court should not have the same right to adjudicate claims against the State in the same manner as they now do between private individuals. If adopted as it should be, this amendment will permit claims against the State being settled in such courts as may be provided by law.

No. 5 on the Official Ballot. Damage for Wrongful Death.

This proposal adds to the Bill of Rights section 16 A, as follows:

"The amount of damages recoverable by civil action for death caused by the wrongful act, neglect, or default of another shall not be limited by law."

Under the present constitution in a civil action for wrongful death due to another one's fault or neglect, the legislature has the right and has always exercised it at the behest of special privilege to limit the amount that may be claimed in damages by the relatives of the deceased. Previous to the passage of the Norris act, the maximum amount that could be secured for industrial accident was $5,000. For accidents other than industrial $10,000. The Norris law, makes the maximum $10,000, for those without dependents, and $12,500 where the dependents are a widow and one or more children. This State is one of the very few that have any such legal limitations, there is no maximum limit in Ohio in case of injury now, there certainly should not be any in case the accident causes death, and every one not tied to corporate interests should be glad of an opportunity to vote this into the constitution.

Number 7 of the Official Ballot. Investigations by each House of the General Assembly.

This amendment confers on each branch of the General Assembly a power not possessed by either under the present constitution of securing information along all lines of proposed legislative action. In particular it grants authority to investigate alleged misconduct on the port of its members through the compulsory attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers, or other evidence bearing on the case.

It will be remembered that in 1910 the House of Representatives appointed a committee to make a complete investigation of the method of conducting City Government in Cincinnato and particularly some of the transactions of George B. Cox and his political cohorts in applying the interest from city money on deposits in various Cincinnati banks to their own credit.

Cox's courts and Judges interfered in the investigation by declaring that the legislature has no authority to go into the matter in the way they desired. Hence the need of the adoption of this section so that in future legislative investigating committees mill not be interfered with by the political bosses.

Number 8 on the Official Ballot. Limiting the Veto Power of the Governor.

The present constitution provides that bills may be passed over the Governor's veto by a 2-3 vote of both Houses. This amendment reduced the 2-3 to a 3-5 vote making it much easier for the legislature to exercise its legislative authority to make laws irrespective of the veto of the Governor on the subject.

Your Socialist delegate on this matter submitted a minority report from the Legislative Committee of which he was a member asking that the veto power of the governor be abolished altogether. I also made an effort on the second reading to further amend it so that the veto power could be abolished. The labor and all the progresive delegates supported it, but the best we could get for it was 39 votes.

Ohio, for 100 years got along without the Governor having any veto power and the present clause in the constitution was written into it 8 years ago by special amendments submitted to the people by the General Assembly. There has been no improvement in law-making as a result of it, and there is no reason why we should have the legislative authority extend to the Governor any more than you should give him Judicial power and the veto should be abolished altogether. Insofar as this amendment as it stands offers larger opportunity for the legislative body in passing bills over the Governor's veto, this amendment should receive the hearty support in its present form of every progressive voter in the State.

INCENTIVE UNDER CAPITALISM

(By C. E. Ruthenberg, Socialist Candidate for Governor.)

In view of the oft repeated and oft refuted charge that Socialism would kill incentive, it is interesting to consider the incentive capitalism offers the workers.

The Railway Age-Gazette contains some intensely interesting information on this subject. Writing in this magazine a Division Engineer of the Michigan Central R. R. has this to say in regard to track laborers:

"European laborers are often quitters in emergencies. Not so the hobo. Emergencies are his delight. A car off the track, a wash out or a track tron up furnish a zest to his work and an incentive to extraordinary effort."

This statement is an admission that in the ordinary work of the track laborer there is no incentive. It plainly admits that the tasks of these workers is merely drudgery. This is not true alone of railroad work. Capitalist industry has become for millions of workers merely drudgery. The increase in mechanical devices, which make the worker a mere adjunct to the machine; the division of labor, which gives to each worker only a small part of the work of producing a completed article have done their part in making the work of the tailer a mere monotonous grind. The great trusts and corporations, too, have removed the personal relations between employee and employer. Corporate control of industry is the ideal form under capitalism. The stockholders or directors hire a manager or superintendent. His instructions are to produce results. He is under threat of discharge if he does not. He produces results by driving the workers. He makes them mere automatons for the production of more and more profits for his and their masters. Through these processes, all joy, all incentive, all interest for the workers has been eliminated from the work of production. For millions of workers there is no pleasure in their work. The joy of achieving, of accomplishing is gone. They are merely a part of the machine process and receive for going through a certain amount of work enough to enable them to keep the strength necessary to return on the morrow and continue the work of grinding out profits, and to continue the race of profit producers.

This killing of all incentive for the workers is one of the sinister developments of capitalism. As the workers realize their position, and they are rapidly doing so, they lose all interest in the work of production. They work only because they must to live.

One hears the exploiters of labor complain because of the disinterest and laziness of their employes. What incentive have they to be otherwise? As a class they have nothing to gain by giving the capitalist more than they must. As a class greater effort, harder work, does not mean more of the things necessary for a living or opportunities for education and culture, for them; they mean merely more profits for their masters.

The tramp is merely one manifestation of the phenomena of capitalism. He is the worker in revolt against the monotony and drudgery of capitalist production.

The fact that even the tramp will work when an emergency offers an incentive, for achievement shows the way to organise industry so as to induce all those engaged in the work of production to give society the best they are able to give. We can never do this under capitalism. We can only accomplish this end assuring to every worker the product of his toil, —the benefit of service he renders society.

When we produce for service and not for profit we will not make foul unsanitary barracks of our industrial establishments, as we so often do nowadays.

We will have bright, cheerful, sanitary, even beautiful industrial establishments in which work will become a joy and a pleasure. When we cease producing for profits for the few we will shorten the hours of labor so that the work does not exhaust health and strength.

All mankind glories in expression of its powers in achievement and in the society of the future, when Socialism succeeds capitalism, mankind will have the opportunity for expression and achievement.

Only Socialism can restore the incentive which under capitalism does not exist.

THE ART IMPULSE IN COLUMBUS

Periodically the ART IMPULSE breaks out in Columbus, at which times it is boldly asserted that there is such a thing as an Art Impulse somewhere in our midst, but it is noticeable that it only comes with a society event of some sort—like the spots that show themselves with certain fevers and other bodily disorders. However, the asseveration is worth noticing if only from the point of curiosity because the words are not meaningless, and, if it is true, they are important.

The proposition moreover compels us to observe at once that the allegation is never made except when it is necessary to advertise an exhibition of some sort, a play or some other thing in which the so-called social features are predominant and the inquiring mind naturally asks: Is it not rather the social impulse using the name of Art for an excuse? That is to say, certain women whose impulse is to be prominent socially, get up something for the alleged benefit of Art, into which they obtrude themselves as the leading characters and this is held up for veneration as the ART IMPULSE. Then and there only the Art Impulse becomes active. At all other times it is dormant. In the meantime, the artist may starve without a vibration of the Art Impulse. The artist may toil, may deny himself many comforts, may even go hungry in order that he may educate himself, may travel, may buy the materials needed for his work and there are no fashionable people obsessed of the ART IMPULSE to lend a hand with their patronage. The only impulses perceptable are his own heart throbs.

Now let one of these devotees of society discover an outsider of note whom she can induce to come to town and take part in the society attractions arranged for him under her patronage and the purse strings are unloosed. Money flows. His pictures, no matter how rank, sell and the whole affair furnishes another proof of the deep, keen and delicate feeling for art which has slumbered unconsciously in our midst.

There is an unknown woman in Columbus whose very fibre is saturated with all the beautiful things which canvass and color are capable of. Some of her work is bad—bad as bad can be. That is not her fault. Kings and poets sometimes have idiots for children. But wherein she excells, there is no painter, who has ventured on the high seas of Columbus, who has got nearer to Nature. She is like Tolstoi and demonstrates her neighbors and friends. If you want to see a bend in Big Walnut as good as a Claude Lorrain, or a Columbus street that will remind you of Turner, go to this little woman's, and have her dig out some of her unknown canvasses. Your eyes will be opened indeed! But alas, the ART IMPULSE has not reached her. It will never till it comes to be a fad. Till the poseurs are dead or discredited—till the gentle circle of Art no longer swarms with the intoxicated mob of mediocrity whose leaders prate and counsel and call aloud where the Gods once spoke in whispers.

But it will be agreed; the patron is necessary to the artist and his art. Behold the Medici and Michelangelo! Yes, behold! Get down on your knees for it is holy ground! The Medici built temples and cathedrals and put the artists therein to beautify. Hence Madonnas and the Saints. The artists were set to work and told to decorate according to the spirit of the place. There was no haggling about the price and the patron was not placed above the artist. Today those old patrons are known only because of the artist. The artist was not told to hurry up because at four o'clock the generously disposed and generously exposed patrons would pour tea. His command was to make the most beautiful and appropriate thing possible without regard to expense for it was all to the glory of God and not for the society column of the Hungtown News.

What then shall we do to be saved? He who can diagnose a disease should be able to provide a remedy.

First: Drive the money changers out of the Temple and restore it to its purpose. Then, kill off the quacks. Eliminate society, as such, and all that goes with it from the realm of Art. You may then have the genuine thing or none at all—which is better than a sham. Stop affecting what you don't feel simply because you imagine it gives you some social prestige. Get down to Nature and Truth. Patronize the Artist, and make him see it is worth while and stop exploiting the ART IMPULSE which is only cant. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your GOOD WORKS and the rest will follow.

THINKING OF THEMSELVES.

It is not because Lorimer is especially black or, indeed, is much worse than those who kicked him out that the members of the Senate voted him unfit for further membership in that body. The method whereby he got into office became a matter of common knowledge. It was enough to discredit him, so after months of haggling and hundreds of pages of testimony being taken he at least temporarily discontinues his political career.

Not only were the means by which he got into office exceedingly dirty, but the means whereby the thing was divulged were dirty. The Chicago newspaper that told the story first is made up day after day of none too clean pages, and the fact that it turned on Lorimer was merely accidental. It has sheltered plenty of men quite as bad.

Lorimer in the Senate was a spokesman for and defender of the Packing Trust. It is an honorable profession, for a Senator. Other concerns, such as the Smelter Trust, the Money Trust, the Tobacco Trust, the Paper Trust, the railroads and others are all amply and ably represented. No man has much utility in the Senate unless he is a trust representative. So it was not for this reason Lorimer was dumped. His crime consisted of the methods whereby he was sent there being found out.

His absence will not purify the Senate in the least. But it will save the Senators a lot of bother, and many of them will breathe more freely now that he has been sent back to Chicago, where, doubtlessly, there are some who will take good care of him.

WATCHING FOR A "SPLIT."

On every hand the signs of the steady progress Socialism is making in this country politically are evident, and it is with great pleasure that we announce that this progress has reached a stage which German Socialism occupied some fifteen years ago and has only recently passed out of.

Experienced Socialists who have watched the progress of the movement in various countries will recall that a preliminary to every election in Germany from 1893 to 1908 was an announcement in the capitalist press that a split in the Socialist movement was inevitable, and that at last German Social Democracy was on the point of going to pieces, as had been duly prophesied.

The predicted split, however, never materialized; on the contrary, the vote of the German Social Democracy grew ever largr, until the prophets, about 1908, gave up in disgust.

We have just reached that point here this year. Since the National Convention at Indianapolis an article to this effect has been going the rounds of the capitalist press and has been reprinted in their most influential organs; among others we note its appearance in the Wall Street organ, the Journal of Commerce.

The general idea on which this hope is based is the controversy arising over the famous "section six," on which so many letters have appeared in our papers. The result of this, we are informed, "is almost certain to be the cleavage of the organization into several factions," as "the 'moderate' section of the party can scarcely hope to outnumber the 'reds' and 'irreconcilables.'" And this, we are further informed, will "have the effect of diminishing the party's Presidential vote."

The fact that a prospective "split" in the Socialist party is found worthy of such serious and extensive notice is certainly encouraging. Almost ten years ago to a day there was a "split" in the Socialist Party that kept it in a sort of internal tumult for years, but it attracted absolutely no attenion at the time, beyond that of a few local newspaper funny men in search of comic copy. Socialism at that time was merely a joke to the capitalist press, and was invariably treated as such when they condescended to notice it at all.

It's different now, however, and the prospective "split" becomes a matter of intense importance, of eager and anxious hope, a consummation devoutly to be wished for by our enemies.

And let it be said, too, that they could devise no better plan for preserving the unity of the Socialist movement than to thus give public expression to their desires and hopes for its disintegration. While we may admit that there is sufficient cussedness and obstinacy in our factionalism to apparently excite such fond hopes in the capitalist breast, it is, and always has been, a still greater incentive to us to collectively note what the exploiting class expects and deliberately disappoint their expectations. For we have not been fighting them all these years not to understand that what the ruling class most desire us to do is, on general principles, the very thing we should not and will not do.

However, their expectation in this respect shows us that we have attained the same position as a political factor, as our German comrades did many years ago, when year after year the possibility of a split within their ranks was eagerly watched for and speculated upon by the capitalist class and their political representatives in that country and its coming heralded at every approaching election as an event certain to happen.

The best we can do in the present juncture is to "split" in the same way that our German comrades did. And if this does not please our gloating critics, and they insist on our splitting, we shall do what in us lies to split them; a work which in fact we have already begun. As for ourselves we don't believe in "dividing up" in that sense, as we have many times informed them, though at the same time we are grateful for this expression of their hopes, which we persist in regarding wholly as an unconscious and perhaps unwilling acknowledgment of our growing importance as a political factor in the nation.

THE HIGHT COST OF POPULARITY.

Some idea of political expenditures is given by George B. Cortelyou who admits the Republican National Committee spent nearly $1,900,000 to make Theodore Roosevelt's greatness, patriotism and loyalty known to the voters of this country. In addition to this huge sum, the various State and city organizations spent comparatively equal sums to elect their Governors, Representatives and members of the State legislative bodies. It was a veritable riot of money, larger, probably, than the amount spent in 1908, but still not as large as what will be spent this year.

Roosevelt always had the knack of getting into the limelight and pushing his modest merits to the fore. Harry Thurston Peck, in "Twenty Years of the Republic," relates, on the authority of Lincoln Steffens, that Roosevelt, at the funeral services of William McKinley, turned eagerly to Mark Hanna and whispered, "I hope, old man, you'll stand by me the way you stood by him," and he nodded toward the coffin in which the body of the President lay. Even Hanna, who was none too squeamish, was shocked. But he whispered back, "All right, but for God's sake don't call ME 'old man.'"

But these timely little personal appeals for support were not the only thing in which Roosevelt is expert. He sure does know how to fry the fat. Hahna was immense, as the custodian of the dough bag, but he was a political piker compared to Theodore. There were millions of dollars spent in that 1904 campaign, all for the purpose of letting the country know what an unblemished patriot he is, how economical and how zealous for the welfare of the country.

This year he has managed to impress his usefulness on such eminent servants of the people as the Steel Trust, the Harvester Trust and certain institutions within the Money Trust.

Wilson, on the other hand, has come into the good graces of the Tobacco Trust, as represented by Thomas F. Ryan, while Taft is scrambling along as well as he can with the aid of a few of the other trusts. Some of the trusts impartially contribute to all three, and all of the trusts will be satisfied no matter which one of them is elected. That is a way trusts have. They are zealous players of the political game, provided they are able to fix the game before hand.

The cost of living has increased sixty per cent. within the last fifteen years and in the same period of time the rate of wages has increased only twenty per cent. Thousands of working men are going out on strike because of low wages, yet even though they win the cost of living goes up three times as fast as wages advance, even according to our own government statistics, which are not liable to be in favor of the working class.

In support of their argument that their lives are filled with equally as much danger as the workers employed in the mines, mills and factories, the capitalists point to the large number of their kind who are daily being killed in automobile joy rides and murdered for breaking up other men's homes. A most convincing argument why THEY should be allowed to continue in their exploitation of the working class.

The Booster's Column

By F. E. JOHNSTON

While it is true that the weather is warm and a great many people are out of town and there is a sort of lull in things political at this time, yet we are compelled to meet our expenses each week—there is no lull as far as we are concerned—and this makes it necessary for you Boosters to close up your ranks, and fight all the harder right now. If every Booster will get on the job and turn in the subs as you can do, we will have no trouble keeping the ship afloat until the dull season is over. Our campaign never closes, we must be on the job day and night, and right now is the time you Comrades should see to it that the paper is properly supported. Subs, subs, subs, let that be the war cry, day and night, don't let a single prospective subscriber elude you. At least 50 per cent of the citizens of this Congressional District can be put on the sub list, with the proper kind of a systematic canvass. Let every Comrade go out Sunday morning and canvass his neighbor for subs and you will be surprised at the results you will attain.

Every week we receive subscriptions voluntarily from people who say they would have subscribed before, but no one came after their subscription. Go after them, let's make things hum from now on. It can be done, it must be done. It will be done.

THE WORKING CLASS CAN SUPPORT ITS OWN PRESS, of that there is no question.

ON TO VICTORY.

Look over the advertising and purchase from our advertisers at all times. This is important and will help along wonderfully at this end. If you need Red Tickets we have plenty on hand.

SHINN AT HILLSBORO

Hillsboro, O., July 10, 1912.

Russel H. Michlin, the Republican speaker, made a vigorous attack on Socialism here to-night, affirming the following:

"Resolved, That Socialism is impractical, illogical and unscientific."

A more vivid picture of capitalism could not be drawn than was made by Comrade Shinn, explaining the cause of surplus and high cost of living.

Shinn's argument was so convincing that a standing vote gave him a unanimous decision, not a vote being cast for the Republican speaker.

THE WORKERS' RSTENGTH

According to the last reports, the strength of Socialism throughout the world is about as follows: though every recurring election sees it augmented:

Germany leads with 4,253,000 votes, 110 members of the reichstag, 2,000 minor offices and 156 journals. A property qualification keeps the Socialists from their proportional representation; with the votes cast they ought to completely dominate Germany.

France is second with 1,120,000 votes, 76 representatives in Congress, 2,760 minor offices and 70 journals.

Austria has 1,041,986 votes, 87 representatives in the legislative body, 536 minor officers and 56 journals.

The 1910 election placed the United States fourth in the Socialist strength in the world. It has 604,756 votes, one member of Congress and 32 representatives in five legislatures. Prof. Hoxie of the Chicago University has prepared a roster of the Socialists now holding elective offices in the United States. The list comprises more than 1,000 public offices, scattered over thirty-six States. There are 300 cities represented, with fifty mayors and 300 aldermen. Socialism has over 100 papers, including five dailies and the Appeal to Reason, with the largest circulation of any political paper in the world.

However, because the population of the United States exceeds that of other lands, the ratio of the Socialist strength here is not so great as in various other nations.

Belgium has 489,094 votes, 37 members of the legislative body, 741 minor officers and 3 journals.

Australia has 447,651 votes, 50 minor officers and 3 jounals.

Great Britain polls 421,270 votes, has 41 members of parliament, 645 minor offices and 12 journals.

Finland polls 330,000 votes, has 80 members of the legislative bodies, 81 minor offices and 18 journals.

Italy has 290,000 votes, 42 members of the legislative body, 1,000 minor officers and 98 journals.

New Zealand has 211,944 votes, 80 members of the legislative bodies and 3 journals.

Russia polls 300,000 votes, has 60 members of the douma and 550 minor officers. Press censorship is so strong no journals can be listed.

Denmark, with 77,000 votes, 24 members of parliament and 25 journals; Switzerland with 70,000 voters, 4 members of parliament, 190 minor officers and 18 journals; Holland with 45,742 votes, 7 members of parliament, 17 minor officers, and 16 papers; Hungary with 9,000 votes, 217 minor officers and 12 papers; Argentina with 30,000 votes, 1 member of parliament, 25 minor officers, 5 papers; Bulgaria, with 30,00 votes and 8 members of parliament and 3 papers, are among the older organized countries. Socialism is now recognized in almost all South American countries in Japan and China, on various islands, in Mexico, Canada and practically all over the world. Its total voting strength is between ten and twelve millions, making it the strongest political party the earth has ever seen. Besides, there are practically as many non-voting women Socialists as there are voters and thousands of voters are disfranchised because of having to move about seeking work.

SABOTAGE

"Sabotage" is a word of French origin. In English, as favored by its friends, it means, "force—anything to win." It was practically unknown in this country until W. D. Haywood discovered it on his recent European trip. Since then it has been urged by both he and the Chicago wing of the Industrial Workers of the World, who declare against political action, and who are called "the bummery" by the Detroit faction of the same organization.

Under the "sabotage" plan of striking, men don't walk out. They stay on the job and whenever they find opportunity, they destroy property. In the coal region they would ruin the mine by flooding it with water, by putting pumps "accidentally" out of commission. In a machine shop, emery dust would be mysteriously placed in the machinery. In France it has been said that waiters "accidentally" put castor oil in the vinegar bottles.

The scheme appeals to the ignorant and base among workers. It is defended by "revolutionary" editors, interested in booming their circulation; ALLEGED INTELLECTUALS, WHO ARE IGNORANT OF UNIONISM OR EVEN WORK SHOPS; AND PLATFORM ORATORS WHO SEE IN THIS THEORY GOOD ADVERTISING MATERIAL, BECAUSE IT STAMPS THEM AS "REVOLUTIONISTS."

It doesn't take a brave man to advocate "sabotage." In fact it's a coward doctrine. It calls for no intelligence in its application, and results in a terrorism that the Nihilist of Russia who risk his life, would scorn. The doctrine of "sabotage" grows where intelligence is at a low ebb. Its public defenders are aware of this psychology, and appeal to the victims of repression and force, who have been dumped on our shores by brutal capitalists, now called upon to pay the cost by facing a doctrine foreign to our institutions and belief.

The cause for "sabotage" is the employers. Men like Haywood could not successfully defend "sabotage" if the cause did not exist. "Sabotage" will never solve anything—it is destruction. It is not constructive. It does not demand brains, reason or logic. It rests on force that strikes in the dark, and will, therefore, never win—any more than the present practices of capitalists can continue without interruption and without check.

If "sabotage" is right, so is war. And so is brute force in any other form, regardless of who it is favored by.—Brewery Workers' Journal.

SOCIALIST ACTIVITY.

Socialist propaganda meetings were held last Saturday evening at Gahanna, Linworth, Grove City, Brice and Westerville out of town and at Mt. Vernon an Avenue and Seventeenth Street in the city. The reports from the field are good.

Last Tuesday evening Comrade A. C. Eby spoke at Camp Chase and organized a branch of Local Franklin Township.

The series of meetings will continue from week to week according to announcements made in this paper.

SOCIALIST STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING

In pursuance of the resolution adopted by the Board of Directors, a meeting of the stockholders of the Socialist Publishing Company is hereby called for Sunday afternoon, July 21, at 1:30.

Every stockholder should be present.

F. E. JOHNSTON,
Secretary.

DISTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE BEGINS SUNDAY AUGUST THE FOURTH

"The Issue" Containing Propaganda and Announcements to Cover the City and County.

Beginning the first Sunday in August, the citizens of Columbus and Franklin County will receive regularly, until the November election, Socialist propaganda literature in their homes.

The County Central Committee has been working on a plan for some time whereby they can reach the voters of Columbus and Franklin County to the best advantage with the Socialist arguments, and after considering the many suggestions from the Branches and Comrades, have decided to publish a four-column, four-page paper, to be known as "The Issue," which will contain, besides announcements of the public meetings, propaganda articles and selected arguments to interest non-Socialists in this great cause, and to create a demand for a further study of the subject by the public.

Last year the committee spent a great amount of money in advertising meetings with hand bills and window cards that contained no propaganda at all, and it is the concensus of opinion that the method adopted this year will prove much more effective and also educational at a minimum expense.

Subscription blanks and samples of "The Issue" are now in the hands of Comrades, who are soliciting donations for the Literature Fund, which will be used for the free distribution of literature only, and the reports already received indicate that this plan of campaign is receiving enthusiastic support, and if the Comrades who are soliciting the funds continue to meet with the same success as in the beginning, "The Issue" will be put in every home until election day. This will undoubtedly be the largest distribution of campaign literature ever undertaken in Ohio.

Some of the Branches already report that they are ready to make the distribution thorough and effective and the others will be ready by the first of the month.

Those outside of Columbus who can handle a bundle of "The Issue" each week should send their name and address, and the number they can distribute, to Socialist County Central Committee, 184½ South High Street, Columbus, O., and they will be sent to them free of charge.

Announcement will be made next week when and where the Ward Branches can procure their allotments.

OPEN LETTER TO COMRADES OF LOCAL COLUMBUS

We know it is hot and enervating as it usually is about this time of the year, but that is no reason why we should lay down.

The class struggle does not lay down even though we do, it is taking on ever increasing violence and breaking out in unheard of ways and places. It now practically covers the planet, but in proportion to its severity we should find or make our opportunity, for the last dozen years or more we have been eagerly looking forward to a time like the present.

And this Presidential year, our year, as our genial friend and Comrade Eugene V. Debs expresses it. Fully conscious of the opportunity and needs of the hour. But how can we waken Local Columbus to this need. Put new life and vigor into the movement, give it snap and ginger and gender self sacrifice and import the spirit of revival in our midst. Have we a score of Comrades in Local Columbus big enough to see over and beyond petty squabbling, to the greatness and majesty of a planet-wide Social Democracy? Comrades who can see the tremendous dynamic power contained in the modern engines of production, associated labor and the marvelously rapid internationallizing of all economic life. Can we also see the futility of imagining that day from the little neck in the woods are able to direct those world-wide forces within the confines of their own party.

Let us leave those things to the theorist for awhile and try and organize the workers along class lines, believing that when this is only partially accomplished the supreme opportunity is sure to arrive. Are there in Local Columbus Comrades with the foresight, the vision, as well as the tact and energy to unify our forces, at this, our most crucial time and test, that can compose differences and inspire such confidence as will get the Comrades to give themselves unstintedly to the work immediately before us?

MAX BOGATEN.

COMRADE GREEN WRITES ABOUT BULL MOOSE

Nelsonville, O., July 16, 1912.

In these days of conventions and political snake dances, we are hearing a great deal about a third party other than our own, the Socialist party, and it makes us feel sore to think that after working so hard to get political recognition through the ballot that a bloody bloomin' "oull moose" comes butting in and crowds us over to fourth place. But will we land in fourth place? Not on your life. The bull moose is the hybrid offspring of the elephant and the jackass. He wears his tusks on top of his head and has his face on backwards. It is the only living specimen of its kind and it is doomed to an early and timely end through the advance of civilization. The parents of the bull moose are politically dead, but the offspring has inherited the characteristics of both. His cry is the echo of his stubborn and long-eared parent and his appetite, inherited from the same source, will cause him to eat up the "strawman," thus the great booby, the G. O. Putter will pass away forever. The fourth place did you say? I guess not. The two old parties who have been so long on the tobogan slide, is grabbing each other to keep from falling, fell into each others loving and lustful embrace and the bull moose with his inherited "hew haw" from one side and "bull con" from the other is the result. When we once get straightened out, you will find that there is only one party, with which to cope, and that is the money party, represented by the bull moose. The 1912 election will put the finishing touches to the great drama and the people will allign themselves with their class and in 1916 the Socialist party will sweep into the first place Guess again.

ANOTHER SUIT FILED AGAINST THE GAHANNA TRACTION COMPANY

State Commission Asked to Compel Company to Observe the Law.

It will be recalled that last Fall Comrade John A. Schumm, of Trevitt Street sued the Columbus, New Albany and Johnstown Traction Company for damages on account of being ejected from one of its cars for refusing to pay an additional fare to reach Shepard, inside the city. The case has not been heard, now comes a new effort to comply with terms of its franchise.

The Ralston Steel Car Company, by its Secretary, F. A. Miller, and 171 other patrons of the Columbus, New Albany and Johnstown Traction Co., have filed serious complaint against the company with the State Public Service Commission. They are as follows:

1. That the rate of fare charged by said company for carrying passengers over its line, is unreasonable and in excess of the rate provided in its franchise.

2. That the service furnished is inadequate in that the company does not operate a sufficient number of cars, and at close enough intervals to take care of the traffic.

3. That the cars of said company are unsanitary, in that they are not kept clean and they are not kept in good repair, so that they are dangerous to the life and safety of the passengers.

4. That said company has failed in many particulars to observe the terms and conditions of its franchise.

(a) It has failed to construct and maintain its tracks as required by the franchise.

Left Road Impassable.

(b) It has left the roads and streets almost impassable.

(c) It has failed to fill and ballast the tracks as required by the franchise.

(d) It has failed to provide and maintain crossings.

(e) The rails of its tracks are not properly joined together and in many places the fish plates are loose and the bolts out.

5. Said company refuses to sell tickets within the city of Columbus, according to law, and refuses to receive its own tickets between two points going in either direction.

THREE QUARTETS WANTED

Local Columbus wishes to organize three quartets to sing at public meetings and entertainments. Comrade E. M. Spates is making efforts as an instructor and wants all who are interested in this work to meet at Socialist headquarters Sunday morning at 9:30 or for furthe rinformation call on Comrade O. G. Van Schoyck, High and Rich Streets.

The instructor requests that all Socialists learn the last verse of the above song that they may join us and sing in chorus.

Hero worshippers are still to be found in the ranks of the working class, and these voters believe that with the elevation of an individual to office the ills of society will disappear as snow before the morning sun.

NOTICE TO THE LOCALS OF OHIO.

The Columbus Socialist requests each Socialist Local in Ohio to send to us as often as convenient brief reports of its work, prospects and other items of interest to the party. These reports will be published in our "Socialists in Action Department." Address all communication to Editor Socialist, 108½ South High street, Columbus, Ohio.

a purchase of summer wash fabrics at low prices

That bring crowds. Manufacturers, discouraged by the long cold spring, thinking that summer would be a short season, and our "scouts in the field" found it an easy matter to corral many big lots of fine cotton goods at less than actual cost of making. Dressmakers and women who make their own dresses will have no hesitation in "stocking up" for their summer needs, as we anticipate rapid sales. We would suggest morning trading—more convenient to trade and much cooler.

SOCIALISTS IN ACTION

News from the World-Wide Movement of the Workers

NEWS FROM NATIONAL SOCIALIST HEADQUARTERS

State Secretary Hurst reports that the Socialist Party of Rhode Island held a mass convention July 7, adopted a platform, nominated State and Congressional tickets, elected Campaign Committees, and sanctioned the action of the State Committee in issuing a weekly paper to be called "The Rhode Island Socialist."

The State convention of the Socialist Party of Iowa elected M. F. Wiltse, 411 East Linn Street, Marshalltown, as State Secretary.

The State convention of the Socialist Party of North Carolina nominated the following ticket:

Governor, H. E. Hodges; Lieutenant Governor, B. T. Tiller; Secretary of State, W. M. Weatherly; Auditor, D. Stuart; Treasurer, W. B. Taylor; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Rev. George E. Hunt; Attorney General, W. J. Gregon; Commissioner of Agriculture, Bruce Anderson; Commissioner of Labor and Printing, George F. Wilson; Corporation Commissioner, R. J. Morton for the long term and V. T. Grabbs for the short term; Insurance Commissioner, R. H. Love; Electors-at-Large, Thomas S. Davis and H. C. Lindsay.

The National Office desires to call attention to the fact that, under the interpretation adopted by the National Executive Committee at its session in December, 1911, delegate bodies do not have the power to initiate referendums. It follows that they also do not have the power to second referendums.

The State convention of the Socialist Party of Tennessee nominated Carl Harold for Governor, and C. G. Fisher for Railroad Commissioner.

Campaign Notes.

The National Campaign Committee met in session at 10 A. M. Sunday, July 7th. Three sessions were held that day and one on Monday, the 8th. At the former sessions all members of the committee were present. Comrade Debs was present also at the Monday session. The plans of the campaign so far as worked out were thoroughly gone over, and the tentative route for Comrade Debs was made out and approved by him.

Comrade Debs opens his campaign on August 27th, starting West for a tour of the mountain and coast States. On this trip he will hold meetings in Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Arizona, Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and Tennessee. After resting four days at Terre Haute he will make another twenty-day trip covering the States of Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey and Michigan. The final tour of the campaign will include the States of Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois and Indiana. The number of dates assigned to each State will necessarily be limited. Only four or five of the largest industrial States can be given as many as four dates each.

George L. Funk of Harrisburg, Pa., sends in an order for an additional hundred ONE DAY WAGE FUND cards. Ammon Blakely, of Greensburg, Pa., writes: "Mail me two hundred more One Day Wage Fund cards." Secretary of Local Watertown, N. Y., writes for an additional supply, saying, "The ONE DAY WAGE FUND is a great idea and will take like wildfire."

All persons heard from are enthusiastic about the plans of the National Campaign Committee, which will provide for finances for the Local, the State and the National Campaign—at once—ALL IN ONE DAY—July 20th.

Any one not supplied with a card should mail their contribution on that date to the National Campaign Committee at Chicago.

The National Campaign Committee has asked every Local of the party to act as a sub-committee of the Campaign Committee during the campaign. Each Local Secretary has been asked to serve as chairman of his sub-committee. And every subdivision of the Campaign Committee is now actively engaged in making a success of the ONE DAY WAGE FUND. More than one hundred thousand collection cards have been mailed out from the Campaign Headquarters, and the One Day Wage Fund promises to be the biggest thing of the kind ever undertaken and accomplished in the history of American politics.

The National Campaign Committee is planning to go to press by July 20th with a number of the sixteen-page pamphlets provided for by the National Executive Committee and Campaign Committee in joint session. The returns from the One Day Wage Fund will enable the committee to do this. The plan is to distribute twenty-five million pamphlets, each sixteen pages, free of cost, except for carriage, during the months of August and September. Other literature will be prepared for the last month of the campaign.

The Campaign Committee, at a recent meeting, adopted a motion requesting the Locals and Comrades to order such supplies from the Campaign Committee, in order that the profits accruing therefrom would come to the Socialist Party rather than to private concerns.

The National Campaign Committee has decided to carry a complete assortment of campaign supplies, including drinking cups, neckties, watch fobs, pocket knives, all carrying the pictures of Debs and Seidel, also autographs, in both cabinet size and in frames ready for hanging on the wall, and a number of other novelties. Some of these supplies are already on hand in the Campaign Headquarters, ready for shipment. Prices for the same will be found in the July Monthly Bulletin, and will also be sent to the Locals by circulars within a few days.

All orders should be addressed to J. Mahlon Barnes, Campaign Manager, 111 North Market Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Proposed Referendums.

"Sisseton, S. D., July 8th, 1912.

"Sisseton, S. D. Local, with 88 members unanimously demands the recall of Morris Hillquit as a member of the National Executive Committee, for the reason that he has consistently favored the retention of J. Mahlon Barnes as an officer of the Socialist Party, in the face of proof of immorality and that said Hillquit went so far as to represent to the National Convention that the National Executive Committee had asked that said Barnes be chosen to the position of Campaign Manager, when this was absolutely false and that such course tends to retard the growth of the party and to give a wrong impression as to Socialism."

"Burlington, Colorado, July 10, 1912.

"Local Burlington, Colorado makes a motion that a referendum be sent out to all party members reading:- 'Shall J. Mahlon Barnes be retained as Campaign Manager for the campaign of 1912?' And that the referendum be accompanied by one copy of all charges brought against J. Mahlon Barnes while he was National Secretary, and all evidence taken in the case be sent to each Local or Branch.

"Comment: We beleive that the Barnes case has aroused much contention and dissatisfaction in the Socialist Party and that the only way it can ever be settled permanently is for the members to be fully informed on the case and let them settle it.

"We believe that if the charges made by the Christian Socialist are correct Barnes should not be allowed to hold any office in the party, and if they are not, he should be exonerated and the Christian Socialist barred from the lists of Socialist papers.

"We believe one copy of charges and evidence to each Local or Branch will be enough to fully inform each member and will not cost so much as a copy to each member.

"All who are in favor of this should send in their seconds at once, as our time to act is short.

"Members of Local Burlington in good standing, eleven."

The National Office desires to call attention of all Locals in organized States that their votes on referendum B, should be sent to their respective State Secretaries, not to the National Secretary.

RED LETTER DAY

In National Socialist Campaign.

At the headquarters of the National Socialist Campaign Committee, 111 North Market Street, Chicago, they have marked July 20th, red on all their calendars. To the Campaign Committee this will be the biggest day of the campaign as all their plans depend upon the fulfillment of their expectations for that day.

On that day they expect a flood of letters, thousands and thousands of them. Letters from cities, towns and hamlets. Letters from industrial centers; from mining camps, and quarries; from fishing fleets and from isolated farms and ranches.

Letters from Maine and Florida, from Oregon and California; letters from Alaska and the Panama Canal Zone; letters from every nook and cranny in the whole United States and its possessions.

They expect letters from Trade unions and Suffrage clubs, and from all their own Local organizations. They expect letters from carpenters and college professors; from policemen and firemen; from painters, plumbers and preachers; from soldiers and sailors in the service of the Government; from miners, bakers and brewery workers; letters from factory operatives; from farmers and fishermen; from scrubwomen and stenographers and school teachers; letters from child wage-slaves; from magazine writers; from house-wives; letters from the men who handle mail, railway mail clerks, mail carriers and the postal employes of Uncle Sam.

The expect printed letters, letters written with pen and pencil, typewritten letters and letters in long-hand; letters on dainty note paper, on business letter heads, on wrapping paper; letters couched in purest English; letters in the language of the working class, some of the illiterate and showing the lack of education; some of them in German and Italian and Yiddish, which will have to be translated before they are read; letters, which are beautiful specimens of penmanship, and letters which were slowly and painfully scrawled by the untrained hands of little children, the palsied fingers of the aged, or the toil-stiffened fingers of the working class.

Letters, letters and still more letters. Letters of every kind and description; letters from working men and women in every industry, trade and occupation; from every States and territory; a veritable avalanche of letters which will tax the facilities of the Chicago Post Office and necessitate the employment of a hundred extra clerks at campaign headquarters to handle them.

And each and every one of these letters will contain a Post Office Money Order, Money Order large and small; orders for fifty cents and orders for a thousand dollars as contributions to the National Campaign Fund of the Socialist Party.

Contributions of twenty-five or fifty cents from working men who have denied themselves some necessity in order to make this contribution; and contributions of twenty-five or fifty dollars from those who are more fortunately situated. Orders for five hundred, a thousand, two thousand dollars, collected by Locals in the larger cities, and orders for a dollar or two collected by a small and isolated Local from destitute wage slaves or tenant-farmers in some poverty-stricken section of the country. But contributions in every one of them for some amount; a flood of contributions that combined will reach Five Hundred Thousand Dollars, and provide the Campaign Committee with a half million dollars to fight the political battles of the working class in our present campaign.

A half million dollars in a single day. These are large expectations, one might almost say that they are visionary. But not so the National Campaign Committee. The members of that committee say that visionary plans and expectations are those which are impractical or impossible of fulfillment and insist that their half million dollar campaign fund is not only possible but very probable. A probability which with some of them amounts to a postive certainty.

They are not inexperienced, fired with the enthusiasm of the new recruit, but are seasoned campaigners in the service of their party. They know the industrial and political situation as it exists; they know the working class and its psychology, and they know the Socialist Party and its membership from the grass roots to the National headquarters.

They know the power of united effort and concerted action to accomplish big results and above all, they know the spirit and enthusiasm which is characteristic of the party membership, and they are confiident.

The plans for this great day have been carefully worked out. The members of the party and all friends and sympathisers have been asked to contribute an amount equal to their wages for one day. Contributions of any amount from ten cents up will be accepted, but the committee had made a day's wages the special feature of what they call the "One Day Wage Fund."

A collection card has been prepared which authorizes the bearer to collect funds for the party organization and over one hundred thousand of these cards have been sent out to all sections of the country. Each member is expected to contribute what he can and then to solicit contributions from friends and sympathizers until he has raised ten dollars, which is the amount his collection card calls for.

Saturday, July 20th, has been set as the date upon which these collections are to be made and on that day a hundred thousand working men and women will be simultaneously soliciting funds in shops and mines and factories in ten thousand towns and cities from coast to coast.

The Local Secretaries have been made chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the collecting and the reports of the collectors and their collections will be given to the Local Secretaries on Sunday, July 21st.

The Local Secretary will divide the funds collected by his Local, retaining thirty per cent for the Local organization, sending twenty per cent to the State organization, and fifty per cent to the National Campaign Committee. The Secretaries have been instructed to mail their reports and Money Orders so as to reach the National Office on July 26th.

It is this flood of letters from five thousand Local Secretaries that is expected to swamp the office on that date. There will also be thousands of letters from other organizations and from individual Socialists and sympathisers who are not affiliated with the Local organizations. All those who have no opportunity to get in on the collection card campaign on July 20th can send their contributions direct to the Socialist Campaign Committee at 111 North Market Street, Chicago.

The Campaign Committee confidently awaits the arrival of that date. All their plans hinge upon its successful outcome. Many important matters are being held in abeyance until this day provides the necessary money to finance their undertakings. But they are confident. At their headquarters there is no word of doubt or uncertainty. The enthusiasm is scontagious; it attacks everybody. The stenographers, the clerks, the janitor are jubilant and elated. "Will we do it?" "Why, certanly we will, and this One Day Wage Fund will be the biggest thing of the kind ever undertaken and accomplished in the history of American politics."

"SASSY SAYINGS OF AN ORGANIZER."

By O. F. Branstetter.

"Our Local won't contribute to the One Day's Wage Fund. We can use any money we can raise, to better advantage right here at home, than the Campaign Committee can use it in any manner from Chicago."

"Is that SO?" "And still you call yourself a Socialist?"

Now let us see what it is the Campaign Committee proposes to do.

They are printing twelve sixteen-page pamphlets for distribution which are to be furnished free to the Locals except the feight or express charges. These pamphlets will be ready for shipment about the first of August and your Local can have as many as you can use to advantage.

You can have one of each of them for every voter in your town, or in your Congressional District, if your organization is able to use and distribute them systematically. The committee hopes that you can and will be able to use them all and reach every voter in your district.

There are approximately forty thousand voters in your district. Twelve pamphlets for each of them totals FOUR HUNDRED AND EIGHTY THOUSAND. Now I seriously doubt your statement, Comrade, that you can use your money to better advantage than that.

I am sure that you could not possibly use money to better advantage than in the free distribution of literature. I do not believe that your Local can raise money enough to print nearly so much of it as the committee is willing to furnish you.

That is not all the assistance the committee will give your Local. It proposes to do special work in all sections of the country, as the special needs and particular conditions existing in each section may make it necessary or adviasble.

In six States where they have equal suffrage, and in six more where woman suffrage is to be voted upon this year, the committee will render special assistance. Three States hold their elections in September and these will receive additional help from the committee on account of the propaganda value of polling a big increase there, two months before the general elections. In favorable Congressional Districts, in the backward South, in Districts where a big strike may be in progress, among the foreign-speaking population, EVERYWHERE that it is necessary the Campaign Committee proposes to furnish SPECIAL literature, send speakers free or make cash appropriations, to as great an extent as the funds of the committee will permit. In all probability your Local will be the DIRECT beneficiary of some of this special work.

The committee is furnishing the presidential candidates with stenographers to assist in preparing articles, by special request, from dozens of the most popular and widely circulated magazines in the country. It is establishing a press service to furnish, not only party papers, but thousands of capitalist journals with news and notes of the campaign.

The committee will get a nation-wide publicity for our candidates, our party and our platform. Will that be of benefit to YOUR Local and to your local campaign? And can YOU get these results by using your own money "right here at home?"

It is also worth while to call your attention to the fact that the Campaign Committee does not desire nor ask the Local organizations to neglect their own campaigns or bankrupt themselves for the committee's benefit. Every call for funds by the Campaign Committee provides that fifty per cent of the amount raised shall be retained by the State and Local organizations.

It is undeniably true that the publicity and enthusiasm of this One Day Wage Fund will enable you to collect at least twice as much for the campaign as you would otherwise receive.

Since you send one-half of it to the committee you still have as much for local purposes as you would have had if you had not co-operated with the National movement.

If every Local in the country took the same attitude as your own, I am sure that your city or your District would have a much smaller campaign fund, would have a far less active campaign and poll a great many LESS votes than it will if the Locals generally respond to the call and contribute a portion of their funds to the National Campaign Committee.

Your statement of ability to use your money, exclusively for your own purposes, to better advantage than in harmonious co-operation with the national organization is true only if Socialism is false.

It is true if concerted action and united effort, CO-OPERATION in the doing of BIG things on a BIG scale is LESS effective and efficient than isolated and disconnected individual efforts.

I hope, Comrade, that your organization will reconsider its decision, which was no doubt hastily taken, and co-operate with the National Campaign Committee in its efforts to do BIG things in a BIG way for our COMMON CAUSE.

THE SOCIALIST PLATFORM

Adopted by National Convention at Indianapolis, May 17, 1912

The Socialist Party of the United States declares hat the capitalist system has outgrown its historical function and has become utterly incapable of meeting the problems confronting society. We denounce this outgrown system as incompetent and corrupt and the source of unspeakable misery and suffering to the whole working class.

Under this system the industrial equipment of the nation has passed into the absolute control of a plutocracy which exacts an annual tribute of millions of dollars from the producers. Unafraid of any organized resistance, it stretches out its greedy hands over the still undeveloped resources of the nation—the land, the mines, the forests and the water powers of every state in the Union.

In spite of the multiplication of labor-saving machines and improved methods in industry, which cheapen the cost of production, the share of the producers grows ever less, and the prices of all the necessities of life steadily increase. The boasted prosperity of this nation is for the owning class alone. To the rest it means only greater hardship and misery. The high cost of living is felt in every home. Millions of wage-workers have seen the purchasing power of their wages decrease until life has become a desperate battle for mere existence.

Multitudes of unemployed walk the streets of our cities or trudge from state to state awaiting the will of the masters to move the wheels of industry.

The farmers in every state are plundered by the increasing prices exacted for tools and machinery and by extortionate rent, freight rates and storage charges.

Capitalist concentration is mercilessly crushing the class of small business men and driving its members into the ranks of propertyless wage workers. The overwhelming majority of the people of America are being forced under a yoke of bondage by this soulless industrial despotism.

It is this capitalist system that is responsible for the increasing burden of armaments, the poverty, slums, child labor, most of the insanity, crime and prostitution, and much of the disease that afflicts mankind.

Under this system the working class is exposed to poisonous conditions, to frightful and needless perils of life and limb, is walled around with court decisions, injunctions and unjust laws, and is preyed upon incessantly for the benefit of the controlling oligarchy of wealth. Under it also the children of the working class are doomed to ignorance, dreadging toil and darkened lives.

In the face of these evils, so manifest that all thoughtful observers are appalled at them, the legislative representatives of the Republican, Democratic and all reform parties remain the faithful servants of the oppressors. Measures designed to secure to the wage earners of this nation as humane and just treatment as is already enjoyed by the wage earners of all other civilized nations have been smothered in committee without debate, and laws ostensibly designed to bring relief to the farmers and general consumers are juggled and transformed into instruments for the exaction of further tribute. The growing unrest under oppression has driven these two old parties to the enactment of a variety of regulative measures, none of which has limited in any appreciable degree the power of the plutocracy, and some of which have been perverted into means for increasing that power. Anti-trust laws, railroad restrictions and regulations, with the prosecutions, indictments and investigations based upon such legislation, have proved to be utterly futile and ridiculous.

Nor has this plutocracy been seriously restrained or even threatened by any Republican or Democratic executive. It has continued to grow in power and insolence alike under the administrations of Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft.

In addition to this legislative juggling and this executive connivance, the courts of America have sanctioned and strengthened the hold of this plutocracy as the Dred Scott and other decisions strengthned the slave power before the civil war.

We declare, therefore, that the longer sufferance of these conditions is impossible, and we purpose to end them all. We declare them to be the product of the present system in which industry is carried on for private greed, instead of for the welfare of society. We declare, furthermore, that for these evils there will be and can be no remedy and no substantial relief except through Socialism, under which industry will be carried on for the common good and every worker receive the full social value of the wealth he creates.

Society is divided into warring groups and classes, based upon material interests. Fundamentally, this struggle is a conflict between the two main classes, one of which, the capitalist class, owns the means of production, and the other, the working class, must use these means of production on terms dictated by the owners.

The capitalist class, though few in number, absolutely controls the government—legislative, executive and judicial. This class owns the machinery of gathering and disseminating news through its organized press. It subsidizes seats of learning—the colleges and schools—and even religious and moral agencies. It has also the added prestige which established customs give to any order of society, right or wrong.

The working class, which includes all those who are forced to work for a living, whether by hand or brain, in shop, mine or on the soil, vastly outnumbers the capitalist class. Lacking effective organization and class solidarity, this class is unable to enforce its will. Given such class solidarity and effective organization, the workers will have the power to make all laws and control of industry in their own interest.

All political parties are the expression of economic and class interests. All other parties than the Socialist party represent one or another group of the ruling capitalist class. Their political conflicts reflect merely superficial rivalries between competing capitalist groups. However they result, these conflicts have no issue of real value to the workers. Whether the Democrats or Republicans win politically, it is the capitalist class that is victorious economically.

The Socialist party is the political expression of the economic interests of the workers. Its defeats have been their defeats and its victories their victories. It is a party founded on the science and laws of social development. It proposes that, since all social necessities today are socially produced, the means of their production and distribution shall be socially owned and democratically controlled.

In the face of the economic and political aggressions of the capitalist class, the only reliance left the workers is that of their economic organizations and their political power. By the intelligent and class conscious use of these they may resist successfully the capitalist class, break the fetters of wage slavery, and fit themselves for the future society, which is to displace the capitalist system. The Socialist party appreciates the full significance of class organization and urges the wage earners, the working farmers and all other useful workers everywhere to organize for economic and political action, and we pledge ouselves to support the toilers of the fields as well as those in the shops, factories and mines of the nation in their struggles for economic justice.

In the defeat or victory of the working class party in this new struggle for freedom lies the defeat or triumph of the common people of all economic groups, as well as the failure or the triumph of popular government. Thus the Socialist party is the party of the present-day revolution, which marks the transition from economic individualism to Socialism, from wage slavery to free co-operation, from capitalist oligarchy to industrial democracy.

As measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the realization of its ultimate aim, the co-operative commonwealth, and, to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression, we advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following program:

1. The collective ownership and democratic management of railroads, wire and wireless telegraphs and telephones, express services, steamboat lines and all other social means of transportation and communication and of all large-scale industries.

2. The immediate acquirement by the municipalities, the states or the federal government of all grain elevators, stock yards, storage warehouses and other distributing agencies, in order to reduce the present extortionate cost of living.

3. The extension of the public domain to include mines, quarries, oil wells, forests and water power.

4. The further conservation and development of natural resources for the use and benefit of all the people:

(a) By scientific forestation and timber protection.

(b) By the reclamation of arid and swamp tracts.

(c) By the storage of flood waters and the utilization of water power.

(d) By the stoppage of the present extravagant waste of the soil and of the products of mines and oil wells.

(e) By the development of highway and waterway systems.

5. The collective ownership of land wherever practicable, and, in cases where such ownership is impracticable, the appropriation by taxation of the annual rental value of all land held for speculation.

6. The collective ownership and democratic management of the banking and currency system.

The immediate government relief of the unemployed by the extension of all useful public works. All persons employed on such works to be engaged directly by the government under a work-day of not more than eight hours and at not less than the prevailing union wages. The government also to establish employment bureaus; to lend money to states and municipalities without interest for the purpose of carrying on public works, and to take such other measures within its power as will lessen the widespread misery of the workers caused by the misrule of the capitalist class.

The conservation of human resources, particularly of the lives and well-being of the workers and their families:

1. By shortening the workday in keeping with the increased productiveness of machinery.

2. By securing to every worker a rest period of not less than a day and a half in each week.

3. By securing a more effective inspection of workshops, factories and mines.

4. By forbidding the employment of children under 16 years of age.

5. By the co-operative organization of industries in federal penitentiaries and workshops for the benefit of convicts and their dependents.

6. By forbidding the interstate transportation of the products of child labor, of convict labor and of all uninspected factories and mines.

7. By abolishing the profit system in government work and substituting either the direct hire of labor or the awarding of contracts to co-operative groups of workers.

8. By establishing minimum wage scales.

9. By abolishing official charity and substituting a non-contributory system of old-age pensions, a general system of insurance by the state of all its members against unemployment and invalidism and a system of compulsory insurance by employers of their workers, without cost to the latter, against industrial diseases, accidents and death.

Political Demands.

1. The absolute freedom of press, speech and assemblage.

2. The adoption of a graduated income tax, the increase of the rates of the present corporation tax and the extension of inheritance taxes, graduated in proportion to the value of the estate and to nearness of kin—the proceeds of these taxes to be employed in the socialization of industry.

3. The abolition of the monopoly ownership of patents and the substitution of collective ownership, with direct rewards to inventors by premiums or royalties.

4. Unrestricted and equal suffrage for men and women.

5. The adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall and of proportional representation, nationally as well as locally.

6. The abolition of the senate and of the veto power of the president.

7. The election of the president and the vice president by direct vote of the people.

8. The abolition of the power usurped by the Supreme Court of the United States to pass upon the constitutionality of the legislation enacted by Congress. National laws to be repealed only by act of Congress or by a referendum vote of the whole people.

9. The abolition of the present restrictions upon the amendment of the constitution, so that that instrument may be made amendable by a majority of the voters in a majority of the states.

10. The granting of the right of suffrage in the District of Columbia, with representation in Congress and a democratic form of municipal government for purely local affair.

11. The extension of democratic government to all United States territory.

12. The enactment of further measures for general education and particularly for vocational education in useful pursuits. The bureau of education to be made a department.

13. The enactment of further measures for the conservation of health. The creation of an independent bureau of health with such restrictions as will secure full liberty for all schools of practice.

14. The separation of the present bureau of labor from the department of commerce and labor and its elevation to the rank of a department.

15. Abolition of all federal district courts and the United States circuit courts of appeals. State courts to have jurisdiction in all cases arising between citizens of the several states and foreign corporations. The election of all judges for short terms.

16. The immediate curbing of the power of the courts to issue injunctions.

17. The free administration of justice.

18. The calling of a convention for the revision of the constitution of the United States.

Such measures of relief as we may be able to force from capitalism are but a preparation of the workers to seize the whole powers of government in order that they may thereby lay hold of the whole system of socialized industry and thus come to their rightful inheritance.

Following is the report of the committee on labor organizations, which was unanimously adopted by the National Socialist convention at Indianapolis:

The undersigned members, constituting a majority of the committee, recommended the adoption of the following declaration:

Political organization and economic organization are alike necessary in the struggle for working class emancipation, working class movement—the Socialist party and the labor unions.

The labor movement of the United States has of recent years made marvelous progress in all directions. It has steadily increased in numbers and has reached trades and industries which were before unorganized. It has in many instancesss concentrated its power and increased its efficiency by the amalgamation of related trades into federations and industrial unions. Many unions have opened their meetings and journals to the discussion of vital social and political problems of the working class, and have repudiated the demoralizing policies represented by the National Civic Federation. The organized workers are rapidly developing an enlightened and militant class-consciousness.

The reality of this progress is attested by the increasing virulence with which the organized capitalists wage their war against the union. The improved economic organization is not a matter of abstract theory, but grows out of the experience of the wage workers in the daily class struggle. Only those actually engaged in the struggle in the various trades and industries can solve the problems of form of organization.

The Socialist party, therefore, reaffirms the position it has always taken with regard to the movement of organized labor:

1. That the party has neither the right nor the desire to interfere in any controversies which may exist within the labor union movement over questions of form of organization or technical methods of action in the industrial struggle, but trusts to the labor organizations themselves to solve these questions.

2. THAT THE SOCIALISTS CALL THE ATTENTION OF THEIR BROTHERS IN THE LABOR UNIONS TO THE VITAL IMPORTANCE OF THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED, ESPECIALLY THE IMMIGRANTS AND THE UNSKILLED LABORERS, WHO STAND IN GREATEST NEED OF ORGANIZED PROTECTION AND WHO WILL CONSTITUTE A GREAT MENACE TO THE PROGRESS AND WELFARE OF ORGANIZED LABOR IF THEY REMAIN NEGLECTED. THE SOCIALIST PARTY WILL EVER BE READY TO CO-OPERATE WITH THE LABOR UNIONS IN THE TASK OF ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED WORKERS, AND URGES ALL LABOR ORGANIZATIONS, WHO HAVE NOT ALREADY DONE SO, TO THROW THEIR DOORS WIDE OPEN TO THE WORKERS OF THEIR RESPECTIVE TRADES AND INDUSTRIES, ABOLISHING ALL ONEROUS CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP AND ARTIFICIAL RESTRICTIONS. IN THE FACE OF TH ETREMENDOUS POWERS OF THE AMERICAN CAPITALISTS AND THEIR CLOSE INDUSTRIAL AND POLITICAL UNION, THE WORKERS OF THIS COUNTRY CAN WIN THEIR BATTLES ONLY BY A STRONG CLASS-CONSCIOUSNESS AND CLOSELY UNITED ORGANIZATION ON THE ECONOMIC FIELD, A POWERFUL AND MILITANT PARTY ON THE POLITICAL FIELD AND BY JOINT ATTACK OF BOTH ON THE COMMON ENEMY.

3. That it is the duty of the party to give moral and material support to the labor organizations in all their defensive or aggressive struggles against the capitalist oppression and exploitation, for the protection and extension of the rights of the wage workers and the betterment of their material and social condition.

4. That it is the duty of the members of the Socialist party who are eligible to membership in the unions to join and be active in their respective labor organizations.

THE PEOPLE WHO MAKE AND PEOPLE WHO TAKE.

By Ed. Moore.

Wealth, as everyone can see, is made by the labor of the working people.

No one goes to a court room to buy shoes, for even the most ignorant know that judges, lawyers, court clerks, criers and tipstaves do not work making shoes in the courts.

Farmers, while they "respectfully petition" Congress and Legislature for laws to curb the greed of corporations, never go to these places to buy farm machinery or fertilizers.

Working people, whether organized or not, never go to army posts or naval stations to purchase household furniture and groceries.

But the judges and court officials, congressmen and legislators, soldiers and sailors wear shoes, eat what the farmers grow, and use household furniture and groceries.

You do not have to be a giant thinker to see that if people use things that they did not make, they had to get them from those who did make them. And as congressmen and legislators, judges and lawyers, soldiers and sailors do not make wealth they must give what was made by others for what they get.

Only ignorant or foolish people will give wealth, that they produce by labor to non-producers, and those who divide up with government officials are either ignorant or foolish. But they do not produce wealth. They hire, for wages, working people to produce it. And they use Congress, Legislatures, judges, lawyers, soldiers and sailors to force working people to make wealth for wages.

Congress and the Legislatures make the regulations which give the ownership of the wealth made by poor people, hired for wages, to the rich people, and out of this wealth they pay taxes. Out of the taxes Congress, Legislature, courts, army, navy and the State militia are supported.

Sometimes the working people get dissatisfied with the little bit of wealth they get for producing it, and they refuse to work. Then the class character of the government shows itself. Police drive the strikers away from the neighborhood of the boss's shop. Judges issue injunctions forbidding the strikers to tell what made the mstrike, and the State militia charge open air meetings and chase away those assembled there with the points of their bayonets.

For keeping the working people afraid, and to make them agree to work for wages, the rich people pay high salaries and bribe the big government officers. They have no more respect for the common soldiers and sailors than they have for the people they hire for wages, for they know the army and navy is recruited from the down-and-outs.

It would be a bad thing for those who take wealth if the makers of it knew they were being robbed. This knowledge would make the common soldiers and sailors unreliable, and if they were unwilling to murder wealth makers who objected to being robbed by law, the power to oppress and enslave, now held by the rich, would end.

It pays the rich to give some of the wealth they take from those who make for wages, to buy teachers and public speakers, magazine and newspaper writers to tell working people that they cannot get along unless they keep a lot of idle wealthy people.

The most valuable hirelings of the rich are those who have the confidence of the organized workers, and, trading on this confidence, persuade them that it would be wrong for them to own the fruits of their own labor; that it is far better for them to pay business agents to arrange with the rich not to take too much of the wealth from the poor who produce it.

Producers of wealth are the only kind of people that we must have. It is their labor that provides for the rich and the poor, the educated and the ignorant. And as long as the producers must work to give others time to get an education, they will only get a limited chance to get an education for themselves.

Political power is what puts the forces of government in the hands of the wealth-takers. It gives them ownership of wealth they did not make, and which, by legal means, they take from those who do make it.

They took this wealth before there was any labor legislation because they bought for wages the labor power of the workers. They take more wealth now from those they hire for wages in the states where they have the best "labor laws." If you doubt this, compare Pennsylvania with South Carolina.

It is unwise for wealth producers, whose limbs and lives are in constant danger while at work, to trust the movement to take the political power to those who, whether they know it o rnot, are influenced by their association with wealth-takers and are more concerned not to shock them than to put an end to the robbery of the makers of wealth. Reforms will give the lawyers work, but they will not take the titles away from those who pay wages to get profits out of the labor of the workers.

Wealth is made by labor. Ownership is made by law.

Wealth producers must, therefore, take the law-making machinery—the government—into their own hands to vest the ownership of the wealth they make in themselves. Until they do this the government, now run by non-producers for non-producers, will use all its powers to make them keep the non-producers.

Indeed, incentive is a great thing. It's the incentive that makes a fish swallow the bait and thereby catch himself. It's the incentive that's making a lot of human fish swallow the capitalist bait, hook, line, sinker and all.

CORSET WORKERS MISTREATED

Washington—In last week's news letter it was reported that the corset workers and the manufacturers in Kalamazoo, Mich., had reached an agreement and the strikers were returning to work. An agreement was signed by the manufacturers, but upon the return of the strikers they were subjected to such ill-treatment, the management also violating the terms of the agreement, that it was determined to continue the fight. It is stated that the strikebreakers refused to work with the strikers and the company stood by the strikebreakers. From reports it was never the intention of the company to abide by the terms of the agreement. The girl strikers are plucky and will continue the fight with as much zest as heretofore. At a meeting called in the interest of the strikers, Miss Jane Addams of Chicago and Mrs. Raymond Robbins, president of the National Women's Trade Union League of the same city, delivered addresses.

UNION BUSTERS AT WORK

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Some weeks ago the employes of the Packard and

5—SOCIALIST

Bond Piano Companies of this city organized a local union under the Piano, Organ and Musical Instrument Workers' International Union. As soon as it became known that the men had organized the president of the two companies discharged all employes known to be members of the new union. The National Piano Piano Manufacturers' Association also appeared on the scene to assist the local firms. It is also stated that operatives were secured from a Chicago detective agency to accept employment in the factories and also join the union in order to secure a list of members. The list was secured and reported, with the result that 300 men were promptly locked out. There were about 100 men that had not joined the organization, and they were not disturbed. but they determined to make common cause, and walked out in sympathy with the lock-out men. Both plants are completely tied up. The local, being a new one, is without funds, and is soliciting donations to carry on the fight. J. E. Blaikely, 1908 Webster Street, this city, is authorized to accept and receipt for all donations, which will be used to carry the contest to a successful conclusion.

A VOICE FROM KENTON

Editor Socialist:

I have just finished reading your article, "Plain Facts, etc." You have diagnosed the case exactly and your diagnosis is correct. It is a plain attempt to disrupt the Socialist Party in Ohio, and if Local Columbus, or any other Local were to initiate a referendum for the recall of the present S. E. C. and the State Secretary as well, I believe the motion would be seconded so unanimously that a vote would hardly be necessary. It simply means that the I. W. W.'s are using the method known as "boring from the inside," and their success will set the movement in Ohio back another ten years at least. Yes the "cloven hoof" is becoming more apparent every day and it bears a striking resemblance to a cross between Anarchy and old tactics of the S. L. P. I. W. W.ism is the worm of the Apple of Socialism and if it is not cast out will end by making the fruit worthless. By all means, Comrades start that recall for the S. E. C. and then let us elect a new committee of real Socialists who know enough of the history of the Socialist Party to steer clear of the rocks of Syndicalism and I. W. W.ism and to so interpret our constitution as to serve the party to the party's good.

Your Comrade,

HANFORD RESIGNS FROM UNITED STATES BENCH

Congressman Berger Says this Action is an Admission of Guilt—Shows Socialist Power.

Seattle, Wash.—Federal Judge Cornelius Hanford, charges against whom have been under investigation here by a Congressional Committee for several weeks, resigned his office today.

A climax in the investigation was predicted this morning when Judge Hanford's attorneys went into conference with the members of the investigating committee. It was reported that they were discussing what effect Judge Hanford's resignation would have on the impeachment charge.

At 10:30 o'clock Judge Hanford, Chairman Graham, of the Congressional Committee, and Attorney Hughes, counsel for Judge Hanford, left the Federal Building together and went to a telegraph office.

Judge Hanford telegraphed his resignation to President Taft. This action brought to a dramatic ending the investigation ordered by a resolution introduced in Congress by Representative Victor Berger, of Wilwaukee.

Hanford's Telegram to Taft.

In his telegram to the President, Judge Hanford gave as his reason for resigning that he could not stand the strain under which he was compelled to work now, and said that he desired to retire while he still had some health left.

The effect of the resignation on the impeachment proceedings is uncertain. As soon as the judge's resignation was announced Chairman Graham adjourned the session of the committee until 3 o'clock, and it was stated that nothing further would be done until the committee heard from the House of Representatives as to whether to continue work.

After announcement of adjournment had been made a telegram received from H. D. Clayton, chairman of House Judiciary Committee, which read:

"Advise you to take no further testimony. Signed H. D. Clayton."

It was admitted during the morning that startling evidence brought out Saturday against Hanford involving him in a financial deal with the Nothern Pacific Railroad determined him to quit.

Washington—When told this afternoon of the resignation of Federal Judge Hanford at Seattle, Representative Victor Berger, the Wisconsin Socialist, who introduced the resolution in the House instituting impeachment proceedings against him, said:

Berger Gives His Opinion.

"I take Judge Hanford's resignation as an admission of his guilt. But in impeaching him, I was fighting corruption on the bench generally, not Hanford personally.

"The Hanford case and the Archbald case are arguments for the recall of judges. It would be a mighty good thing if a couple of dozen more federal judges would resign or be recalled by the people. The present system of impeachment is unsatisfactory, cumbersome and costly.

"The fact that Hanford has resigned is a confession that I had a good case against him and that my action was justified. I had other undisclosed evidence against him that he probably knew was coming.

"The Government of the United States, however, owes a restitution to that poor Socialist longshoreman, Leonard Olsson, who has been deprived of his citizenship by the unjust decision of Hanford. I, therefore, hope that Attorney General Wickersham will press the appeal so that the wrong done by Hanford may soon be righted."

Representative Clayton, of the House Judiciary Committee, which institutes all impeachment proceedings, asserted this afternoon that Judge Hanford's resignation did not necessarily mean that the impeachment proceedings against him would be dropped. He said, however, that it was very likely that Congress would not press the charges, since he had voluntarily stepped down. Clayton declared that his committee would take no steps in the matter until after receipt of word from the sub-committee now at Seatttle.

CITY EMPLOYES GET SALARIES AT LAST!

Appropriation Ordinance of Mayor Passes Because Council Had to Do So.

The appropriation ordinance as fathered by Mayor Karb was passed by Council last Monday night by a vote of 1 4to 4, the Nays being Baldridge, Connolley, Griffin and Sherman.

The ordinance introduced by the Finance Committee a week ago Monday night, cutting the $91,000 out of the funds and placing it in a contingency fund, was returned to Council with the Mayor's veto Monday night. Councilman Ellis introduced the original ordinance which Councilman Baldridge and Sherman contended could not be considered except under a suspension of the rules. The rules, Mr. Baldridge said, prevent the Council from attempting to pass an ordinance over the Mayor's veto under ten days, and for that reason the ordinance passed a week ago and vetoed Monday was still before Council, and the Mayor's ordinance which practically repeals it could not be considered except under a suspension of the rules.

President Logan ruled otherwise. Mr. Baldridge in anger roasted the Socialist members for their stand. He said: "If Mr. Biederman had gone to Ross or Joyce for instructions, it would have been said that he had been instructed by his political bosses. When the Socialists are instructed it is by their advisory board, which controls the political policies of their party." Mr. Baldridge failed to note that there is a vast difference between Ross and Joyce and the expressed will of a party as large as the Socialists. Everybody knows who controls Baldridge, and he ought to be careful how he talks.

Member Warren denied for the Socialists that they had any other advisory board on this issue than the attorney general's opinion.

City Solicitor Bolin, who held that Council could not get any of the $91,000 out of the contingency fund, as passed a week ago, unless an unforeseen emergency arose, was sustained by an opinion given by Attorney General Hogan. The Finance Committee had placed a portion of the department's fixed charges in the fund, but this entire action was repudiated.

In vetoing the ordinance Mayor Karb said he realized the position of the city employes, especially the laborers, who had found it difficult to get credit from July 1, but that the condition is not so serious as one he feared would arise in the winter if he allowed the money to be placed where there might be doubt of getting it out unless each case were taken to the Common Pleas Court.

Socialist Member Zimpfer, in the course of his remarks, said:

"I have heard President McKinley and Councilman Lucks say that a wise man changes his mind, but a fool never does. Now I do not wish to be classed among the latter, and therefore wish to reverse myself on the semi-annual appropriation, still before the Council.

"One of the first questions I wish to ask is, do we want the same condition to exist in our city departments as now exists in our Juvenile Courts? I have every reason to believe that some of our departments will be in the same predicament as the Juvenile Court is now in. Wouldn't it be fine for a large city like ours to ask for private contributions to keep our fire and police departments in operation? I think that if our law department is sustained as to the correct meaning of "contingent fund" that we will have just such a condition to meet about November 1, as there are a lot of lawyers and large taxpayers who are itching to get out an injunction suit, enjoining the city from using this contingent fund for anything except an unforeseen emergency. We surely cannot say that the police, fire and other established departments are unforseen emergencies."

Socialist Councilman Bohnert offered a motion that Council go into a committee of the whole to consider the matter and give the Finance Committee an opportunity to get up a new ordinance along the line suggested. This was properly seconded but was ignored by President Logan, who held that the original ordinance of the Mayor was in order and up for passage.

Two ordinances granting increases to city firemen, were introduced. One, by Council Naylor, provides an increase for Fire Chief Lauer from $2,200 to $3,000, and 10 per cent. increases for all other members of the department. One by Socialist Councilman Warren provides a 10 per cent. increase for the chief and all others alike.

Socialist Councilman Wilson, of the Tenth Ward, introduced the following ordinance:

Deeming it necessary on account of the present high cost of living, the municipality should take a forward step in providing a just and equitable rate of wages and hours of labor, commensurate with the increased cost of living by the fixing of a minimum wage and hours of labor of all city employes, not now receiving such compensation and hours of labor as specified herein, excepting police and fire employes; therefore

Be it ordained by the Council of the City of Columbus, State of Ohio:

Section 1. That the minimum wage to be paid by any employe of the city of Columbus, receiving compensation by the hour, day, week or month, shall be 37 1-2 cents per hour, $3.00 per eight-hour day, $16.50 per week of five and one-half days of eight hours per day.

Sec. 2. That eight hours shall constitute a legal work day for all employes receiving pay by the hour, day, week or month.

Sec. 3. Heads of departments shall be held responsible for the strict observance of this ordinance.

Sec. 4. That all ordinances and portions of ordinances not in conformity with the foregoing be and the same are hereby repleade.

Sec. 5. That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after January 1, 1913.

Not a single daily paper in Columbus had space to even mention the foregoing. The dear old Citizen seems even to have barred any reference to any Socialist Councilmen.

CORRECTION OF MISSTATEMENT

The report is being circulated that a retraction or statement in reference to our article "Plain Facts" that appeared in last week's paper, was authorized by the Board of Directors, to be published in this week's paper. NO SUCH ACTION WAS TAKEN BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS. In fact the Board, with a single exception, stood by the stand the paper has taken, in reference to the I. W. W. organization. Neither has this office force been "straightened out," as we understand has been charged. We are holding down the job, exposing every attempt to disrupt the party, regardless of whether it comes from the Catholic church, or a fake labor organization, parading under the guise of industrial unionism.

MODERN PHILANTHOPISTS WANT GOOD SECURITY

Columbus Capitalists Come to Rescue of Local Sweat-Shop Recruit Station.

The philanthropy of some people is measured only by the amount of the security for the return of their financial advancements and the amount of interest they draw by way of popular applause.

It was certainly a sorry spectacle which was presented by the capitalistic philanthropists on Thursday afternoon, July 18th, 1912, when under the cover of the Chamber of Commerce the Philanthropic Association assumed a corner on charity or philanthropy, in regard to re-opening the Juvenile Court of Franklin County as the following facts will attest: After several philanthropists (?) had explained how the Juvenile Court got into the HOLE and a call was made for sugestions as to how that Court could be gotten out of the hole, Comrade W. C. Bates, presented the following proposition in writing, which if it had been acted upon, would have placed that Court in operation at once:

Mr. Chairman—We represent about 26,000 citizens in Columbus and Franklin County, who are deeply interested in the Juvenile Court. We believe that Court can be made a great power for the uplifting of humanity.

Judge Black has been favored with high salaries for many years and is now enjoying the emoluments of a good office as Probate Judge. Yet, notwithstanding that fact and the further fact that the exigencies of the conditions in Columbus are imminent, he has abandoned the Juvenile Court because there was no funds to carry on the work. It has, therefore become necessary that funds be provided by independent and private donations. We believe that it is only right and proper that those who furnish the money to run the Juvenile Court should have the right to say who shall use that money. That those who pay for the dance shall say who shall fiddle.

We have at our command all the funds necessary to maintain the Juvenile Court until the funds will be available out of the next appropriation. We are willing to use that fund for that purpose under certain conditions which are are these, viz:

The Socialist Party of Columbus will select the Chief Probation Officer and all his assistants and clerks and Judge Black is to see that they are appointed as such. Judge Black may still remain as the Judge of the Juvenile Court but draw no pay until his present term expires and such Chief Probation Officer and his said assistants are to remain in office for the same period.

As soon as said funds become available said Chief Probation Officer and said assistants etc., shall receive the same compensation as the former officers received.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, we move that the above proposition of the Socialist Party be accepted.

W. C. BATES,

Chairman of Advisory Committee, Local Columbus.

Mr. Chairman, I hereby second the motion of W. C. Bates,

FRED P. ZIMPFER.

While Comrade Bates was reading the above there was a hurried, whispering conversation among the Philanthropists; and several of them were on their feet calling for recognition. The Chairman ruled Comrade Bates and proposition out of order. Some Philanthropist moved that a committee of seven, be appointed by the Chairman to devise way and means which carried and the Socialist proposition was killed for the time. Then another Philanthropist, the Rev. Kornfeld, stated he represented a number of business men, who had authorized him to say they would sign a note to be issued at a bank to raise funds and the note to be paid off when next funds were available in September.

Great philanthropy, that, to loan the name only with assurance that all would be paid back. And they could pose before the public as great philanthropists. Several requests were made for the names of those business men philanthropists, but the Rev. Kornfeld did not divulge their names and so we have a right to give our suspicions which is that they were stockholders in the Hirshey-Rice Manufacturing Company, beneficiaries of the sweat-shop at the Southwest corner of West Broad and Sandusky Streets. We challenge the Rev. Kornfeld to give the real names of the real business men he represented. Is it any disgrace to donate to the Juvenile Court? Is that Court in such ill-repute that business men refrain from becoming openly identified with its support?

In passing we wish to remark that Judge Black consumed much of the time in telling how much the Chief Probation Officer, Virginia Murray, (a Catholic) had done and how her heart was in the work, and that she could get more pay elsewhere and all such tommy-rot, when everybody well knew that Miss Murray's only interest was in the $150 per, and as soon as the $150 per, stopped, her heart-in-the-work ceased beating. Facts speak louder than eulogies without the proof. Miss Murray and all her asistants have drawn handsome salaries for the past year. From September on they would do the same and yet they would not continue nor step aside and let the Socialists run that office. No, we guess not, the Price Hill Convent, the Convent of the Good Shepard, the Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Company, the Bank Street laundry and other sweat-shops might not get as many innocent babies to exploit as they will under the present management.

The time is not far off when the Socialists will be in charge of the Juvenile Court of Franklin County, if they have to remove another Judge Hanford to do it. In the meantime let us have the names of the would-be-philanthropists.

O. G. Van Schoyck, Secretary C. C. C.—The Sixteenth Ward Branch [illegible] condemning the Hershey-Rice Manufacturing Company, for their method of manufacturing their goods. Also condemning the employment of children under the cloak of religion. Therefore be it,

Resolved, That no true man or woman would purchase any article made under such conditions, and be it further,

Resolved, That the Socialist Party of Columbus, Ohio, go on record as against such company for putting goods on the market that are made under such conditions, to compete with goods made under fair conditions, and be it further,

Resolved, That the C. C. C. instruct all delegates to take back to their Branches, action of the C. C. C., also to instruct the Columbus Socialist to print copy of this resolution in the paper.

SOCIALIST LAWN FETE AT SCHILLER PARK

The City Central Committee has approved the proposal to hold a lawn fete at Schiller Park, Monday evening, August 26, for the benefit of the Columbus Socialist. Details will be announced later. The Comrades should bear this date in mind.

DEMAND THE RECALL

The Socialist Party is beginning to arouse itself. The lion is beginning to roar. The membership is demanding the recall of the State Executive Committee, and we believe that ere long the Socialist Party of Ohio will have redeemed itself and will place men and women in the control of State affairs who stand for Socialism, first, last, and all the time. It is not industrial unionism that is at stake. It is Socialism. This paper and the Socialist Party stands absolutely for industrial unionism, but we do not stand for any attempt by the officials of the Party to disrupt the Socialist movement in the interest of any antagonistic organization. ON WITH THE RECALL.

"Socialism never looks for soft snaps. If you think otherwise, get in the party and study up.

BERGER GIVES GREAT SPEECH IN CONGRESS

Milwaukee Socialist Holds the Close Attention of the House and Crowded Galleries.

Washington—A soap box and the taking of a collection were the only two features of a Socialist street corner meeting necessary to set off the scene at the House this afternoon when Victor L. Berger, the Socialist Representative of Wisconsin, made an address on Socialism.

Following a powerful criticism of the capitalist system its political parties and an exposition of Socialism, Berger permitted questions to be asked. They were fired at him in such numbers and confusion that Speaker Champ Clark, chairman of the meeting yelled at the Representatives, "One at a time, please. The gentleman from Wisconsin will answer one after the other—not all at once."

The questions were of the same kind asked by the man at the street corner meeting. For instance. "Are you going to take over all the industries?" "How will you do it?" "Is not a grocery man a member of the working class?" "Does the Socialist Party appeal only to the working class?"

To all these questions Berger answered with the same consideration and painstaking usually exercised by the Socialist soap boxers.

Representative Anderson, of Ohio, tried to get Berger to give the Democratic party credit for the passage of the eight-hour law. Berger replied that it was passed first by the Republicans in 1868. Anderson then declared that a Republican Attorney General crippled that law by a ruling.

"How do we know that a Democratic Attorney General will not also cripple this new law by a similar ruling?" came back Berger, amid applause from the Republican side and galleries.

Galleries Crowded.

Despite a rainstorm, the galleries were filled by persons who came to hear the Socialist member. An unusual number of Congressmen were present and stayed the entire hour alloted to Berger, evincing a great deal of interest. Representative Payne, author of the notorious Aldrich-Payne Tariff Law, took a seat near Berger and sat listening intently throughout the adress. Senator Jones, of Washington, was also present. Reverend Couden, the blind chaplain, remained after making his prayer to hear the Socialist.

Berger spoke from in front of the Speaker's rostrum. He was liberally applauded throughout his address. His sallies at the old parties were received in good humor. But when he scored one party the members of the other party roared with laughter.

The Socialist Congressman spoke for one hour and ten minutes. The additional ten minutes were given him by unanimous consent.

An effort to make it more than ten minutes was objected to by Representatives Alexander, of Missouri, and Heflin, of Alabama. "Uncle Joe" Cannon sarcastically asked for ten minutes to allow Representative Hobson, of Alabama, to make a speech because the latter got too talkative while asking Berger a question about the tariff.

When Berger finished answering questions the Democrats seemed much displeased and the Republicans and the galleries alone applauded the Socialist Congressman.

A Humorous Situation.

One of the most humorous situations in the colloquy was when Anderson called Berger's attention to the fact that the Democrats voted for some of the recent labor bills.

"Yes, the Democrats so voted, the Republicans also, and the Socialist party also voted for these bills unanimously," replied Berger. Anderson then gave it up.

Representative Bartholdi, Republican, of Missouri, corroborated Berger in stating that the much discussed eight-hour law is an old law. He said that the Republicans passed the law several times and that the one now passed by the Democrats may come again to the House for correction.

Berger scored both old parties, criticized their platforms and ridiculed the claims of their Presidential candidates at the same time paying his respects to the Bull Moose party candidate and "My Policies." The Socialist Congressman analyzed economic and political conditions and declared that the Socialist party is the only party that is in line with evolution.

"The working class has nothing to hope from either the Republican party or the Democratic party," declared Berger. "The representatives of these parties may be, and very often are, very cultured and accomplished gentlemen. Most of them are honest. However, they represent the capitalist system, and the more honest and consistent they are—the more loyal they are to their class.

Both Old Parties the Same.

"The Republican party is the favorite organization of the big capitalists. Why? Because it stood for a great deal of 'business' during the late Civil War, and because, by its high tariff proclivities and its banking laws, it has given a strong impetus to the profits of the manufacturers and bankers.

"For a generation it was considered the conservative business men's party of the country.

"The Democratic party in its great majority stood for the economic and political interests of the slave owners before the Civil War. After the war, it naturally has become the dominant party of the South, where the former slave owner is slowly getting to be a manufacturer, a banker, or a capitalist. Up North, the Democratic party not having any great economic interests to express, soon fell into the hands of corrupt machines, at least in the large cities. It naturally also became the favorite organization of the liquor interests in the Northern States.

"The capitalist class, therefore, is just as willing to deal with the Democratic party as with the Republican party. While the latter is conservative, the Democratic party is, to all intents and purposes, reactionary. Being behind the times in most things, it is especially ignorant and brutal in regard to the labor question, as the laws of many Southern States prove.

"However, the working men of this country have votes and that is the reason why the Democrats have in recent years discovered that they 'dearly love the workingman.'

Raps Democratic House.

"That is the reason why we have passed a few labor laws in this House. Of course, these laws have not passed the Senate, nor the scrutiny of the Supreme Court—however, they will do in that form as campaign food on the eve of a Presidential election.

"O course, none of these laws will add a single sandwich to the daily fare of the many millions of working men and working women. None of these laws will take care of the old invalids of industry or help along the young. Every civilized country on the globe has done a great deal in that direction of late.

"Not we.

"A House controlled by the Southern democracy and by Tammany is not expected to do anything that might really look Socialistic.

"As long as cheap trades for votes can be made with so-called union labor leaders—giving absolutely nothing and promising twice as much for next year—the Democratic party believes itself to be safe.

"The only trouble just now is to make the working men believe that the Democrats are different from the Republicans.

"The two old parties are so much alike that they are hard up for an issue.

"Of course, there is still that old standby—tariff—God be thanked. And Mr. Woodrow Wilson, being a profound man—a man of the type of that other profound gentleman, Grover Cleveland—has declared that the tariff is to be the issue.

"But how is it to be done this time?"

"If it means anything at all it means that the Democrats do not want to harm any owners of factories, because the South is waking up industrially. The South is beginning to have nomberless infant industries that want protection. The Democratic party must take care of these infants.

South Wants High Tariff.

"In other words, while Carnegie and Gary and other Northen trust magnates are willing to give up the protective tariff because their Pittsburg and Chicago infants have grown up to some size—thank you!—and they are well able to take care of themselves even in England or Germany—the Southern manufacturers are beginning to demand a protective tariff on cotton products first, of course.

"That is natural enough—the South is just about fifty years behind the rest of the country in economic development.

"But since that is the case—how is the good professor expecting to make good on the tariff as an issue in the coming election? Is he going to have a platform of his own—a platform other than was adopted in Baltimore, and for which the 'peerless leader' stood sponsor.'

"Mr. Wilson will have to do so if he wants a demarcation of some kind between the old parties. As it is, the names of the two parties could be exchanged in both documents and nobody would notice the difference.

"Nothing is left of the great anti-captalist warcry for which Bryan was so well known in 1896. One can readily see that Mr. Bryan of 1912 is a different man—he got to be quite a capitalist himself.

"The 16 to 1 silver issue has been dropped, and that is sensible enough. But nothing is said about the nationalization of railroads either—and the federal judiciary is not even mentioned.

"And what is even more remarkable for a 'progressive platform,' we cannot find a word about direct legislation.

"The initiative and referendum and the imperative mandate were conveniently shelved as 'State issues'—although the national platform is unquestionably the place to enunciate the national principles of a party.

"And, queerly enough, even the recall of the judiciary is forgotten—a question that has been agitated very much of late and for which the Democrats in Congress have stood like heroes when they wanted to put 'Taft into a hole' on the question of admitting Arizona and New Mexico to Statehood.

"Mr. Bryan evidently expected to be a candidate himself and he wanted all the votes in sight, including the dissatisfied conservatives.

"One might say, however, the platforms of the old parties are seldom read and even more seldom carried out. The main thing then is the personnel of the candidates. But just at that point there is really no difference. If one is to vote an old party ticket one might just as well shut his eyes and vote—the result would be absolutely the same. All of the candidates are honest men personally—as the term is understood in business and society nowadays. None of the candidates has ever been accused of any wrong other than stealing convention delegates—willing and ready to be stolen.

"Mr. Roosevelt, who wants to start a party on the issue "Thou shalt not steal!' and on business principles should know that political graft is the very application of business principles to politics. Moreover, he also has openly been accused in the Senate of trying to buy delegates both this year and in 1904.

"Moreover, the three candidates of the two old parties all enjoy the support of the bosses and political machines.

"Mr. Wilson, the Democratic candidate, has probably more support of that kind than any of the rest. Although a so-called progressive, he has with him Boss Murphy of Tammany, Boss Smith of New Jersey, Boss Sullivan of Illinois, and Boss Taggart of Indiana, their machines and what they stand for. He was also jubilantly hailed by the reactionary capitalist element of both parties as a 'second Grover Cleveland,' and was warmly indorsed by every paper of the type of the Washington Post. He has Ryan and Belmont, of course. Wilson's election will not only perpetuate the power of the bosses and their machines, but also inaugurate another era of prosperity as we had under Grover Cleveland for men of the type of Ryan and Belmont.

Who Taft's Friends Are.

"It is unnecessary to explain where Mr. Taft stands. It is as natural for a man of his type to be allied with men like Root, Crane, Guggenheim, and Hammond as it is for a duck to take to the water. Mr. Taft knows the history of the Republican party as the favorite organization of the big capitalists. And he wants that party to remain the favorite.

"That he has the support of many big political bosses and capitalist exploiters goes with out further explanation.

"But a glance at some of the honest progressives who are now setting out to purify politics will at once demonstrate that Robin Hood's famous assemblage of outlaws had nothing on the gang that are now rallying around Theodore Roosevelt."

Here Berger showed the business connections of Roosevelt's followers and pointed out that many of these "progressive leaders" are heads of political machines in their respective cities and States.

The existence of classes is nothing new, according to the Socialist Congressman. The class struggle is many thousand years old, he said. "It is, therefore," argued Berger, "foolish to accuse the Socialists of trying to 'create classes' and to incite class antagonism and class hatred."

Declaring that the tariff does not protect labor, Berger said that the agitation for a low tariff or for a high tariff is a "shameless humbug when we compare its importance with the question of the exploitation of labor.

"The only party that is in accord with the trend of the times is the Socialist party," continued Berger. "That is the reason why all the 'progressives' are simply trying to appropriate some of our minor planks.

Socialists Not Mere Reformers.

"With the Socialist political issues are of minor consequence. Economic issues are of paramount importance.

"We refuse to be diverted or led astray by mere political reforms like the initiative, referendum and recall. Each in itself is a good enough reform. Each of them has been agitated for a long time by the Socialists and forms a part of our program today.

"Mere changes in the mechanism of expressing the will of the people, are, however, of secondary importance when compared with any change in the economic conditions of the people.

"We want the initiative. But we want much more to secure an old-age pension for every working man and working woman of 60 and over.

"We stand for the referendum. But insurance against being out of work is of much more value.

"We agitate for the recall. But State help for orphans—at least for those that have no father—and assistance for working women during the period of child bearing—is infinitely more useful to the race than the right to recall a judge.

"The bourgeis reformer, even when well meaning, does not understand us. He lacks our class consciousness.

"Of the political reforms a new constitution is most important. As long as we have the old constitution thorough social reforms are almost impossible.

"No matter how good and beneficial a law may be—it will, as a rule, be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. Our constitution was framed at a time entirely different from ours, and for entirely different conditions—and good laws suited to the present conditions are really unconstitutional."

Have Outgrown Political Clothes.

Showing that the country has undergone a complete change in the methods of production, distribution and communication since the days of Washington, Jefferson and Madison, Berger said that the United States is compelled to wear the same political cloak as worn a century ago.

"In other words, a grown-up nation has to wear its baby cloak," said Berger. "It does not fit anywhere, and has been torn and patched in the most ridiculous way by 'decisions of the Supreme Court,' in order to make it do—yet, anybody who dares to suggest a new suit is considered a traitor by the 'interests.'

"But we must have a new constitution or we shall have a bloody revolution. Yet though political reforms are necessary, they are of little account when compared with the necessity of changes in order to keep step with the development of economic conditions.

"The economic changes are upon us.

"We see the trusts, not only doing away with competition, but also asking for government interference and government regulation of prices.

"In other words, we have the spectacle of the trusts surrendering part of their ownership and practically offering that part of the ownership to the people.

"Thus the trusts—or at least some of the trusts—are willing to part with their ownership because they feel that their business has ceased to be a private concern. Because the trusts feel that their business has become a public utility—of the most public and utilitarian sort.

"But the change is also coming from the other side.

"The present majority of the people have no interest in keeping up the present system. And especially the working class is bound to become revolutionary as a class.

The Workers and the Shirkers.

"Our working men today build a few palaces and many hovels. The working men live in the hovels and the few capitalists in the palaces.

THE THRILLING STORY OF THE ANT THAT WRIGGLED IN AND OUT

By EDGAR WOOD, COLUMBUS, OHIO

St. Peter replied, "It is up to you to say how many people you wish to sing and it is my business to get them for you. How many tenor voices do you want?" The great one replied, "Well, you may get me one million tenors."

"How many soprano voices do you want?" asked St. Peter. "About a million soprano voices will be enough," replied the great equestrain. "How many alto voices do you want?" asked St. Peter. "You may find me a million of those," replied the mighty nimrod. "How many barstones and second tenors do you wish?" asked St. Peter. "A million of each, so that the chorus will be properly balanced," replied the great and only. "How many bass voices do you wish?" asked St. Peter. "I have been thinking you will have quite a little trouble in finding the five millions I have already ordered, and so as not to inconvenience you too much I will not ask you to get any bass voices, as I believe I am well able to handle the bass section in a chorus of that number," replied the great talker. Whereupon the king was very wroth and ordered the man who was telling the story out on the block and had his head chopped off.

The king called upon the third man to stand before him and relate his story. The third man, having seen his two comrades go to the block before him, had made up his mind that if he was to win the contest he must at least be allowed to finish his story, so he spoke as follows:

"Most gracious majesty, there is an old saying that to err is human, and while I do not say that you have erred in any way, I do know that my two comrades have lost their heads in trying to please thee. Most noble king, there is one request I wish to ask you before I start to tell my story, and that is that you will consent to hear me to the end, as my story is one with a moral and it cannot be fully appreciated unless it is fully heard. This, my liege lord and master, I ask not as a special privilege, but as the right of one of your most humble and devoted subjects and in the name of the great love I have for your divinely beautiful daughter."

The king, as I stated before, was very proud of his daughter, and hearing her spoken of in such a way by one whom he little thought could be possessed of such high ideas, consented to hear him through. The man thanked the king for his promise and forthwith proceeded to tell his story.

"Oh, king, many years ago there lived in that part of the world which lies to the south of this mighty kingdom a grand and mighty monarch. This ruler, oh, king, was a wise and provident ruler and he was greatly beloved by all his subjects. One of the things which he did just a few years before he died, and which was considered by every one as a most wise act, was to make provision against a coming famine which he foresaw. This great king, being a wise king, knew the time must come when through famine his beloved subjects would be in great distress, so he ordered that a large crib be builded and that all his subjects should put one-half of all the corn they raised for the next seven years into this crib, to guard against the time of the famine. The subjects of the king, having perfect confidence in the wisdom of this thing, piled up great heaps of corn during the next seven years until there was enough for sustenance for all for a long time, if properly conserved. But, oh, king, in the building of this vast crib this mighty monarch, wise man that he was, neglected one thing. In that part of the crib which lay next to the ground, one of the pieces of timber which was used had a small knot hole in it, and this knot hole, oh king, was the undoing of all the wise provisions that this wise and provident king had caused to be done. The famine did not come at the end of seven years, for through the thrift of the people it was delayed for quite a while. However, when it did come it came without bringing fear to the people, for was it not a fact that the crib had been filled to overflowing and that there was plenty for all for years to come? But in the building of this crib, oh, king, the knot hole was not thought of, and in the meantime an ant wriggled into this knot hole and took a grain of corn and wriggled out again. And, most noble king, another ant wriggled into this knot hole and took a grain of corn and wriggled out again, another ant wriggled into this knot hole and took a grain of corn and wriggled out again. And oh, most wise king, another ant wriggled into this knot hole and took a grain of corn and wriggled out again. And still another ant wriggled into this knot hole and took a grain of corn and wriggled out again. And still other ants in large numbers wriggled into this knot hole and took a grain of corn and wriggled out again. Thus it was, oh, king, that the wealth of this great nation was conserved. Thus it was, most noble monarch, that the great deed accomplished by this wise and provident ruler was, through an oversight, set at naught. And, oh, king, thus it is with nations of this world today. In one of the most powerful and wealthiest nations of the earth today we may liken the corn crib to the public wealth and the ants to the agents of capitalism."

"I understand the moral to your story knave, and with great pleasure I herewith consign you to the block," spoke the king.

"But Oh, King," replied the man, I have not yet finished. Another ant wriggled into this knot hole and took a grain of corn and wriggled out again. And Oh, king, another ant in the shape of the landlord, wriggled into the home every month and took some of that family's hard labor and wriggled out again. And the gas company wriggles into the home every month and takes some more of that families good hard labor and wriggles out again. And Oh, king, the wife is pestered a dozen times a day by all kinds of agents wishing to sell something and if all the agents in the land were to call at the same house it would be the same as 190,000 ants wriggling into this knot hole and taking a grain of corn and wriggling out again in one day. And Oh, king there are 365 days in a year and these agents must live and the homekeepers must make it possible."

The king said, "I understand, thou imp of Satan, to the block with you."

"But," the man replied, "Oh king, thou didst promise I should finish my story. Does it seem fit that I, a knave, an imp of Satan should, with my last breath brand thee liar?" The king seeing the truth of this permitted the man to proceed, and he thanked the king and went on to tell how the coal miners went on a strike and gained a raise in wages of 6 cents a ton. The men who are selling the gifts of an all-wise Creator to humanity, raise the price 25 cents a ton on all coal used for domestic purposes and another bunch of ants wriggle into the 16,000,000 homes of this great nation and take their grain of corn and wriggle out again.

"A large bank that has been receiving the deposits of the people's savings closes its doors because of some poor business management and another bunch of ants wriggle into the homes and take a grain of corn and wriggle out again. The laws of the country punish the directors by making them disgorge to the full extent of their stock in the bank. In some cases the depositors receive as much as 75 per cent of the amount they have on deposit. And Oh, king, great must be the feeling of security of every one to know how well they are protected in matters of this kind.

"And Oh, king, there was another bunch of ants, in the shape of railroads and other corporations, who, up to 15 years ago, have wriggled into this knot hole and taken 266,000,000 acres of land and wriggled out again. But your majesty, that is a small matter to cry about. A tract of land comprising that many acres is only about the size of France and Germany combined, and we have the railroads and other corporations which enable other millions of ants, in the shape of accident and life insurance companies, to wriggle into this knot hole and take their grain of corn and wriggle out again."

"Cease, hold thy tongue. Your greatest wish is to destroy the home. Disloyal wretch, you would have the people believe they should own and operate these railroads and other corporations for their own benefit. The government has not the time to look to such things, they have enough to do to look after the more than 55,000 divorces in the country every year. Headsmen, ho, this man to the block," spoke the king in great anger.

(To be Continued.)

PREDICTION VERIFIED

In publishing the figures of the Census Bureau two weeks ago showing the increasing percentage of mortgaged farms, The National Socialist predicted that "within a week a chorus of explanations will break forth, and within six months it will have been demonstrated by a thousand profound publicists that the figures are misleading."

That the prediction was well founded is shown by the following editorial appearing in Hearst's New York American, taking the New York Tribune to task for attempting to interpret the figures optimistically:

"The Census Bureau has just published tables showing that the number of mortgaged farms in the United States in 1890 was 28.2 per cent of the whole number of farms, while in 1910 the percentage of mortgaged farms had risen to 38.8.

"The Tribune undertakes to show that these figures are encouraging; that they are to be construed as meaning that people who have been otherwise engaged have been buying up abandoned farms on the installment plan. That theory is evidently overstrained. The truth is that, whatever may be the gains of agricultural prosperity in some of the States, notably in the Northwest, the broad meaning of the census figures is that the cause of agriculture is suffering for lack of capital, and that there is a marked tendency toward the stifling of private enterprise and the concentration of economic power in this most fundamental of occupations.

"There is no more important problem in statesmanship than the working out of the economic independence of farmers. Farming is a business like any other. And there can be no incurable disease of monopoly in any country where the farmers are proprietors and masters of their own lands."

BERGER GIVES GREAT SPEECH

"Our working men in the woolen mills make a small amount of fine clothes and millions of yards of shoddy. The working men wear the shoddy and the rich idlers wear the fine clothes.

"Working men and their children have to go down into the mines—working men and working women and their children have to go into dingy, ill-ventilated factories and workshops and toil from eight to twelve hours a day. They must ruin their health by overwork, so that a few people who have the money may ruin their health by too much leisure.

"The majority now degenerates through poverty so that the small minority shall be able to degenerate through luxury.

"Again, I say, the great majority have no interest in keeping up the present system.

"There is this also: In former epochs the ruling class was by far the abler and stronger—physically and mentally.

"In former years a few nobles, clad in iron—and trained and accustomed to warfare—could hold in subjection 19—SOCIALIST twenty times their number of common people.

"The ruling class only was at that time in the posession of the wisdom of the world—whatever wisdom the world had then.

"The ruling class at that time also had in its favor the belief that this system was God ordained, and that anybody rebelling against it was a rebel to God. Things are different nowadays.

"The working class not only builds the houses, ships and machines—but the working class also teaches in the public schools and colleges and writes and prints our literature. Not only the man who sets up the type for the papers and books, but also the man or woman who writes them usually belongs to our class.

Why Socialists Want Reforms.

"Moreover, we have the ballot. No subjected class in history ever had the same political basis as the ruling class. The modern proletariat is the first.

"On election day my vote is as good as Rockefeller's. And we are many and the capitalists are few.

"In short, the future belongs to the working class. Nothing can stop us. All we have to do is to organize our forces. There is no other party that has grown like ours during the past four years.

"And I want it understood that the Socialist party, while it is revolutionary in its final aim, is none the less distinctly evolutionary and constructive in its methods. We welcome all kinds of reforms that are real reforms—not political baits. Social reforms of all kinds are welcomed by the Socialist for many reasons.

"In the first place, by reforms we can stop the increasing pauperization, and consequently also the enervation of the masses of the people. If real reforms are seriously taken up and carried out with determination they uplift the masses to a considerable extent.

"But the main reason for our favoring social reforms is that such reforms, if logically carried out, offer the possibility of a 'peaceful, lawful, and orderly transformation of society.'

"The Socialist party, therefore, is the only true reform party in existence. We agitate for the organization of the masses. And organization everywhere means order.

"We educate, we enlighten, we reason, we discipline.

"Besides order we bring also law, reason, discipline and progress to men and women who have been torn from their old conditions by capitalism—and we who would become Apaches.

"It is therefore, absolutely false to represent our Socialist party as destructive, as intending to overthrow and annihilate society, as an appeal to the brute passions of the masses.

"Just the opposite is true.

"Our Socialist party wants to maintain culture and education, and carry them to the homes of every worker of the land.

"Our party wants to guard this nation from destruction and bring it to a level hitherto unknown in history.

"We appeal to the best in every man, to the public spirit of the citizen, to his love of wife and children.

"Therefore, we ask every man and woman who really loves his or her country not to be caught by empty phrases, but to stand for the international ticket of humanity—the Socialist ticket."

Work is such a noble thing that it would cure the masters of their uneasiness if applied to them.

Don't complain so strenuously about the high cost of living. Your main point of complaint should be directed against the way you are robbed at the point of produtcion. If you received the full value of what your labor produced it would make no difference to you if beef was $1 per pound. The trouble is that your average wage is only one-fifth of the amount that you produce. See the point?

Socialists do not waste their time and substance in condemning individuals who may happen to be riding upon the backs of their fellows. They do not even content themselves with condemning the causes which produce such a condition; but they follow the only sane and constructive course possible when they strive with their might and main to make these fellows get off and make it impossible for any others to get on.

While the man does not make so much difference in the Socialist party and the principle is the main thing, nevertheless just stop a moment and consider how the presidential candidates of 1912 stack up against each other. Here they are: Taft and Sherman; Wilson and Marshall; Debs and Seidel. Which pair of them spells in "caps" to you, Mr. Workingman?

Some people with a purpose in view, have been representing that the article in the last issue of this paper under the heading, "Some Facts", was an attack upon Industrial Unionism. Anybody who has read the article in question can easily see that this is not true. We simply showed by reprinting an editorial from "Solidarity", that the I. W. W. was seeking to disrupt the Socialist party. Evidently we proved our statement. There is an old adage that "A hit bird always flutters." From the squawking on the roost of the local disturbers, we judge that somebody was undoubtedly "hit".

Judge Hanford seems to have resigned just a little ways ahead of the kick that would have landed him in the discard. While illness is given as the reason, it is possible that it was merely one of those attacks of drowsines to which he is subject. He was able, during his career, to get away with some raw stuff. He shook down railroads, land companies and plutes. But he went up against the real game when he tackled a Socialist and tried to make Socialism ground for depriving a man of citizenship.

NEGLECT OF DUTY.

The present condition of affairs in the state organization of the Socialist party in Ohio is due largely to indifference and neglect of the party membership. Had the dues paying members turned out to the local and branch meetings and voted upon the recent referendums the result would have been vastly different. A small group of impossibilists would not have secured a temporary lease of power. We have been taught a lesson and it may be worth all it will cost. Hereafter the rank and file must be on guard to weed out the disturbers who seek only to disrupt the movement. We have been to blame.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." After this let no Socialist fail to attend all party business meetings. This is absolutely necessary.

The Japan Weekly Chronicle says: "The Osaka Asahi, commenting upon Mr. Roosevelt's bolt from the Republican party, says that he is trying to take advantage of the popular reaction against the oligarchical tendencies now exhibited by the Republican party. The relations that may spring up between the new party and the Socialists in the States should be watched with interest." They should, indeed, and any man who enjoys a rip snorting fight will have the time of his life.

VALE HANFORD.

Judge Hanford, of the Federal Court, who for years has acted the part of a judicial tyrant, has "resigned". This resignation is a splendid example of the possibilities that will follow the growing Socialist vote. For years this Hanford has terrorized the common people of the great Northwest. He has been the willing, pliant servant of every corporation that sought to rob the public. He was corrupt and attorneys and clients knew it, but clothed in the sacred ermine of the United States bench, he defied law, decency and justice. No one dared defy his power. The climax of his infamy came when he disfranchised a poor longshoreman, Olsson by name, for the reason that Olsson was an avowed Socialist. Then the one lone Socialist congressman, Victor Berger, as the tribune of the working class, rose in his place in the National House and in the name of the people, impeached Judge Hanford for various offenses. The voice of the Wisconsin representative could not be ignored. A committee was sent to Seattle to take evidence. This committee struck "pay dirt", and last Monday, like the coward and poltroon that he was, Judge Hanford "resigned". He now passes into ignominious oblivion, but the incident shows the magnificent force of public opinion when expressed by even one Socialist in Congress: The recall worked, in this case, swiftly and effectively when once it was started by a MAN, backed by the unlimited momentum of the working class. If this can be done with one Socialist in Congress what could we not do with a score of representatives in the House? The retirement of Hanford does not, of course, add a single cracker to the toiler's dinner pail, but it hastens the day of freedom and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth.

CAN DISEASE BE ABOLISHED?

There are millions of old fogies who seem to think that poverty and disease are twin curses with which humanity must be burdened forever. Modern science is demonstrating every day that both poverty and disease can be abolished. Both are the results of preventable causes and we can certainly put an end to them by intelligent and persistent action.

It is now well established that disease can be traced to one or more of three causes; heredity, bad environment or unhealthful ways of living. Each of these three causes of disease can be successfully attacked, indeed, to a certain extent are already being successfully attacked throughout the civilized world.

A good example of what can be accomplished in the way of the eradication of disease is shown in the work of our sanitary experts and public health officials in stamping out such contagious diseases as diptheria and smallpox, yellow and typhoid fevers.

In 1890 Professor Von Behring of Germany announced that he had learned how to render animals immune to diptheria. In other words, he had discovered antitoxin. In 1895 a little antitoxin was imported by the Massachusetts Board of Health from Germany and France. Its use soon became quite general. The results are shown in the rapidly decreasing death rate from diptheria throughout the United States.

The census report for 1900 showdd that the death rate per one hundred thousand from diptheria had been reduced from 97.75 in 1890 to 43.8 per one hundred thousand in 1900. Since 1900 the use of antitoxin has become increasingly general. The Health Departments in many cities have furnished it free. As a result, the death rate per one hundred thousand dropped from 43.9 in 1900 to 21.4 per hundred thousand in 1910.

These figures mean that the death rate from diptheria has been reduced three-fourths within twenty years. Applied to the United States, this means that over half a million lives have been saved during the last ten years through the use of diptheria antitoxin.
